Militants ready to give hostages to Iranian council

TEHRAN, Iran (AP)—Moslem militants in the U.S. Embassy in Tehran, who have held some 50 Americans hostage for four months, said Thursday they were ready to give up their captives to Iran's Revolutionary Council.

Carter administration officials, fearful of "blowing the whole thing," reacted cautiously to what was seen as the most significant breakthrough thus far in the 124-day-old standoff.

A spokesman for the militants, contacted by telephone from Bonn, West Germany, would give no indication when the transfer might take place and there was no indication the move would soon lead to freedom for the Americans.

Iranian Foreign Minister Sadegh Ghotbzadeh, emerging from a meeting at which the Revolutionary Council accepted the militants' offer, made clear the authorities still view the Americans as hostages.

"Our conditions are rather clear" for their release, he said, apparently referring to President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr's three demands - that the U.S. government acknowledge past interference in Iranian affairs, that it pledge not to interfere in the future, and that it promise not to block efforts to have the deposed shah and his "stolen wealth" returned to Iran.

President Carter has said the United States has no intention to interfere in Iran, but has ruled out any admission of past guilt.

Ghotbzadeh said the transfer of the hostages to the custody of the Revolutionary Council, about a dozen Moslem clergymen and lay revolutionaries who rule Iran, would be arranged by a special "commission" that would meet Friday.

Krackers disco replaced by Las Vegas shows

by Jerry Fallstrom

Saunter up to E.L. Krackers bar, order a drink mixed from a computer bar and pull up one of Krackers original chrome tractor seats. Relax and admire the assortment of ferns and pop art while a Las Vegas show is presented before you.

E.L. Krackers, 1405 Fourth St., offers customers a relaxed, carefree evening of entertainment, according to manager Steve Eslami.

Eslami said Krackers offers a "total entertainment package," with a meal in the restaurant and a Las Vegas show afterward.

Eslami said Krackers is the only establishment in the Midwest to offer Las Vegas shows. "We're the only ones to bring this kind of show in this area," he said.

There is definitely a market for a Las Vegas show here, he said. "The first night response to the show was phenomenal. It was greater than I expected."

The show incorporates song and dance with music provided by a top show band, he said. "These are not Las Vegas-style bands. They are really from Las Vegas," he said.

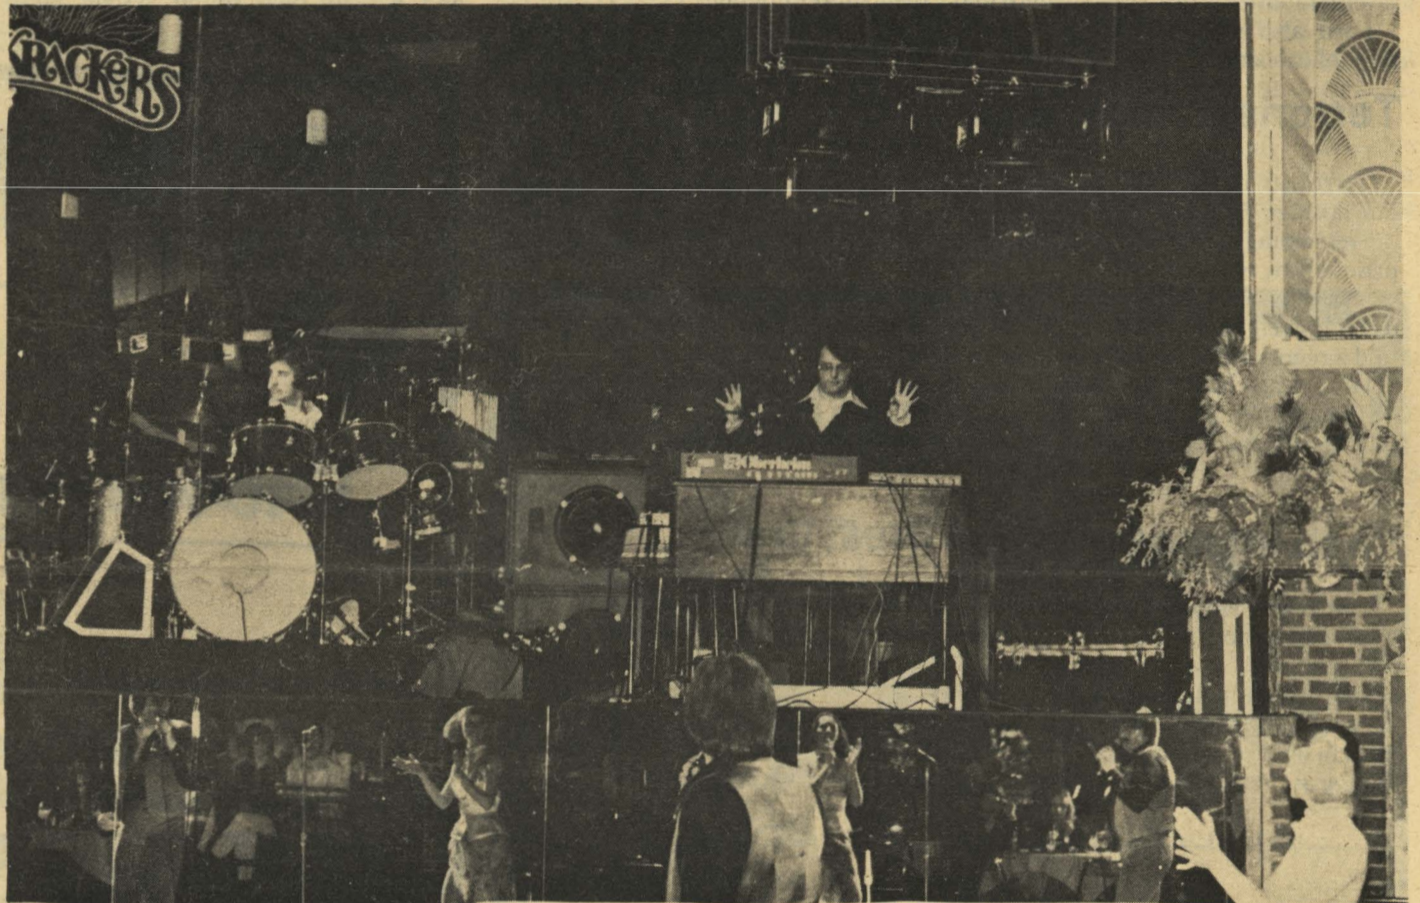

Currently performing is Rick Evans and Reflection. After their two-week engagement, Eslami expects to offer more Las Vegas shows at Krackers.

Krackers will offer "top notch" Las Vegas shows regularly. There will no longer be a disco, he said.

Eslami said the ferns which hang in the bar and restaurant give Krackers a feeling of life.

"The combination of ferns and animal pictures and plaster animals in the bar give the feeling of being in a lively place," he said.

Krackers attracts people from a 150-

E.L. Krackers, the only establishment in the Midwest to offer Las Vegas-type shows, has a $50,000 sound and light system and 900 square feet of dance floor and is one mile radius, Eslami said. He said most of the crowd is over 21, but there is no stereotype of the typical Krackers customer.

"We get all types. Professionals, students, workers—we get them all," he said.

Why such a strange name for a bar? "It means 'everyone loves Kracker.' Kracker is one of the owners," Eslami said.

of only two bars in Illinois with a computer to mix drinks. (News photo by Dan McMinn)

The restaurant is adorned with old advertisement signs, such as a Vess Cola sign, an Empire Feeds Grain and Hay Sign, and an old Bayer Aspirin sign.

There are also many original pictures and oddities to gaze at while sitting in an upstairs booth.

The seats in the booths are original pews from a demolished monastery in Casey, he said. An organ that came from the same monastery is Eslami's "pride and joy."

The large pipes of the organ form a centerpiece for the restaurant and bear Krackers logo atop them.

Besides the chrome tractor seats and computer bar, Krackers entertainment section has a stained glass ceiling above the upstairs bar.

Foreign language may be required for BA by Herb Meeker

Eastern students opting for a bachelor of arts degree may be required to take a foreign language course following a tentative vote of the Council on Academic Affairs Thursday.

The proposal, passed 7-5 by the council, would require that all students pursuing a BA degree complete a foreign language course as a prerequisite for graduation or show competency in a foreign language in their first year here.

The proposed requirement will be forwarded to the administration for approval.

The CAA also approved ROTC military science courses, leaving the door open for an ROTC program to come to Eastern.

The eight courses are military science 1001, "Introduction to Military Science"; 1002, "Introduction to Tactics"; 2001, "Fundamentals of Learning and Military Instruction"; 2002, "Land Navigation"; 2003, "ROTC Basic Summer Camp" (five weeks of instruction at Fort Knox, Ky.), which could serve as a partial substitute for 1001, 1002, 2001, 2002); 3001, "Principles of Military Leadership"; 3002, "Introductory Military Operations" and 4001, "Military Law and Administrative Management." One additional course from the Eastern curriculum may be included in the ROTC program.

Lt. Col. Robert Poshard and Captain James Cantor of the University of Illinois ROTC program said the Army is expanding its ROTC in Illinois, and Eastern and Illinois State University were chosen for extension programs from the U of I.

Ron Wolhstein of the sociology department said, "It might be the best idea to train our military at a liberal institution like this one."

Lt. Col. Poshard said U of I faculty will teach the courses and their travel and salaries expenses will be paid by the Army. He said Eastern faculty could team-teach with the Army instructors in such classes as land navigation.

The ROTC courses were approved with one negative vote. The ROTC program still must be approved by Eastern President Daniel E. Marvin, the Board of Governors and the Illinois Board of Higher Education.

The CAA also voted to require 12 semester hours in humanities in the general education requirements in order to help distinguish the BA and BS degrees.

Registration of women voted down

A House subcommittee voted 8-1 in Washington Thursday to kill President Carter's request for authority to include women in a draft registration program.

The vote, the first congressional test of sentiment for registering women, does not affect registration of men.

The issue of male registration is tied up in the House Appropriations Committee, where budgetary problems have stalled a vote on Carter's request for money to start registration this summer.

Proposals to register women could be revived in the full Armed Services Committee or the House. The issue also remains alive in the Senate.

Ford inching closer

Gerald R. Ford inched closer Thursday to entering the presidential race, as several Republicans publicly urged him to make the jump. If enough people ask, Ford said, "I'd have a hard time saying no."

The former president said in St. Petersburg, Fla., he had been given pledges of support from Democrats and independents as well as Republicans in the past several months. He invited them to make their support public.

Ford also was reported to have agreed to meet next week with several Republican leaders in New York to "discuss the political situation."

Terrorists release one

Terrorists holding the Dominican Republic Embassy in Colombia released one hostage Thursday, and a government official said the talks aimed at freeing the remaining captives focused on the guerrilla demand that 311 alleged political prisoners be released.

Austrian Ambassador Edgar Selzer, freed in order to return home to the side of his gravely ill wife, was reported by the Venezuelan state news agency to have told a reporter that he had not eaten in eight days.

His release leaves 14 ambassadors or acting ambassadors in the embassy, including U.S. Ambassador Diego Asencio, plus an undetermined number of other hostages. There were an estimated 29 guerrillas, one of them wounded, in the building.

Shah interview brings pressure

The White House and the State Department attempted several times over a two-week period to pressure "60 Minutes" into canceling a segment on U.S. relations with Iran's ousted shah, CBS News president William Leonard confirmed Thursday in New York.

Leonard said he and the newsmagazine's producers considered several options in light of the administration's effort, but the 30-minute piece, about twice as long as the normal "60 Minutes" segment, was broadcast March 2.

The stained glass is 190 years old and comes from the same Casey monastery, Eslami said.

Krackers has a $50,000 sound and light system and has 900 square feet of dance floor, he said. The entertainment wing was designed so that every seat has a good view of the stage, he added.

"We traveled around the country for a year and a half visiting bars and picking out the best ideas for Krackers," he said.

Krackers computer bar, which can mix up to 1500 combinations at the push of a few buttons, is the only one of its kind in this area, Eslami said. Chicago has two bars with computers for mixing drinks, but Krackers is the only other bar in Illinois with one, he said.

For special occasions, Krackers has a VIP room to rent above and to the right of the stage. The room which holds 15 people, rents for $25 a night and has its own sound system and intercom to the bar.

"We offer a different kind of entertainment than the other bars in town," Eslami said. "It's more of a laid-back atmosphere. You don't have to worry about getting in a fight here. We're not a rowdy bar."

Krackers serves lunch from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. and dinner from 5 to 9:30 p.m., Tuesday through Saturday. The entertainment wing is open from 7 p.m. to 1 a.m., Tuesday through Saturday. A brunch is served on Sunday from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. 30

Five county candidates speak at issues forum

by Mickey O'Connell

Five candidates for the position of Coles County state's attorney gave their views on current issues at a forum Thursday.

Lonnie Lutz, democratic candidate for the office, is presently first assistant for the public defender and has served as a member of the Coles County board for future planning.

If elected, he plans to expand office hours to increase accessibility for the working man needing legal assistance.

Lutz also plans to expand the investigation of the state's attorney office by hiring pre-law students into the office.

He also hopes to instigate an alternate plan for rehabilitation rather than probation and incarceration of the individuals charged with a crime.

John Elder, democratic candidate, served as Coles County public defender for one year and as assistant state's attorney in 1973.

He is looking into computers for aid in case management and the utilization of trained legal assistants for keeping close contact with police agencies and the office.

Democrat Rich Hobler served as investigator of the state's attorney office in 1974. He has handled all neglect and child abuse cases in the state's attorney office.

He also has worked on a task force to limit domestic violence in Coles County.

Republican James Dedman has served as first assistant state's attorney since 1975.

Dedman noted that the citizen's cost of running the office has decreased since he has been working with State's Attorney Paul Komada.

He said he thinks the job requires being on call 24 hours a day, and he believes he is committed enough to handle it.

Nancy Owens, democratic candidate, has served as assistant public defender and is currently Coles County public defender.

Owens thinks the job calls for a person with experience and an "engrained ethical sense."

She also said a candidate needs trial experience to be a good state's attorney.

"If one lets feelings interfere with a case, it would result in chaos for criminal justice and a weakening of the state's attorney office," Owens added.

Large gas tax would help conserve energy

Although nationalizing the oil companies is one solution to the energy crisis, a more reasonable and effective solution would be conservation.

But how do you get people to conserve? After all, the energy crisis has been well publicized for years and environmentalists have been urging us to conserve for at least a decade. Still, gasoline consumption did not decrease until gas lines formed and the price leaped over a dollar a gallon.

So it appears the only way to make people conserve is to "get 'em where it hurts"- the pocketbook. That's why I believe a gasoline tax would be the most effective remedy for the energy shortage.

If a 50-cent-a-gallon tax was implemented, it would generate enough revenue to allow tax breaks in other areas that affect the average consumer. The people who could afford to waste gas at a higher price would be paying the bulk of the tax, while those who couldn't afford it would conserve and would benefit by bringing home a bigger paycheck.

But the greatest advantage of the tax is the drop in oil consumption that would result from it and therefore, reduce our dependence on foreign oil. A higher price for gasoline might make alternative fuels, such as gasohol, more economically feasible and encourage research for more efficient methods of production.

A higher tax on gasoline is suggested in a study undertaken by the International Monetary Fund, which is "highly critical of U.S. policy-makers for failing to use higher taxes to reduce gasoline consumption."

The fund, an influential organization of 40 countries which controls the world monetary system, has had considerable success in getting member countries to agree to its policies.

The IMF said oil-importing nations should consider the "new and important role for gasoline taxation... in supplementing market forces to promote reduced reliance on imported oil..."

One major advantage listed by the study is that it keeps the money at home, whereas relying on market prices to restrain consumption results in a transfer of much of the money to foreign producers. Another advantage is that it could be an important source of revenue.

It said U.S. gasoline taxes, which, including state taxes, averages just 12 to 13 cents a gallon, have not kept pace with market prices, which is a mistake.

"They are transferring potential revenues to the producing countries- and relieving the gasoline consumer at the expense of other taxpayers- thus at the same time inducing budgetary difficulties, worsening their balance of payments and sacrificing the objectives of reduced dependence on oil imports," the study stated.

According to Tom Wicker, national columnist, a 50-cent-a-gallon tax would cut consumption by 10 percent and bring in $50 billion each year. It would also allow the energy burden on low-income persons to be eased, while strengthening the dollar.

Sound too good to be true? It is, because just the mention of the word "tax" has strong political implications. The Carter administration was "seriously considering" the proposal of a 50-cent-a-gallon increase on the current 4 cent federal gasoline tax. Part of the proceeds from the tax could have been used to reduce Social Security taxes, according to some officials.

Strong opposition to the tax by several key members of Congress was no doubt one of the reasons the administration backed off.

One advocate of gasoline tax, accompanied by a wage-price freeze, is Felix Rohatyn, the New York investment banker who was the architect of the city's financial redemption after it slid near bankruptcy in 1975.

He proposes "harsh budgetary restraint," a wage-price freeze, a 50-cent-a-gallon tax, and the creation of a National Economic Commission, all of which he believes will provide a "breathing spell" for developing long-term economic policies, strengthen the dollar, and allow a decline in interest rates.

Rohatyn would make an agreement with OPEC under which oil-producing nations would make long-term commitments to the West's oil supply and to price stability. The United States, along with Western Europe and Japan, would 1) provide military protection of exposed OPEC nations (actually protecting our oil supply), and 2) both increase alternate sources of energy and reduce oil consumption in return.

The wage-price freeze would be only temporary, with less stringent wage-price policies following it. But Wicker said the "real centerpiece of the program would be the gasoline tax," and he continues on to list the advantages I have already mentioned.

It appears that a gasoline tax is the most sensible course of action we can take because it would do all of the following: cut down on oil consumption, therefore reducing our dependence on foreign oil, benefit those who conserve by taxing them less in other areas, provide an incentive for exploring alternative fuels and increasing efficiency in production, strengthen the dollar, because of the drop in consumption it will take away some of the excess profits the oil companies and OPEC are currently receiving, allow a decline in interest rates and penalize those who can afford to waste our most precious resource, oil.

Rep. John B. Anderson is the only one presidential candidate who, despite political repercussions, has the courage to openly support the gasoline tax. Anderson is proposing a 50-cent-a-gallon increase with part of the money being used to reduce Social Security taxes.

Many people believe that Anderson has committed political suicide by favoring the tax, but the strong showing he made in the Massachusetts and Vermont primaries indicate that at least some of the voters are ready to wage war on OPEC, the oil companies and the energy crisis in general. And I believe a tax on gasoline to be our most effective ammunition.

Letters to the editor

Top 40 blues

Editor,

I'm writing in regards to the recent letter about WELH. I agree that the station has turned for the worse. I enjoyed the personal programmings of Al Wood, Dave Fulgham, and Dave Brooke. One of these disc jockeys is a personal friend of mine and he relied on audience requests in order to please his listeners.

Suddenly he had to adhere to a special format which didn't allow requests. After several clashes with the program and music directors he decided to quit before he lost his temper.

Now all I can hear on WELH is the Top 40, which I'm sick of, and can hear on WEIC if I ever get the urge. WELH used to have variety in programming, from disco to good old rock and roll. Now all I ever hear is the same monotonous repertoire.

If the station is trying to lose its listeners it should shut down. They've lost me and many of my friends. If they wish to regain the many listeners that enjoyed the solid Rock of the 70s WELH should let their D.J.s play requests.

A team effort

Open Letter to the Players of the Eastern Illinois Basketball Team:

You had to endure the final ceremonies in the Wright State P.E. Building after the Northern Michigan University game. The hurt had the time to penetrate.

As a result, you may have missed the nicest compliment a team could get. The media representatives voted on the "All Tournament Team." It is unlikely the vote would have changed if NMU had made one point less and EIU two points more.

The team that came within three points of winning the whole thing was so well balanced that the media couldn't decide whom to name to its honor team.

That was no oversight. No mistake. No put down. By their individual decisions, they confirmed you had achieved a seldom-reached goal, becoming a cohesive team.

It happened because:
-you each have special talents and you used them,
-you learned to respect and trust each other,
-you put the team before self,
-your coaches had the knowledge, skill and concern for individuals to help you "put it all together."

The media was correct. The team was greater than the sum of its parts.

Congratulations! Thanks for a great season of basketball at Eastern.

True root

Editor

Nationalizing the oil companies is not only contrary to every principal of free enterprise but it fails to recognize the true root of energy crisis. The nation's energy problems do not stem from the profit motive of Exxon.

This is not to say that I agree with the funneling of huge oil profits into conglomerate diversification. On the contrary, I believe Congress should pass tax laws which penalize major oil company profits realized through acquisitions in industries unrelated to energy development.

Logic leads me to make a broad assumption here. I believe the oil companies' diversification beyond the boundaries of energy is a basic instinct of corporate survival. The end of abundant crude oil is in sight and for all of the twentieth century's technological leaps we have not developed feasible replacements. Understandably, the oil companies do not want all of their eggs in a basket of uncertainty.

To make the oil companies the whipping post of the energy crisis will enhance rather than resolve the problem. A more practical approach is to legally manipulate their extraordinary efficiency in a positive direction. If the survival of the oil companies is made solely dependent upon the development of alternative energy sources their ingenuity and saving may well be the cornerstone of American economic survival in the next century.

David Cathcart

Federal rap

Editor,

This letter is in regards to your editorial on federal grants versus student fees for transportation projects. The greatest problem facing small transit projects in dealing with the federal government is the federal government itself.

The federal programs intended to assist and encourage the development of both large and small transportation systems impose burdensome regulations and requirements upon operating agencies in order to acquire the assistance to which they are entitled.

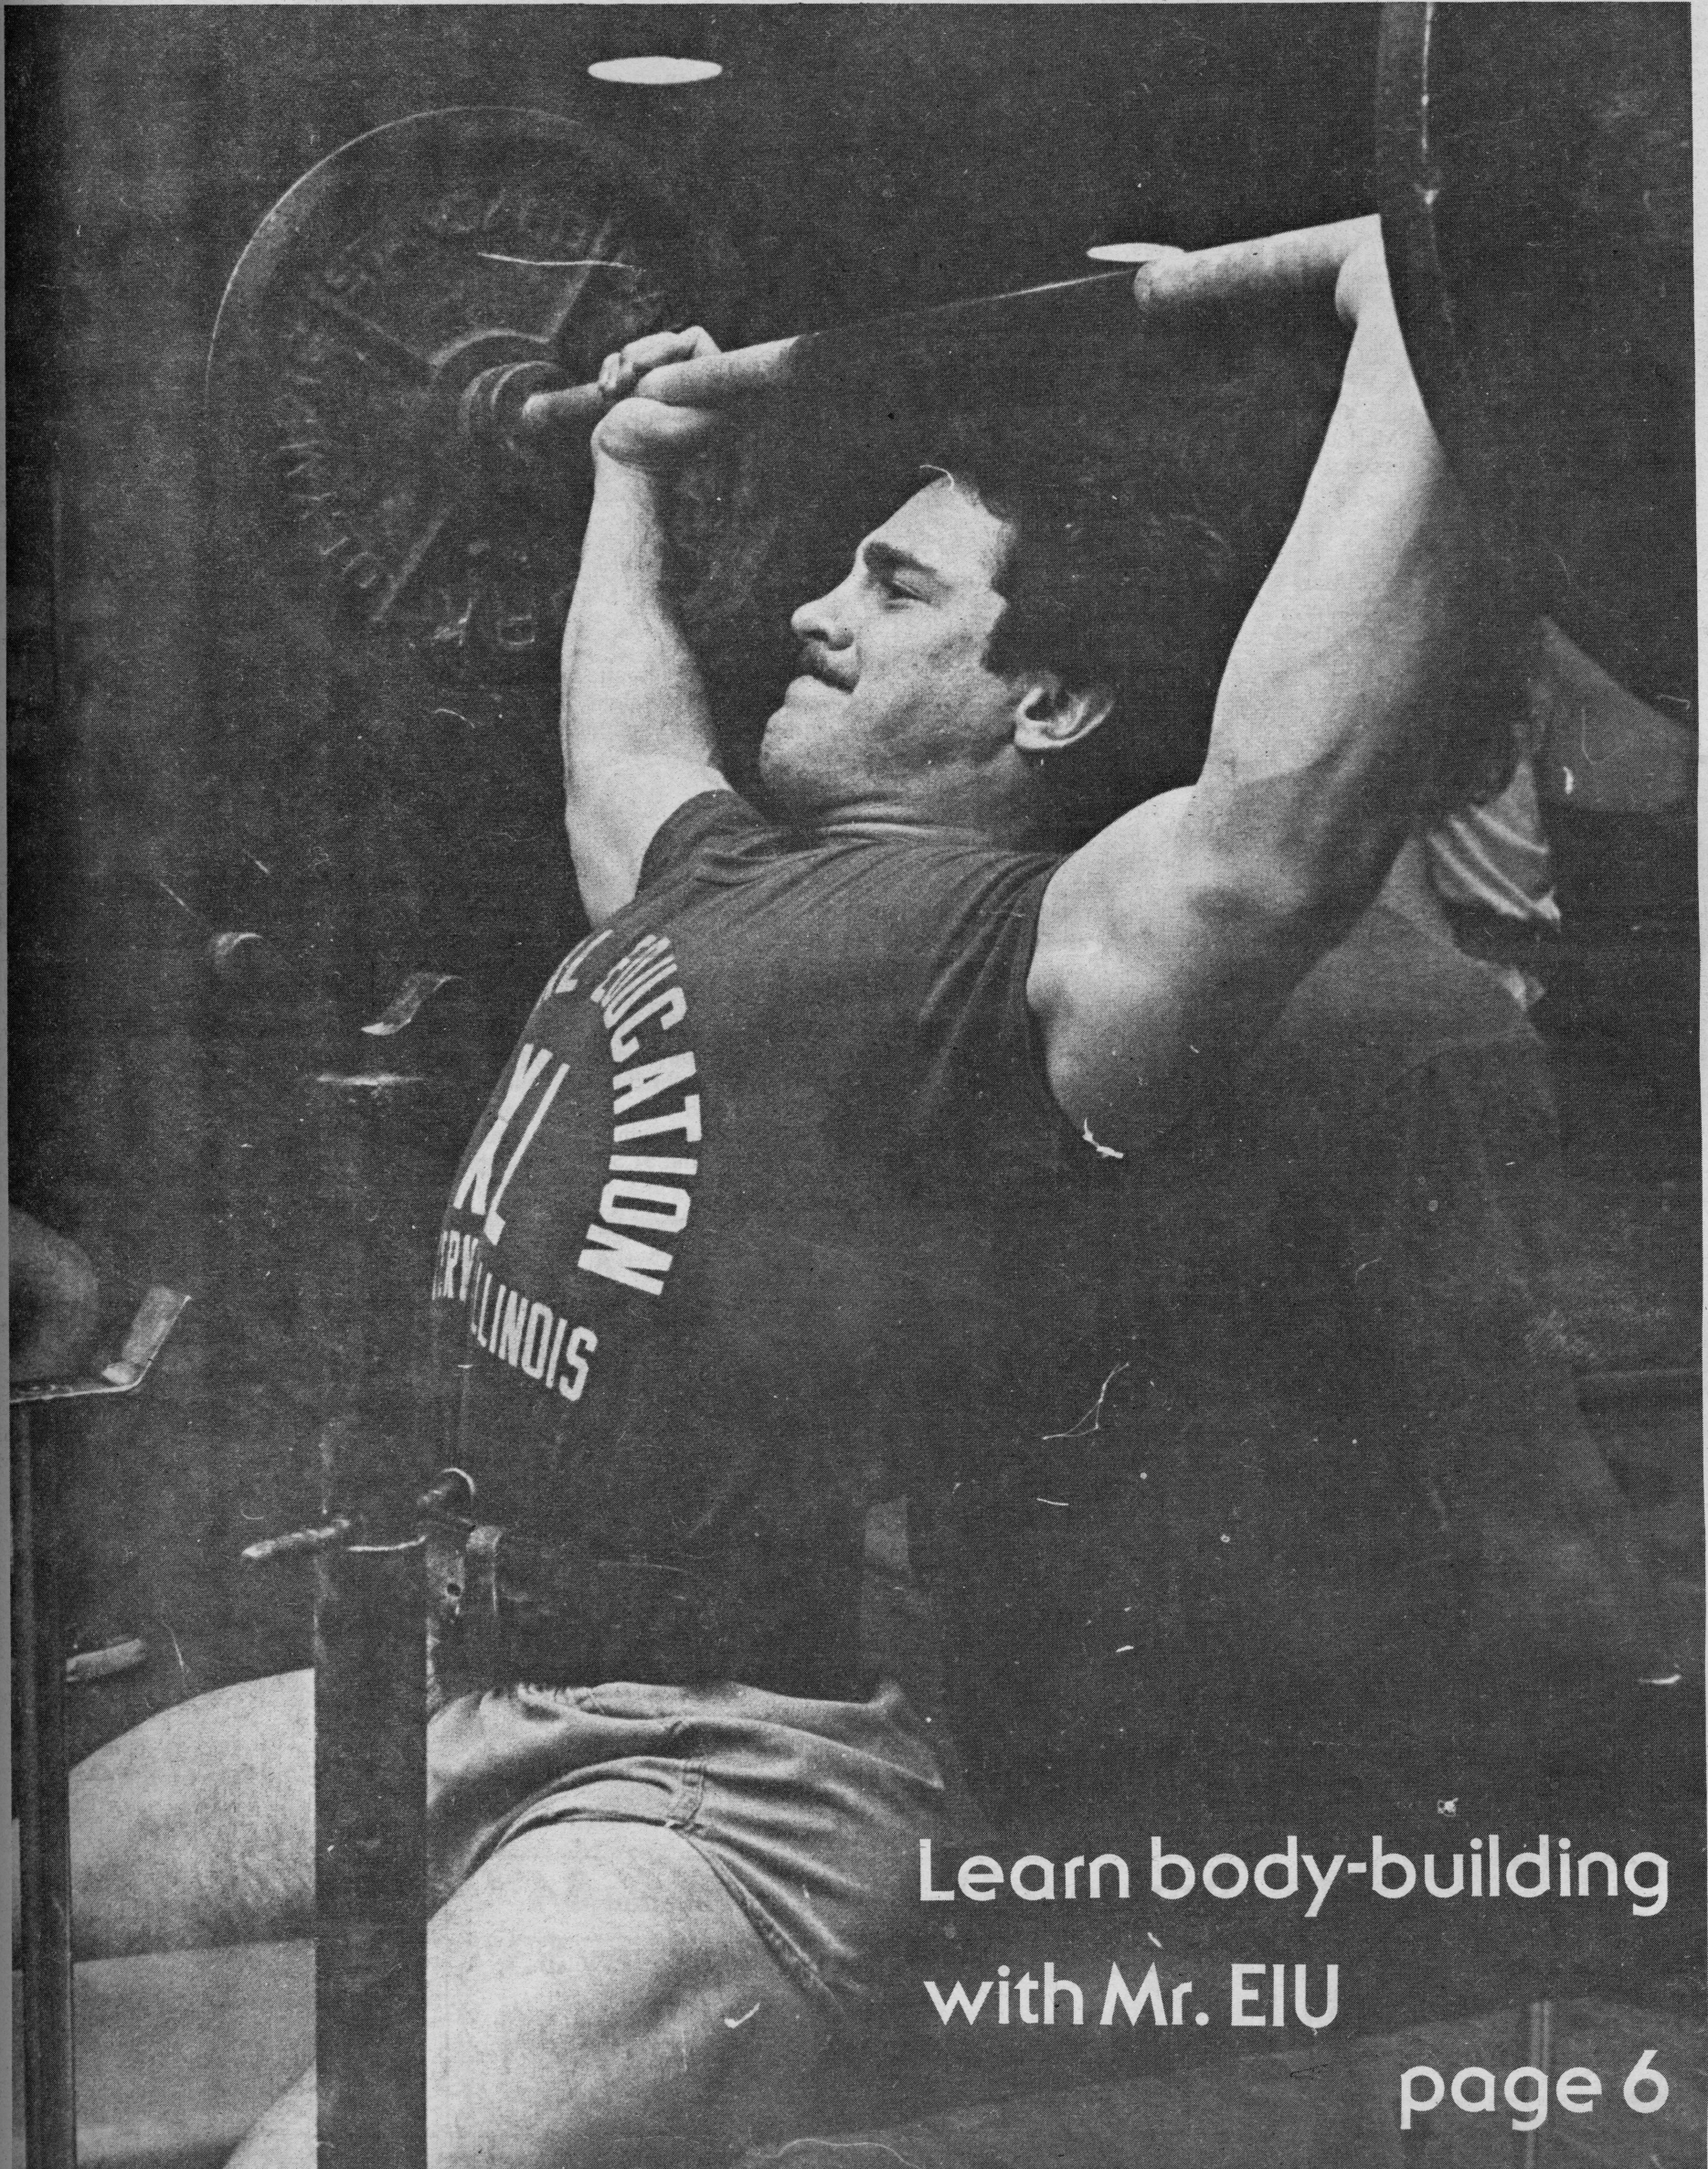

In short, these programs are very attractive on the outside, but a lot of strings attached on the inside. The first day of service for the federal grant system would be anywhere from five to ten years from now, if we're lucky.

In football or phones, they play by numbers

(Editor's note: This is the final article in a series examining the use of numbers in our society.)

Getting your phone bill is probably not the high point in your life. The calls we make are an everyday event. How much do we know about those numbers we dial to talk to friends and family, to get information, or to get help in an emergency?

In Charleston, telephone numbers are assigned through Illinois Consolidated Telephone Company service

by Diane Cooper

offices. The numbers are provided to the offices by the main offices in Mattoon and Taylorville, Charleston area service manager Tom Cox said.

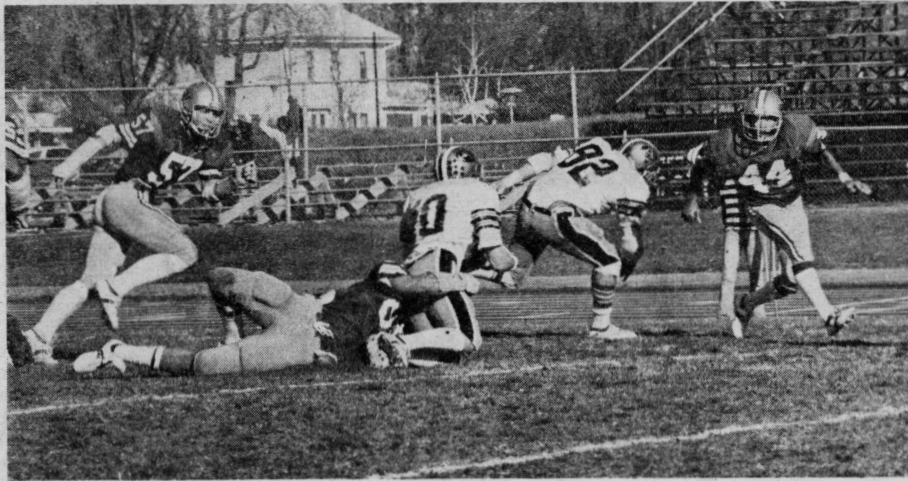

Currently, Charleston has three different prefixes, 581, 345, and 348, each of which has the potential to yield 10,000 telephone numbers. If Charleston should experience enough growth to require a new prefix, ICTC would request one from the code allocation center in Springfield. The engineering department at ICTC forecasts future growth requirements in each community five years in advance. In this way, new equipment can be scheduled and installed by the time it is needed.

If a person moves within the same exchange, he or she takes the number along, Cox said. If the person moves out of town, the number is not used immediately. A recording is put on the line informing callers that the number is not in service.

The North American Number Plan, a system of numbers currently used by the United States, was designed in the 1940s. At that time, telephone numbers were in a letter and number combination. Numbers began with two letters, usually derived from the town or building name.

This old plan provided 152 area codes, each with a capacity of 540 central office codes.

Telephone communication growth in the 1950s was responsible for the system as we now know it. The letters were eliminated and replaced by three-digit prefixes. This began "All-Number Calling," and all phone companies switched over. The process of converting to the system was finally completed by 1978. With ANC, the number of central office codes grew from 540 to 640.

Football jersey numbers are distributed according to position, which helps officials calling the game. (News photo by Rich Bauer)

An area code system was devised for the United States, Canada, certain Caribbean Islands, and parts of Mexico. These countries were divided geographically into Numbering Plan Areas and assigned NPA codes.

Boundaries of the coded areas are shown in the front of the telephone directory, and were established to last for long periods of time. Taken into consideration were estimates of future requirements, Cox explained.

Another one of the numbers we encounter daily but tend to ignore is the bank account number. Barb Hennigh of the Bank of Charleston said the system of numbers may vary from bank to bank.

"Some banks don't use account numbers, because they are too small to use computer services," she said. In this case, the alphabet is used instead.

The Bank of Charleston does get its account numbers from a computer system, the Citizens Data Center in Decatur, Hennigh said. The center serves many businesses, including several banks. "We're number 87 on the banking list, and I don't know how many come after us," she added.

The computer gives the Bank of Charleston six-digit account numbers. The first two numbers are an alphabet code, with a special number designated for business accounts. A business account number starts with 01. Last names beginning with A through D start the number with 10 or 11, F through G are assigned 20 and 21, and so on, Hennigh said.

The middle three numbers in the Bank of Charleston's account numbers are in sequence.

The last number "is an auxiliary number," she said. "I'm not sure how they get them, but I think it's because the computer is set up for six numbers."

Yet another series of numbers that have been of increasing interest to Eastern students over the past two years are found in a major sport, football. Apart from those all-important numbers on the scoreboard, football jersey numbers are what most spectators train their eyes on.

"There definitely is a system and purpose for jersey numbers," Panther Offensive Coach Jeff Gardner said.

Gardner explained that each playing position has its own group of numbers. Numbers one through 19 are reserved for quarterbacks, 20 through 45 for running backs, 50 through 60 for centers, 70 through 79 for tackles, and 80 through 99 for receivers.

The system of numbers is used universally, Gardner said. "I have no idea how it was started," he added.

The system is useful because it aids in identification. The audience can follow favorite players, and the coaches are able to recognize positions at a glance. The system helps officials call penalties also, Gardner said.

A football player at Eastern keeps the same number all four years, "unless they want to change it, or they move to another position," he said.

Once in awhile a player will want the number of another outstanding football player. "If someone else already has the number, they have to wait until that person graduates," Gardner said. "It doesn't happen very often, though," he added.

Avoid sweets—It's National Nutrition Month

by Lisa Stedelin

Ready, set, go! It's National Nutrition Month. Send up the fireworks, celebrate and above all eat right. The American Dietetics Association decided a week was not enough to spotlight nutrition and its importance so the entire month of March is devoted to you, your health, and good nutrition.

The idea of National Nutrition Month is to point out the importance of nutrition to your health. More people are becoming aware of this fact. However, a lot of people still have poor eating habits which lead to poor nutrition. Every effort should be made to change. Correct eating habits make you feel better, look better, and leads to good health.

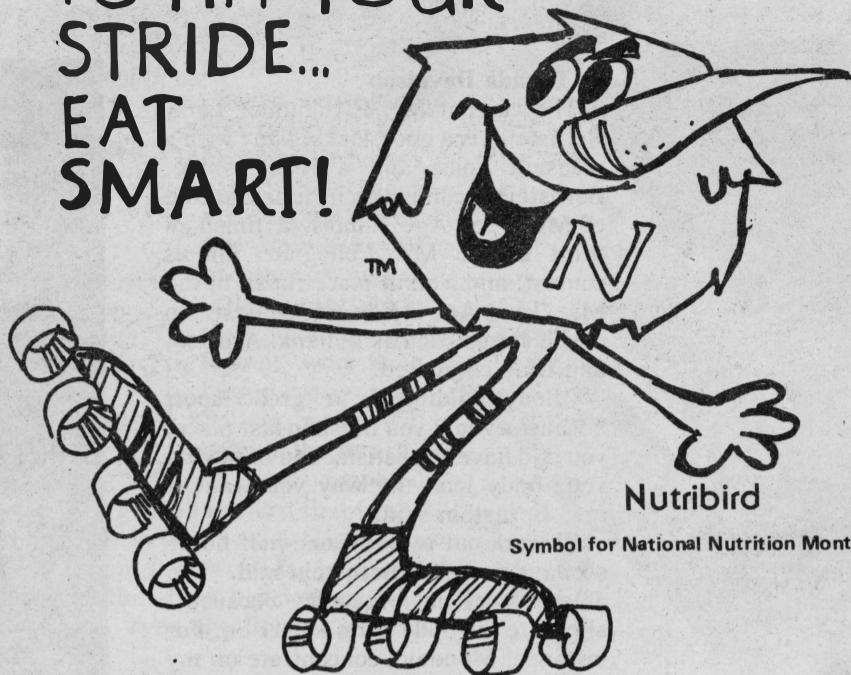

Good health, according to the World Health Organization, is the "state of physical, mental, and social well-being and not merely the absence of disease or infirmity."

Good nutrition provides the body with foods that give us optimum health with the ability to grow and perform well. The six nutrients we need for adequate nutrition and good health are protein, carbohydrates, fats, vitamins, minerals and water. All these nutrients are needed to maintain basic life processes. Some of these processes are providing heat and energy, supplying growth material and assisting in the regulation of the body processes.

No single substance will give what is needed to maintain health. The nutrients are dependent upon each other to give total health. A way to obtain these necessary nutrients is a varied, balanced diet and that means the Basic Four. The Basic Four assures good nutrition.

The Basic Four is divided into four groups: the Meat group, Milk group,

TO HIT YOUR STRIDE... EAT SMART!

Grain group, and Fruit and Vegetable group. There are certain requirements for each group that should be met daily.

A person is recommended to consume two or more cups daily to meet his needs. Two or more servings should be chosen from the meat group, four or more from the vegetable-fruit group, and four or more from the grain group. After these are met, other foods can be chosen to meet calorie needs.

This guide allows one to meet his needs and still suit individual tastes. This combination of grains, meats, fruits and vegetables, and milk will give you the nutrients needed and the ultimate goal—good health. Our happiness, well being and lives depend on this.

OK. What's all this good nutrition going to do for you? You want results, well here they are.

Good nutrition will:

1. Provide your body with needed nutrients for good health.
2. Your general health will be excellent.
3. Your weight will be under control.
4. There is less chance of nutrition-related diseases such as heart disease, obesity, diabetes, and hypertension.
5. Your physical appearance will be very good.

- eyes clear
- hair shiny
- skin clear
- muscles firm

6. Your resistance to infection will be higher.
7. Emotionally you will be more stable.
 - full of energy
 - sense of well being
 - outlook on life will be better

Make nutrition an asset. Choose foods to contribute to these assets. This is the month to start. Make a change in your life with good nutrition. Get the facts on good nutrition and the Basic Four and use it to your benefit. In the long run the benefits will be great.

Support National Nutrition Month. Do something to support it. Choose your foods better. Cut out a few desserts. Eat more fruits and vegetables. Give up soda for a month. Lose some weight on a balanced diet. Change your snacks from sugary, high-fat ones to naturally sweet fruits. Even a small change adds up.

The U.S. Surgeon General has stated: "It is essential that we strive to promote and maintain optimum health for our people nationwide through good nutrition and physical fitness."

National Nutrition Month is aimed to get people on the right track. Now is the time to begin. Be aware of what good nutrition is and what it can do for you. Celebrate this month and eat to live!

Mr. EIU doesn't mind

by Brenda Davidson

The current Mr. EIU, junior Larry Bernstein, is a good-looking guy with a pleasant voice and a ready smile. Bernstein's conquests include the title of Mr. Teen-Age Illinois, a finish of third in the Mr. Collegiate Illinois contest, and a sixth-place finish in the Mr. Teen-Age Midwest contest, in which states such as Indiana, Arizona, and Ohio competed.

"Body-building is a great sport because even if you finish in last place, you still have the satisfaction of having your body look the way you want it to," Bernstein said.

"I work out two and one-half hours six days a week," Bernstein said. "I'm able to work out every day because I alternate the body parts I work on. For instance, Monday I concentrate on my chest, back and calves. Tuesday I work on my shoulders, arms and stomach, and Wednesday I'll work on my legs. Then I start all over again the next day," he explained.

"I still get sore when I push myself too hard," Bernstein said. "There's not a day that goes by when some part of my body isn't sore. But it's a kind of soreness that feels good because I know I'm staying in shape."

"Sometimes I just don't feel like working out all six days," he said. "That's when my friend, Terry Conroy, tells me to keep going. Terry also helps me as a choreographer when I work on a posing routine for competition. Whenever one of us wins in a contest, it's like both of us share in the win because we help each other so much."

Conroy placed second in the Mr. EIU contest last year and seventh in the Mr. Collegiate Illinois contest.

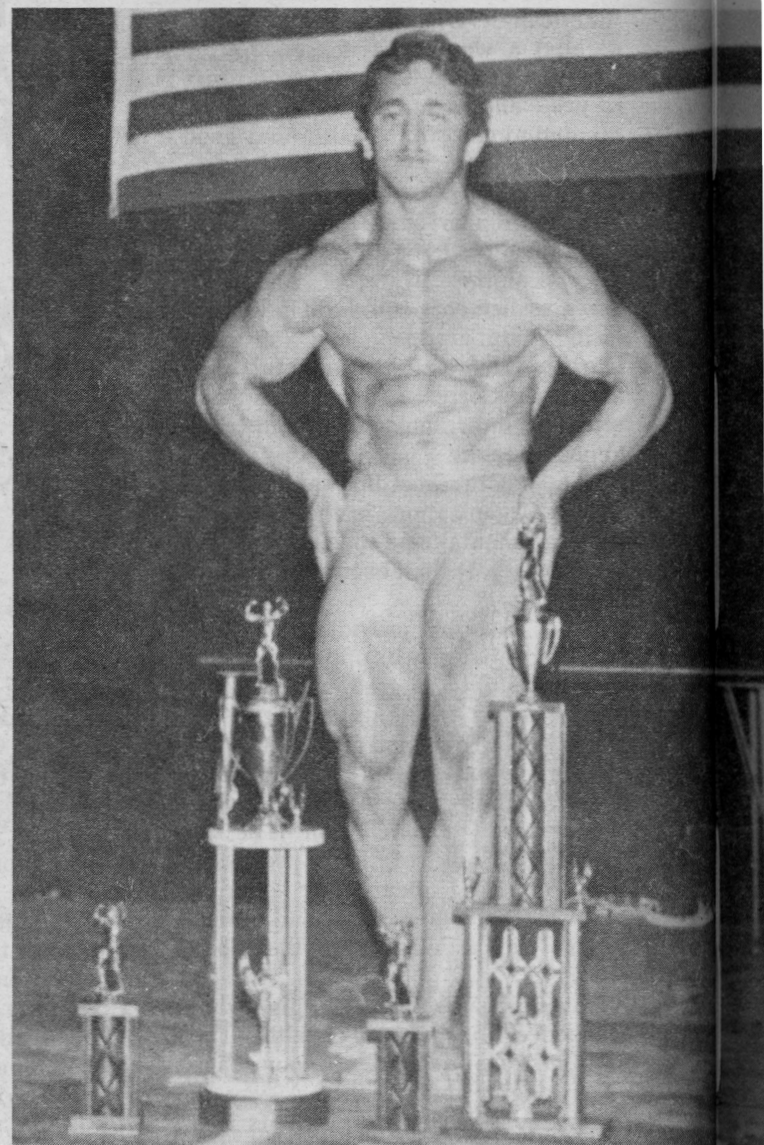

A University Board spokesman said the UB is tentatively scheduling a second Mr. EIU contest for sometime in April.

Bernstein's training includes a strict diet and an increase in repetitions.

"I follow a low-carbohydrate diet that cuts fats and carbohydrates to a minimum and I take vitamins," Bernstein said.

Larry Bernstein boasts the title of Mr. EIU, as well as hailing a third-place finish in the Mr. Collegiate Illinois and a sixth-place finish in the Mr. Teen-Age Midwest.

filled with different kinds of vitamins covers Bernstein's chest of drawers in his bedroom.

"I want to emphasize that I have never taken steroids in my life," he said. Steroids are a type of hormones which aid in phenomenal muscle growth and weight gain.

"When I'm training, I increase my repetitions (the number of times one lifts a weight in one set of lifts or presses) from four sets to five sets of ten to twelve repetitions," he added.

"I also do negative movements which is a stricter movement of holding the weights for as long as you can and then letting them down slowly," Bernstein said.

Another thing Bernstein does is avoid alcohol. "You can't drink if you go out and drink. When I go to the bar I order grapefruit juice instead," he said. "People ask me about drinking, but it doesn't bother me."

"If you weightlift properly and don't stretch out afterwards, you might get muscle-bound," Bernstein said. "I took a yoga class to learn to stretch," he added.

Some people believe that once you stop lifting weights your muscles turn to fat. Bernstein believes that is not true. "The muscle is made of protein which may deteriorate but it doesn't turn to fat," he said. However, he does may start to look flabby after a while.

"When I quit, I'll do so gradually and take up something else to replace lifting weights," Bernstein said.

"Some individuals think that flexing muscles is a joke. They don't realize that you have to be graceful, like in ballet," he said. "A dance instructor on campus helped me with my poses," he added.

Bernstein started benching 75 pounds when he was 13, using some equipment owned by him and a friend in a basement.

"When I went out for hockey in high school, I found myself at a disadvantage because the other players were bigger than me," Bernstein said. "So I concentrated on lifting weights to build my strength."

Bernstein went on to become a two-year hockey all-stater, and his high school team, Homewood-Flossmoor, advanced to second in the state.

After high school, Bernstein took up body-building because his gym promoted it, he said.

Bernstein's picture appeared in Muscular Development Magazine after he became Mr. Teen-age Illinois in June. He was cited for having the best back and chest.

In preparation for a contest, all of a person's body hair is shaved off so it won't detract from the muscles, Bernstein said.

"We're not allowed to use oil during a contest, but a suntan helps. Usually I use something like Coppertone if I haven't got a tan," he added.

Most body-building contests are an all-day affair, starting at about 10:30 a.m. During pre-judging, the judges look first at each contestant individually, and then at the group as a whole to determine which men have the best body parts, Bernstein said. Before the pre-judging everyone is backstage benching weights and getting pumped up to look their best, he added.

That night, the public comes in with their tickets to see the awards given out, he said. The short division gives its posing routines and is followed by the tall division. After everyone finishes posing, the best five "pose off."

Each contestant still does his best because the judges earlier decisions are kept secret, Bernstein said. If one guy is only a little better built than another contestant who is a better poser, the better poser will receive the award.

"I had competed against the guy who placed first in the tall division before. So I was really happy when I was made both the winner of the short division and the overall Mr. Teen-age Illinois," Bernstein said.

Mr. EIU is not just another handsome face.

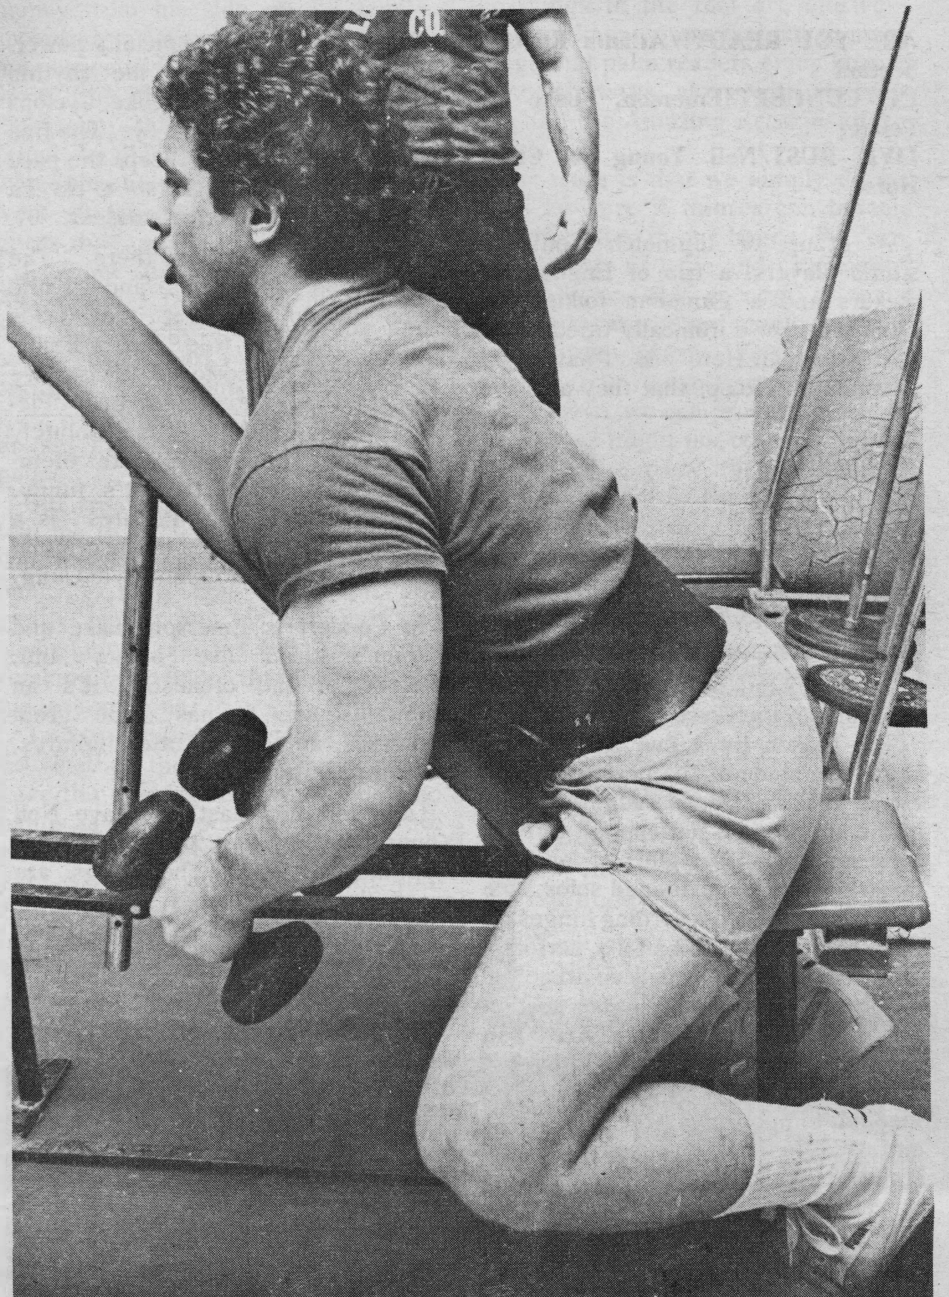

"I'm majoring in marketing because although I enjoy body-building, I want to have a profession too," Bernstein said. "I don't want to be thought of as a muscle-head."

There's no off-season in body-building, unlike other sports. So you always have to work out, Bernstein said.

"I'm hoping to find a gym in Las Vegas during the March marketing trip," he added.

Having a body that can win contests isn't everything it's cracked up to be sometimes.

"Clothes are a problem because I have to get everything altered by a tailor. I have a 29-inch waist, but my legs are so built up that I have to wear 32-inch pants to accommodate them," Bernstein lamented.

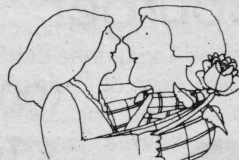

Bernstein performs an exercise to keep his muscles at peak condition. The belt is to prevent hernias. (photo by Ed Gray)

ARS, ELP & Young Live: These are for the fans

ARE YOU READY!/Atlanta Rhythm Section
IN CONCERT/Emerson, Lake & Palmer
LIVE RUST/Neil Young & Crazy Horse

A group of top-notch Southern studio players, a trio of English art rockers and a Canadian folkie who Cameron Crowe ironically titled "The Last American Hero" don't have a lot in common. Except that they all have

Album Review

by John Stockman

live albums out now and my general reactions to the three are similar.

The reason for a live album is to show some side of the performer that can't, or hasn't, been caught on tape in the studio. It is not enough to do a representative sample of songs, throwing in a few extended solos. The credibility of a live recording hinges on the emotional impact of its performance. How intense was it on stage?

Where the Atlanta Rhythm section is concerned, not very. Are You Ready! is the epitome of "laid-back." Which works part of the time. The medium tempo songs like "Doraville" and "So In To You" shine in this atmosphere. "Georgia Rhythm" is especially good.

But when it comes to real rockers, ARS is short of balls. The rhythm breaks in "Sky High" drag the song down. It really gets bad when the band does "Long Tall Sally" for an encore. The Section falls far short of the Beatles' frantic version. And singer Ronnie Hammond doesn't have the pipes to even approach Paul McCartney's vocal.

Emerson, Lake and Palmer manage to generate a little more excitement. In Concert was recorded on their 1977 tour with a 70-piece orchestra at Olympic Stadium, Montreal. After the brief "Introductory Fanfare" ELP launches into Henry Mancini's powerful "Peter Gunn," where the rhythm section lurches forward like Cyclops after Ulysses stabbed his eye. The fine "Tiger In A Spotlight" keeps the pace rolling until Greg Lake's "C'est La Vie," which absolutely sparkles.

It's all downhill from there. "The Enemy God" is average and "Knife Edge" doesn't deliver the goods suggested in the title. Keith Emerson's "Piano Concerto No. 1" is more pleasant than I expected, but "Pictures At An Exhibition" is absolutely ponderous. These guys take themselves so seriously that it's funny. Clocking in a 15:29, "Pictures" is a Reader's Digest version of the original album but it's still 15 minutes too long.

In Concert is Emerson, Lake and Palmer's third live album and, because of the orchestra, it's an ambitious set. It has some great successes and some utter failures, with little in between.

Last, but not least, we have Neil Young. On its own Live Rust is a monumental work. The songs are great, the performances transcendent. "When You Dance I Can Really Love" and "Tonight's The Night" especially outstrip their studio versions.

But let's put this in context. Live Rust is Young's third live album and his second in six months. It was recorded from the same tour as Rust Never Sleeps and four songs appear on both albums. Of Live Rust's remaining 12 tracks, nine appeared on 1977's Decade. Conceptually, Live Rust seems almost pointless.

A combination of the new material of Rust Never Sleeps and the old stuff on Live Rust would have made a better document of the Rust Never Sleeps Tour. For the person looking for the best introduction to Young, Decade is still the definitive album.

Live Rust is for Neil Young fans, In Concert for ELP fans and Are You Ready! for ARS fans. All are good albums, Young's is great, but all have an essential flaw that doesn't make them good buys for everyone.

Is palm reading any more than a novelty?

I don't know exactly what I expected. Maybe some beaded curtains, bangle bracelets or possibly a rose tattoo. What I didn't expect, however, is the nice little white house where Miss Ann, Charleston's very own palm reader, has her legitimate place of business. Somehow it just seemed too ordinary and commonplace a home for a woman who predicts futures.

I have to admit that when I first heard of Miss Ann's opening, I was curious, but kept telling myself that a practical, logical person doesn't let curiosity get the best of her. Therefore, going "undercover" as a reporter gave me precisely the mental protection I needed. I had a reason for being where I was.

After timidly knocking on the door, I entertained notions of forgetting the whole thing. For instance, what if Miss Ann told me my future was doomed? What if her dire predictions came true? What if she read this column and remembered me...and tracked me down to tell me I stood absolutely no chance now? For me, practicality and logic never withstand the actual challenges I put them to.

In person, Miss Ann is young, small and dark. She looks a little like I imagined but without the bare feet and earrings. She does have an accent, but I could not personally pinpoint its origin.

Leading me into a room totally devoid of furniture except for two straight-backed chairs, Miss Ann proceeded to lay bare my past, present and future. (Whether or not I believe in her abilities, I must say I've never looked at my palms with such awe before.)

If I am not mistaken, I think Miss Ann passed her own hand over mine before she began. That pause gave me enough time to gear myself to remember as much as possible of what she was going to tell me.

I am going to live a long life, probably somewhere in the late 70s. She foresees no sickness or death in my family and pointed out that my ancestors had lived long lives. For the most part, they have.

I was not "destined to have many lovers," said Miss Ann. Yet, there is compensation in everything I guess, since I am going to meet the man of my dreams this year. Perhaps out of nervousness or the need to hear my own voice, I interjected that I'd better speed up the pace if that was the case. Looking at me without a smile, Miss Ann replied mysteriously that there was nothing I could do about it. This man is going to come to me—it is in my palm. In addition, he is going to be in the same profession as I am—but he will hold a "higher rank" than I.

She continued to tell me that I do not like to be used, that I will do a lot of traveling with the man I love, who will not be overly religious.

I work with my hands, am strong-minded, and I "am longing for something I do not have" which incidentally, I will not find around Charleston. There is a loneliness inside of me and I am not truly satisfied within myself.

Miss Ann explained that I do not like to sit still—I always have to be doing something and am "always on the go." I will be neither rich nor poor, but happily situated between.

My father was cheated out of some money from his side of the family, according to Miss Ann. This intrigued me especially, because I couldn't verify the truth right away. After discussing this at length with my father, he did admit to losing out on a watch that belonged to his mother but went to his sister-in-law instead. I guess that applies.

I cannot say whether or not Miss Ann's future predictions for me are true, but her "present" ones are close enough to the mark to satiate a healthy curiosity. I did think the predictions were rather general, but then maybe I do not have "specific" lines in my palms.

Our session ended when Miss Ann told me that "the main thing is, you will have a long and healthy life, honey." With that statement, she gently curled my palms shut and wished me the best of luck. I can't help thinking, somehow, that her wish for me was genuine.

To most people the issue here would be whether the woman does indeed have the "God-given power" to read palms as she purports, or if the entire practice of palm reading is a hoax and she can't tell you more about your future than a Ouija board.

I fall into a not-so-unique category: the group of people who know they should not believe in such a questionable art, and certainly would never tell their friends that they might. Yet in the end, many of us are attracted to the things in life that are elusive—today we know so much about so many things that palm readers enjoy kind of a special status, along with clairvoyants and the Amazing Kreskins of the world.

The truth is that we simply do not know for sure if futures can be told from the lines in our hands. We can, using plenty of logic and practicality, speculate on the success of palm reading or any other practice that is beyond our grasp. Yet the truth remains that we can't prove anything.

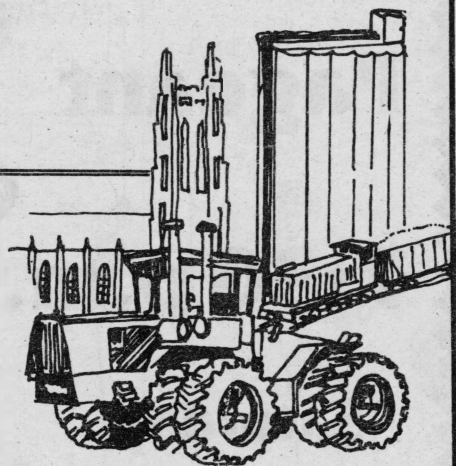

Of course, we can prove that certain predictions might not occur or did not occur in the past, thereby striking down any belief in palm reading. But after a visit that I'm sure I will remember to tell my three children about, I have to admit I'm pleased my future looks so bright—at least to Miss Ann.

Caped, dyed chickens fly the coop for race...

SAN JOSE, Calif. — It was fly or fry for flocks of fowls as some 100 chickens fought for victory in the community's first chicken race.

The event, sponsored by a local radio station, drew more than 500 spectators Saturday at the Santa Clara County fairgrounds as the chickens battled to break the world record of 297 feet, 2 inches set in 1977 by "King Flewk," an Ohio chicken.

Some of the contestants were brought in elaborate cages. Others came in brown paper bags. One was dyed purple and another wore a small cape.

Under the rules of the race—sponsored by station KOME—the chickens are placed in a rural-style mailbox on a stand, which has no front or back. The contestant's owner uses a toilet plunger to prod it out the other end.

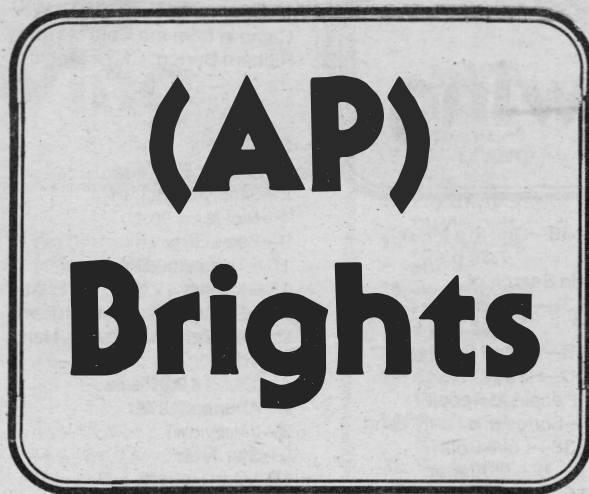

At the end of the event, the winner for best overall fly in the lightweight category was Margo, owned by Mark Duval. The bird flew 52 feet, 3 inches. The fowl's effort brought Duval $200 in prize money and a golden chicken trophy.

Andy Horti's bird Herbert wore a black cape. "Without his cape, he's an ordinary mild-mannered chicken," Horti said.

Santa Clara Humane Society General Manager Betty Trickett called the event "barbaric" because it "places undue stress and trauma on the chickens for no purpose except to exploit the animals."

...while controversy dampens pig Downs

MONTROSE, Colo. — Harold Hamhock, the fastest pig in the world, barreled across the finish line in record time in the finals of the Swine Downs All-American Pig Races.

But much of the limelight Saturday was stolen by patriotic local pig owners, who refused to race their animals against Russian boars which out-of-staters wanted to enter in the race.

The Russian boars were disqualified.

A second protest, by an irate pig owner whose pig lost Friday in a photo-finish race without the photo, delayed the race for hours. The unhappy owner soaked the 65-foot dirt track, causing the delay.

Harold raced to victory in front of more than 2,000 fans who jammed the bleachers, overflowed onto the entrances of the fairgrounds and strained for a glimpse of the races from the rooftops of nearby buildings.

For many fans, the race took second place to hamming it up for television personalities on hand to film the race.

The record-breaking time in the final race was 3.75 seconds, which is how long it took Harold Hamhock, owned by the Montrose Consumers Feed and Grain Co-op, to race from the starting gate to the finish line and on to the pan of waiting feed.

TV Tarzan swings as Miss America emcee

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. - Television Tarzan Ron Ely swung into his new role as the replacement for Miss America emcee Bert Parks Wednesday by proclaiming that women are superior to men.

"I don't think women are equal," Ely said. "I think they're superior. I think the pageant is a celebration of womanhood...and a celebration of the spirit of the country."

Meanwhile, Parks wished Ely good luck in the job he held for 25 years, but added, "Imagine that, going up into the trees to get someone."

Ely, 41, who was television's first Tarzan from 1966 to 1969, is now host of the syndicated television game show, "Face the Music." He said he won't sing "There She Is" like Parks did each year in Atlantic City.

Robin Smith rides into Fred Astaire's heart

NEW YORK — Actor Fred Astaire says his dancing days are over, but he is preparing to waltz down the aisle with jockey Robin Smith, according to ABC News.

The 80-year-old entertainer said in an interview with ABC's Barbara Walters at his Los Angeles home that remarriage had not occurred to him since his first wife, Phyllis, died of lung cancer at age 46 in 1954.

However, that changed when his interest in horse racing brought him in touch with the 35-year-old Smith about eight years ago and they eventually became "very, very, very good friends."

Asked about the age difference between himself and Smith, Astaire said: "It never occurs to me. I don't even think about it that way...It has nothing whatsoever to do with it."

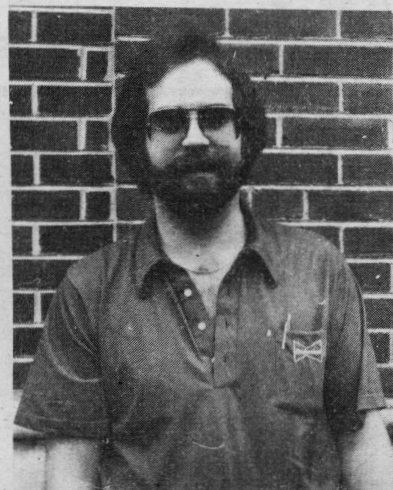

A marriage date was not disclosed.

Lutz nominated as tentative dean

by Holly Headland

A suitable candidate for the position of dean of the School of Education has been found, Fred Preston, head of the search committee for a new dean, said.

Preston said he is trying to contact Frank W. Lutz, who is currently a professor at Pennsylvania State University, to invite him to Eastern in the middle of next week to be interviewed for the position.

"If he's acceptable to everyone, a decision could be reached almost immediately," Preston said. If Lutz is accepted, the committee hopes to have him in the position by April, Preston added.

Lutz, a professor of education, is a senior member of the graduate faculty and a former director of the division of education policy studies at Penn State. He will be interviewed by the search committee when he arrives, Preston said.

Lutz will also meet with the heads of the various departments in the School of Education, deans, and vice presidents of Eastern and President Daniel E. Marvin, in his one and a half day visit, Preston said.

After Lutz answers questions from the committee and the faculty, they will evaluate him and turn in the evaluations into the committee, Preston said.

"He's an excellent candidate," Preston said. "I think the faculty will be pleased with him and it may make other interviews not necessary."

The search committee has been working since October, 1977 to find the new dean.

The position of dean of the School of Education will be a permanent one. The final candidate will replace Harry Merigis, who took a leave of absence at the end of last semester.

Music students present recital

Eastern music students Thomas Bowen, Kathy Patterson and LuAnne Trantham will present their junior recitals at 2 p.m. Friday in Dvorak Concert Hall.

Bowen will play two trumpet selections, mezzo-soprano Patterson will sing selections by Schumann, Franz and Bononcini, and Trantham, a soprano, will sing a selection by Mozart and three selections by Schubert.

meet," Moore said.

Despite all of the setbacks the 1980 track team has suffered, Moore said it is not giving in.

"We are trying to keep our composure and not bring them (the injured tracksters) back too soon," he said. "I've learned through experience that you have to allow time for them to heal."

Returning to the line-up after a week's absence is sophomore Joe Snyder. Snyder was out last week with an injured leg. He will compete at 9 p.m. on Friday night in the 600 yard run. And if all goes as expected he will run again at 2:55 p.m. Saturday in the finals.

Running in the 60-yard dash at 6:30 p.m. Friday will be Augustine Oruwari, Ray Wallace, and Clayton Branch. Oruwari qualified in 6.3 and both Wallace and Branch at 6.4. Oruwari is also entered in the 60-yard dash at 8 p.m. Friday

Eastern runners set for the 440-yard dash are Merrill Kaney and Kevin Kramer. They will run at 8:30 p.m. Friday and if they win they will run in the finals at 2 p.m. Saturday. Kaney is eligible for the met via a very respectable 49.8 clocking.

Bob Feller (1:54), Mike Clark (1:56), and Pat Hodge (1:56) head the list of entrants in the 880-yard run, which will get underway at 3:20 p.m. Saturday. Feller also qualified in the 1,000-yard run in 2:11.1

In the mile run Mike Moore (4:16.3), Perry Edinger (4:12) and Joel McKinney (4:16.2) all met the qualifying standards. The mile is scheduled at 1:40 p.m. Saturday.

team injuries to occur.

"Because of injuries now, our bench has been drained and we basically only have one regular player we can use. That is Jean-Claude Druetz," Foellmer said.

The rest of the starting line includes Dean Sanders, Fred Martin, Randy McDaniel, Mark Atkinson, Dave Gabriel and Foellmer. Gary Stewardson will be taking over front line responsibilities for Foellmer during play.

Women cagers topple Wisconsin-Green Bay

GREEN BAY, Wis. — Joann Archer tallied 24 points and Linda Ellsworth threw in 20 to lead Eastern's women's basketball team to a 70-58 victory over the University of Wisconsin-Green Bay in the first round of the regional tournament.

The Panthers will now play the University of Charleston (West Virginia) in second round action at 9 p.m. Friday.

The Panthers had trouble adjusting to the style of officiating in Green Bay, but still managed to take a 30-28 halftime lead before struggling to victory.

"We had a major adjustment to make from officiating in Illinois to the officiating here. We were getting hit a lot," head coach Bobbie Hilke said.

Consequently, Hilke said the physical nature of the game helped cause Eastern to shoot only 36 percent from the field for the contest.

"It was not a pretty game to watch," Hilke said.

Still, the Panthers were able to persevere behind 69 percent free throw shooting and some key second half steals by Nancy Kassebaum.

"We had some clutch steals by Kassebaum toward the end of the ball game. Then we used the clock to our advantage and held on at the end," Hilke said.

In addition to scoring 24 points, Archer grabbed 10 rebounds for Eastern.

Marvin to recommend fee increase in grants-in-aid, but not operations

Eastern President Daniel E. Marvin said Thursday he will recommend to the Board of Governors that a student fee increase be instituted for grants-in-aid, but that he will not recommend an athletic operations fee increase.

"I intend to take to the Board (of Governors) the grant-in-aid increase as recommended by the Student Senate. I will not ask for a fee increase for operating costs."

Eastern students defeated the operations fee increase proposal by 53 votes in an advisory referendum on Feb. 20. The grants-in-aid proposal passed by 153 votes in the same referendum.

"Since no increase (in operations) will occur, ticket prices may be recommended to go up," Marvin said. But the Eastern President added "I would not favor any substantial increase in the price of tickets."

Assistant Eastern Athletic Director Ron Paap said Thursday ticket price increases are "something that's being considered."

A final decision on whether to initiate a ticket price increase proposal rests with new Eastern Athletic Director R.C. Johnson, Paap said.

H.S. track meet at Eastern Saturday

The third annual Girl's Indoor High School Invitational track meet will be held at 9:30 a.m. Saturday at Lantz Fieldhouse. Approximately 700 athletes from 68 Class A and AA schools will participate in the meet. Admission is $2 for the general public and $1 for all students with valid identification.

"The Class AA competition should be very close," Eastern women's track coach John Craft said. "Both of the East St. Louis schools (Lincoln and Senior) should battle it out for first place again this year."

Trackmen prepare for Illinois Intercollegiates

by Matt Davidson

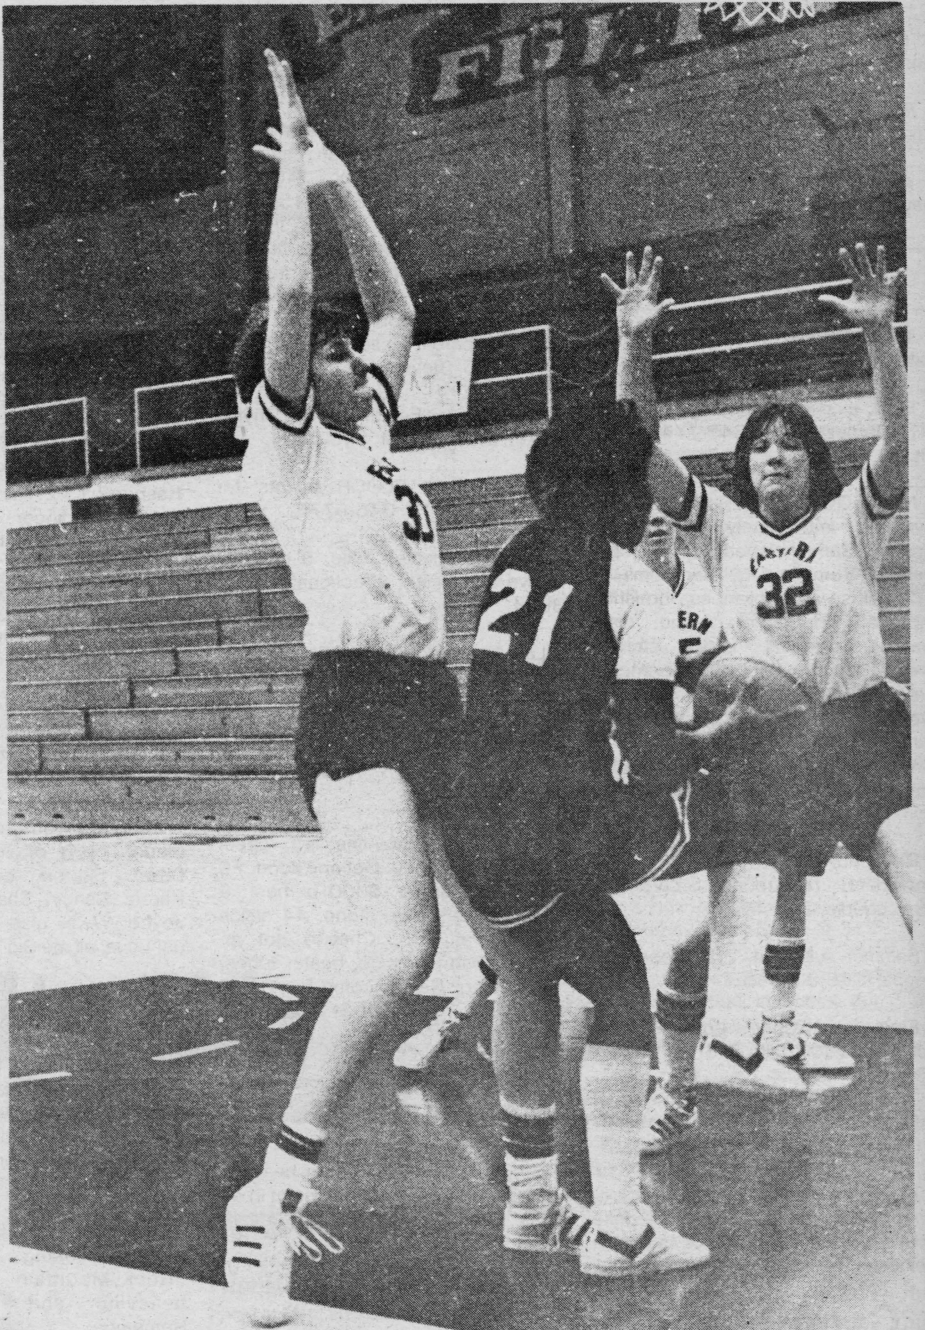

With schools from all over the state entered, Eastern's men's track team will compete in the Illinois Intercollegiate Indoor Championships at 4 p.m. Friday and 11 a.m. Saturday at Champaign.

The intercollegiate meet will be the last date for anyone to qualify for the NCAA Division I Indoor Championships on March 14-15 in Detroit, Mich.

The Panthers appear to have their work cut out for them if they are to gain the third place finish they attained a year ago. In the 1979 Illinois Intercollegiate, Eastern placed third out of the 21 teams entered.

Eastern Volleyball Club hosts invitational

by Jane Meyer

Eastern's men's volleyball club hosts its own invitational this weekend as Midwest Intercollegiate volleyball action continues.

Teams that will participate in the meet are Illinois State University, the University of Illinois, Chicago Circle and Wheaton College.

Play gets underway at 8:30 a.m. Saturday with Eastern facing Illinois State.

Eastern also plays at 9:15, 10 and 10:45 a.m. against Wheaton, Circle and its own junior varsity squad respectively.

Bracket play begins at noon. Final and consolation games begin at 1:30 p.m.

Of the three teams, Eastern has beaten UICC two times this season and has beaten ISU six times, including round-robin action. Eastern also suffered a loss to ISU. Eastern's record stands at 7-4.

Club President Mark Foellmer said Eastern's toughest competition should come from Wheaton, whose team is backed by a host of veteran players.

"They have a year of experience together, which is a big asset," Foellmer said. "Everyone's season heads into its final month and the pressure is on to get into the finals."

The finals that Foellmer is talking about are the MIVA championships on University of Illinois have proven their ability so far this year. SIU recently won the Missouri Valley Conference Indoor track title, while the U of I placed third in the Big Ten Indoor Championships.

Independent Illinois State has also been in the spotlight. Its strength is evident in the longer distances as the Redbirds won the cross country meet among state schools in 1979.

Eastern head coach Neil Moore gave his views on the outcome and caliber of competition in the meet.

"The meet is designed to determine an Illinois intercollegiate champion," Moore said. "It is good for the track program in the state. It gives us a quality meet without traveling."

Moore left no doubts as to who is the favorite.

"Illinois is the team to beat," he said. "We all want a crack at Illinois. We will be trying to claim that third spot which we have become accustomed to. But with our aid reduction and our injury situation it will be extremely tough to achieve our goal."

Due to injuries, Eastern will be without the services of Reo Rorem, Bob Johnson, and Sam Moore. Transfers Damon Phelps and Mpaka Fyneface are ineligible for the intercollegiate meet because of a new NCAA rule.

"It is a special NCAA rule. If you are a transfer and you did not qualify for the national meet, then you cannot compete in the state intercollegiate April 12 in Michigan.

Foellmer said the top three teams in each division receive bids in the championship. Eastern is placed in the West division which Foellmer said is the toughest.

"Our chances of reaching the finals hinge on this weekend's performance as well as the March 22 competition at Northern," Foellmer said. "At Northern we will be facing the top four teams in our division so this will be a crucial point in the finals' determination."

With the pressure of the finals on, Foellmer said now is not the time for
