WEIU offers compromise to students

Anchors want live newscast

By ANDY PURCELL
Campus editor

After months of silence and a two-and-a-half-hour meeting Thursday with WEIU General Manager John Beabout, WEIU-TV students have been asked to submit their proposal to WEIU administrators listing possible changes to the Mid-Illinois News Scan program.

Beabout asked the students to submit their proposal after WEIU-TV student representatives Patty Culhane, Andy Bane and Janet Erdman expressed their dissatisfaction with the joint media venture between WEIU-TV and Mid-Illinois Newspapers, which has been on the air since last November.

The three students represent 14 WEIU-TV students who signed a memo earlier this week requesting the production of the news program be returned to a live format produced, directed and anchored entirely by students from the WEIU-TV studios in the Buzzard Building.

News Scan is currently taped in the newsroom of the Mattoon Journal Gazette using Mid-Illinois reporters and editors as anchors.

"The meeting was very constructive," Culhane said. "We're going to put together a proposal of what we would like to see done and they've promised to hear us out and consider our requests."

"The feeling at the meeting tonight is that we'll be working together. I'm positive if we work together, a compromise can be reached," Culhane said.

The students said they decided to voice their true thoughts about the merger because they care about the product they produce.

"We care about the station," Bane said. "It's important to us that the whole thing looks good."

Erdman said she thinks the taped broadcast slights students of the opportunity to learn important aspects of news production.

"Because it is taped, students lose the pressure to get things done," Erdman said. "With live broadcasts, stu-

Gus Bus' future bleak

By BECKY COLLINS
Staff writer

Because of a limited response by local bar owners, it is unlikely the Gus Bus will run again this semester, the program's coordinator said.

Debbie Wagman, a graduate student supervising the program, said the bus will not run this semester unless more local Charleston bars sign contracts and checks. So far, only Stu's and Stix are the only ones to fund the Gus Bus.

During the past three years, the Gus Bus has tried to provide transportation for students on weekends in an attempt to curb drinking and driving. Typically, the bus would pick up students at the Martin Luther King Jr. University Union and make its rounds to and from the Charleston bars.

Wagman said the cost of renting a bus and a driver from Mayflower Contract Services in Charleston is $100 a day or $200 for a weekend.

Wagman said contracts were sent before Christmas break to nine bars, including Marty's, Stix, Stu's, Panthers Lounge, Ike's, Mother's, Thirsty's, Roc's Tavern, and Ted's Warehouse.

Most bars owners do not want to pick up the tab, she said.

Senate planning open mike day on quad

By JOHN FERA
Student government editor

Student Senate Speaker Bobby Smith and other senate members plan to begin "think-tank" sessions on the Library Quad next month to motivate student interest and discussion in campus-wide, local or national issues.

Tentatively being called "First Amendment Day," the sessions would allow students the opportunity to speak in front of a microphone for a few minutes or longer while Smith and other senate members oversee the events. Pending senate approval, Smith said he hopes to hold First Amendment Day forums one day per week beginning in March.

Before "First Amendment Day" can become a reality, the senate must approve a resolution to hold the events and obtain a sound system set-up on the quad.

Smith said the forums will provide

"Students will have the chance to talk about tuition increases, sidewalk conditions on campus, the Confederate flag, bar-entry age or anything."

—Bobby Smith

students with the chance to discuss events or issues affecting them.

"Students will have the chance to talk about tuition increases, sidewalk conditions on campus, the Confederate flag, bar-entry age or anything," Smith said. "If Brother Dan can draw an audience on the Quad, I know students certainly could."

Senate member Glenn Fundator said First Amendment Day would give students and Student Government members a perfect opportunity to work together.

"This idea is a step in the right direction," Fundator said. "If I'm getting the overtone of senate, getting in touch with the student body is really important this semester."

Fundator said he's looking forward to assembling students on the Quad for discussions about issues such as racism on campus and homosexuality — issues Fundator says aren't always discussed openly at Eastern.

Senate member Harvey Pettry said having campus forums for Eastern students is a plan that has several merits.

"If you get people walking through the Quad, they'd probably be more likely to stop," Pettry said. "Whether students would take advantage of the opportunity, we'll just have to wait and see."

Smith said he came up with idea of holding First Amendment Day forums because the "voices of Eastern students are not being heard by faculty, administration and city officials."

"Students don't feel it's their university," Smith said. "We provide (faculty and administrators) with jobs, and then we're told we're the consumers. Some students are really tired of feeling like a piece of machinery."

Smith has complained in the past that university administrators do not listen to student concerns and are not always truthful in answering student complaints.

dents learn to deal with deadlines."

"All we want to see is student involvement increased; we want students to get the technical experience that will get them a job in the real world," Culhane said. "We all put in way too many hours for this not to pay off for us in the end."

The students said they are glad they made the decision to take their concerns to Beabout and said they think the communication lines between the students and the administration are finally reopening.

"We all realized that we are getting cheated out of a lot and maybe it's time we do something about it," Erdman said. "We have cameras worth hundreds of thousands of dollars in a studio that we could be using, which we're not, and I think we're being cheated out of that."

"He (Beabout) listened, which was good," Bane said. "The communication lines have been opened and we're going to pursue this until we find something we agree on."

Beabout could not be reached for comment Thursday night but did say earlier in the day that he was preparing a written response to the student memo.

Since the program began last semester, it has come under scrutiny from both the faculty and student senates. Representatives from both groups spoke out Thursday in support of the students' recent actions.

"To us it looked like the students were being pushed aside, but we didn't hear them complaining," said Bill Addison, chairman of the Faculty Senate. "We heard a lot of rumors that the students were unhappy but were afraid speak out because they might need a recommendation from those people someday."

"I think the students' points are good ones and their requests are reasonable. I have to give the students who signed the memo a lot of credit," Addison said. "It takes a lot of guts to make demands of someone who has that kind of control over your future."

"I think the students should continue until they feel their voice has been heard and acted upon," said Luke Neumann, student body president. "Any help I can give them from my position, I will."

If all nine bars participated, the cost per weekend for each bar would be divided to approximately $22.23, which adds up to between $300 and $400 a semester, Wagman said.

Roc's Tavern and Ted's Warehouse have declined to participate or fund this year's Gus Bus.

"Due to uncontrollable circumstances, cash flow is down from last year," said Dave Isbell, owner of Roc's. "There are no extra funds."

Besides suffering from limited cash shortage, the Gus Bus' route also is different from previous semesters. If the bus were to begin running again, Wagman said it will no longer pick up students on campus to deliver them to the bars. It will only supply transportation from the bars to the Union.

"The students need to put on the pressure to get bars to participate (in the program)," she said.

If efforts were successful to get the Gus Bus rolling again, Wagman said it would run Fridays and Saturdays from 12:30 to 1:30 a.m.

Some Eastern students said they think the Gus Bus is a worthwhile program for the bar owners to help fund.

"It is like a party after the party," said Karen Ripberger, a senior speech communication major. "It's a good cause."

"Kids are going to go the bars regardless, why not provide a safe way?" said Kay Gallagher, a junior education major.

Families of abused kids show little remorse

CHICAGO (AP) - The four-room apartment was littered with filth and crawling with cockroaches, its windows broken and covered with blankets that flapped in the wind. It was home to 19 children - the oldest 14 years old, the youngest just 1.

When police barged in on a drug raid, they found five of the children sleeping in their underwear on a bare floor. Others fought with a German shepherd dog for scraps of meat on bones scattered on the floor.

Six adult relatives of the children - four mothers, a father and an uncle - were charged with contributing to child neglect, a misdemeanor. Another mother of some of the children was in custody but had not been charged, police said.

"The only remorse they showed was they didn't want to be arrested," said Maggie Gutierrez, one of the first police officers on the scene.

Police raided the West Side apartment late Tuesday after watching suspected drug dealers do business outside the building through the night. Instead of drugs they found, as one officer put it, "babies everywhere."

"The apartment was cold, the apartment was filthy," police officer Linda Burns said. "I'm talking feces, garbage, food on the floor. I don't even know how to describe it - it was just filth."

Storyteller to speak tonight on black life

By ADAM McHUGH
Activities editor

The day Edith McLoud-Armstrong retired from her position as a speech pathologist representative with the Illinois Board of Education in 1989, she was not sure what direction her life would go.

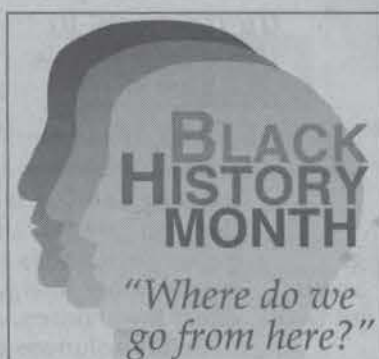

That same day, someone told her that her ability to tell stories about African-American culture would make her perfect for what would become her new career.

McLoud-Armstrong became "Mama Edie," storyteller-extraordinaire, who speaks at hospitals, museums and schools in the Chicago area.

McLoud-Armstrong, who will speak at Eastern at 8 p.m. tonight in the Rathskeller of the Martin Luther King Jr. University Union, said she was extremely nervous the first time she stepped in front of a room filled with children, but now does it on a daily basis.

"In general, storytelling offers a sense of self-esteem and can also entertain while teaching values, which are unfortunately sorely lacking in America today," McLoud-Armstrong said.

Her storytelling consists mainly of folktales from various African cultures, children's songs, hand-clapping and rhythm games in dialect from the Caribbean.

McLoud-Armstrong, who has worked as a storyteller the last five years after a 20-year career as a speech pathologist and 11-year stint on the Illinois Board of Education, said her experiences working with children and the disabled has helped with her current career.

"I think my storytelling is an extension of my teaching, because it reaffirms the need for all of us to be patient, and I learned that as a speech pathologist," McLoud-Armstrong said.

McLoud-Armstrong has also taught sign language since 1975 and assisted in the development of the Deaf Ministry at Mount Cavalry Baptist Church in Chicago.

Although her performance will kick off Eastern's recognition of Black History Month, she says her audience ranges from young to old and her stories appeal to all races.

"I think many African Americans respond very favorably to my stories, but I have had audiences that were predominately white, Hispanic and Asian before," she said.

She said she hopes to give African Americans a sense of their history with her presentation, another component of education she feels is lacking.

"I think different races should be allowed to learn about their own history first, not someone else's then their own," McLoud-Armstrong said.

McLoud-Armstrong said her nickname originated from an elementary school her now 16-year-old daughter attended.

"All of the women had the title 'Mama' at this school, as well as all the men, so I just became known as 'Mama Edie,' and I decided to incorporate that into my job as a storyteller," she said.

She added reactions to her performances have included people saying they were inspired or simply asked, "Can I have a hug?"

Tickets for Armstrong's performance are $1 for students and senior citizens and $3 for the general public.

Speaker to accept seat

By DAVID M. PUTNEY
City editor

Eastern's speaker of the Student Senate said he plans to accept a newly added seat on the Charleston Liquor Task Force.

The City Council agreed Tuesday with Liquor Task Force Chairman Lou Hencken's request to add another student voice to the committee before it begins debating an increase in Charleston's bar-entry age.

Hencken, who offered the seat to Smith, said students interested in the bar-entry issue demanded more representation.

Smith said he has already made up his mind about Charleston's bar entry age.

"It's not open to change," he said. "I am turning toward making sure it stays 19."

Smith said his state of the university speech last week may have led Hencken to consider the additional seat. In his speech,

Bobby Smith

Smith said that the university often ignores students' wishes when making decisions.

"I rapped on a lot of doors that night," Smith said.

Charleston began considering increasing its bar entry age after Champaign first made the proposal. Charleston Mayor

Dan Coughill said he fears an influx of University of Illinois students filtering into Charleston bars if Champaign raises its entry age.

Smith said Charleston should be discussing the issue now.

"If we wait too long, we'll get back here in the summer and it (bar entry changes) will already be done," he said.

AIDS awareness taught Eastern valuable lessons

This past week has taught us something about compassion.

We've heard many different stories during Eastern's HIV/AIDS Awareness Campaign. We've heard from a man living with the AIDS virus and a mother who lost her son to the disease. We've heard about the horrors of contracting AIDS through a sexual assault, what happens during HIV testing and what we can do to prevent contracting or spreading the virus.

Jeanne White, the mother of Ryan White, who died of AIDS in 1990, spoke to a crowd of more than 400 people Monday about her experiences with her son. Ryan, a hemophiliac, gained national prominence when he contracted the disease from a tainted blood transfusion in 1984.

Since her son's death, White has launched a crusade to inform the public about AIDS. She told students about the fear and prejudice that AIDS victims have to face and stressed the importance of protecting oneself against contracting the disease.

White's speech touched everyone that was there, and if we learned nothing else from her speech or the week-long campaign, we learned compassion. Compassion is the key to living and working with AIDS victims.

We also learned that we should not be afraid to reach out to AIDS victims, who often find themselves ostracized. We should treat them not with fear, but with understanding and knowledge.

The HIV/AIDS Awareness Campaign also drove home the message that finding a cure for AIDS and preventing the spread of the disease are equally important. White reminded us that it is our generation that has come of age during the AIDS epidemic and it is our generation that will be the one to stop the disease's spread and hopefully soon find a cure.

"Your generation has the choice whether you get AIDS," White said.

White is right. We can act responsibly and make serious effort to prevent the spread of the disease or we can play Russian Roulette with the disease by engaging in risky behavior. We are being informed what those risks are, and we have a choice.

Chicago case just another story of neglect

Imagine that as a young child of 2 or 3 years of age you had to share a bone with little meat on it with one or more siblings and the family dog. Also imagine that all those partaking of the bacteria-infested meal had to be careful not to mislay the bone lest the cockroaches get ahold of it.

A farfetched story of monumental filth and improbability?

Hardly.

On Tuesday, Chicago police found 19 half-clothed, hungry children apparently not being supervised in a cold, filthy apartment. Three adults were at the apartment when police arrived, but two were found asleep.

Police reported finding dirty dishes stacked in the kitchen sink and on the floor, a refrigerator full of rotting food, garbage and roaches everywhere, children with soiled diapers laying on a bare mattress on the floor and two children sharing a bone with a dog.

Acting on reports that drugs were being sold from the building, police investigated the apartment, finding no drugs — only filth and child neglect.

The Chicago Tribune reported that six adults, including four mothers of the children, were arrested and charged with misdemeanor child neglect. All but one of the children were taken to an emergency shelter. Police said one 4-year-old with cerebral palsy had apparent cigarette burns, welts and other marks on the body consistent with abuse.

Child cruelty of this sort appalls every decent and reasonable person, or at least it should. But stories of this sort of abuse seem to be becoming so common that it's no longer really all that shocking when reports surface.

Since the nation's childcare system is already

Elliott Peppers

"Parents need to stop thinking about themselves and put themselves in their children's place."

overloaded with unwanted children, mistreated youths are often returned to unfit parents, thus continuing a cycle of abuse. Research has proven this cycle will continue when these abused children abuse their children.

But parents, although they are mostly to blame for child abuse, can't bear the whole burden of blame.

The Department of Children and Family Services has long been under scrutiny for inadequate protection and care for families and their children. The department needs to look at more preventive abuse means rather than just punishing the parents, and in effect the children, after the fact.

Before solutions can be contemplated, the agency needs to determine what percentage of American homes are in atrocious conditions similar to this Chicago apartment and why. Who's fault is it? The economy's? The educational system's?

Parents need to stop thinking about themselves and put themselves in their children's place, sacrificing where necessary to help mold constructive members of society. This should be done not only out of obligation, but out of love.

Police said the adults arrested at the Chicago apartment were more concerned about going to jail than what would happen to their children. One mother of the children couldn't be questioned by police Wednesday because she was giving birth to her third child — potential victim of neglect number 20 for that apartment.

Living in such filthy and apparently impoverished conditions leaves one to wonder how many of the 19 Chicago children will one day turn to crime to survive.

Writers should not dismiss students as apathetic drunks

Dear editor:

I am writing this in response to recent sentiments expressed in your newspaper about the students attending Eastern. The authors of these articles outlined the inability of our fellow students to take a stand on issues and their seeming indifference to anything except the need to drink alcohol. They degraded the common sentiment that many students feel there is nothing to do other than going to bars.

I found a lot of these points to be valid. Yet I was disturbed that these authors were so ready to condemn us as a generation of apathetic drunks without contributing suggestions to improve our intellectual and social conditions in Charleston. As an aspiring writer, I would like to see a group of people formed to discuss their works in progress in the hopes that through sharing ideals we may help each other achieve our goals. I would enthusiastically support lectures by anyone who has something interesting to talk about. Perhaps professors who have material they wish to present that doesn't fit into their classes would be interested in starting discussion groups and roundtables to promote intellectual growth. The art, music and drama sections could present experimental works.

I'll be the first to say that I have not contributed much to this campus, but I am willing to try. When I look back in history, the people who truly stand out were those who traded ideas with others. Anyone else who is interested or groups already in existence should send in suggestions.

Police investigating Lantz Gym incident

BRIAN HUCHEL
Staff writer

Campus police are still investigating an incident of theft that took place Jan. 31 in the women's locker room of Lantz Gymnasium.

Lami Jones, a 20-year-old student, told campus police she was hanging her jacket in a locker at 8:30 p.m., leaving her jewelry and a set of keys in the locker pocket. Upon returning at 11:15 p.m., Jones discovered her keys sitting at the bottom of the locker and the rest of her items missing.

More than $450 in property was taken. Items taken in the theft include a gold watch and band valued at $200; a gold ring with a black onyx valued at $100, a gold sapphire ring worth $90 and a white Eastern jacket with gray lettering worth $70.

Jones said she did not lock the locker.

The campus police are also still investigating a case of vehicle damage.

The case involved damage to the passenger side of a rear-car bumper that took place between Jan. 29 and Jan. 30.

Freshman Tyler Doty, 18, parked his car in the stadium parking lot at 8:30 p.m. and proceeded to Lantz Gymnasium. When Doty returned to his car at 2:30 p.m. the next day, he discovered a hole two inches in diameter in the car's rear bumper.

A damage estimate was not available.

New store to offer more

KRISTINA WOODS
Staff writer

Plans are in the making for the opening of a new Wal-Mart store in Mattoon that will offer a grocery area, wider aisles, an automotive supplies area and a photo lab.

The new store will take up 199,000 square feet of space, and the tentative opening date is the early spring, store director Scott Hanika said.

The current Mattoon Wal-Mart takes up 100,000 square feet of space.

The store, which is being billed as "longer than a football field," will offer a bakery and a market shop similar to that of a Sam's Club store, along with a McDonald's and an optician center, Mattoon Mayor Wanda Ferguson said.

"It will offer the same things most other Wal-Marts will offer," Ferguson said.

A portrait studio would be on the list of new services, said Randy Ashley, an assistant manager at Wal-Mart.

There will be 250 to 300 new job openings, bringing the number of employees up to approximately 450 to 500, Ashley said.

Hanika said the closing of the current Mattoon Wal-Mart will coincide with the grand opening and all employees of the old store will be transferred over to the new store, he said.

A Charleston Wal-Mart employee said that she did not think the opening of the Super-Wal-Mart would change anything about their business.

"The plan is to keep (the Charleston Walmart) open," said Hanika. He said the opening of the new store will not affect the operation of the Charleston Wal-Mart.

Ferguson said the location of the current Wal-Mart has not yet been decided, but it is being sought after by a few businesses.

"We're looking forward to opening up," Hanika said. "It will be a convenient one-stop shop."

Council continues to review programs

By AMY CARNES
Administration editor

The Council on Academic Affairs Thursday continued discussing program status recommendations as part of the Board of Governors' Annual Academic Program Review.

The Council reviewed 16 programs Thursday and proceeded with a "status quo" recommendation for 11 programs, which means to keep the program as it is.

The bachelor's in Spanish, French and German received "status quo asterisk" recommendations because of low enrollment. Currently, there are 43 Spanish majors, 22 French majors and nine German majors.

Heribert Breidenbach, chair of the foreign language department, said the three foreign language programs have twice applied for a merger and been rejected by the Board of Governors.

"We are not recommending elimination of the German major," James Johnson, dean of arts and humanities, said. "We would like to continue the process of evaluation of the (combined) foreign language major and keep German as an area of concentration."

The program has been recommended twice for elimination by the Illinois Board of Higher Education as part of its Priorities, Quality and Productivity initiative. The PQP initiative, set forth by the IBHE in 1991, is geared at cutting wasteful spending at the 12 state universities by eliminating programs that are "no longer educationally or economically justified."

The program has been on "intensive review" by the Board of Governors for two years, the maximum amount of time a program may remain under that status.

The review status allows a university to address serious problems existing in a program such as low enrollment, low graduation rate, low retention rate and poor placement of graduates. As part of the review process, the university reports regularly to the chancellor's office.

The bachelor's degrees in psychology and sociology Thursday received preliminary "expand" recommendations from the council because of significant increases in the number of majors.

To accommodate the increased enrollment a new position has been created in each department and will be filled in the fall. Funds for the new position will come from a reallocation of resources within the college.

U.S. weighs Vietnam issue

WASHINGTON (AP) - It is one of the quirks of history that it could fall to the president who came of age as a Vietnam war protester to undo a remnant of the war's legacy of distrust.

"This is an issue for the present day," President Clinton said Wednesday as he weighed recommendations to lift the U.S. trade embargo against Vietnam.

Aides said the president was preparing to lift the 19-year-old ban, urged on by U.S. businesses and encouraged by Vietnam's cooperation in helping resolve questions about unaccounted-for American soldiers.

Dogged during the presidential campaign by questions about how he avoided the Vietnam draft, and shadowed in office by strained relations with the military, Clinton would like nothing better than to put the war behind him.

He rejected suggestions that his past would make the decision politically more difficult, saying, "We just have to do what's right." Yet because of who he is - and was - the decision could carry special risks.

One administration official, speaking only on condition of anonymity, expressed a fear that "this issue's going to eat us alive." Such concerns persist although the president got some political cover when the Senate voted last week to support lifting the embargo, still a step short of normalizing relations with Hanoi.

Just as the nation has spent decades coming to grips with its role in Vietnam, so has it been a long, difficult journey for Clinton, who in 1969 wrote to thank a ROTC recruiter "for saving me from the draft" by giving him a deferment.

In the same letter, Clinton sought understanding for those who had "come to find themselves still loving their country but loathing the military." Keenly aware that such a past placed him in a sensitive position on veterans' issues, Clinton came into office talking tough on Vietnam.

He promised to make resolution of the POW-MIA issue "a national priority" by insisting on a full accounting of all those soldiers still listed as missing before normalizing relations with Vietnam.

On Memorial Day, he confronted his detractors directly in a visit to the Vietnam War Memorial. Amid cheers and jeers, as some veterans turned their backs on him, Clinton declared: "Let us continue to disagree if we must about the war. But let us not let it divide us as a people any longer."

His pledge on that day to the families of soldiers who did not come home from Vietnam: "We will do all we can to give you not only the attention you have asked for, but the answers you deserve."

Spikers net 3 recruits

ANTHONY NASELLA
Writer

One of Betty Ralston's goals for next season's Panther volleyball season is to find reliable replacements for graduating middle hitters Kim Traub and setter Van Eekeren.

The Eastern head coach exactly what she was looking for.

Ralston received letters-of-intent from three highly ranked high school players in middle hitters and one setter - whose teams had a combined 108-7 record last

Those players are: Kara Harper, a setter from Class A runner-up Colchester; Lorri Sommer, a middle hitter from Williamsville and Lindsey Celba, a middle hitter from Libertyville. All three athletes are three-sport stars.

"These are the three kids we wanted," Ralston said. "They're great players that come from great high school programs. I'm very excited about the potential in these players and what they will bring to our team in terms of success."

"It's great to know that the players are excited," Ralston said. "They're well-rounded athletes who are only going to get better when they put their full focus on volleyball."

And considering the outside hitter positions are set with the return of would-be-seniors Kaaryn Sadler (455 kills) and Sherri Piwowarczyk, Ralston can rest a little easier for next season. But not that much, according to Ralston.

"With Kaaryn and Sherri at outside hitter, these new additions will be great. But Kaaryn, Sherri and the other returning players will have to still pick up the slack for us and play consistent."

Basketball

• From Page 7A

That will be the test of our defense," Samuels. "Individually, they are as talented as we have in the league. They're explosive, and you can do a good job on them but they'll still explode."

You can't really stop those guys, but it's the ability to control them for 40 minutes that's important."

The Panther defense has played well of allowing its opponents to an average 11 points per game during the past five games.

The offense, though, continues to struggle. The Panthers shooting percentage has steadily declined the past four games, dropping from 43 percent in a home loss to Green Bay down to 35 percent in their Monday loss to Valparaiso.

"We're looking at putting in some different wrinkles," Samuels said. "We want to have more structure to the offense, and make it more definitive for our players to shoot the ball."

Swimming

a lot of people and are going low," Padovan said. "While this meet is important, the last two meets of the season are the goals that the Panthers have been shooting for all year.

"We are kind of in that transition point where some people are going to start reacting differently to what we are doing," Padovan said.

"We have some muscle-sore-ness, yet we could potentially swim better. Some people are going to take off and some are actually going to do worse. Everybody reacts differently in the middle of the rest phase."

Huskies drub Lady Panthers

By DAN FIELDS
Staff writer

The Lady Panthers suffered their fifth consecutive basketball loss of the season Thursday night, this time an 84-67 loss to conference foe Northern Illinois.

The bulk of the Huskies' scoring came from junior forward Angela Lockett. The Gary, Ind., native scored a team-high 19 points while grabbing nine rebounds.

Northern, 13-3 overall and 10-0 in the Mid-Continent Conference, got another key performance from center Caryn Alexander.

The senior from Highland Park earned a "double-double" by recording 15 points and pulling down a game-high 11 boards.

To the Lady Panthers' credit, Eastern was able to shut down Mid-Continent Conference scoring leader E.C. Hill.

The senior guard from Chicago was held to 16 points, eight points below her season average. Hill also dished out team-high six assists.

Eastern, 2-15 overall and 1-10 in the Mid-Con, was once led by senior Shannon Baugh.

The forward from Enport, Iowa, also recorded a "double-double" by pouring game-high 25 points and collecting a team-high 11 rebounds. Baugh's 25 points tied her career high set this year at Evansville.

While Baugh's effort was one of her season's best, Lady Panther head coach John Klein was pleased with his team's overall effort.

"We need to play with the same kind of intensity," Klein said. "The things that we were doing well are what we need to do against other teams that are not as powerful as Northern."

The Lady Panthers' next game will be against Western Illinois Saturday at Lantz Gym. Tipoff is scheduled for 5:15 p.m.

Weekend meets to test Eastern wrestling team

By PAUL DEMPSEY
Staff writer

Eastern's wrestling team will have its hands full this weekend as it faces two tough opponents in separate dual meets.

The Panthers host Southwest Missouri State tonight at 7:30 in Lantz Gym and then head to Tennessee on Sunday to face the University of Tennessee-Chattanooga in a 2 p.m. contest.

Eastern had tough matches against both squads last year, but first and foremost, coach Ralph McCausland said his team is preparing for SW Missouri.

"We just need to focus on Southwest," McCausland said. "It's a home match. I'd like to see the guys continue to wrestle strong."

The Panthers dropped a 31-15 contest to the Bears last year, but according to SW Missouri coach John Kriebs, the match will probably be closer this year.

"I know Eastern has had some problems in a few weight classes but I know Ralph (McCausland) can usually get the kids fired up," Kriebs said. "We're expecting a real tough dual." The Bears are coming off a big win over Northern Iowa last weekend 18-17, and will bring a strong squad into Lantz Gym.

"We've had some ups and downs and some nagging injuries but we've been doing pretty good," Kriebs said.

The Bears return five National qualifiers this year and will definitely test the middle of the Panther lineup.

Jim Prendergast is ranked 10th in the nation at 150 pounds for the Bears and teammate Ted Hickey is ranked fifth at 158, although Hickey is questionable for tonight's match due to an injury.

McCausland hopes his team's tough work in practice will show during the two meets.

"The intensity has picked up," McCausland said. "That's something we've got to see. It should carry over into the matches."

Eastern hopes to make it two-for-two against Flames

By RANDY LISS
Staff writer

To hear Panther coach Rick Samuels tell it, Eastern's 91-89 victory over Illinois-Chicago on Jan. 15 at the UIC Pavilion had its good points and its bad.

"Winning there does two things," Samuels said. "For one thing, it gives us confidence. However, it also inspires the Flames."

And inspiration is something that Eastern would really rather not see Illinois-Chicago with on Saturday when the Flames come to Lantz Gym for a 7:35 p.m. Mid-Continent Conference matchup.

The Flames (11-6, 7-2) should be ornery after being knocked out of a first-place tie with Wisconsin-Green Bay during their 71-63 loss to the Phoenix in Green Bay on Monday.

Rick Samuels

Couple that with the fact that the Panthers issued Illinois-Chicago its only home loss on the season, and UIC will have a lot to play for.

The Flames are led by senior point guard Kenny Williams and sophomore forward Sherell Ford, who was selected as the Mid-Con Player of the Week this week.

Ford comes into the game as the Mid-Con's leading scorer (24.1) and second-leading rebounder (8.8). The sophomore recorded 22 points and eight rebounds in the Flames' loss to Eastern last month.

But the one who sparks the flames is Williams.

The Flames' floor game comes in as the second-leading scorer in the Mid-Con (20.5) as well as averaging assists per game, which ranks him second in the conference.

When Williams isn't shooting, though, more often than not the Flames get done. Williams could only manage up nine points on 4-of-15 shooting in 36 minutes against Green Bay.

But while Eastern still has a red-hot defense to throw at the Flames, the Panthers have their work cut out for them when they attempt to shut down the top two scorers in the conference.

Swimming team set to battle at UIC tonight

By JOHN COX
Staff writer

Normally one would think that the Phoenix, a bird that consumed itself in fire and rose renewed from its ashes, and the Flames would have problems surviving in the water.

Not so in the Mid-Continent Conference. The University of Illinois-Chicago Flames and the University of Wisconsin-Green Bay happen to strong swimming programs.

Eastern will attempt to douse its red-hot opponents today at 6:30 p.m. in Chicago. However, Eastern coach Ray Padovan said that both teams may be hard to snuff out. "Green Bay's women are just tougher nails," Padovan said. "Green Bay's men are a team that is really coming up. They have a lot of money, but their numbers are down. They started with a lot of guys, now they are down to about the minimum. The guys they have are really good."

UIC is also no stranger to being low in numbers but high in talent, added Padovan.

"UIC's men are fairly solid and their women, which are kind of like Green Bay's, have some real good women, but they've lost a lot of people and are getting

Family of lawyer says 'Philadelphia' stole his story

NEW YORK (AP) — The family of a lawyer who successfully sued the firm that fired him after he contracted AIDS filed a $10 million lawsuit Tuesday accusing the movie "Philadelphia" of stealing his story.

The family of the late Geoffrey Bowers sued Tri-Star Pictures, director Jonathan Demme, producer Scott Rudin and others associated with the movie.

The suit was filed in U.S. District Court in Manhattan.

"We made the mistake of trusting people," said Dana Bowers, one of Geoffrey's brothers. "They betrayed us." Lawyer Daniel Feller said Geoffrey's brothers, Dana and Charles, and their mother, Alberta Bowers, all of Medford, Mass., shared their memories with people involved in the film with the understanding that they would be paid and that Geoffrey Bowers would be mentioned in the credits.

They said a dollar figure was never agreed upon, and that they thought negotiations were still in progress until the movie came out.

Tri-Star spokesman Ed Russell denied that "Philadelphia" was the story of Geoffrey Bowers.

"Philadelphia" is a fictional story which addresses a regrettable recurring theme of AIDS discrimination in the country," Russell said in a statement.

Monkee on the move

Even in his gray days, Davy Jones thinks he still has more to offer

By J.A. WINDERS

When Davy Jones finally answered the hotel phone, he was annoyed.

On this Tuesday morning, Jones had conducted a radio interview from his suite atop Atlantic City's Merv Griffin Resorts International.

After finishing, the station wouldn't let him be. They kept calling back, irritating the former lead singer of the Monkees.

"They were tying up all the lines," Jones said. "The operator here at the hotel was a bit befuddled because I kept blaming her for the calls coming through."

But even an annoyed Davy Jones is a pleasant Davy Jones.

He quickly shifted conversational gears by putting aside the morning's frustrations and leaping into sudden personal reflections on life and career.

"I haven't had my time yet," he said. In conversation, he explored few segues. He mentioned immediately what came to mind.

"I feel there is something more for me."

Jones spoke with distinguishable traces of the same wispy, Manchester-bred voice fans remember from nearly two decades ago. But there were notable differences.

This was not the Davy Jones of 1966.

His speech is richer, older, and perhaps even more dignified.

However, the boyish enthusiasm which garnered this 48-year-old his fame some two decades ago has not been lost.

"I feel I've got a bit more to offer," Jones said.

Gone are his days of reckless youth and heart-throb stature. Today, Jones has haunted the Vegas and Atlantic City strip stages.

"You know I have often thought about ending up in Las Vegas wearing a silver suit singing my one hit," Jones said. "I thought 'Oh my God, no.' But I really kind of like it."

These casino surroundings have evolved into his home.

Two shows a night, six nights a week, Jones performs for an audience who still has the ringing chimes of slot machines echoing in their ears.

"You come into a casino and there's no Luigi and Ragatelli with spaghetti hanging off their nose," Jones said.

Photo courtesy Capital Cities/ABC, Inc. from the book "Growing Up Brady" Davy Jones and Marcia (Maureen McCormick) from "The Brady Bunch" episode 63: "Getting Davy Jones," in which Marcia vows to get Jones to play the prom and ends up taking him as her date. Jones will appear with The Real Live Brady Bunch on Feb. 8 in Grand Ballroom of the Martin Luther King Jr. Union.

"It's filled with a lot of warm people. They're casino people."

No matter if he is pretending to play his own instruments on the Monkees' 1966 television show or prancing around a casino stage, every performance means something to Jones.

"When I hit the boards and see the people," Jones said. "It's my time for relaxation."

"It's my whole life."

Jones was born in the modest surroundings of southern England. A web of connected neighborhoods wove his small industrial town into a tight community.

To the people of this neighborhood, Jones' father was "something of a street healer."

Whenever illness or worry overcame the very old or the very young, they came to his father.

"I guess he knew his Red Cross," Jones chuckled.

And from watching his father's care for others, Jones wanted to use his own special talents to better people.

"If one thing I say during a conversation or performance gives someone a positive thought," Jones said, "then I feel satisfied."

Jones is a short man who is long on words. Standing slightly over five feet tall and always being short for his age, Jones believes he needs to try harder than most.

"I tend to have an aggressive side," Jones said. "I have always felt that the door to opportunity is marked push."

He often finds himself hunkered in his home writing songs and hoping to stumble upon something commercially successful so he can record in the studio again.

His last series studio recordings came in the early 1970s with his former Monkees band mates.

"There are still a few more miles left in the Monkees' project," Jones said. Their most recent efforts together materialized in the form of a limited reunion tour in 1989.

Currently 14 European dates have been secured for a 1994 Monkees' reunion tour in May. A tour of the states is scheduled for early June.

Jones will never forget his past. But he refuses to live there.

His eyes and thoughts continually face forward. "Nobody does Davy Jones," he said.

"I do myself."

- Davy Jones will be appearing with The Real Live Brady Bunch at 7 p.m. on Feb. 8 in Grand Ballroom of the Martin Luther King Jr. Union.

Art show compares traditional, modern world

By NATALIE GOTT

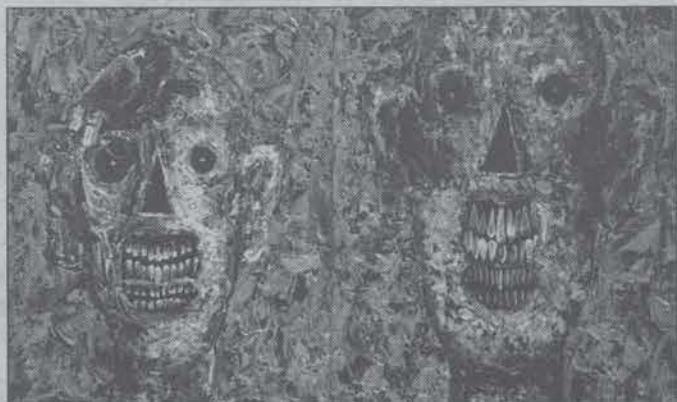

Artists from around the world combined their oil, acrylic and watercolor paintings, as well as photographs and even coffee filters to create the International Critic's Choice, the latest exhibit at the Tarble Arts Center.

The exhibit features work by artists from Ireland, Argentina, Nigeria, Italy, England, Brazil, Germany and the United States. The display will remain in the Tarble Arts Center until Feb. 27.

The artwork, on loan from the Mitchell Museum at Cedarhurst, includes titles such as "Comrades in Arms," "The Ritual," and "Dead Policemen," which were created to provoke critical awareness in the viewer through the diversity of the artists.

Robert Paulsen, director of the Visiting Art Program at Southern Illinois University in Carbondale, and Bonnie Speed, director of Visual Arts at the Mitchell Museum, organized the exhibit. Their goal was to create an array of opinions and ideas that compare the traditional to the modern world.

ELISSA BROADHURST / staff photographer

In doing this, symbols of multiculturalism, media and politics are represented by every piece of artwork.

"I have been pleasantly surprised that the response has been so positive," said Michael Watts, director of Tarble Arts Center.

He said people have eagerly discussed the artwork, and they have kept open minds when looking at most pieces, including the display featuring coffee filters.

The artwork displayed was selected by a panel of critics from different countries and continents who specialize in contemporary art.

In addition to the artwork, displayed on the walls is an essay by the artist defining the purpose for each composition. An illustrated catalog of the essays is available at the Tarble Arts Center.

Tarble Arts Center is located on south Ninth Street and is open 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Tuesday through Friday, 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. on Saturday and 1 p.m. to 4 p.m. on Sunday.

As part of the exhibit, the International Student Services and Rotary will host a reception Feb. 15. The reception is planned as a social occasion inviting people to come see the display in an informal atmosphere, he said.

'Blink' soundtrack composer just doing his job

By MIKE GAGLIARDO

While many people can readily hum the first few bars of the James Bond theme or the overture from "Star Wars" without missing a beat, most movie goers would be hard pressed to whistle even a note of the soundtracks to "Terminator," "The Accused" or "Striking Distance."

But that's just fine with composer Brad Fiedel. In fact, he is the first one to say, "I think that's my job."

Fiedel, who also wrote the scores for "The Big Easy" and "The Bunker," believes that his first priority as a movie score composer is to "support" the events on screen. Likewise, he believes his duty as the composer is to "use my knowledge and abilities to help the audience have a fuller experience."

And that's just what he does in his most recent effort, the motion picture "Blink."

"I originally saw a screening of the film," said Fiedel, "and talked to Michael Apted. I was intrigued by the idea of someone not being able to see since birth, then suddenly being given sight — the ethereal element of the score accounts for this."

He believes the criticisms by "serious" musicians that film composing is not a viable art form is unfounded.

"It's the only current form where people get to write music for a large orchestra," Fiedel said. "(Film score) writing rates with anything being written currently. Everybody is writing for someone — no one writes in a vacuum. You're always writing for a reason."

As a self-proclaimed "movie buff," Fiedel most enjoys "being able to write what I want in conjunction with a film."

"I feel very fortunate to meet people who want to work with me," Fiedel said. While his score for "Terminator 2" garnered him an American Society of Composers and Performers award, he believes the best award in his business is "when directors want to work with me."

Of his work, Fiedel is proudest of "T2."

"I was given very little time," he said. "I had to compose 105 minutes of music, and I performed 99 percent of it myself." Fiedel added he was equally proud of his work in "The Accused" because of the "importance" of the film.

Fiedel is not solely a man of movie music, however. He recently took part in a collaborative piece with sculptor Donald Lipski. Fiedel wrote music for a multitude of bells that Lipski had rigged to play automatically.

At the unveiling of the piece at the Cincinnati Art Institute, Fiedel was rather distressed to find that a third of the notes were not functioning. He tried unsuccessfully to get the malfunction attended to and received instead nothing but praise and adulation.

Lucky for Fiedel that in art, beauty is in the eye of the beholder and not the listener.

Charleston's SpankWagon rolls in their own 'sick'

by MIKE MEYER

"SpankWagon has their shit together," music producer Brad Wood said about Charleston's most powerful punk export.

"They rock pretty hard," Wood said. "They work really fast and sound cool."

SpankWagon, who recently recorded a vintage, only single in Wood's critically acclaimed Idful studio in Chicago, takes Wood's claims to heart.

Ron Johnson, SpankWagon's drummer, cherishes the time he and his band spent recording at Idful with Wood.

"We had the idea that we would co-produce the single," said Johnson. "All we had to say 'that's great' (to Wood). Our input was to say and structure the song; that's about it. We didn't have to say a word. He's just that good."

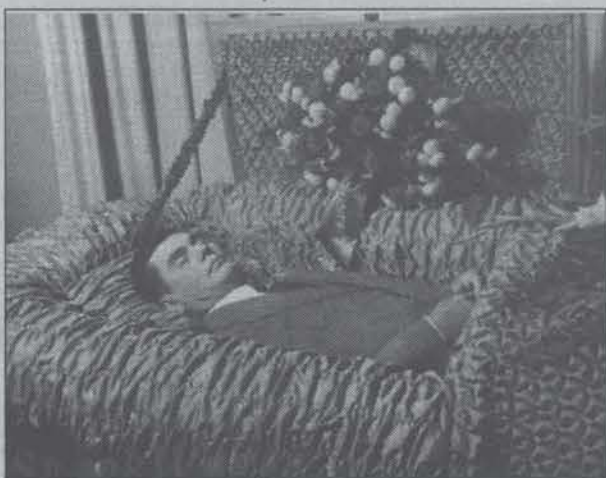

The single, to be released on Feb. 18, is titled "Sick" (Alleged Records). This recording is a positive step forward for SpankWagon. They have taken on a harsher, punkier sound with their new release. SpankWagon is now much rougher and louder than on their debut CD, "Stench" (JB Records).

The two songs on "Sick" exude a new form of musical power. It's sort of like a mad cross between Rapeman, the Jesus Lizard and the Dazzling Killmen. Both songs, "Sick" and "Reach," are hardcore pants. A slick recording job by Wood pushes SpankWagon to their maximum abilities. Pleasantly disturbing and preciously violent, "Sick" and "Reach" really capture an overly-catchy, frenetic version of SpankWagon.

When SpankWagon began, each member brought their own specific old-school preferences to the band. Johnson grew up on Led Zeppelin, particularly paying close attention to the drumming style of the band. Bub Jarrett, the bass player and vocalist, has his roots in rockabilly. Tom Rue, the guitarist and second vocalist, grew up listening to AC/DC.

It's now three years later, and the band combines the extremities of each stylistic branch that they originally brought in. Their recent notoriety can be attributed to their diverse, frantic music. Chicago, for instance, is SpankWagon's most recent conquest.

"We get good crowds up there. We always draw really well at Thurston's and Metro," Johnson revealed. "There's people that religiously see us up there."

"We were also invited to the Independent Music Festival in Chicago," Johnson added.

Being in a strong-minded, three-member band, Johnson finds many extra positives.

"There's less politics in our band," Johnson said. "We all get along great and there's always conversation. Everyone's got their little quirks, but we're best friends."

During their friendship together, the band has seen the corporate rock society grasp a tight hold of the music and musicians surrounding their independent culture.

"I hate corporate rock," Johnson announced. "I remember when we started out, alternative music wasn't even on the radio. Alternative is (now) everywhere, but they don't practice what they preach."

Johnson has thought of a cure that would inspire action in the current apathetic support of alternative music in Charleston. He thinks that "we should put something in the water."

Drink up, and get "Sick."
