by Amy Zurawski

Sometimes, the right man comes along at the right time and changes the course of history. Such a man, black Eastern instructors say, was Martin Luther King, Jr., who would have been 56 Tuesday.

Eastern sociology instructor Johnetta Jones said, "Occasionally, the right man comes along at the right time, and the net result is a change in the way society moves. King was that man."

King, who was assassinated on April 4, 1968 in Memphis, was instrumental in the passage of the Voting Rights Act of 1964 and the Civil Rights Act of 1965, both revolutionary pieces of black civil rights legislation.

Eastern history instructor Jimmie Franklin said, "If King was alive today, he would be trying to keep Americans on track to gaining equality for everyone—his dream."

"Students should value King's undying quest for the changing and reforming of a society in an attempt to produce a dignity and respect for humans," he said.

Jones said King was a symbol of a movement created by "lots of little people. A movement that was called by some, 'the second American revolution.'"

"The well-educated man that captured a nation's attention was chosen to be the leader of a revolution by a series of events," Jones said.

While Eastern students received Monday off in commemoration of King's birthday, the late civil rights leader's birthday does not become a national holiday until next year. Twenty-five states, including Illinois, and 13 localities have already declared the day a legal holiday.

Congress last year approved a King holiday to be celebrated on the third Monday in January starting in 1986 and set up a commission to coordinate observances next year.

Students may receive less cash from ISSC

by Lori Edwards

Eastern students may receive less money from the Illinois State Scholarship Commission if changes recommended to the Illinois Board of Higher Education are adopted.

The proposed changes include increasing the maximum award at private universities, establishing a Merit Recognition Scholarship and changing the determination for eligibility formulas.

Bob Clement, director of agency relations for the ISSC, said fewer students will receive aid, and monetary awards will be decreased if the new proposal is approved.

However, he said this change will be partially offset by a Congressional proposal to increase Pell awards from $1,900 to $2,100. The ISSC includes Pell awards from the federal government in their formula for need determination.

While the source of funding for one's financial aid is a combination of state and federal aid, with both Pell and ISSC proposals, students are not likely to receive fewer dollars, Clement said.

However, Clement said the ISSC is not sure what President Ronald Reagan is going to recommend for Pell spending. Reagan is expected to submit a budget to Congress later this month.

If the president recommends a freeze it will put all federal funding back to last year's levels, he said.

But John Flynn, Eastern's director of financial aids, said the proposed reductions in ISSC funding will not totally be offset by proposed increases in Pell, and some students will receive less money.

The ISSC can decrease the amount of aid through the monetary award system that has been proposed by raising the need students must demonstrate in order to receive more money.

This could particularly "knock out" students at Eastern, Flynn said, because currently a student only needs a $90 higher need to be in a new bracket and receive more money.

Flynn said that next year it will be difficult for any students to receive the full award, adding that two-thirds of Eastern's financially-aided students currently receive partial awards. Flynn said that more partial awards are likely to be disbursed than in 1984.

Currently, the minimum award granted by ISSC is $240. In order to receive the next highest award of $330, students must show an additional (See STUDENTS, page 7)

City officials get legislative help in factory dilemma

by Kevin McDermott

A lack of information regarding the imminent closing of the Samuel shoe factory is making things difficult for city officials trying to find ways to soften the economic impact of the closing.

In an effort to cut Charleston's losses—specifically, the loss of more than 200 local jobs—city officials are considering several ideas and are conferring with the factory's owners and area legislators.

Mayor Clancy Pfeiffer announced last Tuesday that Samuels, North Fifth Street Road, is scheduled to close sometime this year. The factory, which employs 200-300 workers, is owned by the Brown company of St. Louis.

Since the announcement last week, city officials have been trying to get further details about the closing. It is still not known when the factory will actually close or how many of its employees will be transferred to other Brown factories.

U.S. Rep. Terry Bruce, D-Ill., met Friday with Charleston officials to discuss the situation, and participated in a conference call to Brown company officials.

During the discussion, Pfeiffer said Bruce suggested the company get involved with the Trade Readjustment Assistance Program, a federal program designed to help unemployed workers who have lost their jobs due to foreign competition.

Bruce could not be reached for comment Monday about the Friday meeting. However, City Administrator Mike Steele, who also participated in the conference, said Monday the program requires "a lot of time and paperwork" to show that the jobs were lost because of the effects of foreign imports. Once that is shown, he said, those workers can get extensions on their unemployment benefits.

"They (Brown) expressed a genuine interest in participating in that program," Steele said, adding that, "It would be a cooperative effort between the company and state officials," with no involvement by the city.

Pfeiffer said he, Steele, State Senator Max Coffey, Charleston Chamber of Commerce Director Marty

Owens and others will go to St. Louis Feb. 11 for meetings with Brown company officials.

One possible outcome of the meeting, Pfeiffer said, could be the eventual sale of the company-owned building to the city, so that city officials could find another major business to take its place.

Coffey, a Charleston Republican, said Monday he has contacted the Illinois Department of Commerce and Community Affairs, which will list the 50,000 square-foot building for prospective buyers across the nation.

Although Coffey said he will attend the Feb. 11 meeting, he was skeptical about how much could be done by meeting with Brown officials.

"I'm not sure what their intentions are in going down there (to St. Louis)," Coffey said. "They (the Brown company) made it pretty clear that...there's not going to be any minds changed (about closing the factory)."

Pfeiffer said the Brown company gave no explanation for the closing, but he speculated at last (See CITY, page 7)

NATO decision receives support

WASHINGTON —President Reagan and Belgian Prime Minister Wilfried Martens pledged solid support Monday for the NATO decision to base new nuclear missiles in Western Europe while seeking to reduce superpower arms.

But the Belgian prime minister stopped short of publicly declaring that his nation plans to go ahead with its scheduled March deployment of its share of the U.S.-built missiles.

Reagan, declaring the two hours of talks "friendly and productive," said the two men focused on "alliance resolve" and that the NATO deployment was a "special concern" of the discussions.

The president had planned to advise Martens to reject the advice of his own political party and to stand up for the deployment of the new missiles.

"I reaffirm our attachment to the (NATO) dual-track decision, which is an expression of firmness in defense and of openness for dialogue," Martens said in his departure statement.

House Republicans voice doubts concerning social security freeze

WASHINGTON (AP)—Top House Republicans voiced skepticism Monday that a freeze in Social Security benefits, such as the one being considered by their Senate counterparts as part of an overall deficit-reduction package, could win congressional approval.

In fact, GOP House leaders hinted that reducing federal deficits soaring above $200 billion, while important as a national objective, was not of paramount importance given the current continued economic recovery.

"Frankly, as the economy grows and interest rates continue to decline, you will find that some of the skeptics out there will change their mind," said House Minority Leader Robert Michel, R-Ill.

"We'd all like that utopian balanced budget, but if it isn't there, you ask yourself, how much of a deficit can you absorb?"

Michel made the remarks at a news conference held by GOP leaders to unveil a 70-page volume of proposed initiatives on domestic and foreign policy, a proposal that makes only passing reference to reducing deficits.

Although leaders of both parties have previously said deficit-reduction was Congress' No. 1 priority this year, Michel told reporters: "Not everybody is so possessed with this deficit that every document that is published has to have a bearing on deficit-reduction."

The GOP plan, titled "Ideas for Tomorrow, Choices for Today," calls for tax-codes simplification, curbs on the independence of the Federal Reserve system to "allow greater public scrutiny," and a variety of domestic-policy initiatives.

Flu season begins as cases reported

by Amy Zurawski

The season for stuffy noses, coughs, aches and pains is officially upon Eastern as the flu season begins its usual rounds.

"This time of the year is the height of the flu season and the heaviest for flu reports," Jean Reeves, assistant emergency room head nurse at Sarah Bush Lincoln Health Center, Mattoon, said.

Although January is typically the height of flu season, Reeves said the health center has received "no more reports than usual" this month.

Dr. Jerry Heath, Eastern's Health Service director, also said a "normal" number of flu cases have been reported to the Health Service.

"We haven't had an epidemic of flu yet this year like in past years," Heath said. It is hard to predict the actual number of flu cases that will be reported each year, he added.

Consequently, Heath said about one of every 100 people will be affected by some type of flu this season.

The symptoms these individuals may experience include "a low grade temperature, chills, aches and pains, coughs, diarrhea and sometimes vomiting," Heath said; however, all the symptoms may not be noticeable at one time, he added.

Reeves also said flu symptoms, which usually include coughing, upper respiratory infections or diarrhea, can vary, but if symptoms persist for three or four days, a physician's help should be sought.

If flu symptoms are noticed, "Plenty of rest and fluids should be taken," Reeves said. "Adults can take aspirin for a mild fever, but children and teens should not be given aspirin." Rather, an aspirin-free pain reliever should be taken.

In addition, Heath said a free flu vaccination is available at the Health Service "for anyone who would like one."

Although the vaccination is most effective when it is given in a series of two shots, one shot would help to prevent the chance "of catching the flu," he said.

Hendricks damages case

BLOOMINGTON, Ill. (AP)—David Hendricks, convicted of murdering his wife and three small children, damaged his case by testifying on his own behalf and making a "callous" remark, some jurors say.

Hendricks, a 30-year-old Bloomington back brace designer who was sentenced Friday to life in prison with no chance of parole, "didn't help himself" on the witness stand, said Joseph Alonzo, jury foreman.

He said Hendricks seemed to agree with the testimony of female back-brace models except on potentially damaging points.

Hendricks used the models for advertising purposes and acknowledged he had made sexual advances at some of them. However, he denied telling one model he had affairs and also had doubts about his fundamentalist religion.

"He hurt himself," said juror Sybil Stratton in an interview after Hendricks was sentenced. "He lied and we knew that."

Other jurors said one of Hendricks' most self-incriminating moments came when he said, "It was no skin off my back," in response to a question about a female model who completely disobeyed.

The statement seemed "kind of callous" coming from a man who defense witnesses described as a loving father, said Margaret Goodrich, another of the Winnebago County jurors. "That put a little scar in his halo."

"I was shocked he said that," added juror Sharon Berger.

The jury convicted Hendricks in November of the Nov. 7, 1983, ax-and-knife murders of his wife, Susan, 30, and their three children—Rebekah, 9; Grace, 7; and Benjamin, 5. The trial was moved to the Rockford area because of publicity.

Hendricks' attorney has indicated he plans to appeal the verdict.

Reports made public after the sentencing detailed several psychiatrists' and psychologists' conclusion about Hendricks. Lawyers for Hendricks opposed the release of the reports.

Richard Rappaport, a Chicago psychiatrist, said Hendricks had a character disorder "similar to those borne by serial and mass murderers."

Prosecutors contended Hendricks killed his family because of a conflict over his desire for sexual experience, his fundamentalist religion and image as a good family man.

Hendricks "was a victim himself," said Goodrich.

"Obviously he wanted something else in life and couldn't think of a logical way to change it."

Donald Pearson, a psychologist, added that Hendricks' "dealings with others will make him calculating. He also has pride in himself and his own intelligence. He is a person who enjoys dominance and authority. He seems to be able to intract with others effectively. ... In reality he tends to be much more private."

Hendricks maintained home invaders were responsible for the murders and testified he was out of town when the killings took place.

Senate to hear black views

by Mary Holland

Several black students, including Black Student Union President Paul Robinson, will give a student's perspective on being a minority during Tuesday's faculty senate meeting.

Faculty Senate Chairman Ken Sutton said Robinson will ask several black students to attend the meeting as part of the senate's investigation of Eastern's minority enrollment decline.

"What we're trying to do is get their perspective on what it's like to be a minority student at Eastern," Sutton said. "Maybe they'll have angles on how things can be improved."

Sutton said the senate is "going through the system" to find out how Eastern's minority enrollment can be increased.

In past meetings, the senate has asked Admissions Director John Beacon, Dean of Student Services Sam Taber and several black faculty members to give their views on how black students can be attracted and retained.

In other business, the senate will hear a report from the summer school's committee meeting with Summer School Director Charles Switzer.

The senate is seeking ways to offer more upper division courses in the summer. The senate has suggested shortening the break between intersession and summer session, lowering summer school tuition and expanding the summer school curriculum.

The senate will meet at 2 p.m. Tuesday in the University Union Martinsville Room.

King's dreams still unfulfilled in classrooms

During the height of the civil rights movement, the Rev. Martin Luther King, Jr. was a visionary, an evangelist who spawned a movement by preaching the gospel according to the Constitution.

Through nonviolent marches, sit-ins and boycotts, he was able to set a national agenda without holding a major political office and without being considered a threat by a vast majority of white, middle-class Americans.

But after he won two important black battles—the Voting Rights Act of 1964 and the Civil Rights Bill of 1965—King fell upon hard times: what to do with young blacks who knew they'd never reach the second rung of the job ladder.

A reporter, who covered King until his assassination in 1968, wrote in a Dec. 1983 issue of Esquire that, "Later in his career... his leadership and voice faltered... the task was more complicated. It was no longer a problem of legal or political inequality: Blacks had the right to vote. Rather, the problem was of age-old injustices becoming a hardened part of the culture and of the growth of a hard-core underclass."

Blacks had been relegated to the backs of buses in King's time. Now they have been relegated to the backs of classrooms. Education for blacks in 1985 is still far below what it should be.

At Eastern, the tie between unfair social and economic conditions many blacks have endured and declining minority enrollment are undeniable.

As fewer and fewer blacks get degrees, the white-collar market literally becomes whiter and whiter. And as whites control more and more good jobs, are they likely to complain about the segregated work force? Unfortunately, whites aren't likely to address the issue if blacks don't.

With King's birthday comes the annual opportunity to honor King and his ideal of achieving equality with whites. Seventeen years after his death, society's inbred racism still exists. And remembering the purity of King's movement one day a year just won't cut it. His fight is still in its infancy.

Impression wrong

Editor:

I appreciate the interest the News has shown in my recent experiences as a Fulbright scholar in Korea. On reading Thursday's article, though, I wish I had said less about the tear gas when I was interviewed, and much more about the great friendliness and courtesy I was invariably shown in that country.

I hate to leave a primary impression of turbulence and danger. The Korean society is orderly, hardworking, staunchly pro-American, fairly progressive and justly famous for its hospitality to foreigners. The fact that it still falls short of being a true democracy is the real reason for the chronic student protests, which seize upon campus issues largely as a means of dramatizing the need for reform in the national government.

Remaining unresolved on resolutions

As a youth I never made resolutions. I thought they were for older people who were wise enough and strong enough to carry through on them. I often think I was far more intelligent at 10 than at 20.

The year 1985 has survived over two weeks of existence, but none of my resolutions have done so.

They were easy enough to live up to the first few days. I was in the safety of my parents' nest and all my self-imposed promises were either inapplicable at the time, or just fell into place due to lack of worry.

One of my resolutions was to cut down to smoking one pack of cigarettes a day—a habit which I have been trying to alter for about a year now.

At home it was easy to avoid reaching for the precious packages of tar and nicotine. My parents are both fairly heavy smokers, so I can get a fairly good fix by simply breathing.

Also, I generally light up when I'm in a nerve-racking position or when I'm discussing the meaninglessness of my life. At home, there were few nerve-racking situations. Most of my problems had been left behind on the shelves in my apartment in Charleston. Anything that happened at home could be solved by mom and dad.

My parents don't like to converse about the meaninglessness of my existence, so there was no need to light up for that chat.

Then some of my Eastern problems reappeared and the cancer twigs were letting off smoke in full force again.

Another vow I took on Jan. 1 was to keep my apartment in a moderate state of order. The problem is, I'm basically a slob. I like cleanliness as well as the next person (I take a shower every day), but there's just something about sorting and putting things back in their proper place that goes against my lesser nature. I broke this one before I even got a glimpse of Old Main.

I also told myself that I would study for at least one hour each night—regardless of my assignment load (working ahead and all that). At home, I changed this plan to reading the newspaper to educate myself on current events. That was easy enough—the comics take at least 10 minutes anyway.

What's the point?

Diane Schneidman

And when classes started on Thursday, I didn't have any homework. Besides, I still hadn't picked up my books.

Then Friday came, but it was followed by a three-day weekend. I wouldn't want to be anti-social on an occasion like that by hiding myself in writing a paper; now would I?

In addition, I vowed to control my jealous nature. As some of you may know, I get jealous of my cat so being home didn't help this one—nor did my mother's constant showering of compliments to my cat. Jealousy can't be controlled while there other people vying for the attention one wants. Forget that oath.

My list of resolutions did not end with controlling cigarettes, cleanliness, studying or hypersensitivity. I also resolved to organize my finances. Well, to put it simply, I couldn't find my checkbook to balance it. I found the checks, but not the balancing sheets. Today, I plan to take out a loan to cover my future bouncy-bouncies.

To top it all off, I had six resolutions. Why can I only remember five of them?

Diane Schneidman is the editorial page editor and a regular columnist for The Daily Eastern News.

Reward offered for vandalism of church siding

by Michael Clark
 A $300 reward is being offered by the Heritage Chapel Church of Christ, 917 Woodlawn Drive, for information regarding last week's vandalism incident at the church.

Heritage Chapel Minister Neil Parsons said the church was vandalized late last Tuesday evening or early Wednesday morning. Most of the damage was confined to the building's exterior, including broken siding and windows, he added.

Parsons said the reward was established "for the person who provides information on the property damage."

"There were approximately 20 pane glass windows broken and there was also considerable damage done to the aluminum siding," Parsons said.

Joe Vangundy, a Charleston Police Department detective sergeant, said there are no suspects or motives in the case.

Parsons added the church has not come up with an exact figure of the damage as of Monday.

Tankers earn third place at Illinois Intercollegiate

by Paul C. Klatt
Eastern's men's and women's swimming teams each took third place at the Illinois Intercollegiate swim meet over the weekend.

University of Illinois finished first place in both the men's and women's divisions. Eastern's men had 463 points compared to Illinois' 928, while the women's team had 489 points compared to Illinois' 841.

"They generally did well," Eastern's swim coach Ray Padovan said. "I'm happy with the teams' performance."

Debbie Kroening won the 1,650-yard freestyle Sunday in 18:50.32, while senior Miguel Carrion won the men's 1,650-yard free style with a time of 17:01.24.

"I was happy with my time," Carrion said. "It was my best time of the year." Tracy Sall took second place in the 50-yard free in 25.9 seconds and second in the 100-yard free.

"We do have individuals who can compete in the Big Ten, but we just don't have the depth," assistant coach Robin Walker said.

"We are at the mid-point of the season and doing well," Padovan added.

"The whole team performed great," Carrion said. "A lot of swimmers had their best times of the year."

Overall, Bradley University was second, Illinois-Chicago fourth and Illinois Institute of Technology fifth in the men's competition. In the women's competition, where only three teams competed, Illinois-Chicago finished second.

Eastern's Jon Collins scored a season-high 28 points Saturday, as the Panthers outgunned Northern Iowa 82-63 at Lantz Gym.

The Panthers didn't get out of the chute very fast, though. Five minutes into the game, Northern Iowa led 6-1 as Eastern was 0-for-7 from the field and had seven turnovers.

But the Panthers came out smoking in the second half. After trailing 32-28 at halftime, they scored 54 points on 21-for-38 shooting (55 percent) in the second 20 minutes. Northern Iowa's Randy Kraayenbrink couldn't keep up.

The hosts finally took the lead for good at 38-37 with 16:03 left and got their first 10-point lead six minutes later.

Kraayenbrink, who led the conference in scoring last year and came into Saturday's game with a 20-point average, scored 30. Amazingly, he scored 30 points without making a shot in the first eight minutes of the second half. By the time he scored in the second half, Eastern led 48-43 and was well on its way to the win.

"He'll probably win the scoring title again," Collins said. "But as long as we win the conference, that's all that matters."

Collins, who made a last-second winning shot last Thursday against Pan American, made nine of his 13 shots from the field and made 10 of 12 free throws.

"It's great to see," Eastern coach Rick Samuels said of Collins' efforts, "He wasn't playing like Jon Collins can play (before Saturday). But tonight he did."

Senior Troy Richardson added 11 points and Dirk Androff put in 10.

The game was the first full night of AMCU games. Illinois-Chicago beat Valparaiso 84-64, Cleveland State nailed Wisconsin-Green Bay 82-66, and Southwest Missouri edged Western Illinois. Cleveland State is still atop the standings with a 2-0 record.

Eastern is 6-5 overall and 1-1 in the AMCU. Northern Iowa is 4-7 and 0-1.

Eastern's Tim Dykstra will miss at least six weeks and possibly the rest of the season due to a bone chip in his right wrist.

Dykstra fell on his wrist after he collided with Pan American player in the last minute of Thursday's game.

"He's handled it pretty well," Eastern coach Rick Samuels said. "It hurts because Tim's such a competitive kid and he's never had to look at missing several contests in a row."

"But he's supporting his teammates," Samuels said. "We're going to take him on our trips because he's such a morale booster."

Dykstra, who used his red-shirt season last year with the United States' Olympic handball team, is in his final year of eligibility.

The 6-foot-5 senior was a full-time starter in 1982-83 and averaged 9.7 points per game. During this year, Dykstra started seven of 10 games and averaged 8.9 ppg.

Collins player of week

For the second week in a row, an Eastern basketball player was named the Association of Midwestern Continent Universities' "Player-of-the-Week."

Forward Jon Collins, who made the winning basket against Pan American Thursday and scored 28 points Saturday against Northern Iowa, scored 54 points in three games, while shooting 70 percent (21-for-30) from the field. He also had 15 rebounds.

For the season, Collins, a 6-foot-4 junior from East St. Louis, is averaging 17.1 points and 5.5 rebounds.

He was the conference's second-leading scorer last season and was named to the AMCU All-Conference and the AMCU All-Newcomer teams.

Lady Cagers suffer 85-73 loss despite record shooting

PEORIA—Even shooting a Gateway Collegiate Athletic Conference record of 71.7 percent from the field couldn't stop Eastern from dropping an 85-73 decision Saturday to Bradley.

"It (the record) was exciting for the team because it gave creditability to our offense," coach Barbara Hilke said. "But when you turn the ball over and get outrebounded as much as we did, it's tough to win."

Eastern, 8-5, was forced into 24 turnovers by a Bradley defense that pressed from the opening basket. The Braves, also 8-5, utilized the Panther miscues and a 35-20 rebounding advantage to fuel its fastbreak.

"We didn't play the transition game well," Hilke said. "Our ball-handling wasn't all that bad, but we made poor passing decisions. We tried to get something all at once, we weren't patient on offense.

"We have to control the boards to play our game, and Saturday Chris (Aldridge) got half of our rebounds, and nobody else was even close to that," Hilke added. "You can't depend on one person."

The Panthers, losers of four of their last six games, shot a blistering 88 percent in the first half, but still trailed 41-34 at the intermission.

The closest Eastern got to Bradley was three points when Aldridge canned a jumper at the 19:13 mark of the second half. But, Bradley then reeled off eight straight points to open a 49-38 lead.

Hilke said she believed Eastern's 1-3-1 trapping defense was lacking in only one area against the Braves' offense.

"We didn't cover Bradley's highpost cut, as (center Felicia) Brown's 32 points indicate," Hilke said.

Eastern, 1-3 in GCAC play, was lead offensively by senior Toni Collins. The Lincoln resident shot an incredible 90 percent from the floor to score a season-high 22 points.

"I'm not really sure why I shot so well from the field, it just seemed to be the night everyone was hot," Collins said. "By all rights, we should have won that game, but we committed too many turnovers and they wanted it (rebounds) more than we did."

Aldridge, in addition to her 10 rebounds, poured in 15 points. Junior Melanie Hatfield canned seven-of-eleven field goals attempts to net 14 for Eastern.

Despite its record-setting shooting performance from the field, Eastern shot only 50 percent from the free-throw line. Bradley, 2-2 in GCAC action, made 13-of-19 for 73 percent of its foul shots.

The Panthers begin a three-game homestand Thursday when they host defending GCAC champion Drake in a 7:30 p.m. contest at Lantz Gym.

Wrestlers split dual weekend matches

by Mike Nelson

Eastern's wrestling team found tough times Friday at Northern Illinois by winning in only two weight classes, but came back Saturday to defeat Central Missouri State at Lantz Gym.

On Friday, Eastern's only two victories came in the 118-pound and heavyweight classes. Mark Rodriguez and Dan Ivanisevic were the winners.

"Our line-up got a little distorted Friday when two of our guys didn't make weight," Eastern head coach Ralph McCausland said.

Eastern came back Saturday winning seven of the 10 weight classes on their way to a 33-12 team victory. "We wrestled alot better on Saturday than on Friday," McCausland said.

Rodriguez started off Eastern's domination with a 10-1 decision to give Eastern a 4-0 lead in the team scoring. Eastern's next victory came at 134, when Mark Ruettiger, leading 13-1, pinned his opponent in the third period to give Eastern a 10-5 team lead.

After Central Missouri won the next two weight classes, Eastern's Chris McFarland came on to win the 158-pound class 13-5 and give Eastern the lead back in team scoring, 13-12.

Ozzie Porter helped increase Eastern's team lead to 17-12 with a 14-5 victory in the 167-pound class, then Dan Noll overpowered his opponent in the 177-pound class 11-3 to widen the team scoring margin to 22-12.

Central Missouri had to forfeit the 190-pound match, before Ivanisevic won a 15-0 decision. Eastern received five team points for the forfeit and six for Ivanisevic's victory to finish the scoring, 33-12.
