Senate approves fee hike

By CATHY PODWOJSKI
Staff writer

Student Senate approved a proposal from the Intercollegiate Athletic Board increase the student activity fee by a flat rate increase at the senate meeting Wednesday night.

The senate first voted to put a referendum on the Nov. 8 ballot, then voted to increase by a flat rate increase, which is a set amount each semester, rather than an index increase, which would have increased the fee according to the inflation rate.

Athletic Director R.C. Johnson explained the referendum proposal to senate before a vote was taken. At this time, Johnson proposed a $10 per semester increase in the fee if a flat rate increase was approved. After the vote was taken, however, senate decided to "negotiate" the amount of the increase with Johnson with senate setting the final rate.

Johnson said, "We would prefer the index, but obviously we'll take anything you want to give us, and put on the referendum."

Eastern athletics currently receive $24.55 of the $240.85 full-time student activity fee. In addition, Student Body President Mike Riordan said the athletic department also receives about 40 percent of the $25.25 grant-in-aid portion of the activity fee for scholarships.

The athletic department receives its funding from three sources according to Johnson. The Panther Club, football and men's basketball gate receipts, and the student activity fees provide the money for the department.

Johnson said the athletic department has not had an increase in activity fee revenue for four years, when the last referendum was approved. He said that due to inflation, the department needs the increase to "keep up" the department, and that Eastern is "falling behind."

Quayle put on defensive

OMAHA, Neb. (AP)— Republican vice presidential candidate Dan Quayle said Wednesday night that he has as much experience as John F. Kennedy had when he won the White House and is "prepared to lead this country" if necessary. "Senator, you're no Jack Kennedy," Democratic rival Lloyd Bentsen shot back in the dramatic highlight of a 90-minute campaign debate.

"That was really uncalled for," the 41-year-old Quayle retorted to his 67-year-old rival. Replied Bentsen: "You're the one that was making the comparison, senator. . . and I did not think the comparison was well taken."

The clash over Quayle's readiness for high office was the emotional climax of a high-stakes debate in which the vice presidential candidates also collided over the environment, Social Security and campaign reform. The two men aimed many of their best lines past each other and in the direction of presidential candidates George Bush and Michael Dukakis.

The Indiana senator said he has more experience in critical areas than Democrat Dukakis and added, "If qualifications alone are going to be the issue in this campaign, George Bush has more qualifications than Michael Dukakis and Lloyd Bentsen combined."

John Kennedy served in Congress 14 years before winning the White House in 1960. Quayle has served 12 years.

Bentsen took aim at the vice president's vote in favor of a budget plan to curtail Social Security cost-of-living increases and said the Reagan administration had appointed high-level environmental officials who were the equivalent of Bonnie and Clyde.

Asked why voters would want to install a Democrat in the White House given current record low unemployment and low inflation under the Republican's guidance, Bentsen referred to record deficits. "If you let me write $200 billion in hot checks every year, I could give you the illusion of prosperity,

One debate watcher picks Bentsen as the victor

The vice presidential debate Wednesday night sparked varied reactions among local officials of both political parties.

Joe Connelly, an Eastern faculty member and Democratic state committeeman, said Sen. Lloyd Bentsen won the debate, adding that Bentsen showed "experience, dignity and compassion."

Rep. Mike Weaver (R-Charleston) disagreed (that Bensten won), saying that he couldn't pick a clear winner, but that both candidates won something.

"Bentsen had a relaxed demeanor and I think that it helped his image a great deal," Weaver said. "But Quayle showed maturity and restraint considering the conditions he was under."

One of the questions asked over and over during the debate centered on the qualifications of each man should they have to step in as president. Quayle repeatedly emphasized his 12 years of congressional experience and downplayed his age while Bentsen pointed to his record.

Connelly said that this issue was important as one of these men may someday take over as president.

"I agree with (Sen.) Dole when he said 'surely he (Bush) could have done better than that (by picking Quayle),' " Connelly said.

Weaver felt Quayle "came out of it very well considering all of the pressure he was under." Connelly pointed out the vice-presidential candidate is usually only worth a few percentage points to a presidential candidate's popularity and that this debate will not make much of a difference to the voters.

Weaver agreed, saying that that although it will have "very little" effect, it was a good opportunity for people to see the candidates.

Travel agency manager faces theft charges

By PETE SCALES
Staff writer

The part-owner and manager of a brand-new Charleston business faces two to five years imprisonment after she was charged with theft Wednesday.

Georgia Calhoun, 1505 Woodlawn Drive, manager and part-owner of the Travel Chalet, 419 Lincoln, is suspected of cashing a number of unauthorized checks written on a business checking account of the Travel Chalet, which she exchanged for U.S. currency.

She allegedly exchanged the checks for a quantity of U.S. currency valued in excess of $300.

Coles County State's Attorney Nancy Owen issued a warrant for Calhoun's arrest Wednesday, but by press time, police were unable to comment whether Calhoun had been taken into custody.

Owen declined comment on the case, pending litigation.

A criminal lawsuit filed in the Coles County Circuit Clerk's office Wednesday indicates bond for Calhoun was set at $10,000.

The Travel Chalet, Charleston's newest travel agency, opened June 20.

Calhoun reportedly wrote the checks from a period between July 1 and Sept. 10.

The agency is owned jointly by Calhoun, Robert and Anita Drake, 2025 McKinley Ave., and William and Erlene Updegraff, 19 Miller Ave.

The owners of the Travel Chalet and their attorney, William A. Sunderman, also declined to comment on the case pending litigation.

Calhoun, who has been in the travel business for 18 years, manages the travel operation with the help of travel counselor Gayle Snider.

An anonymous source who is employed at the Travel Chalet acknowledged Calhoun "has had problems with agencies before." The source added Calhoun's daughter said the Calhoun family has lived in 17 different places around the country.

Minor quake rattles states

BLOOMINGTON, Ind.—A minor earthquake that rattled southwestern Indiana and southeastern Illinois could signal the start of renewed quake activity in that area, a geologist said Wednesday.

The earthquake, which occurred at 7:39 p.m. EST Tuesday, was centered near Lawrenceville, Ill., and registered 3.5 on the Richter scale, according to Michael Hamburger, who heads the geology department at Indiana University.

It was recorded by a network of regional seismograph stations, including one in Bloomington.

CIA settles LSD/mind-control

WASHINGTON (AP)—The government has tentatively settled a lawsuit charging the CIA used nine Canadians as human Guinea Pigs in mind-control research that included heavy doses of LSD, lawyers in the case said Wednesday.

The tentative out-of-court settlement, negotiated by attorneys for the Canadians and the Justice Department, was announced on the eve of the trial at a hearing before U.S. District Judge John Garrett Penn. who has presided over the case for eight years.

The $9 million lawsuit claims that CIA-financed research in mind-control left permanent psychological or emotional damage on the nine patients who underwent treatment in the late 1950s at the Allan Memorial Institute at McGill University in Montreal.

Controller mistakes at O'Hare

CHICAGO (AP)— Mistakes by air traffic controllers at O'Hare International Airport have already more than doubled the number of errors at the airport in 1987, and officials said Wednesday they do not know the cause of the problem.

Controllers at O'Hare made two errors Friday, another Sunday and another Tuesday, bringing the number of recorded mistakes at O'Hare this year to 30, said Don Zochert, a spokesman for the Federal Aviation Administration in Chicago.

On Sunday, two United Airlines jets came within 500 feet of each other, the pilot of one plane apparently followed the order intended for the other.

In comparison, Atlanta's Hartsfield International Airport has had six errors this year, and Washington's National Airport just two, officials said.

Speaker focuses on economics

By MATT MANSFIELD
Staff writer

The global economy was the focus of a speech that concluded Business Week Wednesday night in the Union's Grand Ballroom.

Illinois Agriculture Association President John White spoke to a crowd about opportunities and the "productive future" available in agriculture.

"I found out just before (the speech) that you're all getting points for being here, so if you leave before I finish speaking, we're taking points away," he joked.

White said he saw "dramatic changes" ahead for the economy. He said he felt a lot of the future demand for corn would come from developing countries. "We need to target those countries who will be able to pay . . . and not just on credit," he said.

"We have to develop a profile and then find people (countries) to fit that profile," White said.

The regions who fit that profile, White said, include Asia and "specifically Thailand, Malaysia and China."

White, who recently returned from a trip to the Pacific rim, said he is "enthusiastic" about Illinois' chances of competing in the world market.

He favors less government action and more freedom in the marketplace.

"We have to do it. If we don't do it, nobody else will," White said, referring to getting our products to marketplace.

"Illinois is the Saudi Arabia of the corn market," White said. All we have to do is find out where to ship our products."

Meanwhile, two activities of Business Week also concluded Wednesday; the naming of Mr. and Ms. Business Executive and the week's game winner.

Angela Cole and Frank Malina were chosen as Ms. and Mr. Business Executive respectively, and Jeff Westerhold was the game winner.

Farmers lose case as harvest closes

Drought causes both crop and financial loss

By JEFF MADSEN
City editor

Coles County farmers are reaping what's left of their fall harvest and hoping they'll have enough money to pay their bills this winter.

Tom Stoutenborough, Coles County cooperative extension adviser, said Wednesday Coles County farmers can expect a 30 percent decrease income decrease compared to last year.

"They're still going to be short of meeting the bill for the crops they grew," Stoutenborough said. "Basically, we're looking at a negative cash flow."

A summer-long drought played havoc with farmers as corn and soybean yields throughout Coles County are significantly lower this fall compared to past yearly averages.

With about 80 percent of the soybean harvest in, Stoutenborough reported soybeans yield about 26 bushels per acre, down from the usual 40 bushels per acre average. And with about 40 percent of the corn harvest complete, he said corn if yielding about 70 bushels per acre, down 80 bushels from the countywide average. Stoutenborough said provided good weather continues, the corn harvest would be complete with two to three weeks.

Primarily a grain farming

ROBB MONTGOMERY/Graphic editor

Area farmers began their fall harvests a few weeks ago.

county, Stoutenborough said although the drought put a serious dent in harvest productions, Coles County will still be one of the higher-producing grain counties throughout Illinois.

"Normally, we would probably rank in the upper 20-25 percent and I would think that we'd still be in that upper category this year," he said.

Stoutenborough said of the 900 farms in Coles County, the drought's affects will be most harmful to younger farmers.

"This is probably going to be most dangerous to young farmers just getting started and heavily in debt. It may also be dangerous to those farmers who are poor managers and don't cut costs or do a very good job of marketing."

Parking stickers still available at University P.D.

University Police will continue their sale of parking stickers Friday.

"The tickets are not moving very fast," said Sergeant John Hensley of the University Police. "There are still some available," Hensley said.

Stickers went on sale Monday because parking lots were not being used to their capacity, he said.

Parking stickers will be on sale for $12.50 for a semester and $25 for the year.

Stickers can be purchased at the University Police office from 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m., Monday through Friday.

Johnson helped tarnish future Olympic Games

The furor of the Olympics seems to have quieted down now that the games are over; however, the blunders and controversies will be in history books until the end of time.

Editorial

This year what will be remembered in the pages of time is the boxer who sat in protest for an hour in the center of the ring, the boxer who decided to duke it out with several of the referees, Greg Louganis knocking his head on the diving board and even a few mistakes made by gymnasts.

However, those are minor and may be forgotten compared to what Canada's Ben Johnson will be remembered for. The Jamaican born sprinter will be known through time as the man who lost his gold medal because steroids were found in his system after a routine test was conducted on all the runners.

Regardless of his claims that it was fixed, it is regrettable because the seed of suspicion was planted in the minds of the viewing audience. Millions of viewers believe he took steroids before the race giving him the unfair advantage over the popular Carl Lewis and other runners in the race.

Steroids are illegal which explains why the need for testing before an event. They give the athlete an unfair advantage over the other athletes in that the user will be quicker, stronger and more hyped for the match.

If Johnson had been using steroids it gave him the advantage of being quicker than Lewis; however, he was not faster through his own training.

It is an unethical means of obtaining the gold medal as cheats the other sprinters out of a chance at the gold or a medal period.

But what did Johnson gain from his little faux pas? Nothing. He lost his gold medal and the new world record he set has been nullified because the officials say he did not achieve this record time on his own.

Not only did he lose his medal to Lewis, but he also marred the Olympics for this year. In addition Lewis now has to accept the fact that he may have deserved the gold in the first place, but he only received it because of the scandal.

The only thing left now is to file the 1988 summer Olympics in our memories and hope for a controversy free Olympics four years for now.

Bicycles becoming items of torture

Bicycles. Those great self-motorized vehicles are seen all over Eastern's campus. There are people on bikes on the streets heading out for food, on sidewalks going to class and there are bikes locked up in racks by dorms and lecture halls. Bikes are a wonderful and harmless form of transportation, but given to the wrong people, a bicycle can be a lethal weapon.

Come on now, what are you talking about you may ask?

How can this fairly small metal construction held together with nuts and bolts destroy something that weighs probably ten times as much? Just as a mouse can horrify an elephant, a bicycle can strike terror into the unsuspecting pedestrian.

Consider this: I was walking back with some friends from a night class, when I hear a peculiar noise behind me. Being curious, I turned around and stared into the South Quad and saw nothing but darkness (perhaps if it was daytime I might have seen something, but those lights are not too bright).

The strange noise grew louder. It was kind of like a buzzing bee and a jeep being driven at top speed (stop laughing right now, I kid you not).

Suddenly, out of nowhere, a bicyclist doing about 30 miles per hour whizzes by me within one foot of where I happened to be walking. Caught of guard, I jumped about 10 feet (this is a "slight" exaggeration). After regaining my composure, another bike rider zooms by me faster than the first.

Once again I did my best Olympic style high jump, shocked that another person had interrupted my train of thought and surprised that I was not run over by the maniacs on their bikes.

I finally made it back to the safety of my room without being scared half to death from any more bicyclists. After I thought over the incident, I came to the conclusion: why wouldn't they have said anything before they approached me on their instrument of doom? I know whenever I ride my bike, 9 times out of 10 I'll usually say "excuse me" or something close to that effect so pedestrians know I'm there.

I know! They are the direct descendants of the Marquis de Sade (the man sadism is named after).

But that doesn't apply to just the "gentlemen" they tried to make me roadkill. It applies to those who not shout a warning like "move" or "get out of my way." It doesn't take that much breath to say a couple of words. Or (if you have a bike like mine which creates much noise), perhaps they can just noisily coast by and not silently pedal pass unsuspecting people.

It's only common courtesy.

What bike riders ought to remember is that when they must walk, they would want someone to alert them that a rider was coming up. I know I do. I have NO intention of being a biker's wheel ornament, don't want to spend the rest of my life stuck next to the Tony the Tiger plastic reflector. Does anyone want that fate?

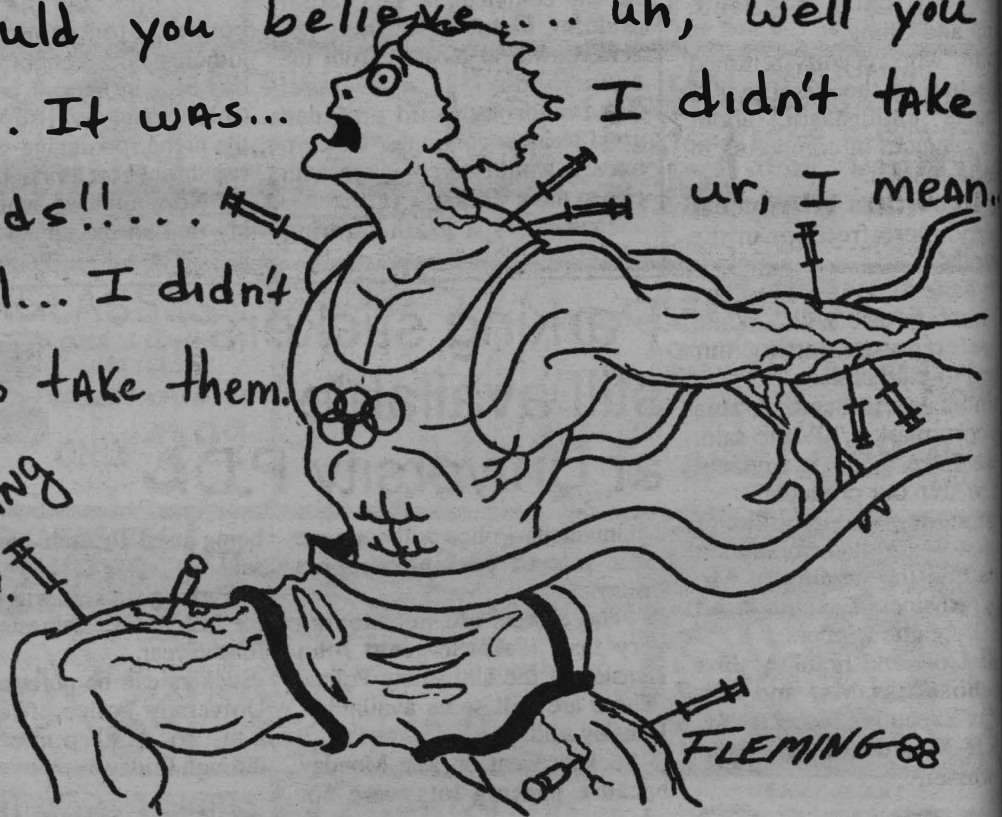

Then why don't the riders blurt out something when they pass by on their way to wherever? Or if they want to remain silent, perhaps they can go "around" (yes, is a new concept) and ride on the grass? Sure, it's a little tie bumpier than concrete, but it still gets a person to their destination.

Pedestrians and bicycle riders will probably always be at odds; this I do realize. But, maybe with some general courtesy and common sense, the sidewalks of Eastern's campus can be safer for everyone.

Debbie Carlson is a staff writer and guest columnist for The Daily Eastern News.

I swear! It was in the water bottle!!?

Paper shouldn't print addresses

Editor:

I am writing in response to Jeff Madsen's articles in both the Sept. 22 and Sept. 27 editions about an accused sexual assaulter. I have a few specific complaints and many an outrage at Mr. Madsen's cruel attempt at journalism.

I would first like to make this point clear. I do not know the accused and first heard of the entire event from this article. My letter is not about guilt or innocence. It is only about what should and should not be included in an article about anyone for any reason (other than at the request of the person written about.)

In Mr. Madsen's article he listed the address of the accused (and might I remind him of "innocent until proven guilty"). When did articles come equipped with the person's private home address? I read through every other article in each edition and in not one was there an address listed. Not even in an article about a freshman's adaptation to EIU and living off campus, was this off campus address given for all the world to see. In the Sept. 27 edition a picture was also provided of this man's house and again, lest we forget, his address.

Besides my initial question of the reason for having this in the article, I have another question about Mr. Madsen's "tactics." Has he no knowledge of what cruel and hateful things our fellow human beings can and have been known to do when provided with this sort of information? Has he no compassion or even an ounce of sympathy for the family in question? I'm surprised that he didn't include their phone number. Although provided with their address and names, one could easily (with the aid of a phonebook) find out for themselves. Hopefully, I am wrong in this case and no good citizen of Charleston will take advantage of this very careless mistake. If I am right, though, I feel that Mr. Madsen may have provided the family of the accused with more grief than they are already experiencing.

I was glad to see on the "Donahue" show one Wednesday that others are speaking out against media cruelty. Perhaps there are those who feel that this may not be as severe a problem as I do, but I wonder. If we sit by and let these things be printed "What will they write next?" I am sure that Mr. Madsen could have presented a truthful and complete story on this event without including the home address. I hope that in the future Mr. Madsen's articles won't be swayed by either his sided opinion or plainly enough by his ignorance.

"Arsenic and Old Lace" to open Friday at the Doudna Fine Arts

By JEFF FROSCH
Staff writer

"Arsenic and Old Lace" opens Friday at the Doudna Fine Arts Center theater.

This performance is the opens the University Theater's fall season.

The play, written by Joseph Kesselring and directed by C.P. Blanchette, will begin at 8 p.m. Friday, Saturday and Monday through Wednesday. There will also be a matinee at 2 p.m. Sunday.

This fast-paced comedy tells the story of two charming, "innocent" ladies who pollute their cellar with the remains of socially and religiously acceptable roomers. According to director Blanchette, even those who have seen the play previously will be entertained by this production.

Over 30 students and six faculty are involved in the presentation of this play and are hoping for a good turnout from the student population.

Original plans for the show included using a fairly simple set instead of the more elaborate one that has been constructed. Mr. Blanchette states that the large amount of student involvement in the production has allowed the show to be done as a show would have been in the period this play was written.

Admission is $2 for Eastern students, $3 for those high school age and younger and $4 for adults.

Athletes serve as missionaries

By JEFF POMBERT
Staff writer

On the surface, volleyball players and missionaries don't appear to have much in common, but to one Eastern student the opposite is true.

Scott Wilk, a senior psychology major, spent three weeks of his summer traveling through Central America with a squad of volleyball players sponsored by Athletes in Action, a division of Campus Crusade ministries.

Wilk joined the team because he wanted to use his sport as a way to share the gospel with people in different countries.

"After each match, we got to share our faith with them (the fans) on a one-to-one basis," he said. The crowds usually numbered several hundred and few spoke English, but there were several translators at every stop, Wilk said.

In addition, he helped run volleyball clinics in some of the local high schools.

Wilk said that for the most part the people were interested in meeting Americans and they were surprised when the team shared their faith in God so openly.

Wilk also learned many things during his stay -- some of them the hard way.

"You don't drink the water . . . ever. I was down for three to four days with stomach flu because I ate fruits and vegetables washed in water. About half the team got hit at one time or another," Wilk said.

His diet mainly consisted of black beans, rice and chicken. He explained that when they cook chicken, they cook the whole chicken.

"On several occasions, you'd get a chicken claw in your dinner!"

He also said that he fell asleep sitting next to a chicken during a four hour bus ride in Guatemala.

In San Salvador, the capitol of El Salvador, he remembers hearing gunshots outside the city limits every night. "You just get used to it after awhile," he said.

But it was the people who left the biggest impression on him. He explained how the people opened their homes and their hearts to the team during a four-day stay in Xela, Guatemala.

"They (Latin Americans) always wanted to know about others. They didn't care that we would only be there for four days," he said. "They were crying when we left."

Wilk had to raise $3,500 in support to finance the trip. Most of this support came from friends and relatives, but he wasn't sure he would have it all until two weeks before leaving.

"I did a lot of praying about it (the money), that's for sure," he said.

Wilk added that taking on such an adventure is not for everyone, noting that it was hard coming back to the United States.

Junior college transfers may be faced with change in admissions

By ALMA WATSON
Staff writer

Students who transfer to Eastern from community colleges may soon see a change in admission requirements if the Council on Academic Affairs approves a new policy at Thursday's meeting.

The CAA will hold a discussion of the proposed admission policy for transfer students and continue its discussion of the undergraduate study at 2 p.m. Thursday in the Union addition Arcola/Tuscola Room.

Samuel Taber, dean of student services, will present the new proposal for a separate admission policy for transfer students for the council's consideration.

Terry Weidner, CAA chair, said the council will first listen to Dean Taber's proposal and then begin discussion on the subject.

"Essentially it requires that transfer students have thirty hours, instead of fifteen as of now to attend Eastern," Weidner said.

Special Education instructor Kathlene S. Shank and chemistry instructor David Buchanan will continue their presentations of a specific proposal to the council.

Weidner said, "Buchanan's proposal for the modification of undergraduate admissions standards is number 103 on the agenda and Shank's is admissions policies number 104. These are two different proposals on admissions proposals.

"Buchanans is very similar to the one proposed in the larger report. Where Shanks is much different from that of Buchanans," Weidner said.

Weidner added CAA will also listen to a proposal by the Honors Council. "It was on the agenda a while back and they (Honors Council) asked us to wait. Now they have given us a revised version and we will work on their proposal, providing that the chair Mr. (Herb) Lasky can attend this weeks meeting," said Weidner.

CAA will also continue to discuss several course proposals from the Elementary Education department.

RHA to discuss plans for haunted house

Eastern's Residence Hall Association will discuss plans for a haunted house and talent show at the meeting to be held at 5:00 p.m. Thursday in the Dining room of Stevenson Hall.

Julie Itahara, president of Lawson, Inc., said that anyone is welcome to attend the weekly meetings. Itahara emphasized that every Eastern residence hall is involved in the program.

Student Senator Tyra Ringsrud said that possible plans for a "Give a meal up program" will be discussed. The program will help needy families during Thanksgiving.

24th Annual Reading Conference aims toward encouraging reading

TONY CAMPBELL
Staff writer

Reading skills are the concern of many parents, teachers, administrators and students in today's society.

The 24th Annual Reading Conference will address this subject in detail Friday in the Martin Luther King Jr. Union with the theme "Every Child is a Reader."

The keynote address will be made by J. David Cooper, professor of education at Ball State University. Cooper's address is entitled "Making Reading Come Alive."

According to Janet M. Lambert, associate director of the Reading

Center, Cooper is nationally acclaimed and an "enjoyable speaker."

Cooper is the coordinating author of both the 1986 and 1989 editions of the Houghton-Mifflin Reading series, a children's reading series. He has been very active in education and has worked with teachers in the classroom in most states and in four countries.

Registration begins at 8 a.m. in the Alumni Lounge. The conference will begin at 8:45 a.m. in the Grand Ballroom with Charles Joley, dean of Eastern's college of education, presiding.

Following Joley will be a welcome by Eastern President Stanley Rives. Also speaking is Rose Mary Shepherd, regional superintendent of schools, and Earnest Smith, superintendent of Mattoon schools.

There will be 18 different sessions that vary topics of interest in reading and teaching reading skills. Some interesting topics will include "Why Young Children and Adolescents Don't Read: What to do about it, Creating Word Wise Wonders, Getting Students to Read at Home, and Humorous Picture Books."

Reagan denies assassination authorizations

WASHINGTON (AP)—The White House denied Wednesday that intelligence authorizations signed by President Reagan in the mid-1980s gave CIA agents latitude to use assassinations in the fight against terrorism.

Reagan said he was "quite upset" about a published report saying there had been such authorizations and said his 1981 executive order prohibiting assassinations "continues until this day."

White House Spokesman Marlin Fitzwater acknowledged that language in two intelligence findings in 1984 and 1985 subsequently was rescinded by the National Security Council, though he wouldn't say why.

Reagan's spokesman took strong exception to a Washington Post report Wednesday which said phrasing in the earlier documents amounted to a "license to kill" for intelligence agents.

Fitzwater suggested that the Post story was an attempt to embarrass the administration during the election campaign, but he stopped short of saying precisely that, telling reporters to "make your own judgment."

"I think this is an extraordinary cheap shot. It's not true," he said.

The Post's executive editor, Benjamin C. Bradlee, deflected the White House remarks saying, "We stand by our story and we have no further comment."

Fitzwater's harsh statements at the daily White House news briefing mirrored comments he made Sept. 28, 1987, on a book by Bob Woodward, assistant managing editor of The Post for investigative reporting, entitled "VEIL: The Secret Wars of the CIA".

In September, 1987, Fitzwater, responding to the revelations in Woodward's book, said Reagan "was never aware of . . . never authorized . . . any assassination efforts."

Polls favor Bentsen over Quayle for vice president

NEW YORK (AP) A second national poll has found Democrat Michael Dukakis closing on George Bush in the presidential race, although a newer survey released Wednesday gave the Republican a slightly better lead.

Both surveys found many voters expressing concern about Bush's running mate, Sen. Dan Quayle of Indiana.

The newer poll, an ABC News-Washington Post survey conducted from Sept. 28 through Tuesday, put the race at 51-44 percent with the Republicans in the numerical lead. The poll of 1,196 likely voters had an error margin of about four points.

In the other survey, a Harris poll conducted last week, the Republicans won support from 49 percent of 1,235 likely voters, compared to 46 percent for the Democrats. It also was a dead heat, given the three-point margin of error.

A Harris poll early last month put the race a bit wider, at 50-44 with Bush and Quayle ahead. Similarly, a CBS News-New York Times poll released Tuesday put the race at 48-46, tightened from 49-44 later last month.

The ABC-Post and Harris polls were released on the night of Quayle's debate with Sen. Lloyd Bentsen of Texas, the Democratic vice presidential nominee. Like other polls, both found doubts about Quayle's qualifications for office.

Quayle

too," he said.

The vice presidential rivals shook hands and smiled as they met at center stage for the beginning of their television debate. The television audience numbered in the millions, Bush and Dukakis among them.

The debate was dominated from the beginning by questions over the qualifications the 41-year-old Quayle possesses for the vice presidency.

Bentsen, who has sharply questioned his rival's maturity on the campaign trail, said a vice president must be prepared to take over "without any margin for error."

"The debate is about the presidency itself," he said. "The stakes could not be higher."

Bears trade Thomas to Denver for draft

LAKE FOREST (AP)—The Chicago Bears traded fullback Calvin Thomas to the Denver Broncos on Wednesday; one day after Thomas completed his 30-day suspension for violation of the National Football League's substance abuse policy.

Thomas went to the Broncos for an undisclosed, conditional 1989 draft choice. That means the choice they receive will depend on Thomas' performance with the Broncos.

Thomas, 28, was reinstated to the Bears' roster Tuesday by Commissioner Pete Rozelle after his 30-day suspension. The move did not excite Coach Mike Ditka, who said he did not expect Thomas to dress or play Sunday against the Detroit Lions.

Before he was suspended, Thomas had three carries for 20 yards.

Last year Thomas carried 22 times for 88 yards. His best year was 1986, when he had 56 rushes for 224 yards. He has been used mostly as a blocking back.

said. Fortunately for Triefenbach, he didn't have one.

"I didn't have too many double bogeys and I didn't have any penalty strokes," he said.

Triefenbach said a new method of putting that Lueken taught him may have helped him win the tournament.

"I wasn't putting very well (at the start of the season), but he gave me some help and I've been putting better ever since," Triefenbach said.

Triefenbach said he really didn't know what to think after he sank the winning putt. He was just glad that it was over.

"I had a knot in my stomach before the putt, but once I knew it was going in I was relieved," Triefenbach said.

Oakland beats Boston in first game of ALCS

BOSTON (AP)—Dave Henderson, a former Boston Red Sox postseason hero, singled home the tie-breaking run in the eighth inning and the Oakland Athletics beat the Red Sox 2-1 Wednesday in the first game of the American League playoffs.

Jose Canseco's home run had held up since the fourth inning as Oakland's Dave Stewart and Bruce Hurst hooked up in a pitching duel. But Wade Boggs hit a sacrifice fly in the seventh, setting up Henderson's heroics on a chilly afternoon at Fenway Park.

Carney Lansford hit Hurst's first pitch in the eighth for a double and Henderson grounded the next pitch into right field for the go-ahead single.

Henderson, cheered in pre-game introductions, was Boston's saviour in the 1986 playoffs against California. His home run rescued the Red Sox when they were one strike away from elimination in Game 5, and Boston rallied to win the series. Henderson went on to bat .400 in the World Series loss to the New York Mets, but was traded to San Francisco midway through the next season.

Oakland's bullpen, which held Boston to three runs in 35 innings this year, did the job again and preserved the lead. Rick Honeycutt relieved Stewart with the bases loaded and one out in the seventh and kept Boggs to a sacrifice fly. In the second, Boggs—a .373 career hitter with the bases loaded—struck out in the same situation the first time he had fanned in 22 lifetime at-bats against Stewart.

Boggs ended the game by striking out with runners on first and second.

Dennis Eckersley, another former Boston star, finished with two shutout innings. Eckersley, who won 20 games as a starter for the Red Sox in 1978, led the majors with 45 saves this season and Oakland's bullpen had a record 64 saves.

The Athletics won the season series against Boston 9-3 and outscored them 13-1. Oakland again showed off its pitching and power and took a lead into Game 2 Thursday night, with Storm Davis going against Boston's Roger Clemens.

Men netters end season with 1-2 record

by AL LAGATTOLLA

Staff writer

As soon as the weather started to cool off, the men's tennis team ended its fall season after playing only three non-tournament matches.

The Panthers played all of their matches on the road, as they finished with a 1-2 record, their only win coming against Indiana-Purdue-Indianapolis.

"We do most of our traveling in the fall," said Panther coach John Bennett. "I don't like traveling, period."

So, the Panthers don't travel much, however; they did manage to travel to Indiana State, Bradley and Indianapolis, as well as the Redbird Classic and the Intercollegiate Tournament.

The big story for the Panthers this fall was the influx of new players, as only three of the 10 players are returning from last spring.

Freshman Jay Meyer, the top Panther recruit, played No. 1 singles and posted a 1-2 record as well as 1-2 playing doubles.

"It was quite a change of scenery for him to play college level No. 1," Bennett said. "But he knows the competition and he knows the realistic chances he has."

"You can see some frustration in him," Bennett said. "It's a good thing there was some frustration because I don't want him to get used to losing."

Tim Holick, another new player at No. 3 singles, was 0-2 for Bennett's new-look Panthers.

One of two Panthers with a winning record was Bekin Youngblood. Youngblood was 2-1 at No. 5 singles, and 1-2 at doubles.

The final new Panther to make an impact was Dan Beres, the other Panther with a winning record, going 2-1."

"Beres is consistently getting better," Bennett said. "They've all had good matches and shown good potential."

Other new Panthers include Mike Patrick Jack Fitzgerald and junior Brian Bodine.

Returning to the Panthers are senior Joi Anderson, junior Bob Myrvold and junior Stephen Haberkorn.

Anderson, back at his No. 2 singles position, was 0-2 in the fall.

"His game is based on being aggressive," Bennett said of Anderson. "When he plays aggressively, he plays good and when he plays passively he doesn't."

Myrvold, playing No. 4 singles, is up a spot from last year.

"When he relaxes and stops going for winners more he'll win more," Bennett said of the junior who was 1-2 this fall.

Harriers shift gear for conference meets

By PHIL CHAPARRO
Staff writer

With only three weeks left in the regular season, Eastern's men's and women's cross country teams are gearing up for their respective conference meets.

The men began the 1988 campaign, without the services of their two top runners red-shirts John Wells and Derik Eaton. With them out of the line-up, head coach Fred Akers has had to rebuild all season long.

"One of my big concerns this year with a very young team, is to make sure we show progress," Akers said. "We are starting to show progress right now, but we're no where near will be in a few weeks for the conference meet in Cleveland Oct.29.

Eastern has been paced by the efforts of some old and new faces.

Junior Shannon Hough and sophomore Gary Brown have remained consistent throughout the fall campaign, while newcomers Erik Baron and Brett Carlson have both made an impact.

Baron, who has been fighting off a nagging leg injury all season long, finished seventh overall (26.55) in his first collegiate meet Sept.24.

"Erik is going to be a good one," Akers said. "With a little more experience he is really going to be tough."

With a young team, Akers knows it is going to be tough to compete with conference powerhouses Northern Iowa and Southwest Missouri State. Both teams have had solid seasons, and expects them to fight for the AMCU crown.

"I know Northern Iowa is running extremely well right now and I probably have to say that they're the favorites," Akers said. "Southwest Missouri State has won it the last few years and is running well also.

"The conference meet is going to be tough, however, I think if we run like we are capable of we can fight for third place with Western."

The Lady Panthers are hoping they can find some support for sophomore Laurie Mizener before their conference meet Oct.29.

Mizener has paced the women all season long, and has dropped 40 seconds off her best time last year.

Golfer receives conference honor

By MIKE FITZGERALD
Sports editor

Eastern golfer Kevin Triefenbach nailed down not only the medal in the AMCU conference tournament Tuesday, but also AMCU Golfer of the Year honors when he holed a 12-foot putt on the second playoff hole at Cog Hill Country Club in Lemont.

Triefenbach, who shot a 233 for the tournament, is the first Panther golfer to ever achieve the honor.

"I was proud of Kevin and excited for him," said coach Paul Lueken. "I was surprised that he won, but not surprised that he played well. He hit the ball down the middle and that was a key on the courses he played on."

Triefenbach said he didn't expect to win it either. He thought that he would need to shoot at least 75 to have a chance to make it.

"I was anxious to see if I even had a chance, but I was alright once I found out," he said.

Triefenbach teed the ball up with three other players on the first hole of Dubsdread, course where the tournament played, and ended up parring it.

Two of the other players bogeyed the first hole while the fourth parred it and sent it to second playoff hole.

The player from Western Illinois hit his first shot on the second hole par-3 into the right bunker. Triefenbach put his shot to the left of the green. The Western player chipped out of the bunker and put his shot within 10 feet of the pin.

Triefenbach's second shot landed 12 feet from the pin. After the Western player two-putted for bogey, Triefenbach calmly approached his putt and sent it to the bottom of the hole for a par and the championship.

Lueken thinks Triefenbach's poise on the unusually tough course was the key to his success in the tournament.

"He plays without emotion and you have to do that on a course like that. You can't get down if you have a bad hole," Lueken

Home game dropped on hoop schedule

The Eastern men's basketball team has added one road game to its 1988-89 schedule and has dropped a home contest.

The Panthers will play a road game at Nevada-Reno on Dec. 17. To accommodate that change, a home game against Texas Wesleyan has been cancelled.

The Panthers still open their season at Northern Illinois on Nov. 28, but their home opener is now scheduled for Dec. 3 against Roosevelt.

Eastern will play 13 home games and 14 road games.

Southern Illinois made right choice in Hart

Former quarterback to take over as Athletic Director despite discrimination claims

Southern Illinois University-Carbondale could have selected a woman -- Charlotte West -- as its new athletic director. Instead it named a man -- Jim Hart.

A vocal minority -- mostly women in the athletic department -- thought that West, who has a long-standing working relationship with Southern, was a victim of discrimination.

Not surprisingly, that opposition cried the same song back in 1985 when Jim Livengood, the man that Hart replaced, was chosen to head the Saluki athletic program.

The argument had more substance then than it does now.

West, who had served as women's athletic director at Southern until the men's and women's program merged in 1985, served as athletic director under Livengood and was interim A.D.

Under normal circumstances, it would seem that West would have been the obvious successor to Livengood.

But considering the ultimate goals a college athletic program hopes to achieve under an A.D., the opportunity to bring in Jim Hart, a former Saluki and St. Louis Cardinal star quarterback, was too good to pass up.

And because of that decision -- to hire Jim Hart and to snub Charlotte West -- Southern's entire athletic program will likely become the successful, competitive entity that it should have been for years.

What Jim Hart brings to Southern is a distinguishable name -- one that's popular and is creating considerable excitement around Carbondale.

The most critical objective of a new athletic administration, which is what Southern has now, is to raise money. Hart, because his name is synonymous with Southern Illinois University, has tremendously more funding potential for Southern than Charlotte West could ever have.

That's not a criticism of West. It's just a fact.

Hart has already made an impact at Southern. His first fund raising drive netted well over $50,000 in a 50-day span.

He may be no Jerry Lewis when it comes to raising money for a cause, but he'll do.

Unlike when he starred for the football Cardinals, Hart won't have guys like Dan Dierdorf or Conrad Dobler to protect him as athletic director. But, that doesn't mean he won't get any help.

West decided to swallow her pride and stay on as assistant to Hart. And, just a few weeks ago, Southern lured University of Illinois athletic program associate Wayne Williams away from the orange and blue and down to Carbondale, where he'll guide Hart in the fund raising aspect of Hart's job.

The base has been established at Southern for the school to upgrade its individual athletic programs -- most notably, basketball and football.

Of course, the success of individual teams depends on more than a strong athletic director. And whether someone like Rick Herrin is the answer to a less-than-powerful men's basketball team is doubtful.

But, with a guy like Jim Hart heading the athletic department, the changes needed to make Southern a prominent athletic power in the state are sure to come.

According to sources, the position has died down around the Charlotte West camp. The battles are barely noticeable.

The seats have yet to completely fill at Southern's McAndrews Stadium, but the press box has. Apparently, people like being around Jim Hart.

Athletics at Carbondale might never be the same.

Dave Brummer is a staff writer for The Daily Eastern News.
