Senate opposes tuition increase

By SHERRY SIDWELL
Student government editor

It took two votes to do it, but the Student Senate passed a resolution Wednesday opposing a proposed 5.5 percent tuition increase for the 1994-95 academic year.

The resolution, which states that the senate does not support a tuition hike unless the Board of Governors provides an outline of what money generated by the increase would be used for, fell only one vote short of being passed by a unanimous vote on the first try.

A second vote was called for after a senate member pointed out the ambiguity of the resolution's concluding paragraph.

The concluding paragraph read, "Therefore it be resolved that the representatives of the 10,693 students of Eastern forming its Student Government opposes an increase in tuition for Eastern."

Senate member Steve Hartsfield argued that the wording of this paragraph made the resolution sound as if the senate would never approve any kind of tuition increase, when in fact the senate would not oppose an increase if it could determine that money raised from an increase would benefit Eastern.

After this paragraph was removed, the resolution was approved.

BOG Representative Ron Carmona said it is really too early for the senate to be worrying about a possible tuition increase because no formal proposals have been made yet.

"You really should wait and discuss this when you have actual figures and adequate information," Carmona told senate members.

"Right now, the problem here is one of ignorance," Carmona said. "Not ignorance as in stupidity, but ignorance as in a lack of knowledge."

Other senate members said despite

EIU 60th in regional ratings

By JOHN FERA
Administration editor

Eastern ranked 60th out of 131 universities in the Midwest Regional Schools category of the U.S. News and World Report's "America's Best Colleges" issue, placing it near the bottom of the study's top half.

The university was also not included in two top 10 categories in the magazine's list of "Best College Buys," which ran in the Oct. 14 edition.

In the "American's Best College's" report, which ran in the Oct. 4 issue, Eastern had a composite score of 46.5 points out of 100.

Illinois Wesleyan was the top Regional School, DePaul was sixth and Bradley was 14th. Some of the other states in the 11-state region included Indiana, Iowa, Michigan, Nebraska and Missouri.

The Regional Universities category was for colleges and universities that generally award more than half of their bachelor's degrees in two or more professional disciplines, and also offer graduate degrees. The category was broken into four regions: South, North, West and Midwest. The regions were ranked individually.

The survey was based on data provided by the universities including statistics measuring student selectivity, faculty and financial resources, graduation rate and alumni satisfaction.

Board of Governor's spokeswoman Michelle Brazell called the U.S. News survey "misleading because it doesn't accurately reflect the academic success of the BOG schools."

None of the five BOG schools - Eastern, Western, Northeastern, Governors State and Chicago State - were ranked in the top 10.

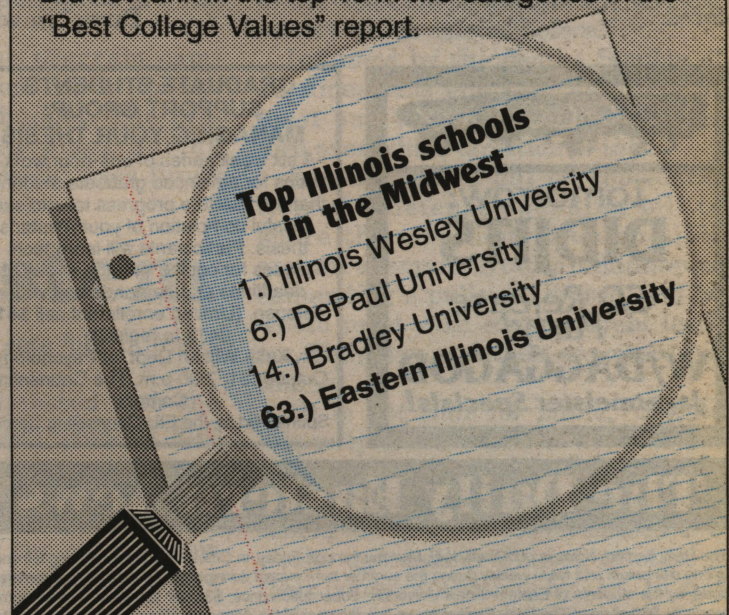

"What this report doesn't say is that the door is closed to 80 percent of the students who want to attend these top universi-

Where's Eastern?

Here's how the university fared in a national survey by U.S. News & World Report.

- Ranked 60th out of 131 schools in the Midwest.
- Highlight was the 59 percent graduation rate, which was ranked 30th.
- Did not rank in the top 10 in two categories in the "Best College Values" report.

WAND-TV to remain on TCI's local cable lineup

By BECKY COLLINS
Staff writer

Local cable subscribers and Eastern students will continue to receive the Decatur ABC affiliate as a result of a Wednesday agreement between WAND-TV and Telecommunications Inc.

Though the two sides have come to an agreement, neither are willing to comment on the details of the settlement.

On June 17, WAND, which airs on channels 7 and 17, turned down a "must carry" offer by TCI, the cable carrier for Charleston and Mattoon.

A must carry agreement would have allowed the TCI to broadcast WAND's signal for free.

Dan Van Zandbergen, general manager of TCI, said WAND opted to turn down the agreement and told the cable company to compensate it for rebroadcast.

Pat Peters, programming and production manager at WAND, said the station had no alternative but to ask for compensation because TCI has been charging subscribers for channels that the cable company broadcasts for free.

"Less than a penny per subscriber per day is a small amount when compared to amounts some cable stations are paid," Peters said. "Cable companies will argue they are not charging customers to receive us."

For several weeks, representatives from both sides said they remained at an impasse and were far from reaching a settlement.

The 1992 Cable Act required TV stations to give cable operators their "retransmission consent" or federal law would have forced cable companies to stop carrying their signals.

Some Eastern students express relief that WAND's programming will remain available to them.

"It's good that students and cable subscribers will still have WAND," said Hope Danielczyk, a sophomore zoology major. "WAND adds to the variety of stations and programs the cable company offers."

"I am glad I can still watch my soap operas and regular evening programs on WAND, I don't like the soaps on other stations," said Lisa Hamilton, a junior education major.

Maine moose sweet on plastic deer

WATERBORO, Maine (AP) – A fake deer used for target practice became the target of affection for a lonesome moose.

The courtship from the 700-pound bull moose was so steamy that the plastic foam deer had to be rebuilt after the moose lumbered into Nancy Morrill's yard last week.

It made repeated passionate passes at the arrow-punctured deer, which is used for bow-hunting practice. Morrill and her son videotaped the brief romance.

"We were laughing and laughing," Morrill said. "But the moose didn't pay any attention. It had one thing on its mind and that was it." The deer lost both its antlers during the episode.

"Then all of a sudden the head fell off," Morrill said. "When that happened, the moose stopped and looked around, and looked around again. And then it sniffed and trotted off into the woods."

this, they wanted to send a clear message to the BOG.

"The reason there is ignorance on our part, and there is ignorance, is that this is the way the BOG likes it," senate member John Kohl said. "There is no point in having the BOG. It appalls me to watch the BOG spend our money when we don't know where it goes."

ties," Brazell said. "These reports seem to be biased toward schools with strong research programs. Our schools value classroom instruction."

Eastern's best effort in the "America's Best College's" survey was in graduation rate. About 59 percent of the students graduate from Eastern, according to the survey, which ranked 30th out of the 131 schools.

The worst showing was in the financial resources category, where Eastern was 88th. Financial resources was based on the amount of money spent on the school's library, student services, administration and computers, divided by the number of students enrolled.

Eastern also finished 63rd of 131 schools in the student selectivity category. This category was determined by the acceptance rate among admission applicants to the fall 1992 entering class, the number of those students who accepted or actually enrolled, the enrollees high school class standings and these students' average ACT or SAT test scores.

Student Body President Luke Neumann suggested the BOG raise additional money by making cuts instead of raising tuition.

"My problem is that students have to pay more and more every single time someone on the BOG says we should," Neumann said. Neumann suggested BOG schools could save money by phasing out jobs held by union employees and replace them with student labor.

At the Sept. 23 BOG meeting, Chancellor Tom Layzell said he may propose a 5.5 percent tuition increase for the 1994-95 year. Layzell will not make a formal proposal until the Illinois Board of Higher Education's budget recommendations for BOG schools are released in December.

The resolution will be sent directly to the BOG.

In a report on "Best College Values," Eastern was not listed in either the "Discount Tuition Prices" or "Sticker Prices" category for regional universities.

For "Discount Tuition," the variables used were the ratio of quality to price, percentage of entering freshman receiving need based grants, percentage of freshman receiving merit awards, and the percentage discounted from the total education cost for students who received average need-based grant.

The "Sticker Prices" category dealt with the U.S. News quality rank divided by the total tuition, fees and room and board for the 1993-94 academic year. In both categories, the higher the ratio of quality to price, the better the value of the school.

Calvin College in Michigan was the best regional university in both categories. DePaul was the top Illinois school for "Sticker Price" (fifth), while Illinois Wesleyan was the best state school in "Discount Tuition" (fifth).

Brazell said Eastern has been featured in prominent magazines before. She cited Money Magazine's 1990 "Top 100 College Buys," in which Eastern was listed.

More funding is still needed for Booth Library renovations

By VICKI MARTINKA and TRAVIS SPENCER
Staff writers

Although Booth Library has found enough funding for minor renovations, the library hopes to eventually renovate several areas of its facility, said Allen Lanham, dean of Library Services.

Lanham said Booth Library is third on the Future Year 1995 Appropriation Request list for additional planning.

Currently the library's book and materials budget is $770,515. The library hopes an increase in that budget will occur this fiscal year.

"Eastern President David Jorns has expressed a desire to increase that (book and materials) budget by 10 percent this fiscal year," said Lanham.

If the library should receive additional funding, some possible improvements would include the purchase of microform reader printers and upgrading the Illinet On-Line materials.

Lanham said the nickel-plated paper used for the current printer is expensive. New readers would be easier to read because it would use Xerox paper instead of the nickel paper.

"Newer reader printers would not damage our materials like the old ones do," he said.

Some of the old reader printers damage the microfilm by pressing too hard against the glass. The newer ones are adjustable to the specific size. Lanham said some of the readers are possibly 20 years old and sometimes damage the film.

"(The library) needs to upgrade the Illinet On-Line materials and attach adequate printers to terminals," Lanham said. He said new terminals would allow students and faculty quicker, faster responses from the system.

Illinet is an electrical on line catalog that can find any available book or library necessity throughout the entire state. There are 42 academic libraries and more than 800 public libraries that Illinet can search.

With its limited budget, the library has been able to improve some of its present facilities. Recently, the library improved the student study lounge and installed a campus telephone and copy machine in the lounge. Lanham said during winter break, the library also plans to replace the carpet in the Self-Study Material Center, located on the west side of the main level.

"(The library) did move the Illinet On-Line in front of the reference room to provide better access to the professional staff," Lanham said. "The reference librarians are closer to student and faculty who need help."

The library does some fundraising through the Eastern Illinois University Foundation. One project the library has pursued is the Annual Adopt-A-Book program, which is in its third year.

Lanham said the program campaigns for money from donors to supplement the book budget. The program, which takes place during National Library Week, uses funds raised to purchase books.

Office gets new computer system

By TRACY LASKOWSKI
Staff writer

Officials with Eastern's Financial Aid Office hope a new computer system will improve the office's ability to process requests quickly and aid a deteriorating image in the eyes of students.

Eastern's Financial Aid Office is responsible for processing financial aid applications for more than 6,000 students a year. This may not seem like an unreasonable number, but for a staff of 23 full-time people processing the majority of these applications by hand, the number of applications is one of the key problems causing the delays that students are concerned about regarding their financial aid.

To the relief of both students and the Financial Aid Office, a new computer system will be installed on Jan. 1 to help speed up the processing of applications.

"I don't know if the new computer system will cause any less problems with application errors, but at least with the computer system the response time on correcting mistakes will be shorter," said John Flynn, director of the Financial Aid Office.

The computer will take care of all basic processing, which was previously done manually, but the exceptions and problems will still be handled by the staff.

Flynn called the system "a vicious circle."

Other problems that create a back-up in work are beyond the control of the Financial Aid Office, Flynn said.

"The Illinois Student Assistance Commission does not make decisions regarding the upcoming school year's aid until April, and the Board of Governors sets fees in May," Flynn said.

Flynn said this problem has been discussed with the BOG, which he said refused to consider making any changes to correct the problem.

This lateness in decision-making gives the Financial Aid Office a late start on processing applications.

The office must always keep track of the old and new reauthorizations for aid and make sure that all paper work is in order, Flynn said.

When the applications aren't filled out correctly by students, another delay is created because they must be sent back to be corrected.

All of this combined with the low number of staff and an increase of student enrollment has made Eastern's Financial Aid Department the "black sheep" on campus, Flynn said.

The Financial Aid Office has received criticism in recent weeks from Student Senate member Alec Nevalainen, who has called for reform in the way that students are treated by the office. Nevalainen has told The Daily Eastern News that the financial aid staff have been rude and impolite to students.

Nevalainen said last week that he will confront the Financial Aid Office with student complaints as he continues to talk to students about the problem.

Flynn said Nevalainen has only spoken to him once on the subject.

"I think the (financial aid) staff has worked admirably," Flynn said. "They have worked evenings and on weekends to get caught up."

Somalia deadline eminent

WASHINGTON (AP) — Deflecting calls for immediate withdrawal from Somalia, President Clinton will send in more American troops while setting a deadline for ending U.S. military intervention in the chaotic African nation, administration officials said Wednesday.

One official said the withdrawal date had not been "locked on" late Wednesday although the most likely time is late this year or early next year.

Under one scenario, Clinton would order between 1,500 and 2,000 more combat troops and more heavy weaponry to protect forces in Somalia as they await a final pullout, officials said. There currently are 4,700 forces in Somalia.

The president was expected to announce his decisions on Thursday after meeting with congressional leaders.

"It is essential that we conclude our mission in Somalia but that we do it with firmness and steadiness of purpose," Clinton said at a East Room ceremony.

There was an air of urgency to the president's actions, spurred by congressional pressure for an immediate withdrawal and public horror over slain Americans being dragged through the streets of Mogadishu by supporters of warlord Mohamed Farrah Aidid.

The president opened his day by meeting with foreign policy and military advisers and then called them back for more talks later.

Currently, there are 4,700 Americans in Somalia, including a Rapid Reaction Force. An additional 650 troops and armored vehicles are being flown to Somalia this week.

"We are anxious to conclude our role there honorably," Clinton said, "but we do not want to see a reversion to the absolute chaos and the terrible misery which existed before."

Inflamed by the deaths Sunday of 12 Americans and the capture of at least one U.S. pilot, Congress was torn over which direction to take.

Senate leaders put off consideration of a defense spending bill to spare the administration possible embarrassment from amendments demanding a pullout. Clinton said he would meet with congressional leaders Thursday and then announce his course.

"It is not time for panic," Senate Minority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., said.

In a Senate speech, Dole reminded colleagues of a resolution passed two weeks ago asking Clinton to state a clear policy on Somalia by Oct. 15 and calling for a congressional vote on the deployment of troops by Nov. 15.

In a stinging rebuff to the administration, House Minority Leader Bob Michel, R-Ill., and 64 GOP colleagues sent Clinton a letter branding his Somalia policy a failure.

Correction

An article on Page 5 of Wednesday's edition of The Daily Eastern News incorrectly referred to "several" incidents of violence that occurred last year on the Gus Bus, a weekend transportation service to take students home from local bars.

Only one incident occurred when passengers allegedly beat a student riding the bus.

Faculty Senate makes its point in an odd way

The Faculty Senate's recent discussion of calling for a confidence vote in Board of Governors Chancellor Thomas Layzell is an interesting proposal, but one that doesn't make a whole lot of sense.

At last Tuesday's senate meeting, some members felt that calling for a confidence vote in Layzell was necessary because the chancellor was dodging them concerning questions still lingering from the Janet Francis-Larabee sexual harassment case in which she received tenure as part of a legal settlement.

But the senate's displeasure with Layzell didn't start last week. This summer, senate members sent a letter to the BOG saying they were filled with "deep dissatisfaction" toward the BOG staff for its "increasing micro-management of the university's academic programs and the BOG's excessive and extravagant expenditures."

Senate members hope to resolve these "political differences" and get some honest answers from Layzell by inviting him to visit campus to discuss the the Francis-Larabee settlement.

Those hopes were dashed temporarily by Layzell's reply that the earliest he could visit Eastern was Nov. 30 - almost two-and-a-half months after the Francis-Larabee settlement.

That's when the senate decided to do something.

Senate members must have felt that a no confidence vote in the Layzell would "wake him up" and send him a message of the senate's dissatisfaction.

Even if the senate did pass a vote of no confidence it wouldn't mean anything. Layzell isn't about to relinquish his throne, regardless of Eastern's Faculty Senate's impression of him.

But apparently the senate's intent must have sent some kind of message to Layzell. At Tuesday's senate meeting, it was announced that the chancellor hopes to visit Eastern within the next couple weeks.

It might not have used the right tactic, but the senate got its message across. However, in the future, the senate should try a realistic approach when dealing with Layzell.

Warbler editor encourages participation

I agreed to speak with Minority Today in the hope that concerns about the 1993 yearbook's decreased coverage of minority events could be addressed and remedied.

I thought Sherell McDearmon's article "Student concern sends Warbler editors to action," which ran in the September edition of the Minority Today, was OK, although I thought more of what we talked about during the interview should have been included.

I wanted this to be an interview that would result in a cooperative effort between the Warbler and any group on campus to make sure events that would eventually result in a yearbook that people would be proud to look at in the years to come were covered.

Last year's yearbook theme was All Shades of Gray. This theme included not only the student body, but also the town we live in.

In order to show Charleston, I dedicated less pages to the people at Eastern. The decreased coverage included not just the blacks, but the greeks and every other person and organization at Eastern as well.

Some people liked the 92-93 yearbook. Some people didn't.

The 93-94 yearbook theme is Faces. This year more Warbler pages will be dedicated to the people at Eastern, rather than the town surrounding Eastern.

I want to make sure the yearbook covers events that are interesting to the people at Eastern.

The Minority Today helped me realize that many minorities want more coverage. I was glad this was brought to my attention.

I was, however, disappointed to read Jacenta Wilson's editorial, "Editors need to check themselves," which also appeared in the September edition.

I don't think the use of this editorial did anything but create animosity and conflict.

I did think the editorial made one good point. An organization that wants to be seen needs to make sure we know it exists.

Rachel Corbett

"I want to make sure the yearbook covers events that are interesting to the people at Eastern."

There are approximately 130 organizations on campus. Despite what Wilson says, it is not a "simple thing" to be noticed.

I've received several letters and calls from organizations informing me of activities they would like to include in the yearbook. I would have overlooked most of these activities if they weren't brought to my attention. Although it is not necessary to "bombard [me] with fliers of minority events" or any other event for that matter, a flier with a contact and a phone number would be an excellent way to be heard.

My staff of the 20 people, who regularly attend the meetings, cannot possibly know about every single event on campus. I encourage my staff to cover events they find interesting.

My co-editor, Heather Clyde, told the Minority Today, that the purpose of the yearbook "is the representation of Eastern's campus."

I agree. But the yearbook "representation" of EIU consists of the 20 white staff members who voluntarily attend the meetings.

I'm not saying that it takes a black person to cover a "black" event, a white person to cover a "white" event or a Hispanic person to cover a "Hispanic" event. But to quote and agree with Ivan Adames, who participated in the Minority Today photo opinion of Warbler minority coverage, "I think... diversity in the staff might help a lot."

I encourage anyone interested in working for the yearbook or suggesting an idea for the yearbook to come to the staff meetings at 7 p.m Mondays in the North Gym of Buzzard Building or calling me at 581-2812.

Rachel Corbett is co-editor of the Warbler yearbook and a guest columnist for The Daily Eastern News.

Editorial

Minority Today editors should check themselves also

Dear editor:

I am writing in response to Jacenta Wilson's editorial "Editors need to check themselves" in the Sept. 29 Minority Today.

I would like to know how an editor of the Minority Today can dare criticize another publication, like the Warbler, of not being fair and objective with minority coverage?

Obviously you need to check yourself and the publication you run.

The Minority Today has only focused on black issues and has ignored other races at Eastern and their problems and concerns for a long time.

At Eastern, there are Chinese,

Your turn

Indian, Hispanic and other nationalities that you could reach out and cover.

You cannot say that we do not exist and if you look at September's issue, you have only promoted black students and their issues.

You have also said that the yearbook contained so many articles that have no real purpose or meaning to them. Well, your publication has a preference of promoting predominately black students of the Black Greek Council.

As a journalist Ms. Wilson, you are not being objective, but in fact racist yourself. You need to check how many articles or photos you've written or taken.

Open your mind and your journalistic skills to report all minorities on Eastern's campus. Stop wasting your efforts of being critical of the Warbler and take care of your own problems of lack of coverage of all minority students in the Minority Today.

Make forth a bold effort to get Minority Today reflective of all minorities achievements and efforts before going on a bombarded attack.

Reading conference to begin

By JULIE KAUPERT
Staff writer

Two professors from San Diego State University will highlight Eastern's 29th annual reading conference Friday in the Martin Luther King Jr. University Union.

The conference will be held from 8:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m.

James Flood and Diane Lapp of San Diego State University will give a speech titled "Literacy, Language and Learning: Effective Instructional Strategies" at 8:45 a.m. in the Union's Grand Ballroom.

The conference co-chairs are Eastern elementary education professors Veronica P. Stephen, Noelle Greathouse and Linda Reven. This year's theme is "Literacy is More than Reading."

"This is an opportunity for teachers to become aware of current trends, the newest research and a way for them to gain ideas that they can take back and implement in their classrooms," Reven said.

A publishers exhibit will open at 10 a.m. in the University Ballroom, featuring books of children's literature and teaching-related materials.

Two small group sessions will be presented by state and local educators at 10:40 a.m. and 11:40 a.m. in the University Ballroom.

Last year's conference drew about 700 students and area teachers.

Stephen said she expects about 500 students and local educators at this year's conference.

The conference is sponsored by the East Central-EIU Reading Council. Council members are those holding membership in any Illinois reading council. Most members are in elementary education, however some are in secondary education.

Registration for the conference will begin at 8 a.m. in the Union. Fees are $2 for students, $4 for council members and $5 for non-council members.

Mayor may open library to students

By MIKE FITZGERALD
Staff writer

Charleston Mayor Dan Cougill has taken steps to make it easier for Eastern students to check out books at the Charleston Public Library.

The current policy at the Charleston Public Library treats Eastern students the same as residents of Charleston. Everyone must have a photo ID that proves they live in the city and a reference from another Charleston resident to receive a library card.

At a recent Student Senate meeting, a student told Mayor Cougill she could not get a card because she doesn't know anyone who lives in the city. This prompted Cougill to look into the policy.

Sheryl Snyder of the Charleston Public Library said "Students can have counselors, teachers or resident assistants act as references to get a library card."

A few teachers from different departments have volunteered to be posted as references at the library, said Cougill. With this list, the librarians could just call the teacher to see if an applicant is OK.

In the future, Eastern students may be able to use their school ID to check out books. However, before this can happen the Charleston Public Library and Booth Library must be internetted into the same computer system.

"There are procedures being reviewed with the goal of streamlining our library systems in the future," Cougill said.

He said such a procedure would take time and effort.

Charleston Public Library is now a member of the Lincoln Trails Library System along with 48 other libraries. This system covers a wide radius of public libraries. If students have library cards from one of the other libraries in the system, they can use it at the Charleston library.

Disability Awareness Month gets under way

Eastern's Office of Disability Services has named October "Disability Awareness Month" at Eastern.

As part of the awareness month, the office will be sponsoring a variety of disability awareness activities, including a panel discussion tonight at 7 p.m. in Stevenson Hall lobby.

"The panel will be with Eastern students who have different disabilities," said Rich Ruscitti, Taylor Hall Counselor helping organize the event.

"They will be talking about what challenges they have had to face here," he said. "They'll be talking about what they like at Eastern and what they dislike as well as what services have been provided and what services they would like to be provided."

Music ensembles to attend conventions

DAN KARNES
Staff writer

Two of Eastern's music ensembles were honored this month by being chosen to attend two national conventions.

The Symphonic Wind Ensemble has been invited to perform at the Music Educators National Conference in Cincinnati in April, and the EIU Jazz Ensemble has been invited to perform at the International Association of Jazz Educators Meeting in Boston in January 1994.

Herman Taylor, chairman of the music department, said through these events, Eastern's music department will gain positive, national exposure.

The wind ensemble is composed of about 50 members and is directed by Bruce Moss. The jazz ensemble is composed of about 18 members and is directed by Allan L. Horney.

The ensembles audition for the events by sending in taped recordings of their performances to the music conference. Ensembles from colleges and universities around the nation audition in the competition.

Taylor said he was very excited and somewhat surprised that Eastern's ensembles were chosen.

"It might only be a one hour credit course, but they practice three or four times a week," Taylor said. "Everyone involved has to be commended in a big way for their achievements. The teachers and the students have worked very hard to get everything together and to make themselves the best that they can be."

The biggest setback to the trips is the fact that the music department doesn't have enough money right now to send the ensembles, Taylor said.

"We're still hopeful the administration can help us out," Taylor said. "We realize the administration doesn't have a lot of money to work with because of the situation with the state not budgeting the university enough, but they see this as a big opportunity also and is doing everything they can to get us some money."

Taylor said it will cost the music department roughly $15,000 to $17,000 to send them on the trips.

"Eastern is a very small school, and it is not given the attention or thought of the same as the University of Illinois, Taylor said. "But this is a great school with wonderful students and wonderful professors. I'm just humbly asking the public to make the effort to help in any way they can, to take pride in helping their university."

Both ensembles will perform, free of charge, in a joint concert at 7:30 p.m. tonight in the Dvorak Concert Hall in the Fine Arts Building.

Yeltsin demands opponents' resignations

MOSCOW (AP) — President Boris Yeltsin followed his bloody victory over hard-line lawmakers with a demand Wednesday that opponents in the provinces resign, and he yanked the ceremonial guard from Lenin's Tomb — a symbolic but potent blow against Communist holdovers.

In a stern, commanding voice on nationwide television, Yeltsin said elections should be held in December for every legislative body in the country — not just for a new national parliament as he previously decreed, but for new regional and local councils as well.

His aim clearly was to use the momentum of Monday's climactic battle with hard-liners from the dissolved parliament to sweep his opponents out of office in cities and regions from Karelia in the west to Kamchatka in the Far East.

The rifle-toting guards who kept a stone-faced vigil at Lenin's Tomb on Red Square were unceremoniously withdrawn.

They did not even march away in their customary goose step. They simply waved their white-gloved hands at tourists and walked away from the red granite and black marble mausoleum — the pantheon of communism where generations of Politburo members stood on holidays.

Clinton to set withdrawal deadline of U.S. troops

WASHINGTON (AP) — Deflecting calls for immediate withdrawal from Somalia, President Clinton will send in more American troops while setting a deadline for ending U.S. military intervention in the chaotic African nation, administration officials said Wednesday.

One official said the withdrawal date had not been "locked on" late Wednesday although the most likely time is late this year or early next year.

Under one scenario, Clinton would order between 1,500 and 2,000 more combat troops and more heavy weaponry to protect forces in Somalia as they await a final pullout, officials said. There currently are 4,700 forces in Somalia.

The president was expected to announce his decisions on Thursday after meeting with congressional leaders.

"It is essential that we conclude our mission in Somalia but that we do it with firmness and steadiness of purpose," Clinton said at a East Room ceremony.

There was an air of urgency to the president's actions, spurred by congressional pressure for an immediate withdrawal and public horror over slain Americans being dragged through the streets of Mogadishu by supporters of warlord Mohamed Farrah Aidid.

The president opened his day by meeting with foreign policy and military advisers and then called them back for more talks later.

Currently, there are 4,700 Americans in Somalia, including a Rapid Reaction Force. An additional 650 troops and armored vehicles are being flown to Somalia this week.

"We are anxious to conclude our role there honorably," Clinton said, "but we do not want to see a reversion to the absolute chaos and the terrible misery which existed before."

Cable companies cut deals

WASHINGTON (AP) — Jay Leno and David Letterman turned to snow in some communities Wednesday as the clock ran out on broadcasters' efforts to get paid by cable companies for the most popular programming on TV.

Most TV viewers, however, saw no interruptions as pre-midnight deals were cut throughout the nation.

The new cable TV law prohibits cable companies from taking any broadcast signal for free without the local station's consent.

Cable companies that hadn't settled with local broadcasters by 12:01 a.m. were required to stop retransmitting these signals.

At midnight, Dennis Moore, general manager of TCI Cablevision of Texas in Corpus Christi flipped the switch on each of the ABC, CBS and NBC affiliates.

Moore blinked out "Nightline," Letterman, and "Late Night with Conan O'Brien." First snow, then a pre-recorded message about the Cable Act of 1992 appeared on the screens of Corpus Christi subscribers.

Despite the problems in Corpus Christi and Maine, deals were struck in about 90 percent of the country by Wednesday afternoon, said Chuck Sherman, National Association of Broadcasters senior vice president.

Bakersfield, Calif., Grand Rapids, Mich., and Indianapolis had also been trouble spots, said Sherman.

After winning season, Cubs fire manager

CHICAGO (AP) — Jim Lefebvre, the Chicago Cubs' 10th manager in the past 10 years, was fired Wednesday after leading the team to only its third winning season since 1972.

"Jim has done a lot of what we hoped he would do and has started us in the right direction. However, I think more could have been accomplished considering some of the individual performances this year," general manager Larry Himes said in a statement.

Himes had met with Lefebvre in the Phoenix, Ariz., area the past two days. "I met with him for an hour and a half yesterday and told him of my decision this morning," Himes said in a telephone interview.

The general manager said he was considering four people as Lefebvre's successor.

"Some are within the organization, and some are without," he said. "I'll probably start making calls to these individuals this evening." On Tuesday, Houston fired Art Howe as its manager.

In Lefebvre's second year as manager, the Cubs had a strong stretch run and finished 84-78, in fourth place, 13 games behind NL East winner Philadelphia. They were 78-84 a year ago.

Lefebvre said the firing confused him.

"Everything was based on wins, and my record speaks for itself," he said in a telephone interview from his Scottsdale, Ariz., home. "I came into town to make the Cubs a winner, and I have a sense of accomplishment."

"I feel good about what this team has done, but I'm disappointed and disheartened that I will not be with them to take them to another level." Both Himes and Lefebvre refused to reveal details of their latest discussions.

"Everything will come out. He'll have his side of the story, and I'll have mine," Lefebvre said.

Lefebvre said he was grateful to many people.

"I want to thank the players who spoke out and support me," he said. "I want to thank Cub fans and thank them for their support." During the final weeks of the season, Mark Grace and Ryne Sandberg complained publicly about a lack of continuity in the Cubs organization and calling for their manager to be rehired.

"I realize that continuity is a big part of the risk that I'm taking in my decision," said Himes, who also considered firing Lefebvre before the All-Star break.

Sox fall again at home

CHICAGO (AP) — The Toronto Blue Jays had seen the stare so many times from Dave Stewart, they knew what it meant: big game, big trouble.

This is why the Blue Jays went out and signed him after winning the World Series. They knew there would be moments like this, and they wanted him on their side when those tight spots came.

Stewart did not disappoint them Wednesday.

Pitching for his new team for the first time in the postseason, he worked out of a bases-loaded, no-out jam in the sixth inning and led Toronto past the Chicago White Sox 3-1 for a 2-0 lead in the AL playoffs.

"When he gets that stare working pretty good, and those eyes start bulging," teammate Paul Molitor said, "you could tell he would be ready."

Stewart improved his playoff record, already the best ever, to an even better 7-0 with a 1.99 ERA and sent the series back to the SkyDome for Game 3 Friday night. Pat Hentgen (19-9) will start for Toronto against Wilson Alvarez (15-8).

"To be honest, I've just been real fortunate. That's the only explanation I can give for my success," Stewart said. "And I'm just going to ride it as long as I can."

Alex Fernandez pitched well, too, allowing only one unearned run in eight innings. All he had to show for it, however, was a loss.

He was 3-1 with a 1.72 ERA against Toronto this year.

The White Sox wore their lucky black uniforms at Fernandez's request, although it did not help. Chicago left 10 more runners on base, for a total of 23.

Phillies take game one

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The Philadelphia Phillies should have known better than to give the Atlanta Braves a second chance. The Braves' trouble was they gave Kim Batiste one, too.

Batiste nearly threw the game away in a ninth inning marked by another Mitch Williams' misadventure, then seized victory right back with the game-winning single in the 10th inning as the Phillies beat the Braves 4-3 Wednesday night in the opener of the NL playoffs.

"They were all encouraging me before the inning. They said go out and make up for what you did," Batiste said. "I got the ball and rushed it a little bit. It doesn't matter now." The Phillies' biggest liabilities all season had been their defense, speed and erratic bullpen and all three cost them. But the worst-to-first Phillies have been amazingly resilient too and that's why they now lead the favored Braves.

The Phillies, who have now accomplished what the Chicago White Sox couldn't in the AL playoffs by winning at home, will send their best pitcher, Tommy Greene (16-4), against Greg Maddux (20-10) Thursday night in Game 2.

The Braves had a chance to win in the 10th with two on and two out, but Williams, who blew a 3-2 lead for starter Curt Schilling in the ninth, struck out rookie Tony Tarasco with the go-ahead run at third.

Bond

His situation illustrates well the dramatic improvement of Eastern's team over last two seasons. Even though his best this year of 27:37 is a minute off his career best, in most other years that kind of time would still have cut it for at least a top 10 ranking.

"It's a much better team now than when I started," Bond said. "It's head and shoulders above what we had a few years ago, and I think it'll get even better."

Of the five seniors on this year's team, Bond is the only one who has been a member the last four years, as the others all transferred in later.

A native of Washburn, Ill., Bond was recruited to Eastern by McInerney's predecessor, Tom Akers, in 1990, as a state-place winning 800-meter runner in track.

Even though he ran cross country in high school, and placed 15th at the state meet, Bond originally planned to just run track at Eastern. But his freshman year the team wasn't even half the size of this year's 32-man squad. And at the time, anyone who could run an 8,000 (4.97 miles) was very much needed for duty in the fall.

"I wasn't even going to run cross country at first," Bond said. "But I've always done what Coach wanted. I'd never run much more than five miles straight in my life before then, and didn't even run the mile in track in high school."

"He has a great work ethic," said McInerney. "He's always been there when we needed him. I don't think he's missed a single morning run in four years. But he really is more of an 800 runner. Despite that, he's always been willing to lay it on the line for us in cross country, and has helped us a lot."

During his career, Bond's efforts have helped bring Eastern three third place finishes in the Mid-Continent Championships in cross country, as well as four league titles in indoor and outdoor track.

Bond took command of the the Panther's 800-meter ranks his freshman year, bettering many upperclassmen himself in the process. That year he placed second in the event at the Mid-Con Championships, in a still career-best time of 1:53.3. Since then he has continued to lead the team list with seson-bests of 1:54.04 and 1:54.16, and looks to do so again this coming spring.

His sophomore year was his best in cross country. That season, in 1991, he was consistent as the team's fourth man, bettering 27 minutes many times throughout. His career-best time of 26:39 run that year, in fact, came on the way to a time of 33:37 for 10,000 meters at the Illinois Invitational.

"I don't know why I'm not running faster," Bond said. "I've gotten a little bigger since last year, and have gained about 16 pounds. I'm still going to try and make the team. But if I don't, I can't complain. Eastern has given me so much already. I met Brooke, the girl I want to marry and spend the rest of my life with here. I've gotten to go to a lot of great places through running."

"Without running, I wouldn't have half the experiences I've enjoyed in my life."

"It's obviously a mental thing for him, and if you can't overcome that, it's useless to try to perform," said Mike Church, an assistant men's basketball coach at Eastern.

"I can kind of see his feelings. He doesn't have a life. He can't take his son fishing. He can't do anything without people hounding him."

Eastern Athletic Director Mike Ryan defended and supported Jordan's decision.

"I think you go through different emotions from the standpoint of the sport losing a great ambassador, player and role model," Ryan said. "It's disappointing, but by the same token, you have to look at Michael as a human being, and if this is the direction he feels his life needs to take at this point in time, then I think that's terrific."

Will Singleton, a 24-year-old senior and sociology major, said it was simply time for Jordan to move on.

"There's more to life than basketball, and it's time for him to try something else," Singleton said. "It's a sad day for the NBA."

Some people felt the news wasn't as shocking as others claimed.

"I was sad, but not too shocked," said Melissa Chatman, a 19-year-old elementary education major.

"He did talk about retiring (before last season). He'll have more time for his family now, and I wish him the best of luck."

Others felt the recent slaying of Jordan's father played a larger role in his decision than anything else.

"To him, his father was his motivation and his mentor," said Jerry Taylor, a 24-year-old graduate student. "He traveled with the team, and he was family to the team, and now he's gone."

George Morgan, another assistant men's basketball coach, said he thought Jordan associated basketball with his father too much to continue playing the game.

"When you lose someone that you love, and he had a special relationship with his father, obviously, you tend to stop, and I think that's what occurred," Morgan explained. "He hasn't died entirely as a person, but he's stopped the one thing that connected him with his father."

There was also considerable agreement that Jordan was the last of a different breed.

"The NBA is just about out of heroes," said Matt Thrun, an 18-year-old freshman. "First with Magic Johnson, then with Larry Bird and now with Michael Jordan."

Church agreed.

"If (today's stars) can get the things accomplished that those three guys have done - be class guys as well as take their teams to championships - that remains to be seen," Church said.

Paige Parker, a 19-year-old sophomore and speech communications major, said she was glad Jordan elected to leave the game while he was still playing good basketball.

"Jordan is on such a high after winning three national championships," Parker said. "I think it was good that he went out on top."

But opinion was split as to whether or not Jordan's retirement will be permanent. Johnson and Parker said they believed Jordan will not return to the NBA, but Church disagreed.

"I'll be surprised if he doesn't come back," Church said.

Kate Peterson, an assistant women's basketball coach, summed up what most said about the announcement.

"From a fan's perspective, it's too bad. He's probably the best player to ever play the game," Peterson said. "But from a personal standpoint, he did what he needed to do. He has to think of his family."

"I think what he said (during Wednesday's press conference) about not letting his play decline and kind of getting forced out of the league was a good point. He's already accomplished everything."

back of my mind since high school," Van Eekeren said. "It's definitely something that I want to do. I just love the game. I love the challenge of playing and the whole environment."

And the play of Van Eekeren has not only contributed to the Panthers as a team, it also made a huge impact on the play of her 20 fellow players.

"Amy is an unbelievable player," said junior Kaaryn Sadler, who is also Van Eekeren's roommate. "She sets as perfectly as anyone. That's when she's really at her best. She's just an active player, always diving for balls."

"She gives a 110% for the team. The reason why I'm racking up so many kills is because of Amy."

Van Eekeren humbly agrees.

"I'm the not the kind of player who gives up," Van Eekeren said. "I like to see my play have an impact on the players and not just me. I just take it a game at a time."

go out and put in so much mileage."

Lately, Roberts' mileage that she has pounded out in practice has produced winning performances for her team. In the Lady Panthers' last meet, Roberts led the team with a seventh place finish at the Ozark Invitational. Her time of 18:56 was not only her personal best, but it was also the best time for any Lady Panther this season.

"I think it's just been a matter of getting into the groove and all of her hard work beginning to pay off," Craft said.

Not only is Roberts' at the head of the Eastern pack, she is also helping the Lady Panthers with her senior leadership.

"The new people coming in look to the juniors and seniors for the tone of everything," Craft said. "If you've got a good crop of juniors and seniors who show that dedication and what that dedication is all about, then your freshmen will take on that attitude."

Roberts has been with the team for four years and Craft said that her being with the team for all of those years is another reason why she has outstanding leadership qualities.

"You have to have some stability. In terms of any kind of racing or team effort. You always have to have someone that can anchor everything, someone that holds everyone together and someone everyone looks up to as being solid," Craft said.

gave me a slip of paper with a "1" scribbled on it.

I looked up and found that at one end of the line stood Jordan, who had become my favorite player five years earlier when he hit a last-minute jump shot in the NCAA Finals to defeat Georgetown, the school that I hated most at the time. At the other end stood Waiters, a 6-foot-11, twentysomething, balding tree from Ohio State that my father and I would make fun of whenever we had the chance.

Fate was with me that day. The "1" on the piece of paper meant that I would get to meet the greatest player of all time and not one of the biggest jokes in the National Basketball Association of the time.

I spoke with Jordan briefly, shook his hand and wished him luck. He said thanks and one of the greatest moments of my life was over.

I walked back into the concourse, blushing and slightly trembling. My parents didn't believe I had met Jordan until I showed them the Polaroid copy of the photo.

That day, Jordan went on to burn Vern Fleming and the Indiana Pacers with a 53-point performance. A typical day at the office for Jordan.

After our meeting, Jordan went on to pick up three Most Valuable Player awards and three consecutive NBA titles.

Hearing the news of Jordan's decision to retire left an empty pit in my stomach. Unless he changes his mind, we will never get to see Jordan drive down the lane, tongue wagging, and slam home two points.

Never again will we see Jordan pick his opponents' pocket to start another Bulls fastbreak or see him in the locker room smoking a victory cigar after another Bulls' World Championship.

I consider myself lucky. I had the chance to meet the greatest basketball player ever and watch him make a mediocre Bulls franchise into one of the most dominant teams in NBA history.

Many of my most prized possessions have something to do with my admiration for Jordan. An enlarged 8x10 reproduction of the Polaroid I received at that first Bulls game stands next to my bed. I will never get rid of my Jordan rookie basketball card. My pair of original Air Jordans, the ugly red, white and black model, is safely tucked away back home with my parents.

It's not my place to cry for Jordan to come back to the league for the fans' sake.

His most successful commercial cries for people to "be like Mike." Since his fathers' death this summer, it probably hasn't been too easy for Jordan to be like Mike.

So, instead of questioning his reasons for retiring and begging him to come back, fans should take some satisfaction in knowing that they were able to watch the ascent of the greatest basketball player to ever play the game.

Setter is Lady Panthers catalyst

By ANTHONY NASELLA
Staff writer

Over the past four seasons, setter Amy Van Eekeren has been a definite mark of consistency for the Eastern volleyball team.

A four-year starter, Van Eekeren — out of Aurora's Benet Academy — has been the catalyst for Lady Panthers offense, amassing 3,126 career assists. That total puts her just 117 away from surpassing Donna Sicher (a player from 1986-89) as the all-time Eastern assist leader.

It's an honor that has been in the back of Van Eekeren's mind for a while.

"It's something that I've been thinking about," Van Eekeren said. "It would cap off a pretty rewarding and fun career. I'm looking forward to reaching it."

Putting the honor aside momentarily, head coach Betty Ralston also knows Van Eekeren has been a steady performer from day one. She had 903 assists her freshman year, 919 in her sophomore season, 805 this past season and 499 through 15 games this season.

"Amy has done an excellent job for us," Ralston said. "She's been a steady player throughout her whole career. She has taken it upon herself to do her best."

In addition, she's second on the team in digs (183) and has reached the 40/20 clubs (assists/digs) on five occasions, including three times this season — in matches against Wright State, Western Illinois and DePaul.

"Amy is a little limited in her skills, but she makes all of it up with hustle," Ralston said. "She sets a good example on the floor — definitely a steady force."

"She's also very positive with the players, especially the younger ones," Ralston said. "She's just a delight to coach."

And if Van Eekeren holds true to her word, she doesn't plan on her volleyball career ending when the season ends. She has ambitions of carry-

Jordan says 'It's time to move forward'

DEERFIELD, Ill. (AP) — Saying he had reached the pinnacle of his career and had nothing left to accomplish, Michael Jordan retired from basketball today — but maybe not forever.

"I have achieved a lot in my short career. I just feel I don't have anything else to prove," Jordan said in walking away from the game after winning seven scoring titles and leading the Chicago Bulls to three straight championships.

The 30-year-old superstar — basketball's greatest player and perhaps the world's most recognizable athlete — said "it was time to move forward, away from games," but did not rule out a comeback.

"I'm not making this a 'never' issue. I'm saying I don't have the drive right Disbelief. Sympathy. Frustration.

Reactions were mixed when word of Michael Jordan's retirement from the NBA reached the Eastern campus Wednesday night and Thursday morning.

But almost everyone interviewed agreed the basketball legend was justified in doing what he felt he needed to do.

"I think he just wants to be a regular person," said Jim Johnson, 24, and a senior psychology major. "I've seen him out in public before, and it's just terrible. He's an individual, and he's got his own life to live."

Most fans agreed the decision was appropriate and sympathized with the superstar's feelings.

Bulls' training center, Jordan said the murder of his father, James, in July made him realize that "it can be taken away from you at any time."

"I guess the biggest gratification — I am a very positive person — I can get out of my father not being here today is that he saw my last basketball game. It is something that we have talked about a lot," Jordan said.

His father had urged him to retire after the Bulls won their first championship, Jordan said, but "I felt I still had a lot to prove." Jordan said he was leaning toward retiring immediately after the Bulls won their third championship, but wanted to wait until just before the start of this season "to see if my heart would change." He said he discovered "the desire was not there."

now," Jordan said.

"Five years down the line, if the urge comes back, if the Bulls will have me and (NBA commissioner) David Stern lets me back in the league, I may come back. But that's a decision I don't have to make at this moment," Jordan said.

Thanks for the memories Mike

The date was April 12, 1987 and I was attending my first Chicago Bulls game.

It was "Get-Your-Picture-Taken-With-Your-Favorite-Bull" Day, so my parents, my sister and I showed up at Chicago Stadium nearly three hours early to get our picture taken with our favorite Bull.

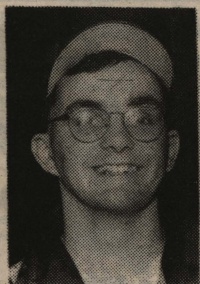

These weren't the Bulls of Michael Jordan, Scottie Pippen and Horace Grant though. These were the pre-World Championship days of Michael and the Jordanares. Names like Gene Banks, Elston Turner and Granville Waiters littered the Bulls' roster at the time.

After waiting in a line that stretched around the concourse of the stadium for 90 minutes or so, I finally reached the floor of the stadium. Several Bulls' players were standing in line under one of the baskets posing for photos with the fans.

At that time, I found out that getting your picture taken with "your favorite Bull" meant that they filed you into lines so everyone wouldn't request getting their photo taken with Jordan, the only favorite Bull on a team which struggled just to make the playoffs back then.

Roberts' discipline paying off for herself, Lady Panthers

By JOHN COX
Staff writer

Senior Lady Panther Brooke Roberts was recently awarded Mid-Continent Conference Athlete of the Week, for the week of Sept. 27 to Oct. 3, for her third place finish in the EIU Invitational.

Roberts, in her fourth year with the women's cross-country team, has been improving as the season progresses. Her time has gradually fallen while her placement in invitational continue to rise. Coach John Craft said that this improvement is credited to Roberts' disciplined training habits.

"She's a very dedicated person, she's very conscientious. She follows through with sheer commitment and she's early to everything," Craft said. "You've got to have that dedication in order to be a distance runner because the life of a distance runner, for all practical purposes,

Bond's road draws to close

By BRIAN HARRIS
Staff writer

For the first time in his four seasons on the varsity cross country team, Kenric Bond won't be making this weekend's road trip.

Bond, who has finished as high as the fourth-man on the team in previous years, has been struggling as the 15th man this season; and Coach John McInerney is only taking 14 runners to the Indiana Invitational Saturday.

His chances of making it back on the traveling team are limited. In fact, his only chance of making the Mid-Continent Conference race in three weeks, where McInerney is allowed just 12 entrants, is if he cuts a minute off his season-best for 8,000 meters at a junior varsity race at Southern Illinois-Edwardsville next week.

"I've been real frustrated," said Bond. "It's been keeping me up at night. I've never been left home for an away meet."
