Utility costs to students cut after reassessment

by Marsha Hausser

The total amount of money students will have to pay in utility costs for buildings on campus which are used primarily by students has been decreased by approximately $272,000, after a reassessment was made of the amount of space at Eastern which is used by students.

George Miller, vice president for administration and finance at Eastern, said the reduction was made based on the amount of space used by students in auxiliary enterprise buildings (residence halls, food services, the University Union, married student housing and the Textbook Library).

Following the Illinois Board of Higher Education's directive in 1978 that state universities transfer to the students utility costs of buildings which primarily students use, Eastern administrators calculated the amount of square feet in the auxiliary enterprise buildings.

That number produced a figure of approximately 711,000 feet which accounted for $712,800 in operating costs which would be passed on to students in increasing percentages each year until 1985, when students would be paying the total utility costs for the auxiliary enterprise buildings.

Currently, Eastern is paying the majority of utility costs for those buildings, using approximately $30,000 of the money collected from the auxiliary enterprise fees this semester for some of the costs.

After reassessing both the amount of space included in the total figure for grounds maintenance around auxiliary enterprise buildings and the space used in those buildings by students, Miller said 75,000 square feet was subtracted from the total amount of space originally calculated.

Any space in auxiliary enterprise buildings which is used for university-related activities was taken out of the total amount of space, Miller said. Also, the costs for grounds maintenance have been reduced to cover 20 feet around each auxiliary enterprise building.

Miller said this was the first cut in auxiliary enterprise costs the university has been able to substantiate.

Following the reductions, Eastern students will have to assume the remaining $487,000 through auxiliary enterprise fees, Miller said. Next year $98,000 of that total will be paid by students. That amount still must be approved by the Board of Governors.

The exact amount in fees which students will have to pay will be determined based on the occupancy rate in the residence halls and usage of the auxiliary enterprise facilities, Miller said.

This semester all students paid 50 cents in auxiliary enterprise fees, residence hall residents paid $6.50 and students in married student housing paid $3 a month.

Eastern plans budget for conserving energy

by Laura Rzepka

Eastern is proposing a budget request of $467,000 in improvements to conserve energy to comply with the Illinois Board of Higher Education's request that Illinois universities intensify their energy conservation efforts.

If the 17 items in the proposed package are approved, Eastern will save an estimated $265,000 in the first year it takes effect, which would be 1982.

The request is currently in the office of Institutional Research and Planning for examination.

"We're in charge of generating capital budget requests so we are picking out the pieces (of the proposal) that require capital funds," Barbara Platt, acting director of Institutional Research and Planning, said.

The request is due to the IBHE for approval by Oct. 1. It will then go before the Board of Governors by the end of next April, Platt said.

The proposed budget request was compiled by Martin Ignazito, assistant director of the physical plant, along with engineers in the heat plant, electricians and plumbers on campus, Platt said.

Eastern received capital appropriations for energy conservation research totalling $8,300 from the IBHE for 1979. However, Ignazito said he "never saw a nickel of it."

Platt said the money was used to purchase a new energy computer last year which helps to lower energy consumption.

Ignazito said although some of the proposed projects will probably be cut, the energy conservation proposals will be beneficial.

"Almost none of them will take more than two years to pay for themselves. The proposals are based on a short payback term," he said.

If the proposals to reduce energy consumption are approved there is a possibility that students will be paying less for utilities.

"Actually, the price students pay will be equalized with the costs of higher energy costs. Relatively, they will be paying less," Platt said.

One proposal to conserve energy is to install a submetering system. The bulk of the electricity on campus is measured on two main meters, Ignazito said.

There is also only one gas meter and one water meter for the campus, he added.

Another proposal is to meter the steam generated to individual buildings, Ignazito said.

"Right now we know how much leaves the boiler plant but we don't know how much each individual building is using," he said.

Expanding the computer system is also a priority on the budget request list. By obtaining a fixed schedule the computer can measure the outside air

Professor, wife face lawsuit from Moonie son

by Jerry Falstrom

The son of an Eastern professor has filed a $10 million lawsuit against his parents and several others claiming his civil rights were violated when his parents tried to take him from the Rev. Sun Myung Moon's Unification Church.

Will Cooper, 23, filed the suit Tuesday in U.S. District Court in San Francisco against George and June Cooper. George Cooper is a professor in business education at Eastern.

Also named in the suit are members of the Oakland, Calif. and South San Francisco police departments and seven other individuals the Coopers allegedly hired to take Will from the church.

Will has been a "Moonie" -- a member of the Unification Church-- for the past three and one-half years. He is a 1975 graduate of Charleston High School.

The suit arose from a visit the Coopers paid to Will last January. He spent several days with his family then, but left their motel room one night and returned to the church.

The Coopers went public with their ordeal in a Feb. 1 article in the Charleston Times-Courier.

The suit claims that through "coercion and deprivation liberty" the defendants tried to get Will to "denounce his religion."

The suit claims that Will was kidnapped in violation of his civil rights --freedom of religion, speech and assembly-- and charges the defendants with assault and battery and false imprisonment.

According to the suit, Will was abducted Jan. 4 and taken to a Holiday Inn in South San Francisco.

Members of the Cooper family could not be reached for comment.

Moon, a Korean native, has come under congressional investigation in the past for the church's use of "coercive persuasion" and other tactics used to recruit new members.

A U.S. congressional committee was formed in February, 1979 to investigate religious cults.

According to testimony in the investigation, Moon has manipulated thousands of young Americans into self-sacrifice to raise funds to finance his economic, political and theocratic ambitions.

Moon's philosophy is defined in his book of "Divine Principles." The book, Moon's blueprint of history, calls for the world to be dominated by his leadership after a war, real or spiritual.

To get their children back, many parents of moonies have employed "deprogrammers" --people hired to

Hostage release stalled again

Iranian Foreign Minister Sadegh Ghotbzadeh said the embassy militants Sunday imposed two conditions for the transfer of American hostages to government authority. He chastised the captors for their action, saying it exposed their behavior to the nation.

"It is certain the students do not intend to hand over the hostages or to let the United Nations commission visit them," Ghotbzadeh said in a statement reported by the official Pars news agency. It did not indicate whether he meant the captors never would turn the approximately 50 hostages over.

Columbian leader wants 'bloodless solution'

President Julio Cesar Turbay Ayala said Sunday he favors a "bloodless solution" to the standoff at the Dominican Republic Embassy, where at least two dozen hostages, including U.S. Ambassador Diego Asencio, spent their 12th day in captivity at the hands of leftist guerrillas.

However, the president declined to say what steps he would take to achieve a peaceful settlement, and he specifically refused to answer a question about whether he would meet the guerrillas' key demand - the release of hundreds of political prisoners.

"I want this situation to be resolved in the best possible way," Turbay Ayala told reporters, adding that the hostages' "safe release does not depend on the government alone."

Gacy testimony nears end

The trial of John W. Gacy Jr., charged with more murders than anyone in the nation's history, begins what could be the last day of testimony Monday before closing arguments.

The defense announced Saturday it would have no more rebuttal witnesses on behalf of the 37-year-old contractor charged with 33 sex-related murders of boys and young men.

Connally quits race after primary defeat

HOUSTON (AP) - Former Texas Governor John Connally, beaten a day before in South Carolina where he hoped to launch a serious bid for the Republican presidential nomination, stepped out of the race Sunday.

Connally, who announced his candidacy one year ago, said it no longer would be "to the good of my party and the nation for me to continue my candidacy."

He said that from the first he realized it was an uphill battle to win the nomination and now "among all my home folks I am withdrawing as a candidate. But, I am not withdrawing from politics, as I will continue to speak out on all the issues."

Former California Gov. Ronald Reagan won South Carolina's 25 delegates while collecting about 54 percent of the vote.

Connally withdrew before 700 supporters, many of them who had been with him when he first announced.

Rep. John Anderson of Illinois, campaigning in snowy Wisconsin, said Sunday that "I honestly believe" the race for the Republican presidential nomination has narrowed to himself, Ronald Reagan and George Bush.

He acknowledged, however, "the possible addition" of a fourth candidate - former President Gerald R. Ford.

"I hope to do sufficiently well here in Illinois on the 18th of March that I can call my old friend, President Ford, on the 19th and suggest on the basis of my performance that he ought to endorse me," Anderson said.

Jones predicts increasing need for teachers

by Sue Schlanser

Demands for teachers in the first half of the 1980s will increase, Robert Jones, assistant director of Eastern's Placement Center, said recently.

The decreasing number of students going into education and the small salaries earned by teachers are reasons for this development, Jones said.

"It's all a matter of supply and demand," he said. Jones explained that in the 1960s, a large number of students graduated as teachers so that in the 1970s, there were not enough openings to go around.

"We would try to scare them out of teaching because there weren't enough jobs," he said.

But because students were not becoming teachers in the 1970s, the situation in the 1980s is now reversed.

He said in the early 1970s, 50 percent of the graduates looking for teaching jobs found openings while in 1979, 68 percent of them found jobs.

Jones said the Placement Center received 687 openings for English teachers in 1979, but only 14 of the graduates last year had registered to teach that subject.

Similarly, the Center received 660 openings in math, but only 17 students were registered to teach it.

Fields which Jones labeled as having "critical" shortages are agriculture, chemistry, mathematics, physics, science, school psychology, speech pathology, technology education, vocational subjects and special education.

"Dangerous" shortages, those which Jones believes will soon develop, are English, foreign languages and business education.

Jones said teachers who can combine two fields will be especially sought after.

Mobility is a factor in finding a teaching job, Jones said, but shortages in Illinois are widespread.

About 20,000 jobs will be available for teachers in the Chicago area and about 80,000 will be available downstate this year, Jones said.

Jones said one reason students are not entering the field, and those who have teaching degrees are not teaching, is the low salaries teachers are paid.

"So many of the people will go into industry or business because they can make a lot more money," he said.

Jones said school boards should take the blame for small teaching salaries. "If they're going to get good quality teachers, they're going to have to pay more."

Jones predicted that teachers' wages will probably increase, but he added that while the average salary for inexperienced teachers increased in 1979 by approximately $600 over the previous year, business salaries went up over $1,000.

John Groupe, who graduated from Eastern last year and currently teaches at Beecher City High School in Illinois, said he received from 20 to 30 calls for jobs and added that two of them were from out of state.

He said he chose Beecher City because it is not far away from his hometown of Effingham.

He added that salary was not a factor in his decision.

Tim Dooling, another '79 graduate, who received an English degree from Eastern, is presently working for his hometown newspaper, the Effingham Daily News.

Dooling said in the last four or five weeks of last summer, he received calls from schools needing English teachers about once a week, but since he had been going to college for about five or six years, he decided he needed to take a break from school.

However, Dooling said he does plan to find a teaching job for this fall and when he does, he would like to move away from Effingham.

"I think you should get away from where you started from," he said.

Legal service for Eastern still awaits final approval

by Laura Henry

Although final approval of a student legal service for Eastern is still pending, a campus site for the service has been chosen and office supplies have been ordered.

The proposal was approved by Eastern President Daniel E. Marvin, faculty and students last fall. It is awaiting final approval by the Board of Governors.

Student Senator Bob Glover said the proposal has been placed on the agenda for the BOG's march meeting.

Bill Clark, area head of the University Union, said no formal motions have been made by the senate to approve placing the service in the Union addition Iroquois Room, but he added that there was "no controversy" over where the service would be located.

"We have been planning for some time on the Iroquois Room because it seemed to be the most likely location to suit our needs. We hope to remodel in the future, as this is only a temporary location, Clark said.

He added that if approved, the service might be moved later to a more central location in the Union.

Office supplies have also been ordered at no obligation to the university.

"The university is under no monetary obligation as our purchase order can be cancelled at any time in case the BOG decided not to pass the proposal," Don Cook, program administrator of finances, said.

Although students agreed in a referendum last semester to a $2 increase in fees to finance the legal operation, this increase will not go into effect until fall semester.

Student Body President Bill Houlihan said the BOG had recommended changes in the original proposal.

According to the revised program, legal service lawyers are prohibited from handling cases involving the university, the BOG or the state of Illinois, said Houlihan.

Houlihan said the BOG also recommended the service provide malpractice insurance for the attorney. The insurance would be added to the attorney's salary which is proposed at $15,000 per year.

The legal service office will still be staffed by one full-time attorney, a full-time secretary and one pre-law intern, as outlined in the program description. All staff will be university employees.

"We would like to have a lawyer in here by August 1, if the BOG passes the proposal, so that he would be familiar with Eastern by the time students get here August 25," Cook said.

to regulate the amount of heat needed, Ignazito said.

New lighting for Lantz Gym can prove to be an asset in energy conservation because a new system will give the same illumination but be five times more efficient, he said.

Another proposal is to hire people from a testing and balancing firm to study the possibility of lowering the horsepower on the fan system for circulating air in all buildings. "Traditionally they are over-designed. They're larger than they should be," Ignazito said.

Hopefully the steam radiators with hand valves can be replaced with automatic valves which will measure the temperature in rooms, he added.

The installation of timers for window air conditioners and classroom lighting would also benefit the energy conservation efforts, Ignazito said.

The lights would be on only as long as the class was in session.

Letters to the editor

Why have an IAB?

Editor,

Why have an Intercollegiate Athletic Board?

The events on campus in recent months indicate that many people who do not know the purpose, by-laws, goals or objectives of an IAB are putting their own ideas for the group ahead of the interests of the "university." Some institutions such as the University of New Mexico, the University of Miami and my alma mater have ignored the wisdom of having an effective IAB on their campuses. All three of these institutions and others are in legal trouble and it may be because of an inactive IAB.

In order to let the students and faculty know why we have an IAB I am xeroxing the pertinent paragraphs of the NCAA rules and enclose them as a part of this letter.

Our university presidents have decided that they want such a board to work with the athletic director and the athletic program. Our current president has expressed a serious interest in having the board meet at least once a month and to take an active part in working to give Eastern a superior athletic program the students deserve. The Board is to work with the total athletic program to assure that both the men's and women's programs are well received.

No. 89—Institutional Control—Athletic Board

Situation: The chief executive officer of an institution has ultimate responsibility and final authority over the athletic board of an institution.

Question: Does the chief executive officer's authority in such a case satisfy the principle of institutional control and responsibility and eliminate the requirement for athletic board membership as set forth in Constitution

3-2(a)?

Answer: No. The board of athletics, which has the responsibility for advising or establishing athletic policies and making policy decisions, must be constituted in accordance with Constitution 3-2-(a), regardless of the chief executive officer's responsibility and authority. (C 3-2-(a))

Section 2. Principle of Institutional Control and Responsibility. The control and responsibility for the conduct of intercollegiate athletics shall be exercised by the institution itself and by the conference, if any, of which it is a member. (Case Nos. 85 through 87)

(a) Administrative control or faculty control, or a combination of the two, shall constitute institutional control. Administration and/or faculty staff members must constitute at least a majority of the board in control of intercollegiate athletics or of the athletic advisory board.

No. 92—Institutional Control—Student Fees

Situation: An institution's intercollegiate athletic program is financed by student fees to the degree that the allocation of such fees is of sufficient magnitude to affect the intercollegiate athletic policies and programs, and in fact control is exercised through that device. (193)

Question: Under these conditions, is it necessary that the board in control of determining the allocation of these fees satisfy the requirements of Constitution 3-2-(a)?

Answer: Yes. Administration and/or faculty staff members must constitute at least a simple majority, or any other necessary parliamentary majority, of the board in control. (C 3-2-(a))

Editor,

This letter is directed to Name Withheld and any other persons who are uneducated about the Equal Rights Amendment and its implications.

First of all, Congress already has the power to draft women, if necessary. The U.S. Constitution gives the Congress the power "to raise and support armies...To provide and maintain a navy." There were no restrictions or limitations on this "great power;" and the Supreme Court has held that it will not even review the manner in which this power is exercised. Selective Draft Law Cases 245 U.S. 360 (1918) Lichter v. U.S., 334 U.S. 742 (1948).

Furthermore, every person is subject to be called for military duty in the public safety. It is for Congress to say when, who, to what extent and how they are to be selected. Warren v. U.S. 177 F. 2nd 596 (1949)

Secondly, according to the Department of Defense, women were requisitioned to serve in both World Wars and the Vietnam war as medical personnel.

Women are given fewer educational training and advancement opportunities than men in the largest single vocational training institution in our country. The Department of Defense say approximately 83 percent of enlisted women are in the four lowest pay grades as compared to 68 percent of the enlisted men. The four highest pay grades hold 23 percent of enlisted men and only 3 percent of enlisted women.

Officer training programs and many specialties are closed to women except to token numbers. Using even the most inclusive measures, 75 percent of the positions in the military are unavailable to women because they are defined as combat-related or because they are reserved to provide rotational and career progression slots for men.

Under the Equal Rights Amendment, the military's practices, regulation, statutes and policies that discriminate on the basis of sex would be held unconstitutional. People would serve in the armed forces according to their own abilities. The national defense would gain by increasing the size of the talented personnel pool at lower recruiting costs while women would have an increased number of jobs, training programs, and financial benefits.

The loan sharks have it made these days

"He's here, sir," the skinny employee said.

The huge, muscular man leaned forward across his finely-polished mahogany desk, rolled his cigar from one side of his mouth to the other, and then motioned for the employee to come close to him. When his underling was within reach, the huge man grabbed him and pulled him to within inches of the cigar's burning tip.

"You're SURE he's okay?" the huge man asked. "Yeah, yeah, I checked him out myself," the employee anxiously answered. After reading his employees eyes briefly, the huge man loosened his grip and said, "alright Frank, let him in."

Frank opened the office door and moved aside for an obviously nervous individual who entered slowly, respectfully holding his Stetson hat close to his chest. He sank into the plush high-backed chair offered to him by the huge man. Frank stood watch behind the chair.

"I understand you need a loan," the huge man said to the newcomer. "Why did you come here?"

"I'm a construction worker, and since the economy is so slow, we haven't had any work," he said. "But I still have a family to feed and bills to pay."

"But why did you come HERE?" the huge man repeated.

The construction worker finally understood the question and answered, "I heard you could help me out...I can't get a loan anywhere else, and I hear that you have the fairest rates—at least considering the circumstances."

All letters to the editor must carry the name, address and telephone number of their authors for identification purposes. Letters which so not carry this information will not be published. Names will be withheld upon request.

This last compliment pleased the huge man. "So maybe we consider lending you some money," he said. "Do you know the terms?"

Gulping, the construction worker lowered his eyes and said, "25 percent interest?" in a faltering voice.

"That's for our blue chip clients!" the huge man roared. "It'll be 50 percent for you, and don't be late with the payments—agreed?"

The construction worker was shocked, but he realized he was trapped—he had nowhere else to go. He sobbed as he nodded agreement to the terms. The huge man motioned to Frank, who then escorted the cowed man from the office.

The huge man squeezed his cigar with the right side of his mouth as he watched the construction worker dejectedly enter a 1973 Pinto which was parked in the company lot. As the car sped away, the huge man's attention turned to the day's newspaper and a headline which read, "Prime Lending Rate Goes Up Again."

Angrily, he pounded his grisly fist on his desk top, tipping the nameplate which identified him as the bank's president.

Cupping his face in his hands, he waited for the next loan applicant to enter while he wondered again how much longer this would continue.

If the Booth Library were to be kept open until at least 9:00 on the Saturday before finals, I believe many students would benefit.

Editor,

The letter by B. Amad entitled "Inside the Draft" which appeared in your Monday issue reminded me of the type of student editorials that greeted me when I returned from Vietnam in the late 60's.

Charleston first graders provide

Eastern senior Rick Garrett is student teaching at Carl Sandburg elementary school in Charleston. Garrett gave his first grade class an assignment to write letters to

by Sue Ann Rentfrow

Another idea has been suggested to help combat rising utility costs at Eastern—just turn down the heat.

This was the suggestion that 29 first graders at Charleston's Carl Sandburg elementary school gave to their student teacher Rick Garrett.

Garrett, an Eastern senior who lives in Taylor Hall, said the class was discussing energy. He said he told the students that in the residence halls at Eastern, it sometimes gets so hot that students have to open their windows to get fresh air.

"Everyone got real fired up over this and they wanted to march over and tell the school to turn down the heat," he said. "I suggested writing letters to the school instead."

The result was 29 letters written in pencil on one-inch ruled paper, addressed to EIU, the university and the university managers. Garrett delivered them to Eastern's physical plant supervisor Everett Alms.

"It's beautiful that kids that age would take an interest," Alms said. "I read every one of the letters."

One of the first graders, 6-year-old Tom Skinner, said the class wrote the letters "because we wanted to save energy."

"I just told them to turn down the heat," he added.

Mandy Harry, another 6-year-old, said the university should not turn up the heat. "Then students would not have to pay the bill," she added.

All of the letters mentioned turning down the Answers to rising utility costs heat as the solution to the problem of over-heated rooms. Alms said this would not really solve the problem.

He said Andrews, Taylor and Thomas halls are heated by hot air units that have two controls on each floor.

"These controls are in students' rooms," he said. "If those students want a little fresh air they crank open the window and this causes the heater to work harder. This makes the other residents miserable."

He said the other students then open their windows too, so they can get some air. This makes the problem worse because the heat will come on even more, he added.

"Unless the students absorbed 100 percent of the heating costs as they would in an apartment, they won't be very concerned about the costs," he said.

"There is a flat cost for housing that doesn't increase with the amount of heat students waste," he added. He said the individual controls in each room in Carman are probably the best type. The residents there have pretty much control over the temperature in their rooms, he said.

Alms said many of the residence halls have different types of heating because they were built at separate times by different engineers.

Turning the heat down may sound like the logical thing to do, but Alms said it will not solve the problem.

"If students were more aware of how their rooms are heated," he said, "they just might be more cautious about opening those windows."

Campus organizations swing into state primaries

by Becky Suprenant

The Young Democrats and the College Republicans at Eastern are in full swing as area politics heat up for the Illinois primary.

College Republicans, said, "we're back on our feet again. Last year we had some trouble, but things are going good now."

The College Republicans try to provide a link between the candidate and the student, Scholes said.

Any Republican can join the group, which presently has 74 members, Scholes said.

"We're going to have some of the area candidates come and speak. Paul Komada, Charles Authenreith and a U.S. Representative for George Bush will be there," he added.

Another very active political organization at this time of the year is the Young Democrats.

Mike Nowak, president of the Young Democrats, said, "We've voted unanimously to back Larry Stuffle, Alan Dixon, Pete Voelz and Larry Summary."

The organization has three precinct committee men who cover different areas of the campus and distribute campaign pamphlets, Nowak said.

Most of the work is done on a volunteer basis, he added.

"We make a list of the Democrats and Republicans from a precinct list. Then we fold the letters, stuff the envelopes and seal and address them so they can be sent to the Democrats of the area," Nowak said.

"The Young Democrats is an organization designed to perpetuate and foster the ideals of the Democratic party," he said.

The supporters for Senator Kennedy, another local group, work in conjunction with the Young Democrats, he added.

Fred MacLaren, who is on the slate of candidates for the National Democratic Nominating Convention, is heading this group.

MacLaren said, "The group was formed to generate support for the slate of seven candidates from the 22nd district running for the Democratic Nominating Convention."

"The turnout for the meetings has been good so far," MacLaren said.

break the moonie's devotion to the church.

During the congressional inquiry, Ted Patrick, who has deprogrammed more than 100 persons, testified about religious cults.

"I beg of you to please do something about these cults," he said. "I consider them the most dangerous institution in the history of mankind. They make willing slaves out of their members."

A former moonie who was deprogrammed over a two-week period, has said, "We practiced deception. If we had to resort to lies to get people to buy flowers, we did it."

"When recruiting new members we looked for young people who were traveling, so they were not rooted. We invited them to dinner and didn't tell that we represented the Unification Church," she said.

Will Cooper had taken a trip to Colorado with a friend in 1976, and while the friend returned to Charleston, Will decided to hitchhike out to the west coast.

In a recent Charleston Times-Courier article, George Cooper said Will got a ride from a member of the Unification Church in Salt Lake City. When he got to San Francisco, Will called the Coopers and said he had been invited to dinner by some people he had met, Cooper said.

A practice called "Heavenly deception" was disclosed during a special Illinois house commission investigating cults last September.

Volleyball club captures Eastern Invitational

by Jane Meyer

Eastern's men's volleyball club won its own invitational this weekend by beating Illinois State University, the University of Illinois-Chicago Circle and Wheaton College.

Eastern opened up the day against Wheaton by losing the first game. Scores were not available for pool play.

"We opened up really slow in pool play," team member Mark Atkinson said.

The club came back to take the second game of the match.

Eastern's next opponent was its own junior varsity which it also beat.

Eastern defeated ISU in the third game of pool action.

Via the wins in pool play, Eastern came out with the No. 1 seed position, advancing into bracket action.

In the first round of bracket play,

Eastern easily defeated UICC 15-9 and 15-10.

In semifinal action, ISU defeated Wheaton two out of three games 11-5, 15-10 and 15-12.

In the championship round, Eastern once again had an easy victory 15-8 and 15-11.

UICC defeated Wheaton 15-12 to win the third place contest.

Atkinson said both ISU and UICC provided tough competition.

"Both of those teams are really scrappy," Atkinson said. "ISU has improved a lot because they have been playing together for the past two years. They have the potential of becoming a high caliber team."

Atkinson cited performances by Jean Claude Druetz, Gary Stewardson and Fred Martin as major keys to the overall team victory.

"I was injured during pool play so Fred stepped in to set and did a neck of a job," Atkinson said. "Gary and Jean are always key performers."

Charleston in the championship game 78-58.

In Friday night's action, the University of Charleston, ranked sixth in the AIAW Division II poll, rolled up a 47-34 halftime lead in its quest for a victory.

The Panthers outscored the U of C 48-41 in a second half comeback attempt, but their efforts came up short.

In that game Ellsworth scored 23 points and pulled in 15 rebounds while Archer tossed in 20 points and grabbed 11 rebounds.

Huber and Kassebaum were at scoring lows with 10 each.

After three games, Ellsworth and teammate Joann Archer were selected for the Regional Tournament Team.

Ellsworth finished the tourney with 62 points and 40 rebounds while Archer chipped in 52 points for a 17 point per game scoring average.

The Panthers ended the season at 20-11 for the first time in Eastern's women's basketball history. The third place showing in the region was also their best ever.

Despite the injury setbacks, some healthy tracksters did assert themselves in the competitive field.

On Friday night Eastern took second, fourth and sixth in the three mile run. Senior Joe Sheeran edged out Mike Matteson of ISU at the tape to take second place with a time of 14:15.74.

In the 880-yard run junior Bob Feller finished third in 2:12.64. Feller was not much off the pace of the winning time of 2:12.38 by Lonnie Bissell of U of I. Don Burns of WIU was second in 2:12.43.

The mile relay team of Feller, Merrill Kaney (50.0), Scott Harrison (51.0) and Kevin Krammer (51.5) ended up fifth in 3:24.3.

Augustine Oruwari tied for second in the 60-yard high hurdles with a time of 7.46. The winning time was 7.39 by David Lee of SIU-C.

Senior Pat Hodge took fifth in the 880-yard run with a 1:56.40 clocking. His run bettered his previous best time in the 880-yard run in indoor track. Hodge's run seems even more outstanding considering he had just finished the 1,000-yard run earlier.

In fact, when the last call for the 880-yard run was given, Hodge was still on the trainer's table after running the 1,000-yard run," Moore said. "But he came back and ran a real fine race," he added.

Women cagers place third in regional tourney

Eastern's women's basketball team stormed back from a 10 point halftime deficit and went on to defeat Northern Michigan 79-75 Saturday for third place in the regional tournament at Wisconsin Green-Bay.

The Panthers defeated host Wisconsin Green-Bay 70-58 Thursday, but were six points short of upsetting nationally ranked University of Charleston West Virginia.

With eight seconds remaining in the consolation game, Northern Michigan trailed the Panthers 77-75 and called a time out to regroup.

Head coach Bobbie Hilke said she anticipated the inbound pass would go to either forward Lori Juntilla or Mary Bykowski, but had previously decided to have Linda Ellsworth and Nancy Kassebaum double team Juntilla.

Northern Michigan, having to go the length of the court, set up Juntilla who averaged 27 points per game going into the contest.

But when play resumed Juntilla dribbled twice but had the ball slapped away by Ellsworth into the hands of Panther guard Sandy Thorpe.

Thorpe was subsequently fouled in the act of shooting and dropped in two free throws for the final points of the game.

Thorpe finished the game with a season-high 14 points, three assists and three steals.

Kassebaum led all scorers in that game with 24 while teammates Ellsworth and Jo Huber added 19 and 12 respectively.

Tracksters place 6th at Ill. Intercollegiates

by Matt Davidson

CHAMPAIGN-The 1980 indoor track season came to an end for Eastern when it placed sixth in the 18 team field of the Illinois Intercollegiates Friday and Saturday at the Armory.

The University of Illinois successfully defended its title by amassing 156 points. Illinois State was second with 125 points, Southern Illinois-Carbonale third with 93, Northern Illinois fourth with 55 1/2 and Western Illinois nabbed fifth with 44 1/4 points. The University of Illinois-Chicago Circle tied the Panthers with 34 points for sixth place.

Eastern's finish was the lowest any Panther team has ever had in the Illinois Intercollegiate Indoor Championships in head coach Neil Moore's six year reign.

Moore attributed the low finish to two factors: the $4,200 budget cut his tracksters suffered this year and the unusual number of injuries to leading performers.

Bob Johnson, Reo Rorem, Sam Moore and Joe Snyder all were held out of action this weekend. Snyder was scheduled to run the 600-yard run but suffered a recurrence of an old leg injury on Friday.

Losing a Division II national champion hurdler (Johnson), a distance runner (Rorem), a pole vaulter (Moore) and a 600-yard specialist and mile relay anchor man in Snyder would affect most any team, Moore said. "Those people are All-American types."

Money woes may not deter athletic dept. growth

Now that Eastern's athletic decision-makers have had a couple of weeks to mull over the results of the Feb. 20 athletic fee referendum, it appears they have made a decision in regard to the future of Eastern's sports.

And that decision is for Eastern athletics to try to forge on full-steam ahead and possibly move into Division I status.

Such an attitude may seem rather unrealistic in view of the advisory referendum's results, in which a proposal to increase operational fees was defeated by a 53 vote margin. (A proposal to increase fees for grant-in-aid money was passed). And it may appear ridiculous when one considers that Eastern President Daniel E. Marvin has decided not to recommend an operations fee increase to the Board of Governors. And finally, the possibility of Eastern athletic growth may seem impossible if one were to believe the dire predictions for Eastern sports which some Intercollegiate Athletic Board members offered in light of the referendum results. Example: IAB Chairman Lewis Coon said the result of budget cuts which could conceivably come if the advisory referendum were followed would be that "instead of playing the quality of football people have enjoyed watching for the last two years, we'll have what we had before that."

However, it appears the powers within the Eastern athletic structure are considering a couple of ways to overcome these obstacles.

First, Marvin said last week that since he is not going to recommend an operations fee increase, "ticket prices may be recommended to go up." Assistant Athletic Director Ron Paap subsequently said ticket price increases are "something that's being considered."

Andy

And secondly, when asked how he thought Eastern athletics could maintain its current quality, Athletic Director R.C. Johnson said Eastern has "just scratched the surface" concerning outside contributions.

So, it would seem that if Johnson's and Marvin's statements are transformed into successful action, the athletic department is not in as much of a financial bind as it was made out to be. In fact, the IAB now has a committee looking into the feasibility of Eastern moving up into Division I. Many individuals, including Johnson, believe such a move would probably be cheaper in the long run because the cost of traveling to the dwindling number of Division II schools would be prohibitive. But if Eastern were to climb into Division I, there would also be some immediate increased expenses in terms of offering more scholarships, etc.

But regardless of whether Eastern goes Division I, it is clear that the future of Panther sports is at least being pointed in the direction of maintaining what it has, if not expanding.

But whether this can be accomplished is another question entirely. Raising ticket prices could bring in the desired amount of revenue, but it also could backfire if only 5,000 students decide to go to a football game at, let us say, $3 a head instead of 10,000 students at $1.50.

As for Eastern having "just scratched the surface" in regard to outside contributions, for now I will take Johnson's word for it that such is the case. But it is also common knowledge that one of former Athletic Director Mike Mullally's greatest talents was as a fund-raiser. So, it is pretty hard to figure out how Johnson expects to be any more effective than Mullally in that regard.

But I hope he succeeds. And I hope that ticket price increases (if instituted) do not cut into attendance and have the desired financial effect, whatever that may be. Because it seems to me that the boosters and students that attend the games are the people who are most interested in seeing Eastern athletics flourish. Therefore, they should be the people who pay for them.

Of course, many people believe that athletics make money for the university and therefore should be given monetary and spiritual support by the entire student body. There is some merit in this argument, but available space does not allow me to quibble about it here.

However, one aspect of Eastern's athletic situation does appear to be clear: Even though Eastern students have partially defeated a proposal to give its athletic department more money and even though some individuals considered this defeat as a serious blow to Eastern sports, the department is not yet ready to shrivel up and die.
