Program gives girls a chance to govern

By JACKIE NEES
Staff writer

The approximately 600 citizens attending Girls' State at Eastern will elect their own governor before hearing a speech from the real Illinois Governor, Jim Edgar, Thursday.

Rena Paoella, director of Illini Girls' State, confirmed that Governor Edgar will speak to the delegation at 7:15 p.m. Thursday in Dvorak Concert Hall.

"He (Edgar) will address the citizens of Illini Girls' State and administer the oath of office to the newly elected state officials," said Paoella.

Paoella said that the week is a government program teaching the attendees proper voting procedures, petition filing procedures and flag etiquette among other information about government procedure.

"I hope that they will leave with a better knowledge of our form of democratic government, take their right to vote very seriously, and possibly that they will learn more respect for the flag of our country," Paoella said.

Illini Girls' State participants are divided into cities and counties, which hold elections for circuit court judges, mayors and attorney general, among other offices.

These cities and counties have already elected their officials for this year's conference. The race for the state officers was started on Tuesday, when participants picked up petitions for Comptroller, Attorney General, Lieutenant Governor and Governor.

Falk walks

VP cites problems with Jorns, Foundation as reasons for departure

Stephen Falk, Eastern's vice president for institutional advancement and Foundation executive officer, is leaving Eastern less than a month after he said that problems with Eastern's president made his future at the university uncertain.

Falk's resignation comes after he was quoted in a May 26 article in the Charleston Times-Courier saying that recent problems between Eastern President David Jorns and the Foundation, Eastern's major fund-raising body, could make it difficult for him to remain at Eastern.

"As a vice president and university employee, my role is to support administrative decisions," Falk told the Times-Courier.

"If I conclude that I cannot do that, then ethically I cannot stay."

Falk is leaving the university to become a senior advancement officer for a major philanthropic organization in southeast Michigan.

Falk has accepted a position as a senior counsel for Ford Health Systems, a private corporation with 35 health care centers located throughout the country.

The corporation has a $200 million endowment and a $150 million capital campaign underway.

Falk primarily will be responsible for planned giving, which comprises 60 percent of the capital campaign goal.

"This was a wonderful career opportunity," Falk said. "I have enjoyed my association with Eastern and the many outstanding individuals who work here. I am particularly proud of the relationships the institutional advancement sector has had with alumni and donors."

Falk said although he is leaving the university, he plans to assist the Foundation Board in maintaining donor relationships.

Falk came to Eastern in April 1989 to become the university's first vice president for development.

He previously served as director of university advancement at Central Michigan University and before that as director of institutional development at Alma College in Michigan.

Full-time change sparks confusion

By JONI LAMB
Editor in chief

Full-time status has changed in the past academic year and created much confusion regarding university services.

A summer school committee recommended that the President's Council change the summer full-load from eight to 12 credit hours 18 months ago, said Lou Hencken, vice president for student affairs.

The President's Council approved the change of full-time status to 12 hours for summer semester in June 1994, Hencken said. The policy change took effect this summer, he said.

The main reason for the change was "to be consistent with the rest of the semesters," Hencken said.

The summer semester is about the same length of time as fall and spring minus a week or so, Hencken said. He said part of the confusion stems from summer school being comprised of Intersession, Five-week and Eight-week sessions.

Within the university, two systems are used to determine full-time status: academic and billing purposes.

The Records Office personnel authorize academic verification.

"If a student is enrolled in six or more hours, they would be considered a full-time student for verification purposes," said Sue Harvey, associate registrar. Verification purposes include good student discounts, loan deferments and insurance other than university insurance, she said.

Billing purposes include tuition and fees based on full-time and part-time status. Students must carry 12 hours to be full-time for billing, said Mike Taylor, registration director.

"You'd have to at least take some (classes) in Intersession," said Taylor. Full-time students pay certain fees that part-timers don't pay, he added. "Full-time students pay insurance, recreational fees and a whole list of fees that are different," Taylor said. "Tuition is the same. Service fees are different."

Many fees are determined by credit hours, said Hencken.

Once full- and part-time is understood, some confusion remains regarding fees and eligibility to use services.

Throughout all semesters, part-time students are not eligible for the pharmacy service, student legal services, and health and accident insurance.

However, all students have access to health service.

Any student enrolled in at least one semester hour may use the university's Health Services, said Dr. Richard Larson, director of health service.

The only difference between full-time and part-time stu-

To attend Girls' State, a girl must be between her junior and senior years of high school, be in the top half of her class and show an interest in state government.

Mecca Rylance, a Girls' State participant from Urbana, is running for governor at this year's conference. Rylance estimates that she is among at least eight young women who picked up petitions to run for governor.

Attending the conference was a chance to meet and speak in front of other people for Rylance.

Rylance said she wanted to run for governor "because I think I'd do a great job."

Other Girls' State speakers were President David Jorns and Vice President for Student Affairs Lou Hencken, who spoke to the delegation at opening ceremonies on Sunday, and Senator Penny Severens, who spoke to the girls Tuesday night.

Scheduled to speak on Wednesday are Judy Fraser, WCIA-TV weather personality, Betty Coffrin, Coles County Clerk, and Jim Kimball, Coles County Sheriff.

On Thursday, Judy Barr Topinka, State of Illinois Treasurer, and Governor Jim Edgar will speak to the delegation, and Friday's speakers include Katherine Parker of the Secretary of State's Office.

semester hours.

To accommodate students who would have been full-time before and are now part-time, the university will look into changing the policy in the future, said Hencken.

"We need to look into letting part-time students use the pharmacy," Hencken said.

The rec center is also open to all students for a set fee for the semester.

The Student Recreation

Center fee for summer increased from last summer because of the change of credit hours for full-time status, said Jeff Dvorak, program director for rec center.

"Every student pays the same exact amount," he said.

Full-time definition hurts many

By JONI LAMB
Editor in chief

Students who use the rec center, need prescriptions, commute or have scholarships that require full-time status may be affected by the change of summer full-time status from eight to 12 credit hours in the past year.

Students who need to be full-time to keep their scholarships may encounter problems if they have jobs that restrict the number of courses they may take, such as camps and conference assistantships.

Conference assistants are advised not to take more than six semester hours, said Mary Smith, camps and conferences director. She said the recommended limited course load is "because of the work load we have here."

Conference assistants who receive scholarships and must be full-time students must carry three credit hours more than the recommended.

Christine Craig, conference assistant and junior English major, said she thought she was a full-time student when she began classes in Intercession. She had nine credit hours.

"When I first took classes, I didn't know I wasn't full-time. I need to take a full-load to maintain my scholarship. As a conference assistant I needed to take nine credits (maximum)."

The housing department was able to accommodate Craig since this was the first year the full-time status changed. Craig added a class during the eight-week session to make her full-time.

The change in status "made a conflict with my job," Craig said.

Other students are affected by the change because of miscommunication in the policy of what fees or services are connected to credit hours.

Lou Hencken, vice president for student affairs, said that the rec center fee has not changed and that part-time students are not eligible for the pharmacy, student legal services or health and accident insurance during the other semesters.

Students pay $4.60 per semester hour for full-time status to use the rec center year round, said Jeff Dvorak, director of the student recreation center.

The summer fee has increased from $33 to $55 as full-time status changed, but the system of charging per credit hour has not changed, Dvorak added.

The change in status benefits part-time students who do not use the rec center or pharmacy, Hencken said. He said the university is not trying to "nickel and dime" students with fees.

Booth face-lift being debated

Committee will dictate direction of renovation

By AMY DAVIS
Staff Writer

Damage repair and an addition to Booth Library may be included in the planned renovation of the building, said the director of Eastern's physical plant, Tuesday.

Staff from Eastern's physical plant and Booth Library are working on a building program document that will state what they see as needed in the renovation, Ted Weidner said.

"New lighting, rearranged space, different circulation, new space for new or expanded services and air conditioning are a few of the things the committee is working on," Weidner said.

The committee will meet through the summer and fall to work on the statement.

"The building program document will describe requirements for the renovation, identify the overall character of the library addition -do they want to maintain the classical design or try a modern look-and have ideas about improving the way the library works," Weidner said.

When the building program document is finished, the $1 million for planning the renovation should be available for use, Weidner said. Then Eastern will accept bids from architects who will decide where the addition will be located and how to arrange things to make the library work its best.

Weidner said the Illinois Board of Higher Education in Springfield, which oversees about 12 universities and 50 community colleges in Illinois, recommended that $1 million be given to Eastern for planning the renovations several months ago.

The Illinois State Legislature has approved the idea of giving Eastern money for planning the renovations, Weidner said.

Weidner said the roadblock is that the money for the renovations comes from bonds that the state sells. He said that process can take awhile.

The bill extending bonding authority to provide the funds for the Booth planning is held up in the State Legislature, awaiting the fall veto session for approval.

After the $1 million renovation plans are completed and money for the renovation is approved by the State Legislature, Weidner said the library must deal with $10 million of deferred damages.

"Damages to the library have accumulated and we have to take care of problems -like water damage to books-before we can begin to build on to the library," Weidner said.

After the deferred damages have been taken care of, there will be $4-5 million available for building an addition to Booth, he said.

Eastern's Booth Library "really needs the renovations," said Weidner.

"This renovation has been a long time coming," Weidner said. "We're just glad the Illinois Board of Education decided to recommend to give us the money."

"Given our experiences with the Buzzard Building, construction on Booth will take at least two years," Weidner said. "The renovations could begin by March 1997, but I'm not holding my breath."

The new addition should be around 20,000 square feet, less than Eastern originally requested, he said.

"With new technology like the worldwide web and internet and services like interlibrary loan, the Illinois Board of Higher Education seems to think that less space will be needed for actual books at Booth," Weidner said.

Weidner said he thought Eastern's librarians would not agree with the Board of Education's idea. Librarians at Booth would not comment on the matter.

"But if that's what the Board wants," Weidner said, "I'll work with them."

"We'll get the creative minds working first," Weidner said, "and then see how things are going."

Politicians target potential voters

Good move Jim Edgar!

Gov. Edgar has confirmed his arrival for this year's Premier Girls' State. The program teaches young women around the state about local and state government.

Last week's Premier Boy's State concluded without a visit from the state's highest ranking politician.

This week, however, the governor puts future women voters on his list of priorities.

Editorial These young women are interested in government, and in a few years they may be critical in the governor's bid for re-election.

Some of these young women may also enter Illinois politics in the near future, opposing Edgar and his political agenda. This is an opportune time to get them on his side.

Why didn't any government official come to Boys' State?

The president of the American Legion inaugurated the Boys' State officials since no Illinois governmental officials were present.

Boys' Staters had a governor, lieutenant governor, comptroller, attorney general and secretary of state.

No one from those offices in Illinois managed to work their schedules to accommodate the young men.

Those politicians definitely have missed an opportunity to get votes from potential loyal voters. As juniors in high school, most of the young men will be eligible to vote in the next few years.

By attending Boys' State, the young men express a desire to learn more about government. That interest may well increase their voting record.

Edgar has taken steps to make sure he does not lose potential votes from the young women. However, it seems as if the young men did not matter as much.

TODAY'S QUOTE

Is not life a hundred times too short for us to bore ourselves

-Friedrich Nietzsche

Part-timer's summer program ruined

I feel betrayed.

My summer plans have all been ruined and I'm so disillusioned with the institution that is Eastern, I could cry.

This summer I had planned to get in shape. Now, I have never been the athletic type. I have never felt the need to pump iron or run a marathon, but this summer I had planned to drop a couple pounds and get in better condition for a backpacking trip that I'm planning with some friends later this summer.

I couldn't wait for summer to start. 'I'll only be taking two classes and being an editor for the paper, that shouldn't take up all my time,' I thought. 'That should leave plenty of time to go to the Rec.'

Once I got back to Charleston for the summer, I was informed that my seven credit hours was not enough to merit full-time student status.

And on top of this terrible disappointment I discovered that since I was not considered a full time student, I couldn't use the Rec Center!!!

So much for my summer of fun.

It's not so much the idea of paying to use the Rec Center that I object to, but rather the idea of having to purchase a Rec Center pass separate from the fees that I already had to pay this summer.

Other Illinois universities have set up some much more reasonable, not to mention more easily understood, methods for dealing with the issue of part-time/full-time students and the payment of fees than Eastern.

According to Sally Baily, registration office manager at Illinois State University, a pro-rated fee structure is in place at Illinois State.

Sarah Drury

"Not being able to spend hours in the Rec, working up a sweat, torturing my body is something I may not be able to endure."

This means that a student pays a fee dependent on the number of hours he or she is taking. For financial aid and insurance purposes, full-time status kicks in at six hours, but no matter if a student carries one credit hour or 16, that student can use any and all facilities for the price of the fees paid.

"Students can use the facilities regardless of the number of hours they carry," Baily said.

Another option would be to charge students a flat fee for use of facilities such as the Rec Center. Southern Illinois University at Edwardsville uses this method.

The students at SIUE decided that pro-rated fees are unfair, said Randy Rock, associate vice president of student affairs at SIUE. The flat rate fee was found to be the answer.

This way students are guaranteed "full use of all facilities even if registered for one class," Rock said.

It is too late for Eastern's part-timers this year, but other options should be examined. Students should not have to buy a pass to use a facility that their fees already go towards.

Not being able to spend hours in the Rec, working up a sweat, torturing my body is something I may not be able to endure. Well, at least I don't have to worry about getting hurt and having to go to Health Services...that is if they'd let me in.

There's more than corn in Chuck-town

Believe it or not, there are things to do in Charleston. I've lived here all my life, and haven't died of boredom, yet.

For those who live on or near campus, under twenty-one, and have no car, there seems to be very little to do.

Here are some of the activities I might suggest to bored students.

Take a trip to the pool! The Charleston Rotary Pool, located off 18th street, just a short bike ride away, features lap swim hours and a waterslide.

If all that activity just sounds too strenuous, kick back and hang out in one of Charleston's air-conditioned cafes or restaurants. On campus, the Rathskellar in the basement of the Union is a cool escape from heat and is open for lunch. Uptown, a 10 minute walk away, are the Monroe Street Cafe and Rosie's. The Monroe Street Cafe offers a bottomless cup of flavored coffee, and is a popular hangout. Rosie's, right next door, is usually open late, and serves daily specials and drinks.

The University Board often plans summer activities on the quad. If live music is your activity of choice, Ted's features bands on weekends and frequently during the week. The bar is located a few blocks past uptown, and features a juice bar for 18, 19 and 20-year-olds. Friends' and Company and Marty's are two other bars that offer live music.

If a short road trip is in order to relieve your boredom, Fox Ridge State Park on South Route 130 offers nature trails and campsites. A visit to Lincoln Log Cabin, off south Fourth Street, may teach you about life in the time of Abraham Lincoln at the cabin where his father and stepmother once lived. Lincoln Log Cabin employees dress in period costume, farm and do housework in the way that people of the time would have on an Illinois farm, right down to their home cooked food.

A new activity I discovered only last week is a Go-Cart track, located south of Mattoon on Lakeland Boulevard and open until 10:30pm. For $3.50 you can go around and around feeling like Kyle Petty.

Another activity close to campus is the "Goofy Golf," also known as "Putt Putt" course, located next to the Rotary pool. These are just some, but not all, of the things to do hidden around Charleston, but don't take my word for it. Go out and find your own unique activities that I haven't thought of yet. Summer in Charleston isn't the end of the world, if you don't give in to your boredom.

The Long, HOT SummerFest Season

By Mario A. Leto II
Staff writer

The stage is set for the Eastern Illinois University Summerfest Theater.

The summer company, in its sixth season with a professional theater guild, is confident that this will be the best season thus far.

"The summer theater company has been lots of fun," said Therese Supple Kincade, one of the many hired actresses with the company. "We are extremely fortunate to have a very talented cast and crew."

Kincade, along with the other members of the theater company, has been putting in ten- to twelve-hour days, seven days a week, in order to prepare for the summer shows.

Ettore Guidotti, chairman of the theater department and organizer of the Eastern summer company, is pleased to see the company in its sixth season as an official member of a professional theater guild.

"Our audience has taught us well," said Guidotti. "Each summer we attempt to achieve higher levels of performance from the previous year, and this year is no different."

"These past eight weeks have been extremely intense, but it all pays off in the end," he said. "The higher levels of performance that we reach, the more entertainment that we can give to our audiences, the better we feel by closing night."

Members of the company are found through tryouts that take place all across the Midwest, from St. Louis to Chicago to Indianapolis. Cast and crew, if chosen to work for the Eastern summer company, are given a stipend, including room, board and health benefits.

"The days are long and the work is hard, but it's the experience that counts," said J. Sain, producer and company manager. "It's more than a full-time job."

Much like last summer, the Eastern Theater Company has lined up three mainstage musicals, accompanied by a children's play, to highlight the summer events.

Dames at Sea, the theater company's first musical, went on stage last weekend. Future performance dates will be July 29 and 30, and July 1, 28 and 29. Matinee shows will be July 2 and 30.

Nunsense, a musical highlighted by a hilarious talent show staged by the Little Sisters of Hoboken nunnery to raise funds to bury their dearly departed, hits the stage this weekend, June 22-24.

Additional night performances will be July 13-15 and Aug. 3-4 with matinees running June 25 and July 16.

Tintypes, a musical set at the turn of the century, tells the story of an immigrant in search of the American dream. This will be on the mainstage the first full weekend of July and will run until Aug. 6.

The summer company will be putting on Goldilocks and the Three Bears for the children July 14-Aug. 5.

Night performances begin at 8 p.m. Matinees begin at 2 p.m.
Ticket and reservation information can be attained by calling the theater department at 581-3110.

1995 SUMMER COMMENCEMENT

Summer Commencement will be held on Sunday, August 6, at 2 p.m. in Lantz Gym. An informational Commencement Guide and cap and gown order form are being sent to all graduates who have applied for summer graduation. Deadline for ordering regalia is Friday, July 7. Graduates who "March by Exceptionality" will not have their names printed in the commencement program. All faculty are encouraged to participate in the ceremony. Any faculty needing to rent regalia should contact Mark Haines, 6892, in Old Main to place an order prior to July 7. For additional information, please call 6892.

ORAL ENGLISH PROFICIENCY ASSESSMENT

The Board of Governors Universities has adopted a program of Oral English Proficiency Assessment for all instructional staff. Students who have difficulty understanding instructors should, if possible, first consult the instructor. In the event that the difficulties are not resolved, the students should address his/her concerns to the Chair of the department in which the instructor teaches. Subsequent appeals may also be possible through the Dean of the student's college, and then through the Provost and Vice President for Academic Affairs.

Terry M. Weidner
Associate Vice President for Academic Affairs

FINAL EXAM CHANGES

Students who have three final examinations scheduled for one day may change the date of one of the final examinations with the approval of the INSTRUCTOR. Requests for changes for medical or personal emergencies may also be considered. In cases not resolved between the student and the instructor, the Dean, Enrollment Management, Room 116 Old Main, will seek resolution. Students are discouraged from requesting instructors to deviate from the published examination schedule. Reasons of personal convenience such as work, transportation arrangements or vacation plans, do not constitute grounds for approval of examination change requests.

NBA stars voice displeasure with their union leadership

NEW YORK (AP) - Michael Jordan, Reggie Miller, Patrick Ewing and other NBA stars have issued what amounts to a no-confidence vote in their union leadership, a move that threatens to disrupt labor negotiations between the league and the players association.

On Monday, Jordan, Chicago teammate Scottie Pippen, Ewing, Charlotte's Alonzo Mourning, Orlando's Horace Grant, Atlanta's Stacey Augmon and other players signed notices saying they no longer wish to be represented by the union. Miller was to sign today, said his agent, Arn Tellem.

"The list is large and growing at a rapid pace," Tellem said.

The move followed complaints from players, voiced by their agents, that the union was negotiating under a cloak of secrecy.

"The union leadership is an island unto themselves," said Tellem, a member of a 15-member committee of agents set up to advise the union on labor talks. "As a result, the players now are furious. They have no clue as to what's being negotiated." Simon Gourdine, the union's executive director, could not be reached for comment Monday night about the players' effort to dissociate themselves from the National Basketball Players Association.

Earlier in the day, he said there were valid reasons for not keeping the players apprised of certain aspects of the talks.

"The problem the agents advisory committee has had is they expect us to give interim reports on tentative agreements," Gourdine said. "Our view is that's premature. It's a delicate balance, and we have to reach the point where we have something to report."

The NBA and the union reported progress toward a new labor deal was being made, but both sides postponed until Friday previously scheduled meetings to vote on an agreement. The league played the 1994-95 season under a no-strike, no-lockout agreement, which was extended when the season ended last week without a new collective bargaining agreement to replace the one that expired in June 1994.

The league postponed an owners meeting scheduled for today in New York. NBA commissioner David Stern announced the meeting last Wednesday, saying he hoped to have an agreement to present to the board of governors by then.

"Although we continue to be engaged in intensive negotiations and believe we are making progress," deputy commissioner Russ Granik said Monday. "We do not at this time have an agreement to present to our board." A players meeting set for Monday in Chicago was tentatively rescheduled for Friday, Gourdine said.

Last Saturday, the agents advisory board sent a letter to Gourdine saying the players were "outraged that they have been excluded from the negotiation process and that their views have not been represented." Gourdine denied trying to keep the players in the dark and said airing details of the players' proposals would harm the negotiations. Gourdine leads a negotiating committee that includes union president Buck Williams of the Portland Trail Blazers, first vice president Charles Smith of the New York Knicks and several other players.

Softball coach tenders her resignation

Beth Perine quits and packs her bags with a destination unknown

By MATT FARRIS
 Sports editor

While Eastern is moving to the Ohio Valley Conference, one member of the Eastern coaching staff will not make that trip.

Instead, she will be making a trip of her own. A trip that, so far, has no set destination.

At the end of last week, Beth Perine, Eastern's softball coach, turned in her resignation.

She cited her displeasure with recent decisions at Eastern as her main reason for tendering her resignation.

Although she would not give specific information, Perine said that she would be moving out of state.

"I thought it was the right thing to do," Perine said of resigning last week.

She said her reasoning for resigning last week instead of waiting until she found another job was to allow the university to begin a search for a new softball coach.

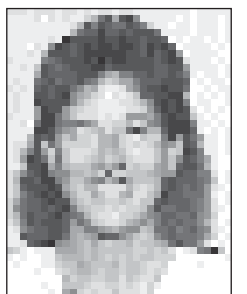

"I didn't want to leave this team high and dry," she said of her coachless team.

"This team is very special to me."

Perine has coached the Panther softball squad since 1991.

She compiled a record of 94-104 in her four-year stay at Eastern.

Eastern Athletic Director Bob McBee could not be reached for comment on Perine's replacement.

Duathlon planned for Saturday

By MATT FARRIS
 Sports Editor

Saturday morning men and women from the immediate area, as well as from Chicago and Indiana, will lace up their shoes, air up their bicycle tires and prepare to take part in the first annual Eastern Illinois Duathlon.

According to Dr. Tom Woodall, director of the duathlon, the main purpose of the duathlon is to raise money for the Eastern Adult Fitness/Cardiac Rehabilitation programs and Human Performance Laboratory.

There is a $20 entry fee for those who sign up for the duathlon in advance. A $25 entry fee will be charged for those signing up the morning of the duathlon. Those signing up that day must be signed up by 6:15 a.m.

According to Woodall, there are ten age groups in both men's and women's divisions with a $50 award going to the overall male and female winner as well as an award for the top two finishers in each age group.

Entry forms can be picked up outside of room 221A in the Lantz Building.

The duathlon is set to begin at 7:00 a.m. Saturday. It consists of a three mile road run followed by a 14 mile bike ride and finishes with a two mile trail run.

The road run will take place on the streets Charleston. The bike ride winds out southwest of Charleston and finishes at Lantz building. The two mile trail run takes place on the Panther Trail and will finish at the Campus Pond Pavillion.

The awards ceremony will take place at 9 a.m. at the Pavillion.

Locker-gate

Rams want their lockers

LOS ANGELES (AP) - The Rams want to take their lockers from Anaheim Stadium to St. Louis. The general manager of the facility says the lockers are staying put for now.

Movers for the Rams were locked out Monday following an attempt to take 63 lockers from the stadium's football locker room, prompting the team's executive director of administration to charge the city of Anaheim with obstruction.

The Rams announced early this year they were leaving nearby Orange County to play in St. Louis starting with the 1995 season.

Mary Kromolowski, who is coordinating the team's physical move to the Midwest, said the team installed the lockers in 1980, but now the city has changed the locks on the locker room.

"I have moving vans out here that I have to cancel and reschedule. We've had enough problems with the city, we certainly didn't need this." Greg Smith, the general manager for the stadium and the Anaheim Convention Center, said.
