Trustees to discuss repairs on Jorns' home

By ELLEN EARDLEY
Administration editor

The Board of Trustees will meet Friday to discuss several items including whether to appropriate $10,000 for the repair and maintenance of the university house, the president's official residence.

The BOT will meet at 1 p.m. Friday in the University Ballroom of the Martin Luther King Jr. University Union.

"The fiscal year 1997 budget will be dedicated to completion of a floor replacement project in the kitchen area and replacement of exterior deck awning, as well as routine minor maintenance items throughout the year," stated President David Jorns' report to the Board of Trustees.

According to the president's report, $4,000 will be used for floor and awning replacements, $1,000 for miscellaneous repairs and $5,000 contingency for repairs and upgrades.

Shelly Flock, director of public information, said she thinks funds are appropriated for the university house yearly.

"They do that every year," Flock said. "I think it was the same amount last year from what I recall."

Last year the board approved $10,000 for safety improvements, bathroom upgrades and miscellaneous repairs and replacements at the president's home.

Flock said since the agenda for the board meeting is routine, Jorns would like to delegate his media responsibilities to other sources and not comment.

In other BOT business:

■ The BOT will discuss whether to approve a proposed joint bachelor's of science degree in business administration with Eastern and Parkland College in Champaign.

Parkland already offers a master's degree in business administration in correlation with Eastern. It has an associate's degree program on its own.

"The bachelor's degree would be a natural link between Parkland's associate degree and the EIU-Parkland MBA already offered," Flock said.

The classes would be geared toward business professionals.

"The classes would be offered in the evenings and the weekend with possibilities with distance learning technology," Flock said.

"Initial intent is to offer the program at Parkland College with additional locations at a later time," stated the president's report.

Additional locations may include Lake Land College in Mattoon, Richland Community College in Decatur and Danville Area Community College in Danville.

The president's report recommends the approval of this program.

■ The board will review the president's recommendation to approve the purchase of student accident and health insurance from Health Care Service Corporation (Blue Cross/Blue Shield of Illinois).

"We have worked with the Health Care Service Corporation for about the past ten years," Flock said. "I wouldn't call it a contract renewal, but we're recommending that we continue with the same company."

Gladsky questions likely to be answered Tuesday

By ELLEN EARDLEY
Administration editor

The Faculty Senate will likely have the answers to the five questions they raised regarding the hiring of Rita Holmes, faculty assistant in the English Language Center at their weekly meeting Tuesday.

The senate will meet at 2 p.m. on Tuesday in the BOG Room of Booth Library.

The senate forwarded its questions to Terry Weidner, the acting provost and the vice president for academic affairs, to receive answers.

"I know that Dr. Weidner hopes we have (the answers) by the next meeting," said Gary Foster, vice chairman of the senate.

"I did have an opportunity to speak with him on Wednesday at the faculty retirement reception, and he indicated to me that I, on behalf of the senate, should be receiving the answers shortly," Foster said.

Weidner said he is compiling responses and will have the answers in writing to the senate as soon as possible.

"I asked some people more closely involved to help with those (questions), and I hope to get those back to the faculty senate, perhaps Friday or Monday," Weidner said.

The five questions drafted by the senate were:

■ Was a consultant hired to give advice about the Graduate College?

■ Was Kathy Ford's status or salary altered before she left last year as a part-time temporary position in the English as a second language area?

■ Was International Student Adviser Brigitte Chen's position altered as far as who supervises her?

■ At what time, and how was Graduate School Dean Tom Gladsky involved in drafting the description to the job his wife, Holmes, now holds?

■ Is Holmes' salary out of line with other academic support personnel?

In other faculty senate business:

■ A subcommittee of the senate will likely announce the winner of the Distinguished Faculty Award.

"The committee met Thursday, and they'll be seeking approval for the recipients," said Gail Richard, senate member and chairwoman of the award committee.

■ The senate hopes to choose someone to fill the office of senate recorder for the next session.

"I think we're hoping for someone to step forward and volunteer," said John Allison, senate member.

■ Allison also said he hopes the issues surrounding the elementary and junior high education committee's decision about music professor Doug DiBianco's non-western music course will be discussed.

"I had asked some time ago for us to have at least some discussion about the Doug DiBianco situation as it relates to freedom of expression in the classroom," Allison said.

Richard said discussion of the non-western music is not technically a published tentative agenda item and is unsure whether it will be discussed.

"It's not on the published agenda," Richard said.

Textbook Rental fee increase is worth the money

Dear editor:

The proposed 11 percent increase in the Textbook Rental Service fee looks reasonable and prudent from where I'm sitting.

Notwithstanding periodic doubts among the faculty, the Textbook Rental Service is and always has always been an excellent resource for us, putting more and better textbooks into student hands than a purchase system ever would. Teaching at Eastern since 1979, I have always found the staff at the Textbook Rental Service extremely helpful and cooperative, and especially so in recent years. Over and over again, they have helped me put together creative book orders which make the best possible use of current holdings. This has made it possible to teach courses which rely on hundreds of dollars worth of textbooks — far more than I would ever dare order if we had a purchase system.

Books are the essence of a college education. Compared to the books, everything else — even the instructor who stands in front of you, gamely trying to explain what is in the books — is more or less a frill or an accessory. $72.50 is a remarkably LOW price for the entree, when the side dishes cost ten times that much.

Intent of dress code was to improve the workers' pride

Dear editor:

We, as supervisors in the Business Office, are writing this letter to clear up the misinformation some people have in regards to our office attire guidelines. We feel this is particularly important after the unnecessary and unprofessional attack on Dave Riddle, acting comptroller, that was published in a letter to the editor in the April 22 edition of The Daily Eastern News.

The office attire guidelines were not mandated by Riddle. Rather, the supervisors, as a group, decided we needed dress code guidelines for our office. We felt our office showed a lack of pride and professionalism in allowing staff to dress very casually (in the past, staff have worn shorts into the office, as well as wearing jeans any day of the week). To correct this lack of professionalism by some staff, we developed the following proposed office attire guidelines:

- "Not allowed Monday through Friday:
1. Shorts
 2. Any clothing with holes or clothing that is extremely worn or faded.
 3. Sweat pants
 4. Tank tops unless worn under another piece of apparel; halter tops
 5. Clothing with liquor or cigarette advertising
 6. Clothing with sexist or racist slogans
 7. Leggings
 8. Clothing that is too tight or too short

Denim jeans are only allowed on Casual Fridays or when an employee is required to work in the archives or packing boxes.

As anyone can see, we are not requiring staff to purchase expensive business suits. All of this proposed guideline is common sense. We are only requesting a minimum standard of dress. We do not believe this will cause great financial burden on anyone.

We feel these guidelines will have a positive affect on all employees' morale. Morale, as defined in the new Webster's dictionary is a "mental condition..." We feel that if given a chance by some employees, the office will see a positive improvement in self-image, attitudes will improve and better morale will result.

Most employees will "dress up" when they go for an interview. Why is this? Is it so they feel more dignified, gain more respect, have a greater sense of pride, and appear more professional? These are the same motives we have for implementing office attire guidelines for the Business Office.

We feel the guidelines are an important step for our office and well worth the time spent in developing them. However, we feel it is unfortunate that so many have had to spend valuable time defending our motives and defending against personal attacks. We would sincerely like for the office to be a better place to work and believe this is a step in the right direction.

DiBianco doing job by challenging his music students

Dear editor:

According to the April 19 edition of The Daily Eastern News, the curriculum department of the department of elementary education has voted unanimously to black list Doug DiBianco's non-Western music course, potentially causing hundreds of students to miss DiBianco's unique blend of scholarship, passion, high jinks, bad taste and calculated effrontery. The decision was made on the basis of testimony by just one student who had found DiBianco's lectures offensive.

Incredible.

Until now I had thought that everyone understood that a teacher's job was to challenge students. That this might sometimes mean annoying, upsetting and offending them. That to have one disgruntled student was proof of absolutely nothing, but a good preliminary indication of doing one's job as expected.

If the elementary education committee wants to cease recommending the course, they have that right. But they should hear all sides of the story first, including DiBianco's own, and that of several of his students who have written The Daily Eastern News in the past, testifying that this was an excellent, mind-expanding class.

John Kilgore
Professor of English

Music class is a introduction to new, different cultures

Dear editor:

This letter is being written in regard to the travesty of justice that has been occurring in regards to situation with Doug DiBianco. I was overwhelmed by the arrogant presumption of the seven member

Our lives are a series of questions

There is only one week left before this semester is finished. Some seniors are spending their last month at Eastern. My friends also will graduate from Eastern one week later if they have the grades. I will miss them. One of them is looking for a job as a news photographer. I also have to decide what to do in the future. But first I have to decide what I like or want to do and why. Although I have thought it over, it is pretty difficult for me. I cannot answer the question of what I like and want to do.

I can get a lot of information through media, in newspapers, magazines, television, radio, compact discs, computers, e-mail, the Internet, books, advertisements, pictures, letters, brochures, posters and so on. I can have quasi-experiences through them, and I can be satisfied with what I like or want. Therefore, I do not have to think about what I like or want. I can escape reality.

My major is journalism, but I am not sure whether I really want to study it. That is, if I was told by someone that I simply believed that I wanted to study it, I could not disagree.

I noticed that I had never thought why I wanted what I did. "What do I want to do? WHY?"

To go to a foreign country was one of the things I wanted to do, but I did not think why I wanted to do that."

Spencer: "It's that very often we don't know how to explain what we know. We tend to think from the inside out. We tend to feel our way along. And because of the way we live it is more important usually to know what to do than to know how we know it."

Jackie: "Because the consequences of your actions will prove if you were right? Is that intuition?"

Spencer: "No, it's the sort of automatic compilation of data without thinking about it, and comparing it with other data previously. Most of it sort of volitional."

Jackie: "I get it. Why didn't you say that in the first place?"

Why do you like, want or love? WHY?

committee. These "educated" people did not even talk to DiBianco, they merely accepted the word of one student as fact. Have these people no idea what is meant by the term scholarly investigation? The committee never gave DiBianco a chance to explain how the controversial topics fit into the course. All of the things that Tara Setzer complained about were taken way out of context.

There is far more to multiculturalism than saying African American or Native American. To understand where a culture's music is coming from, the student needs to be exposed to the aspects of that culture that influence the music. All of the "evil" references to the terms homosexuality, penis, vagina, masturbation, etc. are relevant to the course because they are terms that are prevalent in the society as the culture deals with the different issues that face them. Just ask DiBianco how all of these things fit into the course and he will explain it very intelligently.

As far as forcing people to view what they do not wish to see, DiBianco's syllabus warns people of what is going to be discussed in class. I find it very interesting to listen to things from a left-wing, liberal perspective. I wonder why there are not any complaints from people for only receiving an education from a right-wing, conservative perspective. How can we be expected, as future leaders, to understand foreign cultures when we only learn to look at society in one way? DiBianco only asks people to look at things in a different way; he never forces people to accept his views. My wish is that everyone on that "educated" committee would just take the time to truly become educated about the issues they are speaking about. If this is the way that colleagues treat each other, I might want to reconsider my commitment to education.

Committee made bad decision in class advisement

Dear editor:

This letter is concerning the decision made by the education curriculum committee regarding Doug DiBianco's non-Western music class. This committee had no right to do what they did to DiBianco. Without even investigating the claims made by Tara Setzer (just one student), or observing DiBianco's class, the committee decided to advise students not to take the course. Even worse, the faculty of the curriculum committee did not even consult DiBianco about how the disputed content fits into his class. These actions were highly unprofessional and showed the ignorance of the two education departments involved. My question to the elementary and junior high education departments is: Are you refusing to comment on this whole matter because you have no concrete evidence to back up your reasons for telling students not to take the non-western music class?

DiBianco does teach from a left-wing perspective and I suppose that this erks society; but he wants his students to hear more than just music, he wants them to have background as they learn about the cultures were the music comes from. Learning about the whole culture and not just the socially acceptable parts allows the students in the class to see the whole picture and not just a part of it. Isn't the whole idea of education to teach students as much as possible so they can draw their own conclusions.

Columnist was very fair, logical

Dear editor:

I would like to commend one of your regular columnists, Omar Headen, on his April 24 column, entitled "Teacher Should Have Freedom in Classroom." I feel that Omar wrote this column with complete objectivity. I highly commend Omar for having an opinion that he bases on facts and theories rather than his own personal judgment and feelings. What a wonderful world we would live in if everyone would base their opinions on both theory and fact. And what a perfect world it could be if all people were to remain open minded and non-judgmental.

Omar spoke for me as well when he wrote, "I realize that my opinion is only an 'opinion,' but I commend DiBianco for not being part of the mainstream."

so when I was in my country. Maybe I can explain the reasons, but no sooner do I explain it than the explanations are gone and sound fake. I think that it is nonsense to explain why I want what I want. I guess that I could not account for it, just like I cannot explain the reason why I love my girl friend.

Robert B. Parker wrote about this in his novel "Double Deck."

Jackie: "So how do you decide? I had something to do with deciding

I haven't taken DiBianco's non-western music course but I have discussed a number of issues and a variety of subjects with him and I have found him to be very open minded, objective and non-judgmental. DiBianco teaches both theory and facts. Thanks to DiBianco for teaching us so that we have the ability to make choices and form our opinions. If we choose to learn only about things we like, our opinions will be ignorant. If we refuse to learn about things that may be unpleasant to us, we will only continue to be uninformed and unable to make any intelligent decisions and choices. If we learn all we can about any given topic, our ability to like or dislike it is, at least, based on knowledge. DiBianco performs his job in a way that allows us to be knowledgeable and intelligent about music, and thus able to form knowledgeable and intelligent opinions if we choose.

Alternative needed to parking tickets

Dear editor:

What kind of the racket do the President's Council and the University Police Department have going? Raising the price of parking tickets to students who do not have much money is not the answer. More parking is needed to curb some of the illegal parking.

As a commuter it is very frustrating to search the parking lots and not be able to find a space. Coming from Decatur I have no option but to drive my car.

It is understandable that the university has days that are busier than others which requires parking for non-students/staff. But why do they close off the stadium parking lot with at least 30 spots available.

It seems to me they are creating reasons for people to park illegally.

Everyone seems to realize the need for more parking except those in charge of it. Parking garages are an option that should be considered. Instead of destroying land around campus by building out, maybe building up is the way to go.

With the increase in parking ticket fees and the number of cars illegally parked a garage could be built by fall 1997.
