Legality unclear on decision of mayor to up bar entry age

by Susan McCann

The legality of Charleston Mayor Clancy Pfeiffer's recent threat to prohibit anyone under age 21 from entering city bars is unclear.

Several attorneys questioned Thursday said they were unsure whether the mayor, as liquor commissioner, has the power to change a city ordinance related to alcoholic beverages.

However, Pfeiffer said Thursday that City Attorney Tony Sunderman contacted an attorney who said the "liquor commissioner can change the age (for entry into the bars) without a vote" by the city commissioners.

Sunderman was out of town Thursday and could not be reached for confirmation and further comment. Attorney Bill Warmoth, who is handling Sunderman's duties in his absence, said, "I would not want to comment on (the issue) without thoroughly examining the municipal code."

State's Attorney Nancy Owen said she was unsure whether the mayor had the right to change a city ordinance without city council approval.

Student Legal Service Adviser Steve Davis said, "I just don't see how he could have the power to do that."

"I'd think you'd run the risk of a lot of contradictions in law if you allowed the mayor to change ordinances," Davis added.

The current practice in Charleston is to allow persons between 18 and 21 years of age to enter bars, although the city code restricts admission to persons at least 19 years of age.

The section of the code dealing with bar-entry age requirements states, "It shall be unlawful for any licensee to permit or allow any person under the age of 19 years of age to frequent any premises" where li-

Mayor unsure how to change rule

by Ed Mazzocco

Although Charleston Mayor Clancy Pfeiffer said Monday he may raise the bar entry age to 21, when contacted Thursday, he said he "did not know" how the requirement would be enforced.

Pfeiffer said he did not know if he would have to pass a new ordinance or simply amend the current one to change the age for entering bars.

There is also some confusion as to who informed Pfeiffer that he, as liquor commissioner, could raise the entry age without a vote by the city council.

Early Thursday evening Pfeiffer said one of his advisers talked with an Illinois Municipal League attorney in Springfield.

According to Pfeiffer, the adviser said the attorney said Pfeiffer could raise the age to 21, even though a Charleston city ordinance states that individuals can be 19 and 20 to enter bars.

However, another Charleston ordinance states that no ordinance can be changed without the agreement of the majority of the council.

When contacted a second time Thursday, Pfeiffer said Charleston City Attorney Tony Sunderman contacted a Chicago liquor commission attorney—not an Illinois Municipal League attorney as he had earlier stated.

On Monday, Pfeiffer said he had received "numerous" complaints about underage people entering bars. On Thursday Pfeiffer said the possibility of raising the entry age stemmed from discussions with three community residents, Charleston Police and past problems with underage patrons entering bars.

One of the residents, Charleston National Bank President James L. Archer, said Thursday he would agree to a 21-year-old age requirement but was not sure if it would solve vandalism problems.

quor is served, with the exception of bowling alleys and restaurants.

Olga Durham, commissioner of public health and safety, said this section of the municipal code was written in 1964, when the state law permitted the sale of beer and wine to 19 and 20-year-olds, but has not been amended.

Jerry Owens, spokesman for the attorney general's office in Springfield, said Thursday Illinois law now states that alcohol may only be sold to persons 21 or older, but the law does not address the issue of age for entry into bars.

Owens said city ordinances would therefore govern the admittance of persons under 21.

Although Pfeiffer recently threatened to change the current ordinance, Public Property Commissioner John Beusch said, "If it's codified, (Pfeiffer) can't change that without consent of the council, unless there's some special power of the liquor commissioner that I don't know about."

Durham said, "I suspect he (Pfeiffer) could order raids, but as far as changing the law goes, he'll have to come before the council for that."

"(Former mayor Bob) Hickman always brought matters to the council and abided by majority vote. He never took any actions like that without emergencies," she added.

Max Cougill, Charleston mayor from 1969-73, said, "The mayor cannot change or create an ordinance without a council vote."

However, Cougill added, "It is a possibility that as commissioner he can create rules to solve problems and enforce the laws."

and shrubbery uprooted, Archer said.

Archer noted that a few years ago when the drinking age was raised to 21 the amount of vandalism did not change.

Pfeiffer said complaints from Charleston police and previous problems with underage people entering bars also caused him to try to remedy the situation.

Pfeiffer said he met with some local bar owners last week to discuss the problems of underage entry, reports of vandalism and police frustration at not being able to enforce the state's 21-year-old drinking age.

Pfeiffer said he is allowing bar owners to try to solve those problems on their own, adding he has not set a time limit on when the problems must be resolved.

He said several bar owners have formed a committee to try to persuade Pfeiffer not to raise the age.

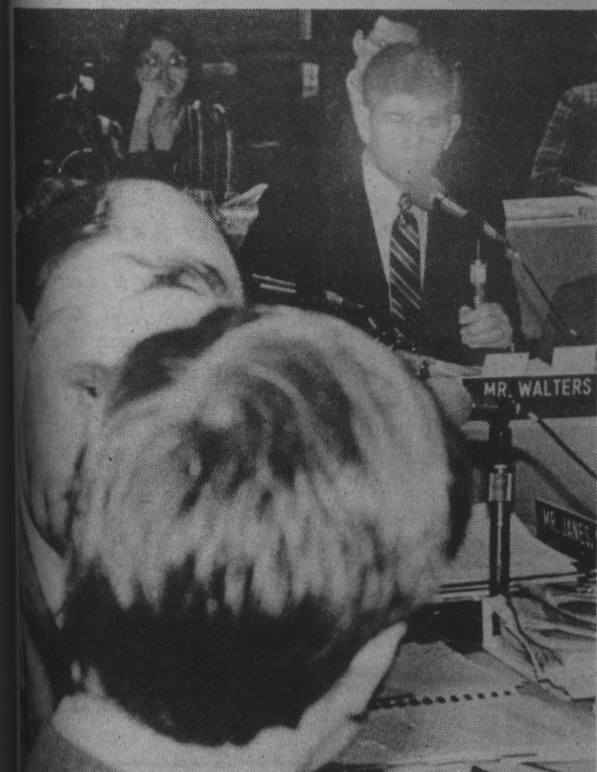

Bar owners contacted recently, including Ted Bertuca of Ted's Warehouse, Dave Kinniard of Mother's and Marty's, Mike Knoop of The Uptowner and Cellar, John Ward of Roc's and Ike Kennard of Ike's Little Campus, refused to comment on the situation.

Opinion divided

Two former Charleston officials have come out in agreement with former Charleston Mayor Bob Hickman in saying that the city planner's position should not be eliminated. One official said the planner should be retained to help the mayor. The other former official said the original addition of the planner 10 years ago moved the progress of Charleston ahead by years and that taking away the position would set the city back.

Council passes credit-no credit

by Nancy Yamin

A proposal to eliminate Eastern's pass-fail option and institute a credit-no credit system was approved by the Council on Academic Affairs Thursday with a 5-3 vote.

CAA Chairman David Buchanan said the proposal must be approved by Eastern President Daniel E. Marvin and the Board of Governors to go into affect.

If the proposal receives further approval, students who receive a grade of A, B or C in a course they take under the new option will receive hourly credit for the course and CR (credit) on their transcripts.

A student who receives a D or F in a course will receive no hourly credit and a NO CR (no credit) on their transcripts.

If approved, Buchanan said the new system will not take affect until the summer of 1985 because the 1983-84 general catalog is already in process of being printed.

At a previous CAA meeting it was suggested that the course name be deleted from a student's transcripts if he received no credit for the course. However, the section was removed from the proposal because transcripts are legal documents and can not be altered.

Two CAA members voiced dissatisfaction about the proposal's approval.

Sociology instructor Ron Wohlstein, who voted against the proposal, said his main concern was that the proposal should include giving course credit for D grades.

CAA member and Student Senator Gail Redeker also voted against the proposal and thought other students would be "very upset" over the new option.

In other action, the CAA approved SPN 4202 "Advanced Spanish Composition." Buchanan said the course focuses on reading Spanish literature and writing compositions in Spanish.

Also, by consensus the CAA agreed to change the general catalog's definition of C to read "average" rather than "fair."

Buchanan said the catalog definition was changed to be consistent with grade reports and transcripts.

Committee against Reagan plan

WASHINGTON—The Senate Budget Committee, in open defiance of President Reagan, voted 17-4 Thursday to slash his Pentagon buildup in half. A "deeply disappointed" Reagan asked it to be reconsidered, but the panel's chairman laid blame for the president's defeat at the White House door.

The committee's plan grants the Defense Department an increase in spending authority of 5 percent after inflation for fiscal 1984, in contrast to Reagan's demand for a 10 percent hike.

Court convicts traffic murderer

EDWARDSVILLE, Ill.—An East St. Louis man may be the second person in the history of American courts to be convicted of murder charges for causing a fatal traffic accident, the judge who presided over the case said.

Donald Hill jr., 23, remained in the St. Clair County Jail Thursday in lieu of $300,000 bond. A county circuit court jury convicted Hill Wednesday of killing William D. Havlen and his wife, Ruth, both 45, of Washington Park, by crashing his car into theirs while he was being chased by a police officer last Dec. 16.

Spectator heckles Washington

CHICAGO (AP)—Democrat Harold Washington, feeling the heat of mounting criticism in a tightening and increasingly bitter mayoral campaign, Thursday lashed out angrily at a heckler who needled the candidate about a past indictment for failure to file income-tax returns.

At an afternoon stop at Northeastern University, a man began heckling Washington about not paying his taxes—the congressman pleaded no contest in 1972 to a four-count indictment for failing to file federal income tax returns—and the Democrat blew up.

"Go to hell," Washington said. "Who said I didn't pay taxes? I didn't go to jail for not paying taxes."

When the man said he read of Washington's legal problems in the newspaper, Washington responded, "Everything in the papers is true. That's why you're so dumb."

Two astronauts walk in space

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla.—Tied to 50-foot leashes, two astronauts made the first U.S. space walk in nearly a decade Thursday, floating joyously around Challenger's open cargo bay to practice repair jobs for future shuttle missions.

The astronauts, Story Musgrave and Don Peterson, protected from their hostile environment by their new $2.1 million spacesuits, planned to spend 3 1/2 hours at their task.

Musgrave nearly swung himself over the side of the space ship, doing a handstand on the rail, restrained by his tether. At times, television showed the Earth spinning 176 miles below them.

Peterson immediately went to a box and removed tools specially designed for space use. Both astronauts flexed their arms and moved their legs to evaluate the mobility of their suits.

About a half hour before they ventured out, President Reagan placed a radio-telephone call to Commander Paul J. Weitz. Reagan told Weitz the mission "serves as a symbol, I think, of our commitment to maintain America's leadership in space."

BOG committee to find Marvin replacement

Sheila Billerbeck
Daily Eastern News correspondent
SPRINGFIELD—The search for a replacement for Eastern President Daniel E. Marvin is now underway. The Board of Governors Thursday appointed a search committee to look for a new president for Eastern. Marvin's resignation, which he announced March 17, will become effective June 30. BOG Executive Director Donald Walters, who was appointed adviser of the presidential search committee, said he does not believe Marvin's replacement will be named until October. The committee will begin advertising for presidential candidates in the Chronicle of Higher Education and various newspapers throughout Illinois and the country April 18, Walters said. He speculated the new president "will probably not come from Illinois." Walters, who has advised five presidential searches in the past eight years, said he could not recall any Illinois university presidential positions being filled by candidates who were Illinois residents. "Statistically, they generally don't come from the state of Illinois," Walters said. Walters will meet with members of Eastern's faculty and student senates Monday to set up a campus advisory committee.

The campus search committee will allow the campus and community to participate as an advisory group in the selection of a new president, Walters said. "We (the board) will be working with this advisory committee towards a common goal, to find the best president possible for Eastern," Walters said. "This will truly be a joint effort." The campus search committee will consist of 17 members, including a representative from Faculty Senate, six faculty members, one of Eastern's vice presidents, a dean, a professional non-union administrator, a department chairman, three students, two civil service workers and Eastern's Alumni Association president. Walters said he hopes to establish the campus advisory committee by May 2. Nancy Froelich, BOG presidential search committee chairman, said she believes Eastern will attract a large number of applicants for the presidential post. "Eastern is recognized as a quality university and should have no trouble receiving responses for President Marvin's position." Other BOG search committee members include BOG Chairman Dominick Bufalino, Lowell Fisher, William Hoffee and Evelyn Kaufman.

Marvin: students may pay more costs if tax hike fails

Crystal Schrof
Daily Eastern News correspondent
SPRINGFIELD—If Gov. Jim Thompson's fiscal year 1984 budget is approved, Eastern students may pay up to 45 percent of the cost of their education. Eastern President Daniel E. Marvin said the Board of Governors Thursday said if Thompson's proposed tax package is not approved by the Illinois General Assembly, almost half of Eastern's FY 84 operating budget would have to be generated by tuition. Marvin said, "Only two years ago, the Board of Higher Education required students to pay for one-third of their education." Thompson has asked the General Assembly to increase the state's income tax to 4 percent, place a 3.5-cents per gallon tax on gasoline, increase the state's liquor tax and raise car license fees and truck taxes to correct Illinois' budget shortfall. Thompson's proposed $1.2 billion higher education budget for 1984, $87 million below this year's level, calls for a $500 tuition increase. Under Thompson's proposed budget, Eastern would receive $17.7 million in general revenue funds. The allocation would require Eastern to generate $12.6 million through tuition and fees. Eastern's tuition would have to be increased by 62.7 percent under Thompson's proposed budget. BOG Executive Director Donald Walters called Thompson's budget the "doomsday budget" and a "budget of neglect." "Thompson's budget has literally frozen higher education in time and space," Walters said. Walters told the BOG that Thompson's proposed budget is "not an acceptable budget." "We hope the cuts won't be a precedent; once is bad enough," he said. The governor's proposed tax plan must be passed in order "to prevent a crisis to higher education," he added. Walters noted, "It would be less harmful to raise taxes than not to and let higher education slip away." "There are going to be a lot of people who can't go to a four-year public school," he said.

"The people of Illinois deserve more," Walters said. "With this budget it will be impossible to provide space or opportunities to students." "The public policy on higher education is in question as to who will have access to higher education," he said.

Planner required for city to prosper

The Charleston City Council should not consider eliminating the city planner position.

The council began discussing the possibility of redesigning or even eliminating the position following the firing of former City Planner Larry Stoever.

Duties of the planner position, which pays $28,000 a year, include working extensively with the city budget, applying for monetary grants and advising the city on zoning matters as well as being a full-time, readily accessible city employee.

Mayor Clancy Pfeiffer has said he believes elimination of the position is possible because it may be unnecessary, and he has suggested delegating the duties of the position to other city officials.

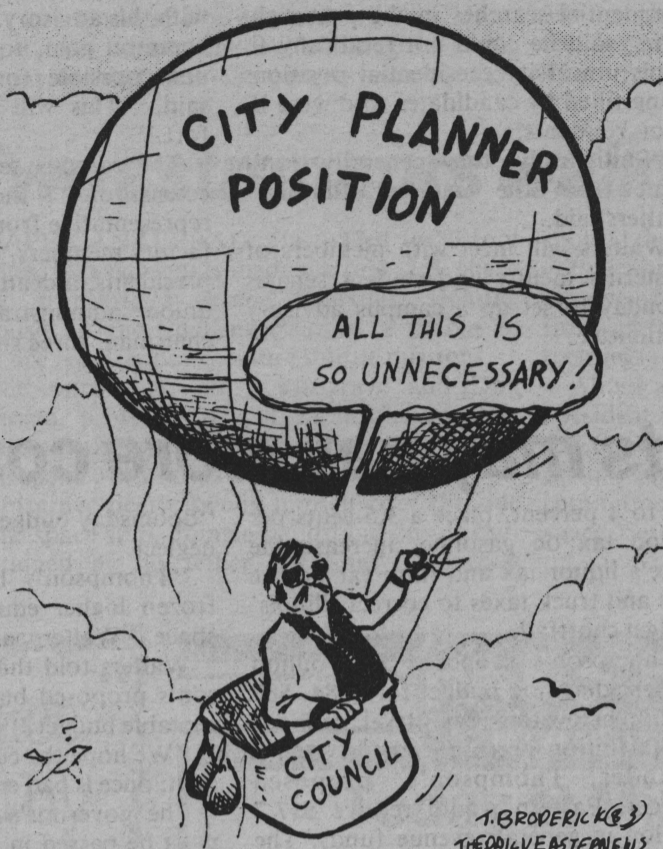

But how can Pfeiffer possibly think a city with a part-time mayor and council is not in need of a full-time person to look after its economic welfare? It seems quite obvious that Charleston needs a full-time professional familiar with city budgets, grant applications and surveys to keep abreast in the continually changing economic climate of our country.

Pfeiffer has suggested that the city's budget duties could be delegated to City Clerk Patsy Loew, but the position of city clerk is a full-time job. How can Pfeiffer think that Loew will be able to spare the time and attention needed to work out an effective city budget?

Former Mayor Bob Hickman has stated he believes Loew "has neither the time nor the ability" to handle the city budget.

Hickman also said Loew would "need a lot of help" to prepare the budget. And although Pfeiffer has suggested that Finance Commissioner Jim Wickham could aid Loew with the budget, neither Wickham nor Loew have any practical experience working with city budgets.

Another city planner duty that neither Wickham or Loew have experience dealing with is the job of applying for state and federal grants. Applying for these monetary grants is a very complicated process requiring the expertise of a professional who is knowledgeable in the field of municipal finances.

Editorial

If someone with no qualifications or experience tries to tackle the difficult job of applying for grants it is quite possible that, through their incompetence, the city could lose thousands of dollars in grant money.

Former Mayor Hickman has said that currently the city council has no one with the "expertise" to apply for a grant.

Without the aid of state and federal grants, Charleston will probably not be able to make itself as attractive to outside businesses and industry and will not prosper financially.

So it seems that although the city council is bent on saving $28,000 it could, instead, be costing Charleston thousands of dollars and a chance to grow into a more prosperous community.

Is it worth it?

This week's question was asked by H.E. Meeker. Photos by Vince Schroeder.

Stop library meetings

Editor:

As I sit here on the third floor of the library, I wonder why the library bothered to hang two signs saying "Quiet Please."

Because I have had four tests within the last two weeks, I have found myself sitting on the third floor from 4:30-7:30 p.m. trying to study. The reason I go so early is so I can find a seat and get peaceful studying done before the 6:30 p.m. rush.

Past letters about the noise and arrangement up here never really meant anything to me until now. Everyone talks in the library and everyone knows it is a social gathering, but why must groups of students gather in the middle of studying students to discuss presentations?

At the moment, 7:15 p.m., there are two tables of students talking about class, missing group members and, would you believe, the order of presentation.

I could understand them meeting in here to do research together, but I can't figure out why they can't do this somewhere else.

I have done several group presentations, but have always managed to stay out of the library for meetings. Some places to go are students' rooms or apartments, the Union, Hardees, even the bars.

I would go there, but there are outside disturbances. Therefore, I might as well stay in the library.

I am not alone in feeling the library set-up needs help, so why does someone not do something?

Wake up people!

Editor:

I really can't believe this campus. The only issue the students on this campus are worried about is Mayor Pfeiffer's threat to raise the age limit to get into the bars.

Even the Student Senate is joining in with a special committee to look into the problem.

Wake up people! I can't believe you all are so rich as to be able to afford the proposed $500 tuition hike for next year. And you can bet money on the fact that tuition won't be the only thing they raise.

Get off your bar stools and fight for something really important.

Former leaders voice opinion on city planner

by Keith Clark

Two former Charleston leaders have joined former Charleston Mayor Bob Hickman in saying they believe the Charleston City Council should not eliminate the city planner position.

Former Charleston Mayor Max Cougill said he believes the council should retain the city planner post to assist the mayor in handling city affairs.

Cougill, who served as Charleston mayor from 1969-73, appointed recently-fired City Planner Larry Stoever to the position three months before he left mayoral office.

During Cougill's tenure as mayor, a referendum calling for the creation of a city manager post was placed on the ballot but was voted down.

The city council then hired Stoever as city planner to handle many of the duties a city manager would have been delegated.

Bill Browning, who served as president of the Charleston Chamber of Commerce from 1964-70 and also 1973-79, also said he "has no doubt in his mind" that the planner position is vital to the financial well-being of Charleston.

"Adding the city planner position moved the progress of the city of Charleston ahead by years," Browning said.

"If they cut the position, they will have taken away something that was very progressive," he said.

Browning noted that after the defeat of a city manager referendum several years ago, the chamber of commerce and city council worked to inform Charleston residents that a planner was needed for the town to progress industrially.

He said he believes that although the city would have to pay the planner's salary, an efficient planner would be able to generate a much larger amount of grant revenue.

Browning also said he believes the duties of the planner cannot be delegated to other city officials.

Former Charleston Mayor Bob Hickman told the Daily Eastern News Wednesday he believes the planner's position should not be eliminated.

Other cities may raise bar entry age

by H.E. Meeker

Charleston is not unique in allowing patrons under 21 years of age into drinking establishments. Several Illinois college communities have similar age requirements which allow persons under 21 years old to enter bars.

Currently, the cities of Macomb, Carbondale, Urbana and Jacksonville allow underage patrons in drinking establishments, but three of these communities may soon raise their age requirements.

Charleston Mayor Clancy Pfeiffer is considering raising the local minimum age requirement for entrance to bars from 19 to 21.

Macomb Mayor Robert Anstine said Macomb, home of Western Illinois University, currently allows 18-year-olds to enter bars. However, Macomb may only allow 21-year-olds in the future.

"We are reviewing the age regulation again. Having the age limit 21 would make enforcement a lot easier," Anstine said.

Anstine said restaurants which serve liquor have difficulty enforcing the 21-year-old drinking limit.

At least five Macomb tavern owners have prohibited underage customers from their establishments on their own to avoid the license suspension, Anstine said.

"They didn't want to bother with underage drinkers and worry about possible suspension or loss of their liquor licenses," he added.

A Carbondale assistant police chief, who asked not to be identified, said Carbondale, home of Southern Illinois University, currently allows 19-year-olds in taverns. However, enforcement problems may cause the minimum age for entrance to be raised to 21.

"At this point 19- to 21-year-olds can enter, but we're presenting possible changes. We've had a great deal of difficulty in dealing (with the underage drinkers) especially in our strip area," he said.

An Urbana police official said 18-year-olds may enter Class A bars. A Class A bar sells liquor for consumption on the premises or package sales.

There is currently no enforcement problem with the age requirements and no proposals to raise the age requirements, he said.

Jacksonville, location of MacMurray College and Illinois College, allows 18-year-olds into establishments serving liquor.

Jacksonville Mayor Milt Hocking said Jacksonville also has no proposals at present to raise the minimum age for entrance.

"Our main concern is teenage drinking with 16-, 17- and 18-year-olds," he said.

Hocking said local hotels, motels and bowling alleys with liquor licenses have problems with underage customers.

But Hocking said raising the entrance age to 21 would only cause more problems.

Hocking added that some businesses are checked for underage drinking violations approximately once a week.

Officials offer thoughts on bar situation

by Michael Kuo

Changing a city ordinance to prohibit people under age 21 from entering Charleston bars could mean more headaches for law enforcement officials, a Charleston commissioner said Thursday.

Mayor Clancy Pfeiffer's recent threat to change the city's liquor ordinance could "take people into a situation where they take the liquor out into the parked cars and the country lanes," Commissioner of Public Health and Safety Olga Durham said Thursday.

Durham said she thinks raising the age for entering bars would create more "serious" problems than problems related to underage drinking that currently face Charleston police.

"There's no way state and local police could keep an eye" on underage drinkers if the city were to prohibit under 21-year-olds from entering bars, she added.

Durham also said she doubted that vandalism statistics would decrease as a result of the move. "I don't think it's age involved with vandalism; it's the state of intoxication," she said.

Charleston Police Chief Maurice Johnson said he had "no idea" whether vandalism would decline if the city adopted Pfeiffer's proposed change.

Pfeiffer said last week one of his main reasons for proposing the 21-and-over rule was that he had received "numerous" calls complaining about vandalism caused by intoxicated people.

However, when later questioned, Pfeiffer said he had received only three calls from citizens.

Pfeiffer also said last week he had heard that officials at Eastern "are concerned the students will tear the place up" if the city adopts the 21-and-over proposal.

He added that he would "look into that" before making a final decision on the matter.

But Eastern's Housing Director Lou Hencken said Thursday there would be no vandalism increase in Eastern dormitories if the 21-and-over proposal took effect.

Currently, "the most damage is done when students come back from the bars," Hencken said. "It wouldn't matter where the drinking was done."

Vice President for Student Affairs Glenn Williams said there would "certainly be more people staying on campus" if the 21-and-over proposal became law.

The students would "want more activities on campus," Williams said. "I'm not sure what the cost would mean for that."

Campus Police Chief John Pauley would not comment on whether the 21-and-over rule would affect university security.

1900-2100	M-1900	T-1900	W-1900	R-1900	—

- Final examinations are scheduled on the basis of the first class hour meeting of the week irrespective of whether the first hour is classroom or laboratory activity.
- Final examinations for multiple-hour classes are scheduled on the basis of the first hour of the multiple-hour block.
- A M- or T- prefix indicates whether the first class day of the week is Monday or Tuesday. For instance, M-0800 indicates the scheduled time for the final examination in a course having its first class-hour meeting of the week at 0800 on Monday, R-1900 is for a class having its first class-hour meeting of the week at 1900 on Thursday, etc.
- Final examination periods indicated in the above schedule as "Makeup or Arranged" are to be used only in cases where:
 - The first class hour meeting of the week does not conform to the schedule patterns established herein.
 - The meeting of the class appears in the Summer Term Class Schedule as "ARR."
 - The student presents an approved examination change request.
- Final examinations for one semester hour courses may be given at the discretion of the instructor and, if given, should be scheduled for the last regular class meeting of the term.
- Final examinations for courses numbered 4750 or above may be given at the discretion of the instructor and, if given, are to conform to the schedule patterns established herein.

- Final examinations are to be given in all courses unless specifically exempted under the provisions of #5 and/or #6 above or by departmental recommendation to, and approved by, the Council on Academic Affairs.
- Students may not deviate from the published final examination schedule written approval of the Dean, Student Academic Services.
- Instructors may not deviate from the published final examination schedule without written approval of the department chairperson and Dean of the School or College according to guidelines established by the Vice President for Academic Affairs.

Eastern's women track team will rely on its distance runners Friday against the five-team Dog and Cat Fight in Carbondale.

The distance runners have been exceptionally well," Panther coach John Craft noted. "Gina has been running extremely well."

Eastern's 10,000-meter runner Friday's meet coming off a country season and a first-place finish in last week's SEMotion tion to the long distance runner. He said he has a fine group of runners who will do a good job.

Our sprinters have been overshadowed by the great efforts of the distance runners," Craft explained. "Our sprinters have put in excellent performances also."

What we would like to beef up is the sprint events," Craft added. The Panthers sprinters will have Eastern's golf team anticipates making a respectable showing Saturday as it competes against some of the finest golf squads at the Illinois in Champaign.

"I don't think this is a tournament we can win," Eastern head coach Anglin said. "This tournament gives our team the opportunity to test good competition."

The Panthers will compete Saturday against teams from the Big 10, the Valley, Mid-American and the Association of Midwestern Universities.

Anglin said his primary goal for the weekend are to beat the host team of Illinois and AMCU rival Eastern Illinois.

Eastern beat Illinois last fall here, but it should be tough since they are playing on their home course," Anglin said.

Friday's meet marks Eastern's second in the spring campaign. Last year the Panthers placed seventh in the team Cougar Invitational at Southern Illinois-Edwardsville.

Ferris, who shot a 2-over-par 75 for a fifth-place finish at the Cougar Invitational, enters this weekend's play with the Panthers.

their hands full Friday against the University of Missouri, Northwestern University, Southern Illinois University-Edwardsville and Southern Illinois-Carbondale.

"The University of Missouri will be the odds-on favorite to win the meet," Craft said. "Because of its overall strength, I think second place will be a battle between Carbondale, Northwestern and us."

"SIU (Carbondale) will be strong in the sprints," Craft continued. "The question mark is Northwestern. Judging by its cross country team it looks like Northwestern has beefed up its track program, also."

"But I think the difference will be the overall quality of our track team," Craft added. "When Missouri doesn't win an event I think we will be in position to take it."

Craft said he thinks the Panthers can match last season's second-place finish behind Missouri.

"It should be a good competition if the weather is nice," Craft said. "Last year we did well and it was our first meet. This year it is our second meet and it really helps a lot to have that first one under your belt."

Softballers falter against nationally-ranked Hoosiers

by Kathy Leahy

BLOOMINGTON, Ind.—Eastern's softball team fell to nationally-ranked Indiana University 5-1 and 2-1 in a non-conference double-header Thursday.

"We did not play well," Eastern head coach Deanna D'Abbraccio said. "They, on the other hand, did. It's that simple."

"They (Indiana) did a good job with hitting, but we couldn't put the ball down when we had to. We were just hitting the ball right to them," she said.

"Although they have played a lot more games than we have, the whole team is very disappointed with the two losses," D'Abbraccio added.

In the first game, Indiana took an early lead, scoring two runs in the first inning when Linda Thaler hit a triple with two Hoosier runners on base. The Hoosiers added two more in the second inning, with the fifth run coming in the third frame.

Senior Sally Wood was the winning pitcher for the Hoosiers, facing only 24 Eastern batters and retiring 20 in a row. The win boosts Wood's record to 11-3.

Wood appeared to have a no-hitter until the top of the seventh inning when Eastern's Mary Tiegs got on base with a double. Senior Nancy Kassebaum followed with a double to score Tiegs from second for the Panthers' lone run.

In the second contest, Eastern's only run came in the third inning when a Tiegs ground out scored Ridgway from third.

Panther Kathy Richards (1-1) took the loss in the first contest, while junior Donna Ridgway (1-1) was the losing pitcher in the nightcap.

The Panthers' offense was keyed by Kassebaum, who was one for three in the first game and two for three in the second contest, extending her hitting streak to five games. She currently sports a .563 batting average.

"Nancy played very well in both games," D'Abbraccio said. "But we can't be relying on just one person to come through for us."

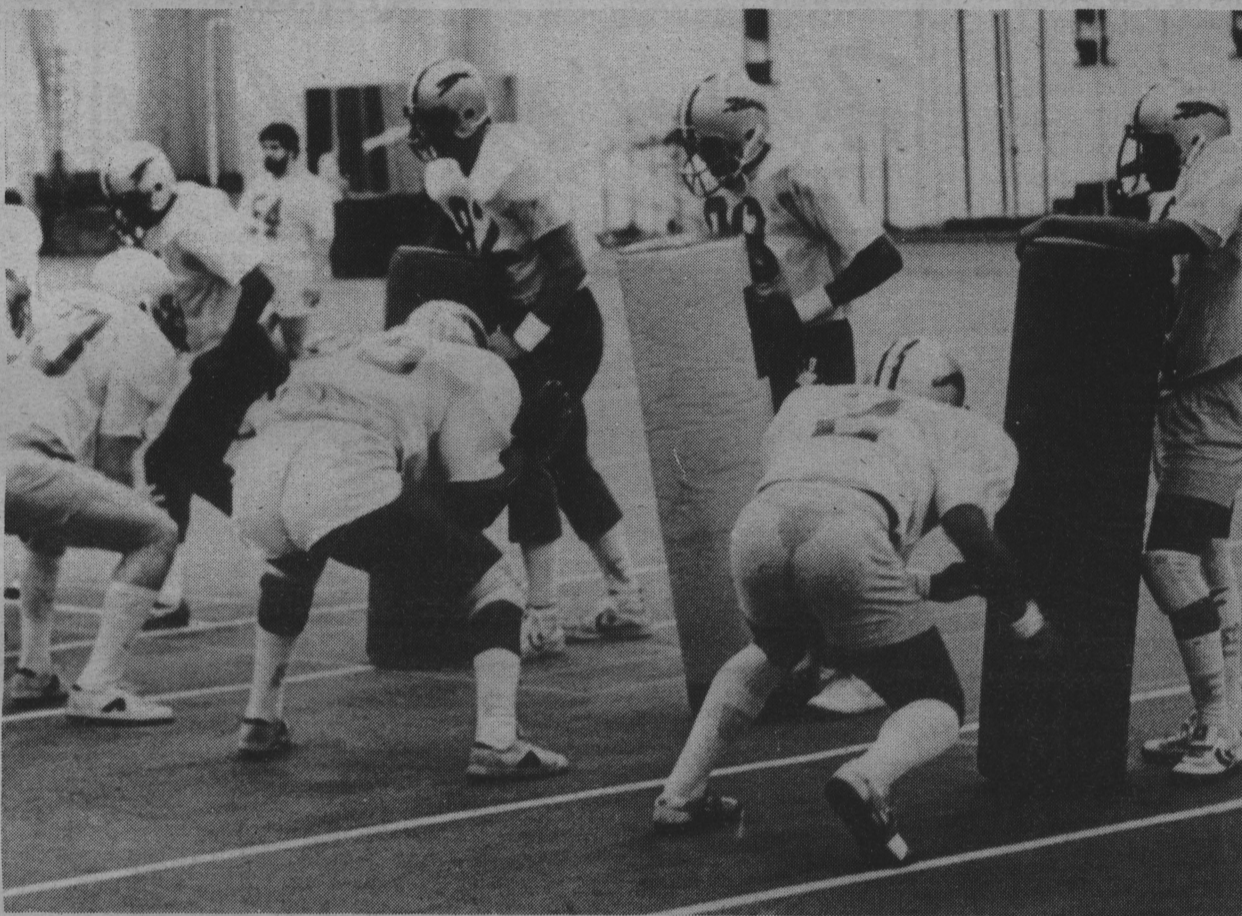

Eastern will now turn its attention to the 12-team Redbird Tournament at Illinois State Friday and Saturday. The Panthers are scheduled to face Southern Louis University at 10 a.m. in the opening round of the tournament.

"This tournament features a lot of good teams, so it should be a tough one," D'Abbraccio said.

Men tracksters entertain 18 teams in hosting relay, decathlon meets

by Rhea Nall

The EIU Relays Saturday will mark the Panther tracksters' lone home meet of the year, with a nine-man decathlon Sunday and Monday rounding out the runners' 1983 appearances at O'Brien Stadium.

The 18-team non-team-scoring relays, which Eastern head coach Neil Moore termed as "a very competitive meet," are slated to begin at 11 a.m. Saturday.

The meet will feature Big Ten members Purdue University and the University of Wisconsin. In addition, Parkland Community College, a strong junior college squad, will compete.

"It's a quality meet," Moore said. "There is a possibility of a 17-foot vault, a 200-foot hammer throw and there should be some very good shot and disc throws."

Moore added that this will be a good test for his younger tracksters to see how they can compete. "We will be very representative, I think."

"Our best shots will be in the 1600-meter relay, in the shuttle hurdle relay and we should do well in the shot," Moore explained. "I think we will be in contention in most of the relays."

Eastern could do well in the high hurdles, 100-meter relay, and the 200-meter relay. "We have a lot of younger people who are coming along and this should be a good meet for them," Moore added.

The meet will also feature NCAA decathlon runner-up John Sayer from Southern Illinois-Carbondale. Sayer, a possible 1984 Olympian, is scheduled to compete in five events.

The two-day decathlon is set for 1 p.m. on Sunday and 10 a.m. on Monday. There will be nine competitors in the competition, including three Panthers.

Freshmen Velton Alston, Tom Linsay and Rick Scheuring are scheduled to compete for Eastern. Moore commented that the trio is typical of this year's team's youth.

"It looks like a real tight competition with a lot of rookies," Moore said. "This is the first time for all these freshmen, with this being a growing year."

"This meet can evaluate the younger runners to see if they have got what it takes," he added. "This is a unique meet."

The decathlon will begin Sunday with the 100-meter dash, followed by the long jump, the shot put, the high jump and the 400-meter dash. The event will conclude Monday with the 110 high hurdles, the discus, the pole vault, the javelin throw and the 1500 meters.

Panthers play inconsistently in ISU twinbill

by Mike Lynch

NORMAL—Eastern's baseball team showed two totally contrasting styles of play Thursday in splitting a rescheduled double-header with Illinois State.

In the opener, the Panthers demonstrated the ability to rally back from a three-run deficit to post a non-conference victory over the host Redbirds.

In the nightcap, however, Eastern (8-6) was unable to maintain a 4-0 advantage as Illinois State (11-3) scored nine unearned runs in the fifth inning to mount a 9-6 triumph.

Eastern senior Kevin Gordon started the opener but was quickly relieved after yielding four runs in one and two-thirds innings.

Gordon left the game Thursday because of a groin injury, which Eastern head coach Tom McDevitt said created problems for his hurler.

McDevitt substituted sophomore Mick Freed, who pitched brilliantly in relief of the injured Gordon. Freed earned the Panthers' eighth win of the season after allowing one run and four hits in the final two frames.

Eastern began the scoring in the opener on a first-inning double by center fielder Troy Harper, scored by second baseman Steve Hall who had singled.

The Panthers eventually crossed the plate three times in the third inning to overcome a 4-1 Illinois State lead.

Hall lead off the third inning with a single and was followed by shortstop Brian Jones who also singled. Following back-to-back singles, Eastern tied the score at 4-4 with three consecutive run-scoring singles.

Third baseman Kevin Seitzer, right fielder Bertram and Harper led Eastern's scoring barrage. Moments later, Eastern rolled to 5-4 lead on a sacrifice fly by first baseman Jeff Yocum.

The Panthers tallied their final two markers in the fourth inning to preserve the non-conference win.

In the inning, freshman catcher Tim Torricelli led off the inning with a homerun, while Kevin Seitzer was hit by a pitch and advanced to third on a sacrifice by Jones.

Smith eventually scored when Illinois State's Steve Boehm, who registered the Redbird setback, walked on a wild pitch. The hosts concluded the game by scoring with a run in the fifth inning.

In the nightcap, Eastern standout pitcher Mark Crutcher (1-1) breezed through the first four innings, allowing only two hits and retiring the first six batters he faced.

Eastern led 4-0 entering the fifth, but Illinois State came to life to record nine unearned runs. Led by the Eastern downfall was four walks and three fielding errors, which allowed 13 Redbirds to score on bat.

Meanwhile, Eastern used five pitchers to stop the Redbirds in the fifth frame. But the damage was irreparable as Illinois State rallied to post a 9-4 lead.

Nina—home 'maid' honey

by Kerri Niemann

Although her job title is maid, occupants of the residence hall where Nina Kesler works have referred to her as friend and mother.

Kesler is a maid for 8th, 9th, and 10th floors of Carman Hall.

Originally from Charleston, she has worked as a building service worker at Eastern for 16 years.

During the seven years she has worked in Carman hall, Kesler has established good relationships with the residents of her floors.

"I like the girls because they're congenial, and they aren't very messy. They really are respectful in keeping the floors clean after I'm done," she said.

"The girls are always welcome to come to me if they need help, even if it's just a tip on how to do laundry," she said.

Sophomore Dawn Fernandez, who lives on 8th floor Carman said, "I don't consider Nina a maid, she's more like a friend."

Another 8th floor resident, Freshman Gail Hoeft, described Kesler. "She's kind of like a mother figure. She's always stopping by and asking how we are."

"I enjoy the work because of the people," she said, "I don't miss out with so many young people around."

Kesler also takes her cleaning very seriously and takes pride in

BSU pageant to feature black history, culture

by Beth Kenny

The Miss Black EIU Pageant, to take place Saturday, is more than a traditional beauty contest—it is a showcase of black history and culture, Coordinator Booker Suggs said.

"The Miss Black EIU (Pageant) is basically of historical and traditional value. We want to express the achievements and radiance of black women," Suggs said.

The event, which has been sponsored by the Black Student Union for seven years, enables black women to compete in an exhibition devoted entirely to them.

The pageant will feature a talent competition, a dramatic prose reading, a display of African attire and a choreographed dance performed by all the contestants.

Suggs said the pageant will be a worthwhile experience for both blacks and non-blacks. "The pageant shows another facet of culture, and that is what college is about, learning about all different types of people," he added.

Seven judges from the Springfield, Champaign and Chicago areas will select the winner. "This gives a more objective look at the candidates," Suggs said.

Although she has not yet made a commitment, Dana Waddell, co-anchor and co-producer of WAND in Decatur, may participate as one of the pageant judges.

The young women vying for the title include freshmen Leona Chew and Jackie Campbell, sophomores Jan Derrick and Carla Adkins, junior LaJoyce Hunter, and senior Almetris Shulligan.

The pageant is scheduled for 7 p.m. Saturday in the Union Grand Ballroom. Admission is $2 and proceeds will go to the BSU.

Harry Read—the man behind the letterhead

by Gary Bray

To most people the three R's mean reading, writing and arithmetic, but not to Harry Read.

For Read, Eastern's own Mr. Information, the three R's mean reading, writing and racing—harness horse racing, that is.

Read goes to horse racing tracks as often as he can, even though he is not a jockey or trainer, and has never raced.

However, Read's job as director of the Information and Publications office has forced him to race to meet deadlines.

He has always been interested in racing, though, and one of his most cherished accomplishments is an article he wrote for Hoofbeats, the best of the horse racing magazines.

The article was a profile of a jockey who was also a college professor, not a prominent profession for jockeys. That jockey later quit his job as college professor to race horses full time.

In his office in Old Main, Read keeps his article from Hoofbeats, along with a picture of one of the mares he has owned.

Also in Read's office is an autographed picture of St. Louis Cardinal catcher Darrell Porter, who Read said he "doesn't know from Adam."

Read wrote a letter to Porter last year telling him to "hang in there" at a time when Porter was not playing well and the news media was down on him. Porter sent Read the picture in return, which reads "thanks for the kind words, Darrell Porter."

That is the type of man Harry Read is—nice.

He is a patriotic type of man, who spent his first three years after high school in the army. He reached the rank of corporal and saw action in both the European and Pacific theaters of operation.

After the army, he went to college at Eastern. He majored in social science, but became very interested in journalism during his college years.

Read worked on the Eastern News, then a weekly, for four years, serving as co-editor the year he graduated—1950.

He was also sports editor of the Warbler.

After college Read taught social studies in Marshall. However, after a year of teaching, Read heard a call from the journalist in him. He knew he had to answer the call.

Read then joined the staff of the Charleston Daily Courier as a sports and general assignment reporter. Before his Courier stint ended, Read served as the editor in chief.

When a position in Eastern's public relations department opened in 1964, he couldn't resist stepping in.

He found his niche when he took over for Daniel Thornburgh, who migrated to the journalism department. Read soon became head of his office at Eastern also.

Read said his job for Eastern is "to interpret the university to the news media." He does this mainly in the form of news releases he sends to area newspapers, informing them of the good news going on at Eastern.

He also writes a weekly column for the Charleston Times-Courier called "Eye on Eastern." The column features stories about people at Eastern.

Read has had many important duties for Eastern, which included helping to plan and oversee the visit of former Vice President Gerald R. Ford to Eastern in 1974 and calling and conducting press conferences to announce Eastern President Daniel E. Marvin's recent resignation.

The part of his job he is most proud of is "the high degree of credibility" he has gained with media counterparts. "They know me and they trust me," Read said.

This nice man does not limit his writing skills to press releases. He has been published in farm, historical and, of course, horse racing magazines.

And he grows cotton in his back yard.

This is a talent he said he learned was possible years ago. Every year he plants cotton and roses in his back yard—every year he has a good harvest.

He realizes that cotton grows much better in warm weather. He said he grows the cotton just to show that it can be done in Illinois, too. "Come by my house during the summer and see for yourself," he said.

Queen Margo

Kesting's quest for the best involves high goals

by Carl Pugliese

Heads turned and voices silenced.

Her reddish-brown hair was slightly tousled but freshman Margo Kesting still captured the glances which most beauty queens receive.

Kesting won the Miss Charleston Delta Chi Pageant last month.

Miss Delta Chi is the first title Kesting has earned after competing in five beauty contests. Although competition can become discouraging, Kesting refuses to resign herself to defeat.

It's important "to not give up if I do fail in something," Kesting said. Because, "If you're going to (let yourself) get down shooting for the best, you're never going to get it."

Kesting, a speech communications major from Buffalo Grove, said she prayed to achieve "the right attitude and to take whatever God wanted me to have."

In addition to exercising and practicing piano, Kesting said she prayed a lot before the pageant and added that even if she did not win the crown, she would not have felt let down.

Besides playing the piano, which brought her success in the talent portion of the Miss Charleston Delta Chi Pageant, Kesting's interests include playing raquetball, dancing and writing letters.

"The other day—Sunday afternoon—I wrote 20 letters," she said.

A "faithful" Jane Fonda fan, Kesting said she exercises to Fonda's record routine every day.

This summer Kesting will compete in the Miss Illinois Pageant in Elgin. She said contest competition is an "eye-opening and challenging experience."

"It (the pageant) makes me see the importance of staying healthy and eating right," she said. The pageant "shows me more about myself."

Kesting is interested in public relations as a career. "I'd love to work in the city," she said, "promoting the welfare of business."

Kesting worked as a secretary following her graduation from Buffalo Grove High School. Her decision to take a year from her education to work is not one she regrets. She said the choice has changed her life for the better.

"I had to decide if college life was for me," she said. "I was planning on being a secretary for the rest of my life."

She said she decided later that college was the best way to broaden her horizons by learning and getting involved.

Kesting said she recognizes the value in participating in several activities and getting the best grades possible. Setting high goals makes Kesting happy, she said.

"If you don't go for the best, you're always gonna wish you had," she added.

As a hobby, Pfeiffer broadcasted sports for 11 years on WEIC. "It was a sideline," he said, "but I was never home, so I quit."

While he watches all sports, golf is one he likes to play. But Pfeiffer said he doesn't have the chance to play golf as much as he would like to—"maybe a couple times a week when the weather is nice."

He also enjoys "puttering around" on his Honda Goldwing motorcycle. "It's a big one—like a car," he smiled. "My wife and I like to take long rides on the weekend."

However, Pfeiffer's time for fun and games is limited.

Pfeiffer became mayor of Charleston in early March when former Mayor Bob Hickman resigned to accept a position at Secretary of State Jim Edgar's office.

Pfeiffer said that it was a shame that Hickman resigned as mayor because "I don't know that it's ever happened that way (in Charleston)." He indicated that Hickman's resignation wasn't a surprise, however, and said "it didn't come like a bolt out of the blue. It looked like he might be moving up and I was already working on a lot of things here, just because I was around."

The phone rang and Pfeiffer once again turned into a serious, but friendly insurance broker, "This is Clancy," he said as he set his grandson gently down onto the floor to play.

doing the job right. "I give it my best shot always," she said and that phrase appears to be her motto.

"Usually when I get to a place and get it cleaned up the way I want, I want to stay and keep it that way," she added.

Kesler estimates that she has worked at practically every building on campus. At one time, she even cleaned President Daniel Marvin's house.

"I really enjoyed working for President Marvin," she said,

"The whole family was really great and I was very disappointed to hear that he was leaving."

On her own time, Kesler enjoys reading, painting and sewing her own clothes. She also looks after her son and granddaughter who live with her.

Although many residents don't ever really get to know their building workers like they know their own family members, somehow Kesler has broken that barrier by making the residence hall a little more like home.

'Gandhi' deserves Oscar nearly-three-hour running time, the movie emphasizes its message clearly and simply while still being enjoyable to watch. This is an achievement, and the general feeling of gladness it generates is bigger even than E.T.'s.

The tremendous work put into Gandhi makes this biographical epic a real pleasure, almost as if someone (in this case Sir Richard Attenborough) had designed the perfect visual history lesson. Filled with a personal power astonishing in its humble strength, the character of Gandhi is truly a "great soul." British actor Ben Kingsley portrays the mahatma with astonishing accuracy, showing the man totally devoted to a cause—India's struggle for freedom.

Wearing sandals and a loincloth, this little man radiates an inner strength and wisdom as he stands up to the absurdities of British colonialism. Gandhi was able to organize his nation and successfully overthrow the British rule without once resorting to violence.

I think the film Gandhi stands a good chance to win Best Picture because the Academy chose to ignore last year's entry of history on a grand scale—Reds. But this one has more going for it than that: a great story, a great cast, and the momentous feat of transferring one man's life to the screen without distorting it.

I'm torn to select the Best Actor. I'm picking Paul Newman because he deserves it after all these years of good performances without a win, but ultimately due to his realization of the part of Frank Galvin in The Verdict.

As The Verdict's lead, Newman looked old, beaten, and truly the alcoholic bum he was supposed to be. This made his last-chance struggle even more engrossing and The Verdict even more realistic as serious entertainment.

Although I liked Dustin Hoffman in Tootsie, he won't win because he just won for Kramer vs. Kramer. Ben Kingsley was great too, but this was only his first major role, so he won't win. And Peter O'Toole probably made the part of the aging matinee idol-turned-drunk look too easy in My Favorite Year to get an award for it.

For Best Actress, Meryl Streep is assured an Oscar for her portrayal of a survivor of the Nazi death camps in Sophie's Choice. She's yet to win the big one, and with the exception of Jessica Lange's moving portrayal of Frances Farmer in Frances, Streep should have little competition in this category.

I hope Lou Gossett Jr. wins Best Supporting Actor and Glenn Close wins best supporting actress for their parts in An Officer and a Gentleman and The World According to Garp, respectively. I thought they were the best, but competition is stiffest in these two categories this year.

Best Director is between Sir Richard Attenborough for Gandhi and Steven Spielberg for E.T.. I predict that the director of whichever film does not win best picture, will win the Oscar for Best Director. Sometimes that's how the show operates.

At any rate, you can tune in Monday night and see for yourself who walks off with the accolades this year. The only one I'm really rooting for is Diner for Best Original Screenplay.

—Steve Sandstrom

With the Academy Award presentations looming on the other side of the weekend, it's time I cast my inconsequential ballots for those deserving of the motion picture industry's highest form of praise.

In the Best Picture category, running neck and neck with the lovable little spaceman from Planet Spielberg is another little man who helped the planet Earth—Gandhi.

I was fortunate enough to see Gandhi over spring break, so granted, it is fresh in my mind. But I still find it more deserving of the Oscar for Best Picture, even over E.T..

Gandhi doesn't have an easy story to tell—the mahatma's life and work spanned decades, and the film encompasses the spiritual and physical growth of a man and a nation through the trying times of its history. But in its
