Booth Library
Commemorative Program

September 18, 2002

Eastern Illinois University
Charleston, Illinois

Booth Library was closed to the public from June 1999 until February 2002 to facilitate the renovation, expansion, and restoration of one of Eastern's historic buildings. Collections and services found temporary homes on or near campus for the interim period. Although several project details are still in progress, we welcome your participation in our library's homecoming celebration.

History of Library Facilities at Eastern

When Eastern's library first opened in 1899, it was located in the southwest corner of the first floor of Old Main. It contained two rooms; a combination public and staff room, and a separate room for the book stacks, with a total floor space of 2,400 square feet, and a book collection numbering about 2,500 volumes. Fitted with elaborate solid oak window frames, moldings, and wainscoting, it was decorated with delicate floral and geometric designs. The reading room was furnished with rectangular, oak tables and cane-bottom side chairs, and the stacks room with intricate, wrought iron shelving.

Florence M. Beck, Librarian
1900-1904

For a few years the library was spacious enough. However, as the collections grew and the student population increased, the library became congested. By 1920 it had taken over the fifth floor of Old Main's tower for storage, and part of a hallway for a reading room. By 1934 it had expanded into two additional rooms.

Meanwhile, Eastern's long-time library director, Mary Josephine Booth, had been lobbying for a freestanding library building. Throughout the Depression years her efforts, and those of Eastern's presidents, came to no avail, but, by the time of America's entry into World War II, tentative approval was granted. Joseph F. Booton, a State of Illinois architect, drew up the plans, and Ms. Booth turned over the first shovel of earth for "her" building on February 2, 1948—nearly three years after her own retirement. In recognition of Ms. Booth's 41 years of dedicated service, the building was named in her honor.

Mary J. Booth, Librarian
1904-1945

Under the supervision of the J. L. Simmons Company, of Decatur, construction on the Mary Josephine Booth Library lasted about two years, during which time the library moved from Old Main and was housed in a World War II surplus building northeast of the construction site. A simple, rectangular structure with few amenities, the temporary library was large enough for the entire 65,000 volume library collection to be housed together in proper call number order for the first time in decades.

University Gothic in style, the $2.1 million Booth Library was formally dedicated on May 27, 1950. Built of brick and trimmed in Joliet limestone, the library opened from the north into an impressive foyer, which led into a grand, high-ceilinged card catalog room, placed perpendicularly to the foyer, and from which the east and west reading rooms extended. The central core of the building housed the book collections, shelved on several stack levels closed to the public. Limestone, variegated Ohio sandstone, marble, and glazed brick were used on the interior surfaces, with decorative details in wood, metal, and plaster. In its entirety, the 150 x 154 foot building contained 37,500 square feet of useable floor space spread over four levels, with seating for 500 people, and an estimated bookshelf capacity of almost 150,000 volumes.

The new library received almost universal praise—for its beauty, utility, spaciousness, bold use of color, convenient design, and variety of services. In addition to a 50-year accumulation of books and periodicals, Booth Library contained a music listening room, an art gallery, and an auditorium.

Professor and Librarian
1945-1967

Ironically, scarcely a dozen years after its auspicious opening in 1950, Booth Library was already experiencing a shortage of space, both for patrons and books. Eastern's enrollment had more than doubled during this time, and the library collection had grown to some 114,000 volumes. Accordingly, in 1965 the state appropriated $1.8 million for an addition to Booth Library, which was supplemented the following year by a $671,000 federal grant. Construction on the library annex began in the spring of 1967, and it opened to the public on September 10, 1968. The Rockford-based firm of Johnson, Kile, Seehausen & Associates designed the annex, and JDP Associates of Terre Haute, served as the chief contractors.

Dr. B. Joseph Szerenyi
Director of Library Services
1967-1980

The project's primary goal was to get the most new space for the money. Above all else, the library needed to better accommodate its burgeoning collections, larger clientele, and increased staff. The 150 x 200 foot annex more than doubled the physical size of the building, and provided the library with a total of 103,500 square feet of useable floor space. The annex greatly expanded the library's planned collection capacity—from 148,000 to 475,000 volumes, and increased the available patron seating from 500 to about 1,300.

Such large increases in space and capacity were made at considerable sacrifice to architectural integrity, however. Except for peaked windows, Gothic styling was abandoned in the annex, as was any semblance of architectural detailing. Also, because the two structures were originally intended to operate separately—one with closed stacks and the other with open stacks—they were rather awkwardly connected, a disjuncture that haunted the building for decades.

Despite the relative vastness of the enlarged facility, it, too, eventually became overcrowded, as the size of the library collection spiraled ever upward along with the size of the student population. By 1988 enrollment at Eastern had reached a record 10,500—far beyond the 6,500 projected years earlier—and the library collection had grown to nearly 570,000 volumes—far beyond the library's supposed capacity.

Though it was clear that the library needed to be expanded and renovated once again, it was not until 1995 that the State of Illinois gave its approval, and not until 1999 that construction began. Designed by the Chicago-based firm of Holabird & Root—in consultation with people from the library, the university, and the Illinois Capital Development Board—the intent of the project was to preserve the best aspects of the old structures, while upgrading, unifying, and expanding the building to the south. The Williams Brothers Construction Company, of Peoria Heights, was hired as general contractors for the $22.5 million project.

To anyone venturing into the renovated building today, it is apparent that the architects and builders succeeded in meeting the goals of the project. The appearance of the historic 1950 structure was certainly preserved and enhanced. Its exterior walls were refurbished, and the wonderful interior trim and architectural details were cleaned, repaired, and refinished. The large, formal rooms were altered somewhat, but their original character was retained.

Dean of Library Services
1980-1991

The project succeeded in unifying the interior design of the library as a whole. The south façade of the original building and the floor structure of the annex were exposed to view and joined by a dramatic, glassed atrium, creating a light-filled great room at the heart of the building, and providing library patrons with visual cues as to the structure and organization of the facility. A straight line “avenue” was created on the main floor of the building, linking the north and south entrances, and passing by reference, periodicals and circulation desks.

The renovation resulted in considerable new space for collections, patrons, and staff. Booth Library’s total space was increased to 165,000 square feet. By arranging shelving units more efficiently, by enclosing the covered walkway that had run along the west side of the 1968 building, and by creating on the ground floor large expanses of compact, moveable shelving, stack capacity was increased to approximately 1,500,000 volumes. Patron space was enhanced by using previously unavailable space, by providing a wide variety of types of seating—study tables, lounge chairs, group study rooms, and computer labs—and by placing attractive seating areas throughout the building. Staff space was improved by concentrating much of it more efficiently in the new, 30-foot south addition and in the improved departmental service areas.

Technologically speaking, the project was also a success. Not only was the building’s infrastructure—its heating, ventilating, air conditioning, electrical, and plumbing systems—revamped, but also its computer systems and related equipment were upgraded for the digital age. Internet hookups were installed at nearly every staff desk and library table in the building. Up-to-date computer labs for individual use and class instruction were established. Conference rooms were equipped for Internet use and multimedia presentations. Analog machines of various kinds were replaced by new, digital equipment, ready to perform a variety of functions throughout the library.

From its origins in a corner of Old Main to its current and newly renovated prominence in the center of campus, the library has always played an important role in Eastern’s intellectual life, endeavoring to keep pace with changing patron needs and expanding library resources. Enlarged, redesigned, and spruced up, Booth Library is now prepared for the challenges of the 21st Century.

MARY JOSEPHINE BOOTH
1876 - 1965

This portrait, by Mattoon artist Sophia Talbot, hangs in the North Foyer

A TRIBUTE

from the 1950 Commemorative Opening Day Program

For the forty-one years following her graduation from the Library School, University of Illinois, in 1904, Miss Mary Josephine Booth served as librarian at the Eastern Illinois State College, retiring September 1, 1945. What the library facilities became during those forty years is due more to the energy, determination and professional attitude of Miss Booth than of any other.

Beginning with Accession Number 6,591 on September 15, 1904, "A Poetry for Poetry's Sake" by A. C. Bradley, Miss Booth closed her task of assembling a library on June 30, 1945, with Accession Number 63,950, a bound volume of the InterAmerican Monthly, an average annual addition of 1,399 volumes.

Miss Booth interrupted her work as librarian to accept active duty in World War I and was Eastern's only faculty member to serve overseas. Under auspices of the American Red Cross, she arrived in France on November 27, 1917, and served at the Isoudum. Her love for library prevailed even in France! In May, 1918, she transferred to the services of the American Library Association. While stationed at Chaumont, she classified the library in General Pershing's headquarters. With the Army of Occupation she was in charge of the library in the Festhalle in Coblenz. Miss Booth returned from foreign duty July 17, 1919.

Professionally, Miss Booth was active in the work of the Illinois Library Association and the American Library Association. Interestingly, however, she was most widely known because of her authorship of Normal School Bulletin No. 46, published in 1914, and entitled "Material on Geography Which May Be Obtained Free or at Small Cost." New editions were demanded in 1916, 1920, 1922, 1923, 1927, and 1931, and inquiries for it came even from abroad.

Dr. Howard De Forest Widger, Head of the Department of English, and associated with Eastern since 1912, recently wrote about Miss Booth, "With facilities for service that seemed to grow more inadequate as the library grew in size, Miss Booth made the book collection serve efficiently. Her conception of a library was an assembly of good books put to use. Industrious, efficient and devoted to duty, Miss Booth presided over the library with dignity and justice. Her New England background and her library training would have permitted no other type of service. Her example of complete dedication to her task was an inspiration to the library staff. Numerous were her hidden acts of generosity. This magnificent building is the realization of her long cherished dream. It is fittingly named the Mary Josephine Booth Library."

The Inaugural Art Collection of Illinois Artists

The Illinois Art-in-Architecture program promotes and preserves the arts of Illinois by securing artwork of all media for public buildings constructed with State funds. Monies from the construction appropriation are used for the acquisition of artwork for new and renovated buildings that are open to the general public. A committee of artists, community representatives and state officials oversaw the project and selected the artwork. The theme of the Booth Library collection is central Illinois landscapes.

Special Thanks to...

Faculty, staff, and students of Eastern Illinois University, 1996-2002, for their dedication and support of Library Services throughout the planning, renovation, and move periods.

Mr. Steve Shrake of Facilities Planning and Management and Mr. Tom Poludniak of the Illinois Capital Development Board for their untiring assistance.

In particular...

Members of the President's Council, the Deans Council, the Council of Chairs, the Faculty Senate, the Staff Senate, the Student Senate, the Library Advisory Board, Facilities Planning and Management administration and trades, and the Purchasing Division of Business Affairs.

Additionally, we are grateful to those divisions and persons who accommodated our five temporary branch libraries 1999-2002 while Booth Library was under transformation:

McAfee Branch: Provost and Vice President for Academic Affairs, College of Education and Professional Studies, Department of Recreation Administration, Department of Physical Education, Vice President for Student Affairs, Enrollment Management, and Registration Office

Gregg Branch: Vice President for Student Affairs, Housing Office, Vice President for Business Affairs, and Information Technology Services

Union Branch: Vice President for Student Affairs, and University Union

Newman Branch: Catholic Newman Center

West Branch: John Young & Associates

To those who drew the plans, to those whose hands did the building, and to all those persons who aided in any way, we express appreciation.

Booth Library Donors

Appreciation and gratitude is extended to all those persons and organizations who helped support the renovation, restoration, and expansion of Booth Library, completed February 2002.
