Talks to go on; U.S. 'flexible' Reagan says

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Reagan said Wednesday night that 1985 should be "a year of dialogue and negotiations" with the Soviet Union. But he said he intends to press ahead with space-based anti-missile research even while outting his "Star Wars" plan "on the table with everything else" when arms talks resume.

The president told a nationally televised news conference that the United States will be "flexible, patient and determined" when the talks resume, with the ultimate objective of "complete elimination of nuclear weapons."

He said there would be "no preconditions" for the talks. But on one main sticking point—the $26 billion space research effort which the Soviets want halted—the president said, "we have made it clear that we are going forward on research."

Asked whether Star Wars would be bargaining chip, he said, "No, oh, no." Reagan said he does not like the term "Star Wars," and that his goal is to develop a moral and humane system which would destroy weapons instead of people.

"Our objective in these talks will be the reduction of nuclear weapons . . . Our ultimate objective is complete elimination of nuclear weapons," he said.

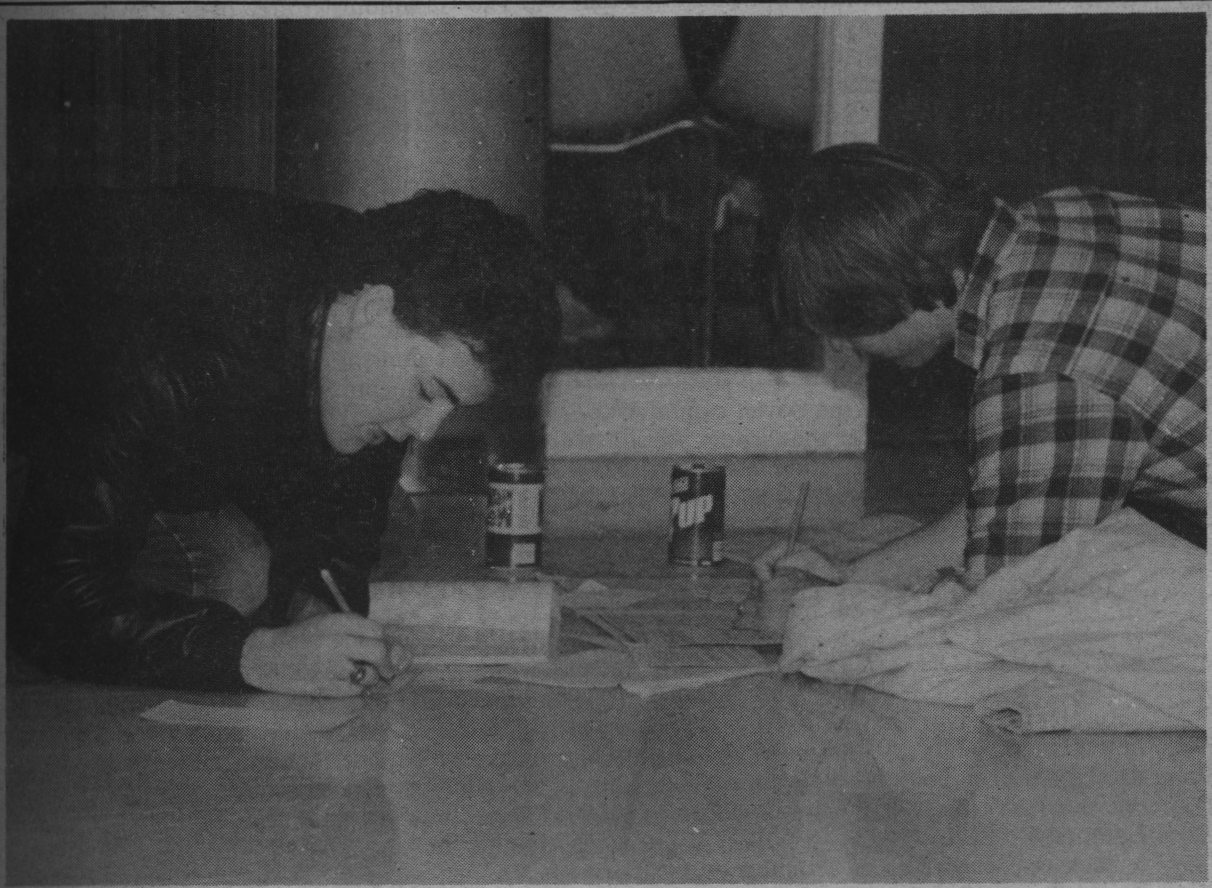

Asked if he thinks the recent talks in Geneva may lead to a new era of detente with the Soviet Union, Reagan said, "I think there will be other things talked about other than just weapons."

"But let me make plain about detente, a word that has been abused in the past in some ways," Reagan said. "Yes, we would welcome such a thing as long as it was a two-way street, and we were going the wrong way on that street."

Asked about a possible summit meeting with Soviet President Konstantin Chernenko, the president said he was "perfectly willing" to have such a meeting if it "could be helpful" in superpower relations.

But he said, "I don't think it would make very much sense to say . . . let's have a meeting just to get acquainted. Other presidents have done that and found out the letdown was pretty terrible" when little resulted to advance the cause of peace.

The news conference was Reagan's first in six months, and came 11 days before he takes the oath of office for a second term.

Officials favor 'nudge' from belt law

by Lori Edwards
Many area officials and legislators said Wednesday they support the controversial new seat belt legislation signed Tuesday by Gov. Jim Thompson.

The legislation, which will go into effect July 1, requires drivers and front seat passengers of automobiles to wear their seat belts or face a $25 fine.

The new law covers drivers and passengers in the front seat from the age of six and older. Children under six are covered by a similar existing child restraint law.

Illinois State Representative Harry "Babe" Woodyard, who voted in favor of the seat belt law, said he supported the legislation

Eastern given $100,000 to buckle up

by Lori Edwards
Eastern's Office of Traffic Safety will soon receive a $100,000 federal grant to sponsor an educational program on automobile seat belt safety, director Daniel Bolin said Wednesday.

Bolin said the grant has been approved verbally, and paperwork is being currently completed. Technically, the grant went into effect for a one-year period beginning Jan. 1, 1985.

because of a possible "retaliatory effect" from the federal government if it was not passed in Illinois.

Eastern is the only Illinois university to receive the grant, which will be used to educate people in the state on the protection a seat belt can offer when worn properly.

A device known as a "seat belt convincer" is part of the program. It will be used to simulate a crash at speeds from five to ten miles per hour, Bolin said.

Instructor finds Korea land of tear gas and pedestals

by Amy Zurawski
While teaching in South Korea, Eastern English instructor John Kilgore had to have a handkerchief to teach as a protection from tear gas.

Kilgore, who taught during the fall semester at Seoul National University—Seoul, South Korea, said the tear gas was dispersed by the government to contain student demonstrations, an event that disrupted classes several times.

"The students were demonstrating because they wanted to have a democratic student government," Kilgore said. "I guess they won because they were allowed to form a government. The tear gas shows them as far as their power goes."

Kilgore and Eastern English Instructor David Downing, who taught in Rio DeJaneiro, were both 1984 Fulbright Scholarship winners.

Fulbright scholarships, which give grants to instructors to study abroad, are offered by the Council for International Exchange for Scholars—Washington D.C. according to recommendations received and proposals submitted by potential scholarship winners.

Kilgore said at first he was "a little worried" about the tear gas and the demonstrations, but "most people take a matter-of-fact attitude about them. They see them just as another part of daily business."

"Students really don't have any power in the Korean schools. What appears as power, really isn't. They have very little voice in how the university is run," Kilgore said. "Students aren't on any committees like they are here (Eastern)."

Another difference Kilgore cited between U.S. and Korean students was the attitude they have about studying.

"Students in Korea study collectively and take a responsibility for their own education, an attitude that American students could benefit from if they adopted," he said.

John Kilgore

"Because of the authoritarian atmosphere in Korea, students aren't as willing to criticize. They just absorb the information," he said.

"Also, having little money and very politically-involved students causes the calendar to change, often without notice," he added. "We never know how long we are going to be teaching."

While in Korea, Kilgore taught two classes, Basic American Cultural Theory and a literature class on 1900 British novels.

Kilgore noted that he only had 12 students because "Fulbright teachers have a reputation of being tougher teachers, so students enroll in other classes in an effort not to jeopardize their grade point averages, which they are very proud of."

"The students all worked extremely hard," he said. "Students put their teachers on a pedestal. They are shy and respectful of their teachers, not like students are here."

In addition, American students are more apt to look at things they are taught critically than Korean students, Kilgore said.

Plan to curb child abuse offered

SPRINGFIELD—A plan to protect children from abduction and abuse was introduced Wednesday in the General Assembly, with one sponsor calling Illinois "the missing children capital of the world."

Five Chicago-area legislators proposed the five-bill package designed to prevent abduction and sexual abuse, locate missing children and ease the trauma of children who must testify against alleged abusers in court.

A key part of the plan would require schools to include a course teaching children how to avoid being kidnapped.

Official urges aspirin warnings

WASHINGTON (AP)—Health and Human Services Secretary Margaret Heckler urged the aspirin industry on Wednesday to voluntarily warn its customers of a possible link between aspirin and the sometimes-fatal children's disease known as Reye's Syndrome.

Acting after the release of a medical study indicating that children given aspirin for influenza or chickenpox may run a 25 times greater risk of contracting the disease, Mrs. Heckler urged the industry to include a warning on its bottle labels against using aspirin in such cases unless a physician is first consulted.

24 perish in nursing home blaze

GRANDVILLIERS, France (AP)—A pre-dawn fire Wednesday raced through one wing of a home for the elderly killing 24 residents and forcing 156 patients out into the sub-zero darkness, police said.

A hundred firefighters, hampered by freezing hoses in record-shattering cold, fought the blaze until morning in a wing housing the elderly in the state-run rural hospital in Grandvilliers, 60 miles northwest of Paris.

Police said the fire was started after a frozen pipe burst, spilling water onto electrical wires, which short-circuited. Temperatures hovered around minus four degrees Fahrenheit.

MOSCOW (AP)—Official Soviet news media on Wednesday hailed the U.S.-Soviet agreement to resume arms negotiations, but cautioned that renewed talks on limiting weapons on Earth and in space are only the first step in a process that will be "long and difficult."

"On the other hand," said the Soviet government newspaper Izvestia, "they say even the longest road is begun with a single step."

After two days of meetings in Geneva, Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko and U.S. Secretary of State George P. Shultz announced the two sides had reached a compromise on resuming negotiations on nuclear arms reductions and limitations and on preventing an arms race in space.

Gromyko returned to the Soviet capital Wednesday, but authorities at the airport prevented Western reporters from meeting him on arrival.

The foreign minister is expected to brief the 10 other members of the ruling Politburo at the regular weekly meeting of the Kremlin leadership Thursday.

The Communist Party daily Pravda was the only morning newspaper here to carry the joint Soviet-American statement announcing the new arms control talks, which was made public at 1 a.m. Moscow time, too late for most Soviet papers.

The Soviet' main evening news program Vremya, aired several minutes of footage showing Gromyko departing from Switzerland, his arrival in Moscow and part of Shultz' news conference. Announcers read Tass statements on the agreement to resume talks, but added no separate comment.

In a commentary entitled "A Possible Beginning," to No. 2 government press agency, Novosti, acknowledged that Moscow and Washington have differing priorities. But it said "that should not mean (the talks) are doomed to becoming a talking marathon."

Jerusalem asks Jackson's help

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Rev. Jesse Jackson weighed a request Wednesday from Jerusalem's mayor that he use his influence to help get thousands of Ethiopian Jews out of the drought-stricken country. "He hasn't made any decision on this yet," said Jackson's aide, Lamond Godwin.

Jackson, who returned from an overseas trip Tuesday, received the telegram from Mayor Teddy Kollek of Jerusalem the following day. The telegram talked of Jackson's "deep humanitarian convictions," and suggested the black civil rights leader push for a resumption of the airlift of Ethiopian Jews between neighboring Sudan and Israel. Kollek said Jackson might encourage the Sudanese government to allow the Jews who have reached that country to leave and approach the Ethiopian government "to permit those (Jews) that are still in Ethiopia to join their families in Israel."

In a related matter, Jackson's wife, Jacqueline, is currently traveling in Ethiopia to see first-hand conditions at camps where thousands of people are starving.

The Israeli embassy was not aware in advance of Kollek's telegram, a spokeswoman said.

OCSHA plans busy spring

by Amy Zurawski

Despite a lack of student participation at the close of fall semester, members of the Off-Campus Student Housing Agency are looking forward to a productive spring semester.

OCSHA President Terra Yarbrough said the organization is planning to begin weekly meetings Jan. 16 and to conduct several programs discussed during the fall semester.

In December, weekly OCSHA meetings were canceled because of poor student attendance and participation. Yarbrough added that low funding was also cited as a reason for ineffective operation of the Student Senate agency.

Currently, Yarbrough said plans are being made for the annual Housing Fest scheduled for March 6. This program allows students to view possible off-campus housing and to meet potential landlords.

Although poor response was received at the 1984 Housing Fest, Cheryl Enk, OCSHA vice president, said, "We are hoping for a better response this year. We are really working hard to try to make it work."

Enk said about 40 letters explaining Housing Fest were sent to local landlords this week.

OCSHA is also creating a residence hall program that would attempt to show students the pros and cons of both on- and off-campus living.

Yarbrough said the program, which is still in the planning stages, has received support from several residence hall councils.

In addition, Yarbrough said a budget is being designed to "hopefully allow the publication of the housing booklet that was stopped last semester because of a lack of funds."

Pemberton hall undergoes renovation

by Amy Zurawski

Eastern's Pemberton Hall, a registered historical landmark, is undergoing a renovation project in an effort to modernize the 76-year-old structure, Eastern's housing director said Tuesday.

The all-girl residence hall, which was constructed in 1908 and named after state Senator Stanton Pemberton, will be undergoing what Eastern Housing Director Lou Hencken calls preventive maintenance and restoration.

Hencken said the project, which is set for this semester, includes the repairs of six cracked, leaking shower stalls at $1,000 each in the hall's old section. Bids for the showers have gone out, he added.

"To prevent the possibility of the showers cracking enough to allow water to leak down to the next floor's bathroom, the showers are going to be replaced," Hencken said.

Hoping to have the showers installed by spring break, Hencken said the bidding process has yet to be completed so a specific installation date cannot be set.

"We really aren't hurrying to do it," he added, noting that the project could be put off until the summer when students aren't occupying the hall. "The replacement is preventive maintenance, but it needs to be done."

In addition to the showers being replaced, Hencken said the rooms in the old section of Pemberton are being replastered and repainted. The rooms in the new section, the food service, hallways, lobby and the rest of the hall are also being repainted.

"We have done more plastering in the old section than we originally thought would have to be done," he added. "A lot of the rooms need work done."

Hencken said the entire painting project in Pemberton is expected to be completed by June.

Although Hencken did not know the exact cost of the labor involved in painting the building because of the irregularly shaped rooms, he noted that paint for Pemberton and Ford, McKinney and Weller halls cost $6,500. The expense of the Pemberton project would come from Housing Department funds, he added.

Pemberton Hall Counselor Patty Krenz said the residents of Pemberton "are appreciative" of the features that are unique to the old hall.

"They (students) put up with the small inconveniences that the repairs create," she said. "I am surprised that I have only heard a small number of complaints about the work being done."

"The painting is a big job and its taking a long time to get it done but I think everyone sees it as a worthwhile project," she added.

Hencken said that during winter break, the project may have been set back when a water pipe broke in the recently refurbished Presidential Dining Room, requiring the removal of a wall to repair the pipe.

However, damage was minimal, Hencken added.

Other plans to restore Pemberton more to its original 1908 state "are in the planning stages," Hencken said, adding no further details were available.

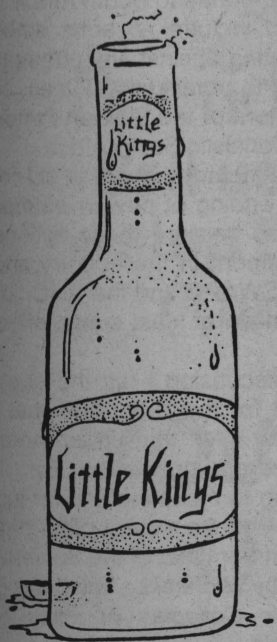

Despite the renovations and the structure's age, Hencken said the 80-year-old section of the residence hall has not required many annual repairs.

"Pem is one of the better built buildings Eastern has on its campus so it doesn't need many repairs," he added. "I only hope I look as good as Pem does when I'm 80."

Following law will help save lives and cash

On Jan. 8, Gov. Jim Thompson signed a law requiring drivers and front-seat passengers to do something most of us rarely do—fasten seat belts. However, Thompson added that the law would not be strictly enforced; the bill was passed as a way to “nudge” drivers toward safe practices.

We believe people should take heed of this law regardless of how strongly it is enforced. The law will help ensure motorists’ safety and the safety of passengers. In addition, people will be able to save some money by following the law.

Last year there were 1,553 deaths on the highway. Thompson said Illinois Transportation Secretary Gregory Baise estimated that, based on the the experience with seat belt laws in other countries, more than 300 lives will be saved in Illinois in the first year and over 43,000 injuries will be avoided.

In addition, at least $400 million will be saved since auto companies will not be required to install air bags. This would raise what are already rather expensive price tags on cars.

Also, it has been estimated that it would take the auto industry about 15 years before it could properly equip cars with air bags. By simply fastening seat belts, an immediate answer to the deadly question of automobile safety can be found.

If to fasten or not to fasten does not seem to be a matter of life or death, keep in mind that not complying with a law usually results in some type of penalty. Motorists stopped for not wearing restraints will be handed a $25 bill—big bucks to college students.

Even so, some people who do not agree with the governor’s decision claim the law infringes upon their rights to have comfortable car rides. These people are not considering what would happen if they got into a car crash. A seat belt is not that troublesome or painful to fasten that people should feel that their rights have been wounded.

Next time you get into your car think about which more important, protecting your right to a slightly more comfortable ride, or your money and your life.

Human rights should play policy role

Several weeks ago I attended a student conference at West Point dealing with the nature of American foreign policy. There were 14 different areas examined in the course of this conference. My seminar group was assigned the task of evaluating U.S. foreign policy in relation to southern Africa. In dealing with this area, we concentrated upon South Africa, not because the other countries were unimportant, but because in virtually every aspect of the region, South Africa can be considered the linchpin.

When one examines South Africa, one cannot discuss U.S. foreign policy without considering what role human rights should play in such a policy. South Africa is unlike most nations in the world. It is a society perpetuated by the system of apartheid, a system which maintains the “separateness” of the races.

Apartheid is the means by which a small white minority of about four million maintain their complete control over all aspects of the society. It is a society in which whites enjoy, but in which the blacks are governed in a totalitarian fashion.

When discussing South Africa, this situation cannot be ignored. For what the present government is doing is nothing less than a crime against humanity. It is an injustice that cries out for some response in American foreign policy. But what can America do? Indeed, should it do anything?

There are at least three schools of thought on this matter. One advocates doing nothing. These people would maintain that the U.S. should not try to influence other governments, and it should only pursue its national interests, which is getting strategic minerals out of South Africa. The present government guarantees these minerals; thus, we should maintain the status quo.

Another line of argument is what I call the “Carter” approach. This approach advocates using human rights as “the element” that our policy should emphasize. They would take any measures, punitive if necessary, short of war to try to guarantee human rights in these countries.

The last approach is that taken by the Reagan administration. This approach emphasizes the role of “quiet democracy” to achieve the proper goals. They argue that one cannot punish a nation and insult its national pride without, in the end, losing one’s own power to influence events in those countries.

The first approach is certainly, in the end, self-defeating. For when an oppressive regime of a country such as South Africa, racked with injustice, is supported by the U.S. (and carrying on a heavy trade is surely a sign of support) then once again, we are identified with that oppressive regime. And history teaches us that we can be sure of one thing, that the revolutionary forces or government will be anti-American, thus putting in danger those very national interests we sought to protect with this policy.

There are pluses in both the Carter and Reagan approach. I remember how I supported Carter’s human rights program. I thought it was a tremendous plus for the United States. And Carter did have some successes with his program.

Jacobo Timmerman, in his famous book Prisoner Without a Name, Cell Without a Number, credits his freedom and life to Carter’s stance on human rights.

Crossview:

The Daily Collegian

He had other successes as well, such as helping to curb some of the excesses of such authoritarian regimes as Chile, the Philippines and South Korea.

But Carter’s approach had some drawbacks as well. In many countries Carter’s approach was so resented that they cut most ties and we lost much of our influence (primarily in Latin America). His policy was also open to charges by conservative forces that it unduly discriminated against authoritarian regimes supported by the U.S. without punishing more dangerous totalitarian regimes to the left.

To a certain extent, there was a grain of truth in these charges. The best example of this can be found in Jean Kirkpatrick’s Dictatorships and Double Standards. But this aside, a coherent policy dedicated to the dignity of human rights cannot be predicated upon complete “quiet diplomacy.”

What is needed is an integration of the two approaches, for each country is unique with a different set of circumstances that must be brought into account.

In Latin America, we cannot always rely on “nudges” or other such diplomatic means. But we must take into account Latin American sensitivity to what could be perceived as a return to the “Big Stick” or other such interference into sovereign affairs.

It was to this end that we debated policy on South Africa. We decided our present policy was mistaken and it had to be radically changed while trying to maintain some degree of influence. To accomplish this, we decided that the U.S. had to outright condemn the system of apartheid as abhorrent, adhere to United Nations resolutions condemning apartheid instead of voting against them, and that we should try to organize a Western response to South Africa.

This response should include an arms embargo against South Africa, voting against any attempts by the present government to obtain an IMF loan, and a more rigorous enforcement of the Sullivan Principles by the Western multinationals in South Africa.

Other measures were included such as aid to the SADCC states and the ending of new investment in South Africa. We tried to balance these actions by maintaining some investment in the country and by extending dialogues to SWAPO and the ANC. In this fashion we tried to maintain at least some influence over events.

But throughout this discussion I felt the question was not what was best for the U.S., but what was best for South Africa, for I felt that under most circumstances, the two were synonymous. For, if the United States is unwilling to make a stand for justice and human dignity, how can we expect other nations to distinguish our system from that of the Soviets?

Deadline on graduation applications Jan. 18

by Lori Sterling and Amy Zurawski

Eastern students planning to graduate at the end of the spring semester have until Jan. 18 to file an application with the Records Office, Eastern's graduation clerk said.

Cleora Bates, graduation clerk, said that graduation applications may be picked up in the Records Office, room 119 in Old Main, between 8 a.m. and 4:30 p.m..

Although Bates said between 20 and 30 applications are received daily, she said no estimation of the number of students who would participate in the spring commencement ceremonies could be made.

"With all the applications coming in and deadline getting closer, we haven't even begun to count them because of the work involved in processing them alone," Bates added.

Students who will be receiving two degrees at the time of graduation need to return two graduation applications in order to receive both degrees.

"Students who are applying for more than one undergraduate degree need to be sure to fill out two sets of application cards, one for each degree they expect to receive," Bates noted.

In addition, Bates said when a student applies for graduation, they are required to pay a $15 processing fee for either a bachelor's degree or two simultaneous degrees or $30 for two consecutive degrees.

She added that once a student applies for graduation, they will receive a graduation checklist which shows the courses they have completed and the ones they need to complete before graduation.

"Students should get the checklist about six weeks after they turn in the application," Bates noted. "When they get it, they should check it over, making sure all the information is right. If there is a problem, they should go to the Records Office."

Not only students who are planning to graduate in May are eligible to apply for graduation. Bates said any student may apply for graduation in the middle of the semester they expect to complete the required number of semester hours.

She noted that elementary education, junior high education, special education, business education, health, physical education and recreation majors need to complete 80 hours to be eligible to apply for graduation.

In addition, she said:

- Medical technology majors need to complete 64 hours.

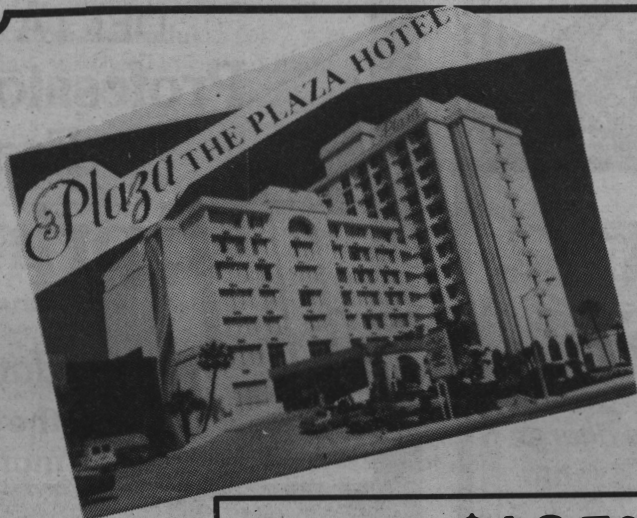

- Business majors may apply after they have been admitted to the College of Business.

- All other majors may apply after completing 70 hours.

Hiring college grads is something the Army has always done. And lately, we've been doing a lot more of it.

In fact, last year alone nearly 7,000 college grads chose to begin their future as Army officers.

Why? Some wanted the opportunity to develop valuable leadership and management skills early in their career.

Others were impressed with the amount of responsibility we give our officers starting out. And still more liked the idea of serving their country around the world.

Interested? Then you can start preparing for the job right now, with Army ROTC.

ROTC is a college program that trains you to become an Army officer. By helping you develop your leadership and management ability.

Enrolling can benefit your immediate future, too. Through scholarships and other financial aid.

So the next time you're thinking about job possibilities, think about the one more recent college graduates chose last year than any other.

Classes, books

Pick up time

Although the first day of classes begins Thursday, students may continue to pick up classes and textbooks.

The add/drop session is scheduled between 1 and 3:30 p.m. Thursday and Friday in the Union Ballroom. All students may add courses during this time.

In addition, students may pick up textbooks between 8 a.m. and 7 p.m. Thursday at the Textbook Library located at the south end of Pemberton Hall.

The Textbook Library will also be open between 8 a.m. and 4:30 p.m. Friday for book pick up and will be closed Saturday through Monday. Regular hours will be resumed Tuesday.

Senate to hold mock meeting

The Student Senate Thursday will conduct a mock meeting for newly elected senators who have not previously served terms on senate.

Senate Speaker Ron Wesel said the introduction meeting will take the form of a mock meeting so new members may experience the process of senate's weekly Wednesday meetings.

The meeting will be helpful in explaining budget, faculty boards and committee approvals, Wesel noted. The new senators will be better informed, elviating explanations during a regular meeting, he added.

The introduction meeting for new senators is scheduled for 7 p.m. Thursday in the Union addition Arcola Tuscola room.

Woodyard said Wednesday. "Unless a mandatory seatbelt law is passed, the federal government will implement the (mandatory) use of airbags (by Illinois auto makers)."

Woodyard said the General Motors plant in Danville, which employs about 1,500 people, will have to lay off 30 percent of its workers if airbags are implemented because of the increased cost of making autos.

"They (the federal government) said, 'either pass this thing (the seatbelt law) or we're going to shove those airbags down your throat,'" he said, noting that the installation of air bags in automobiles adds about $800 to the cost of production

"As a practical matter, I felt I must support the General Motors (position)."

Charleston Police Chief Maurice Johnson said he also endorses the new law. "I'm not a seat belt man myself. I never wear them," he said, but added that he believes the new law could save lives. "I can understand the governor doing it."

Daniel Bolin, director of safety programs at Eastern, said the law was "absolutely necessary because only ten to 13 percent of the population are voluntarily using the safety restraint devices."

He also cited statistics from the National Safety Council which indicate 12,000 lives a year could be saved if seat belts were worn.

State Policeman Wayne McCoy agreed that although the law will be difficult to enforce, it should have positive effects and could save nearly 500 lives per year in Illinois.

McCoy added that the state police will work with the Illinois Secretary of State, the Illinois Department of Transportation and the media to educate the public and show the benefits of the legislation. A grace period during which written warnings will be given will take place after the legislation has gone into effect July 1.

Both Johnson and Assistant Police Chief Herb Steidinger agreed that the new law will be difficult to enforce, but disagreed on how they would go about enforcing it. Johnson said "normally" there will be no visual checks and no roadblocks to check seat belts.

Steidinger said the method of enforcing the law may not be clear until state and local officials can get together and set up a consistent state-wide policy on enforcement.

Steidinger also commented on the divided public opinion over the new law. He said many people are questioning whether the government should "dictate our safety," and compared the new legislation to motorcycle helmet legislation, which was later repealed.

Woodyard agreed. "My mail has been pretty heavily opposed (to the law)," he said, noting that many people think the legislation shows a "Big Brother attitude" by the government.

He added, however, that 70 percent of those who said they oppose an adult seat belt law agree with child-restraint laws. "There's a definite inconsistency there."

the need for seat belts and proves the protection they provide, he added.

The device will be brought to schools, service organizations, malls, the Coles County Fair and the Illinois State Fair for demonstrations.

Demonstrations will also be performed at a meeting of the National Safety Council in Chicago.

Wrestlers recovered from injuries, bruises

by Mike Nelson

Eastern's wrestling team used the Christmas break to recover from last semester's injuries and sicknesses, and will enter the second half of season a strong and healthy team, Eastern's head coach said.

"The break was good for us," Eastern head coach Ralph McCausland said Wednesday. "It gave us a chance to heal up from last semester, and come back healthy again, and hopefully this semester we'll be able to avoid injuries."

Not all of Eastern's wrestlers were on break in December, as three wrestlers competed in the Triton Open. Freshmen Chris Simcox, Marty Molina and Dan Ivanisevic all competed but only Molina placed, picking up a third place in the 177-pound class.

Eastern also sent five wrestlers to the Midlands Tournament Dec. 27-28 in Evanston. Mark Rodriguez, Kerry Flynn, Paul Cysewski, Chris McFarland and Ivanisevic were Eastern's representatives.

McFarland was seeded second in the 158-pound class, but failed to place although he compiled a 2-2 record for the tournament. Rodriguez was 0-1 in the 118-pound class, Flynn was 1-1; Cysewski was 0-1 at the 134-pound class; and Ivanisevic finished 1-2 in the heavyweight division.

"I was expecting to have a few more wrestlers at these tournaments, but (Mark) Ruettiger hurt his knee the week before Midland and Ozzie Porter was still getting over a case of pneumonia," McCausland said.

Eastern won't be changing the starting line-up to start the second half of the season, because "there is no need to," according to McCausland. "Everyone is healthy. We just have to get everyone going and ready for this weekend's meets."

Eastern will travel to Northern Illinois on Friday and will return home to face Central Missouri State in Lantz Gym at 1:30 p.m. Saturday.

Men's tennis meeting set

There will be a meeting for all individuals interested in trying out for the men's tennis team Thursday at 3 p.m. in the Lantz Fieldhouse, head coach John Bennett has announced.

Bennett said the meeting will be open to all returning players and any new prospects wishing to come out.

For more information, contact Bennett or leave a message at 581-2319.

Panthers finally return home following punishing road trip

by Ken Dickson

Home, sweet, home.

The Eastern basketball team may not have any better luck in the next two weeks, but one thing is for sure, at least they'll be at home.

After making road trips to Cheney, Wash., Kent, Ohio, Orlando, Fla. and Cleveland, Ohio since its season began Nov. 26, Eastern is ready for a home stand.

The three-game stand begins at 7:30 p.m. Thursday at Lantz Gym in a game against Pan American University and continues with Association of Mid-Continent Universities' conference teams, Northern Iowa and Southwest Missouri State.

The Panthers are not on the road again until Jan. 21 when it travels to Muncie, Ind. for a non-conference game against Ball State.

"It's been a tough last three games both physically and mentally," Eastern coach Rick Samuels said in reference to the two one-point losses at the First Federal Classic Tournament at Lakeland, Fla. and an overtime loss Tuesday to Cleveland State.

"I think it (the home stand) will mean a lot to us. The home court advantage and just being at home, means a lot," Samuels said.

Eastern was 4-9 last season away from Lantz Gym, so the road-home successes are staying relatively constant. The Panthers, who are 4-5 overall this year, are 1-5 on the road. It's lone road win is over first-year Division I Central Florida.

On the flipside, Eastern is 3-0 at home and was 11-3 in Lantz Gym last year.

Pan American, from Edinburg, Texas, comes into Thursday's game with a 7-3 record, but its played only three games away from the friendly confines of the PAU Field House.

The Broncos' only home losses were to the University of Arizona and Texas A & M. They also played in the University of Nevada-Las Vegas Holiday Tournament. Pan American did not get a chance to play the hosts but they lost to Kansas State and beat Arkansas State.

Duane Thornton leads Pan Am in scoring. The 6-foot-5 junior is averaging 14.3 points per game. Phillip Bernard, a 6-7 senior, is the only other player averaging in double figures. Interestingly, Bernard is 25-years-old and a three-year veteran as an army paratrooper. He's scoring 10.2 ppg.

"They are not imposing in size," Samuels said of Pan American, "but they are very physically strong. They are very active inside and are aggressive on the

Cager defense has Hilke worried

by Dan Verdun

The defense rests. At least it has been for Eastern's women's basketball team, and that has head coach Barbara Hilke worried.

"It's (defense) been pretty dismal," Hilke admitted. "We're not seeing the ball well on defense. We're in position, but we're not reacting well."

Hilke hopes things will change for the better when Eastern, 7-4, travels to Macomb Thursday to battle Western Illinois, 4-7, in a 7:30 p.m. Gateway Collegiate Athletic Conference showdown.

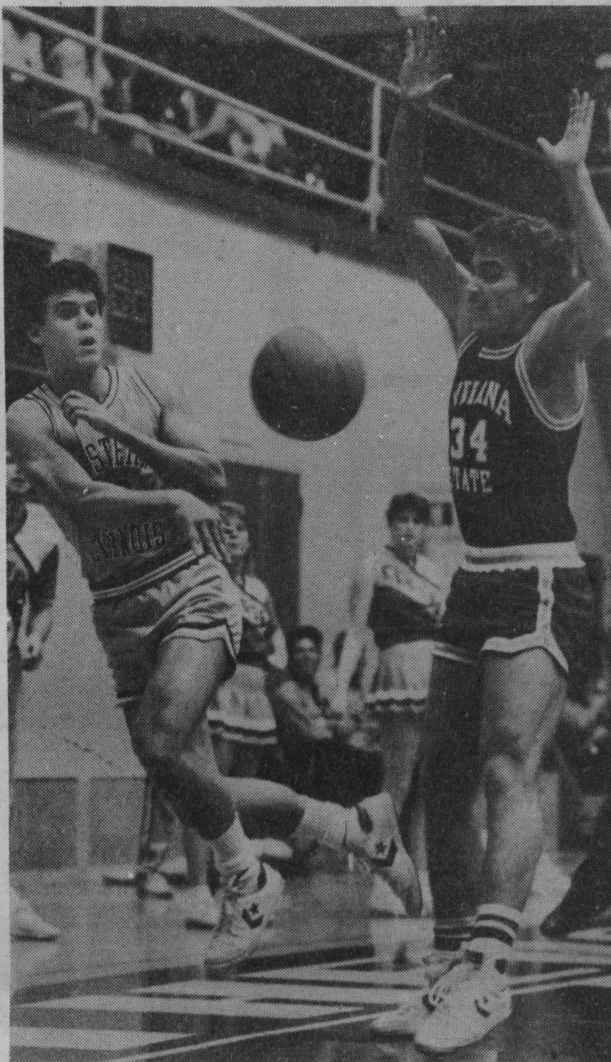

The Panthers, who have lost two straight games and three of their last four, saw their points-allowed-per-game average rise from 62.3 to 66.2 during that stretch. Moreover, Eastern surrendered a whopping 154 points in its last two outings.

Consequently, Hilke will implement a 1-3-1 half-court trap in hopes of rectifying the Panthers' defensive lapse.

"This defense should minimize the (opponents') passing lanes," Hilke explained. "Our defense won't be as spread out as before."

In addition, Hilke feels the new defense should also aid the Panther offense.

"The trap could help us to get a transition game going," Hilke said. "But the real key will be getting quicker outlet passes off rebounds, not so much to break, but to beat their pressure back."

boards."

Tickets for Thursday's game are available after 6:15 p.m. at the Lantz Gym ticket offices. Students may purchase tickets for 50 cents with IDs. General admission for non-students is $4, but children and senior citizens are admitted for $1.

The game will also be broadcast on WLBH-FM (97) radio beginning at 7:20 p.m.

Western, 1-1 in the GCAC, is coming off a 103-69 rout of conference foe Northern Iowa. The Westwinds, who return just five players from last season's 8-19 squad, were picked to finish ninth of 10 teams in the GCAC pre-season poll.

"On paper, Western is basically equal to us," Hilke said. "(Center) Wendee Warg is their heavy-duty player inside. (Forward) Cindy Myers drives very well to the basket; we've got to stop her penetration. (Eastern guard) Lori Conine has traditionally done a good job of defending (Western point guard) Carol Anderson.

"Western is not as good of shooters as we are, but they are better rebounders," she said.

Eastern may have to play the game without the services of starting center-forward Chris Aldridge and reserve guard Pat Hamilton, who have not practiced all week due to illness.

Aldridge, a 5-10 Taylorville native, is the team's second leading scorer (13.7) and rebounder (7.0).

"If Chris can't play, we'll give our freshmen a look," Hilke said. "We're by no means a one-man show, we've got the experience we need to win."

In addition to Aldridge, Eastern has three players scoring in double figures. Senior Toni Collins leads the Panthers with a 14.7 points-per-game average, while guards Melanie Hatfield (12.9) and Conine (10.0) round out the list.

A small sampling of things I'd like to see from 1985

As we've all realized by now, 1984 is now 1985 which means one more action-packed sports year of highs and lows, champions and chokers, and contenders and pretenders is safely tucked away.

Well let's not close the door on it yet. As exciting as this sports season was, it didn't exactly go down like a 1-2-3 inning or a cold one in the dog days of summer.

Being an athletic-jock turned supporter, I've always strived for improvement—it's that competitive edge. To apply that, there are several things I would like to see in this upcoming 1985 season.

I would like to see Nolan Ryan's fastball.

Circular raquetball courts.

What a $1,000 bill looks like.

NBC bring Bozo in to replace Pete Axthelm.

One minute of basketball without referees.

Buddy Ryan elected secretary of defense.

Larry Bird and Dr. J endorse boxing gloves for NBA 'star wars.'

Muhammad Ali sting like a bee.

I would like to see Frank Gliieber and Dick Vermeil eat crow with the Washington Redskins.

Leon Durham patent fish nets for first basemen.

A phone booth with a phone.

Lakeside Field renamed Cesspoolside Field.

OJ Simpson take the marbles out of his mouth.

How Miss America says NO.

What Detroit Tiger fans do if their team loses the World Series.

Houston's "Twin Towers" designated a national landmark.

I would like to see Rick Samuels use the Pink Panthers as subs when Eastern is leading or losing by 10.

Heimlich Maneuver directions on the back of Cubs' world series t-shirts.

Prince and Michael Jackson in a 10-round title bout.

Doug Flutie make it big.

Homemade beer commercials on Coaches Corner.

Sean Payton receive the Division I-AA Heisman.

A sideline shot of John Riggins without an oxygen mask.

A pinball game called Major Indoor Soccer.

Mother's serve gin and tonics in real glasses.

Jack Nicklaus slice.

I would like to see all those people who detested Mike Ditka in October send him 'thank you' cards now.

Wayne Gretzky miss the net.

A 1-hole, par 9 golf course behind Lantz.

Boy George grow a beard.

Eastern's basketball team win an overtime game.

A decision on which is more aggravating: Howard Cosell's voice or a busy signal.

If Illinois and DePaul will meet for the NIT championship.

Where all the other intramural basketball team practice.

I would like to see a reason for boxing.

A fast food place that is fast.

Harry Caray proclaim "This Heineken's for you."

Brain scans on Eddie Einhorn and Jerry Reinsdorf for trading Lamarr Hoyt.

Neil Lomax try to come down to cloud 8.

A first-round draft choice who signs before training camp.

How Bobby Knight will stay in the coaching box.

George Steinbrenner manage the Yankees.

R.C. Johnson throw a tailgater after he gets $85,000 from the Eastern-Kansas game.
