10,016: Eastern's fall enrollment largest ever despite newly instituted cut-off dates

by Kenda Burrows

Despite a series of efforts started last spring to reduce enrollment for fall, Eastern's enrollment this semester surpassed the 10,000 mark for the first time in its history.

The official tenth-day enrollment figure was 10,016, 27 more students than last's fall record-breaking enrollment of 9,989 students. This increase exceeds Eastern's administrators target by 200 students.

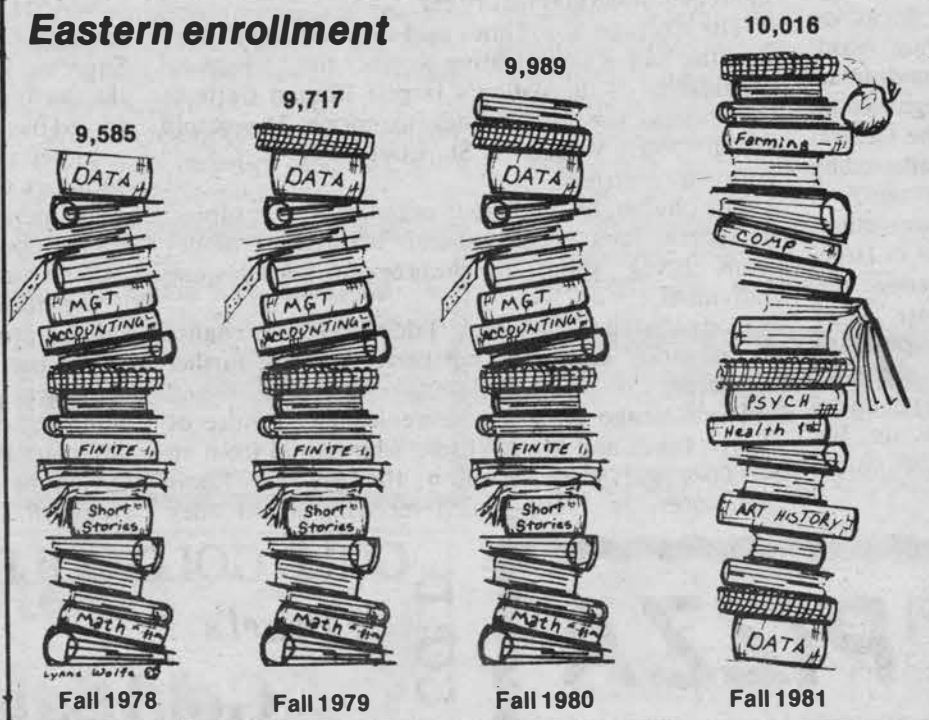

The increase was recorded despite the fact that Eastern instituted cut-off dates for freshmen and transfer student applications in February in order to reduce enrollments. While the freshmen and transfer student enrollments were down by 260 students, 436 more students returned to school than did last fall. In all, 6,957 students returned to school this semester.

Of the 10,016 students, 2,909 are freshmen, 2,113 are sophomores, 2,050 are juniors, 2,031 are seniors and 913 are graduate students. Those totals compare to 3,066 freshmen, 2,028 sophomores, 1,945 juniors, 1,972 seniors and 978 graduate students a year ago.

There are 1,034 transfer students this year compared to 1,137 a year ago. Broken down into the sexes, there are 4,423 men and 5,593 women attending Eastern this fall compared to 4,428 men and 5,561 women a year ago.

Eastern President Daniel E. Marvin

Eastern enrollment

said the high number of returning students was a major reason for the enrollment increase.

"More of the students who were eligible to return to Eastern did return," Marvin said. "That says a lot for the quality of Eastern."

Marvin added the increased enrollment shows Eastern is an institution that continues to have drawing powers.

Marvin said he was surprised at the increase, although he is satisfied with the efforts the university took to curb enrollment.

In order to reduce enrollment, Eastern established cut-off dates in the spring for incoming freshmen, transfer students from four-year institutions and students dropped for academic reasons.

Illinois Board of Higher Education executive director Richard Wagner said the reductions were joint proposals by Eastern's administration and the IBHE to curb enrollment because Eastern is underfunded.

The IBHE issued a recommendation in January of 1980 that Eastern Illinois State University, Northern Illinois University and Northeastern University, reduce enrollments because enrollments were too high in relation to the amount of state funding the schools received.

The IBHE wanted to equalize funding discrepancies between those five universities which were considered underfunded by the IBHE and four other state universities which were considered overfunded.

To do that, the IBHE increased the budgets of the underfunded universities and cut the overfunded budgets.

Wagner said Eastern's enrollment figures would have to be reviewed before the IBHE could make any judgements.

"There's really nothing I can say until we discuss this with the administration," he said.

Since efforts were utilized to reduce enrollments, Marvin said he is not worried about reporting the enrollment increase to the IBHE.

"The data shows that we did what we said we would do," Marvin said. "The number of freshmen and transfer students is down."

Vice President of Student Affairs Glenn Williams said he was surprised with the increase in the number of students returning to school.

"I had many students who wanted to register late because their jobs had been made tenuous," Williams said. "They didn't want to be left out in the cold come October."

"Although this is not scientific, I would guess that there were more students registering late then in the past," he added.

Marvin said the statistics will be sent to the Board of Governors and the IBHE, and that he will meet with them to discuss the enrollment figures.

Guidelines published for local parties

by Dru Sefton

Before initiating a party permit system for Charleston, the Charleston police department is taking other steps in an effort to combat the problem of loud parties.

Herb Steidinger, Charleston assistant police chief said the police, in cooperation with the city, have published a booklet, "Party Legally and Courteously," a list of "common sense do's and don'ts" for having parties.

Charleston Police Chief Maurice Johnson added that a party permit system for Charleston could be initiated "possibly much later this year," but probably not in 1981.

Johnson said the police are studying how other colleges in the state handle the party problem, and are waiting to see how party permits at the larger universities work out this year.

To battle the party problem now, the police began distributing the booklet last Friday throughout the city.

Carman fire forces evacuation

by Peggy Schneider and Dru Sefton

A fire in a ninth floor trash chute of Carman Hall South late Thursday caused the evacuation of about 850 residents in both towers and resulted in some smoke damage to the hall.

No injuries were reported in the fire or evacuation, but minor smoke damage resulted from the blaze, campus security officer Bill Lang said.

The fire was discovered in the chute about 8:30 p.m. and was extinguished by Carman Hall staff using hand fire extinguishers, but the Charleston Fire Department was called as a matter of procedure, Carman Hall counselor John Evans said.

A Charleston firefighter who declined to be identified said the fire was under control by 9:20 p.m., but firefighters remained to make a safety check of every floor before residents could return.

"It appears the fire was caused by cigarette ashes poured down the chute," Evans said. Assistant Charleston Fire Chief Les Hickenbottom said he could not confirm the cause.

Hickenbottom said he had no reason to believe the fire had been set deliberately, and added that under the circumstances he saw no reason to launch a full-scale investigation.

Any investigation conducted by campus security officials will be conducted by Capt. Jack Chambers, who could not be reached for comment Thursday.

John Kriz, a junior on the ninth floor said, "I was in the room when the alarm went off. We saw smoke coming out of the chute. At first, everyone thought it was a smoke bomb, so no one paid much attention. Then everyone realized it might be a fire, so we all went out, mainly by the stairs."

U.S. and Israel undertake joint military measures

WASHINGTON—The United States and Israel have decided to undertake joint military measures to guard the Middle East against the Soviet Union and other "external threats," Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. said Thursday.

Haig told reporters the two governments were drafting a memorandum to formalize the new ties set by President Reagan and Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin during two days of talks at the White House.

"We are talking about joint planning, collaborative studies and efforts which focus on external threats to the region," Haig said. Specifically, he said, the United States and Israel might conduct joint naval exercises and Begin would discuss with William Casey, director of the Central Intelligence Agency, sharing information gathered by U.S. spy satellites.

Additionally, Haig said, the United States might store medical supplies and other equipment in Israel for use by American forces in an emergency. But Haig and Begin, who held a separate news conference, stressed that American troops would not be used for the defense of Israel.

Earlier, Begin renewed his attack upon the pending U.S. arms deal for Saudi Arabia despite his "agreement in principle" with Reagan on closer security ties for his own nation.

Catholic archbishop blamed for misuse of church funds

CHICAGO—A federal prosecutor said Thursday he has received allegations that Cardinal John P. Cody improperly diverted church money, and a newspaper said a grand jury is investigating whether up to $1 million went to a childhood friend for such items as a home and luxury car.

The Chicago Sun-Times said in a copyright story that the jury is investigating whether the 73-year-old archbishop of the nation's largest Roman Catholic archdiocese used the money to enrich 74-year-old Helen Dolan Wilson of St. Louis, who is Cody's cousin by marriage.

The church, as a religious organization, is subject to federal laws which prohibit tax-exempt money from being spent to improperly enrich any individual.

Cody told the Sun-Times "I don't need any chance for rebuttal" and could not be reached for further comment.

The Chicago Archdiocese denied any misuse of church funds and Mrs. Wilson, who retired from an $8,000-a-year clerk position for the St. Louis archdiocese in 1969, denied receiving any money from the cardinal.

U.S. Attorney Dan K. Webb said his office had received allegations of "improper diversion of church funds" by Cody.

Webb said in a statement that he has the "responsibility of determining the accuracy of the allegations and whether any federal laws have been violated." But he did not say specifically that he was investigating the allegations against Cody, nor where those allegations came from.

Possible first woman justice supports use of death penalty

WASHINGTON—Sandra Day O'Connor, trading cautiously toward Senate confirmation as a Supreme Court justice, said Thursday she supports the death penalty for some crimes and is opposed to forced busing to desegregate public schools.

In her second day of testimony before the Senate Judiciary Committee, Mrs. O'Connor said she twice spoke personally with President Reagan before she was announced as his choice to become the first woman justice on the court.

She declined to describe those conversations, but said no promises were made on how she would vote on any particular issue.

"I was not asked by Reagan to make any commitment concerning . . . how I would resolve any issue that might come before the court," Mrs. O'Connor said in answer to a series of questions from Sen. Charles Grassley, R-Iowa.

Eastern News provides tours

Tours of the new student publications facilities in the Buzzard Education Building will be conducted during an open house Monday in the Daily Eastern News office.

Marsha Hausser, Daily Eastern News editor in chief, said the tours will be given every half hour from 9 a.m. until noon, and at 1 and 1:30 p.m.

No tours will be given in the afternoon in order to avoid a conflict with the paper's deadlines, Hausser said.

Tours will be conducted by Daily Eastern News staff editors, she added.

The student publications staffs and the journalism department moved from the Student Services Building to the Buzzard Education Building over the summer.

Hausser said the tours will give students a chance to see how a newspaper like the Daily Eastern News is produced and will allow newspaper staff members and the public they serve a chance to get acquainted.

Board tables WELH request for funding

by Mary Holland

The Apportionment Board delayed action Thursday night concerning WELH radio station's request of an additional $12,000 to $14,000 for equipment purchases.

Financial Vice President Mike Nowak said because WELH can still broadcast with its current equipment, the board can delay its decision for a couple of weeks.

The requested money for the new equipment is in addition to the $9,057 in student fee money already appropriated to the station.

In considering the station's request, Nowak said he was "shocked" when he saw the dollar estimate.

"Unfortunately we can't afford to buy a radio station that can compete with WEIC," Nowak said.

In addition to its regular budget requests, WELH has been given $13,900 in additional funds since 1977, Nowak said.

This does not include a $1,400 appropriation for a transmitter which was purchased in 1980, he added.

Greg Moore, assistant to the station's general manager, said additional funds are needed for the equipment because the current equipment is in poor condition and is, in some cases, unusable.

Moore said the station is requesting $650 for a "durable" typewriter because its present typewriter does not meet the station's needs.

However, AB members said a quality typewriter could cost as much as $2,000.

Another top priority request is a new control console, estimated to cost $4,000, Moore said.

Moore said the present console "has been rewired so many times that it's basically unsafe."

Moore said the console has shocked several students and has failed several times, causing the station to go off the air.

Moore said other top priority items, estimated to cost $2,900, are three new microphones, four portable cassette recorders, four headphones, and a multi-track tape deck.

Moore said the station is also requesting additional broadcasting equipment which is estimated to cost $6,500.

Honors program can help Eastern

Offering an honors program for freshmen and transfer students will be a needed step forward by Eastern in expanding educational opportunities to students.

The proposed program, which needs the approval of the Council on Academic Affairs, would provide an alternative and more challenging course of study to academically superior students—a much-needed opportunity.

The committee working on the proposal has suggested to the CAA that by fall semester 1982, incoming freshmen with an American College Testing (ACT) score of 26 or higher and current Eastern students maintaining a 3.5 grade point average have the option of enrolling in the honors program.

The program would provide special general education classes for 50 to 75 students next fall, and more students would be accepted in the program in each consecutive year.

The introduction of this honors program would allow gifted students a chance for a more stimulating educational environment. Rather than being restricted to a pace below their own potential, students will be challenged to learn more.

Currently, Eastern is the only public university in Illinois without an honors program. With this new program, Eastern would have yet another drawing card to attract students, especially those with academic promise, in addition to encouraging currently enrolled students with high academic standing to remain at Eastern.

The honors program would also promote and give incentive for good grades among Eastern students.

There are other side benefits to the university of offering an honors program.

It would help to lighten loads in current classes and promote more interaction between teachers and those students needing additional help.

We support the honors program in light of its potential to upgrade the entire Eastern community and urge the CAA to give approval to it.

Your Turn

Run league results

Editor:

There are those of us who read the Daily Eastern News that find the sports section leaves much to be desired.

Writing about badminton and field hockey results are fine for those who are interested, but it is just plain boring for the majority of students. Equally boring are midweek stories about the football team. Monday reviews of a Saturday game, or Friday previews of an upcoming game are great, but when stories are milked out to five days a week, all interest is lost.

If not much is going on with campus sports, how about a few stories on professional sports? The only AP stories on sports are used at the end of the section as fillers.

Results of yesterday's games and major league standings would be appreciated from many of us, as it is hard to keep up with the standings when not receiving a metropolitan newspaper.

Resolve TBL problem

Editor:

This is to register a small complaint against the almighty textbook library. It has to do with the skirting of responsibility. I acknowledge the fact that there are sometimes unforeseen circumstances that arise, but the present situation has gone from annoying to maddening.

As some people might have realized, I'm commenting on the lack of textbooks for students in accounting classes. In my theory class one half (16) of the students as of Wednesday the eighth hadn't received their texts, and nine in my cost class had the same problem, and these are only two sections!

The administrators at the TBL claim that it isn't their fault, that the distributor in New York is to blame. This may well be the case, but still doesn't make up for the fact that three weeks into the semester students who paid good money for rental fees have yet to receive their texts.

When asked what the students should do, these administrators say keep checking back and talk to your instructors. These instructors say there is nothing they can do but move dates back and put a few copies on reserve in the library.

The main point is that whoever is to blame, be it the particular department, the TBL, or the distributors, the student is the one who suffers in the longrun and some solution should be arrived at to rectify this situation and see that it doesn't happen again.

Been drafted? Remember your quarters

If the next new video game to hit the bars and arcades involves shooting down Libyan jets don't be surprised if the U.S. Army is behind its marketing and creation.

An Associated Press story in the Chicago Sun-Times this summer reported that the Army Training Board is already adapting the Atari game Battlezone to fit their purposes.

In a recent article by Chicago Tribune columnist Bob Green, Capt. Steven Cox, based at Fort Eustis, Va., explained the changes being made in the Battlezone game.

"On one screen we are going to have the T-62 tank, which is a Warsaw Pact tank," Cox said. "We will also have our own tanks on the screen. In the scoring system, if you destroy an enemy tank, you will get points; but if you start firing at a friendly tank or aircraft, you will lose points."

The man behind the Army's video ventures is General Don Starry. Starry got the idea for using video games as a tool against the Red menace from watching kids at a shopping mall spending hour after hour shelling outspace attackers.

Cox said that the local mall arcades may be an untapped source for Army recruitment.

"Who is to say that we can't find some potential soldiers in those arcades?" Cox asked Greene. "If there's a kid who can score 100,000 points on one of those games right off the start, isn't that the kind of hand-eye coordination that could lead to a bright future as a gunner?"

The idea of using video games for Army recruitment isn't new. In a column I wrote on the subject on Jan. 22, I suggested putting recruitment signs behind some of the more popular games.

For example, behind the Battlezone game a sign would say: "Tired of shooting at play tanks, son? Join the Army and check out the real thing."

But there could be problems if the Army officially initiates video games into their training program. What if the recruits get tired of playing the games and no longer take their training seriously?

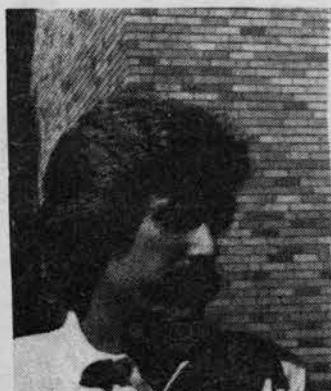

Then the Army can originate an incentive program. If a soldier gets a top ten score it would mean a two-day pass. If he scores the high game to date he would advance in rank.

Something to think about the next time you're playing your favorite video game, be it Asteroids, Defender, Gorf or whatever: You're not wasting quarters, you're earning your stripes.

CAA discusses proposal regarding transfer credit

by Jennifer Soule

The Council on Academic Affairs discussed a proposal Thursday that would increase the amount of transferable credits from a community college by incoming freshmen.

These transfer credits apply to college courses a student took while in high school. The current policy only allows 15 transfer credits from community colleges for incoming freshmen. Student Academic Services Dean Samuel Taber proposed that the council reconsider this limitation and decide if any policy changes should be made.

Eastern is the only public university in Illinois with limits on the amount of transferred credits from incoming freshmen, Taber said.

CAA member Donald Rogers of the secondary education and foundations department, said Eastern's policy limitation may discourage some students from enrolling here.

The council agreed to wait for more data from Taber before taking any formal action.

The council also discussed an honors program proposal and suggested changes in the classification of graduation honors.

The honors proposal would allow incoming freshmen with an American College Testing (ACT) score of 26 or currently enrolled Eastern students who maintain a 3.5 grade point average, to enroll in special honors classes.

The graduation honors proposal would designate students graduating with honors as cum laude, magna cum laude or summa cum laude rather than as a university scholar.

Vice President of Academic Affairs Stanley Rives has asked the CAA to implement the Latin terms because "students don't receive the required recognition with the current university terms."

Rives added that the Latin terminology is also more recognizable to people than the university scholar label.

Normal hosts ISA election

by Patty O'Neill

Three newly-appointed Illinois Student Association representatives will travel to Illinois State University in Normal Saturday to elect ISA officers.

Student Senators Bob Erio, Debbie Tymczuk and Claudia Christiansen were appointed to represent Eastern at the ISA meetings this year. Senator Marc Bruninga will serve as alternate representative.

Tymczuk said ISU representative Chuck Weber will "probably be elected ISA president because no one is running against him."

In other business, the ISA will discuss attempts to collect $1 from each student in Illinois so ISA can begin lobbying at the state capitol, establishing an ISU internship, finding an adviser and establishing a permanent meeting place, Tymczuk said.

collecting a dollar from each student last year, but we have not thought of a way to collect the money."

Tymczuk said there is some question about the legality of collecting the money.

Erio said ISU is working on an internship program in which the student would work on reseaching legislation, issues and bills dealing with higher education.

Erio said if the ISU program succeeds, Eastern has the potential to start a program.

He also said the ISA is looking for an adviser to give administrative input.

"Some of our proposals may be totally out of line and we want to know before work is done on them," Erio said.

ISA members will also discuss the possibility of establishing permanent headquarters at Sangamon State University in Springfield.

DOMINO'S PIZZA

Chairmen appointed for eight Eastern departments

by Liz Dunham

New department chairmen, including an Eastern graduate and two new faculty members, were appointed in eight Eastern departments this semester to replace chairmen whose terms expired.

The eight chairmen and their departments include Thomas Moncada, accountancy, data processing and finance; DuWayne Hansen, music; William Over, theater; Paul Panek, psychology; Glen Wiley, speech-communications; Robert Whittenbarger, sociology-anthropology; Donald Smitley, school service personnel, and John Jacobs, special education.

Thomas Moncada, a 1971 graduate of Eastern, became chairman of the accountancy, data processing and finance department July 1. Moncada said he had no plans for changes in the department, but any changes made would require agreement from all department faculty.

DuWayne Hansen, a newcomer at Eastern this year, was appointed as music department chairman on Aug. 17, following 13 years as chairman of musical education in the College of Musical Arts at Ohio's Bowling Green State University.

William Over, another new Eastern faculty member, was appointed chairman of theater arts on July 15.

Over said he plans to introduce student trips to large city theaters to watch productions, and added he hopes to improve studentteacher meetings.

Paul Panek of the psychology department and Glen Wiley of speech communications have accepted positions as acting chairmen of those departments.

Panek, a former associate professor of psychology, became acting department chairman Aug. 15.

Glen Wiley, who is beginning 17 years of teaching at Eastern, became acting chairman of the speech communications department on Aug. 15.

Robert Whittenbarger, was appointed chairman of the sociology-anthropology department July 1.

Whittenbarger, who has taught at Eastern since the fall of 1975, said he does not see any necessary changes in his department at the present time.

Donald Smitley, a professor of educational administration at Eastern for 11 years, took over the three areas of the school service personnel department on July 1.

Smitley said the department is proposing a new program, called Information Services and Technology, for the media and library area of the department. The new program will offer a masters' degree and a specialist degree.

John Jacobs, a four-year teaching veteran of Eastern, became chairman of the special education department on August.

Jacobs, who presently teaches graduate courses in special education, said his goals for the department include devising a new curriculum and encouraging new staff members to work together.

Seminar on theater acting scheduled for Saturday

A special seminar on acting and putting together a touring theater group will be conducted at 1 p.m. Saturday in the Doudna Fine Arts Center.

The seminar is sponsored by the theater department and will be presented by "Theatre on Wings," a touring production company.

Vaughn Jaenike, dean of the School of Fine Arts, said the seminar "should be an informative and educational experience for students and other people interested in the behind-the-scenes workings of a professional touring theater company."

The seminar will also provide some insight into professional acting in the Chicago market, Dann Gire, "Theatre on Wings" business manager, said.

Scheduled to appear in the seminar along with Gire are Dan Flannery, a Chicago actor and member of the Screen Actors Guild and the American Federation of TV and Radio Actors; Raoul Johnson, associate professor of Theatre at Loyola University; and Katie Sullivan, an Eastern graduate who recently performed in the Chicago production "Byrne, Baby, Byrne."

Also appearing will be T. Jay Solon, technical designer and director for "Theatre on Wings;" actor and director, Michael R. Boyna; former Eastern theater student, James Kleckner; "Theatre On Wings"

Booklets have been given to most fraternities and sororities, real estate agencies that rent to students, and various apartment complexes with large student population, Steidinger said.

Steidinger added that 2,000 booklets have been given to Jerry Nikitas, who owns several bars and liquor stores in the area, to be distributed at his businesses.

Johnson said there have been no reactions to the booklets yet.

In addition to distributing the booklets, Johnson said the police are also discussing the problem with off-campus students.

He added that the police are receiving "positive results" by handling the problem with communication.

Johnson said keeping the lines of communication between students and police open concerning the party problem is the police's main concern.

Although Johnson said he does not know how many complaints have been filed concerning loud parties so far this semester, he added that there has been a reduction from other years.

"I wouldn't want to guess how many complaints we have had," Johnson said, "but it has been less than past years."

musical director, Jane Siron and actress, Peggy Gire.

There will be no admission charge for the seminar, which is open to the public.

The touring theater group will be presenting two one-act plays at 8 p.m. Friday and Saturday and at 2 p.m. Sunday in the Fine Arts Center.

Admission to the plays is $4 for adults, $3 for children, and $2.50 for Eastern students and senior citizens.

Netters stage alumni contest

by Jill Anderson

Eastern men's tennis team will give netter fans a preview of the 1981 squad at its first annual alumni meet 11 a.m. Sunday at Weller courts.

"This is the first time we've ever hosted an alumni meet and it's promising to be a good, competitive meet," Panther coach Carl Sexton said.

Representing Eastern are returnees juniors Tim Buwick and Bruce Perrin and sophomores Jay Johnson, Rob Hopkins and Jon Tuft.

Debuting for the netters are transfer students Mark Munie, Rob Maxwell and Clifton Graham and freshmen Ken Holbart and Scott Fjelstad.

Competing for the alumni are 1981 graduates Rick Hayden, Dave Branding and E.J. Karsten, Brad Patterson (1980), Brad Siler (1979), Ron Easter and Mike Penc (1978) and Gene Manuel (1977).

Sexton said lineups for either team have not yet been determined, but the contest will consist of six singles and three doubles matches.

Hockey club to meet

There will be an organizational meeting for anyone interested in competing for Eastern's hockey club at 7:30 p.m. Monday in the University Union Walkway.

Eastern coach Doug Andreasen said his squad will begin season play early in November.

excellent football players," Johanninger said. However, both Mudra and Dickerson bode confidence in their squad because of the Panthers' performances in practice this week. "Our team is ready to play football this week," Mudra said. "I think from here on out we will be very tough to beat."

Dickerson pointed out that "last week we had some problems with our special teams, but that shouldn't happen this week," he added. "We are ready to play some football."

Offensively, the Panthers will "do basically the same thing we did last week, but we are going to change our execution and we hope to run more plays," Faulkner said. "We hope to run 80 plays this week."

Last week the Panthers snapped the ball 68 times.

Defensively, Schachner said "we plan to alternate between pressure and coverage against them. We won't blitz all the time, just when it is needed."

Someday, Johanninger said he hopes the Bears will be on the same level (Division I-AA) as the Panthers and the other MCC teams.

"We are in their neighborhood, but not in the same block," Johanninger said. "This game is a good test to see how we stand right now."

First MCC showdown

Panthers not underestimating Bears' talent

by Dan Brannan

The battle between Southwest Missouri State and Eastern has started with accusations.

Southwest's head coach Rich Johanningmeier claims he is bringing a young and inexperienced squad to Eastern for the 1:30 p.m. showdown Saturday at O'Brien Field.

"Our team is strictly a milk-drinking crowd," Johanningmeier said.

However, Panther assistant head coach Chuck Dickerson said he believes that Johanningmeier is underestimating the ability of his squad.

"He's crying the blues," Dickerson said. "He has six seniors starting on offense, and he has experience in the secondary and the defensive end positions."

Eastern's defensive coordinator Rick Schachner agreed with Dickerson and added, "If they didn't think they could play us, they shouldn't have scheduled us."

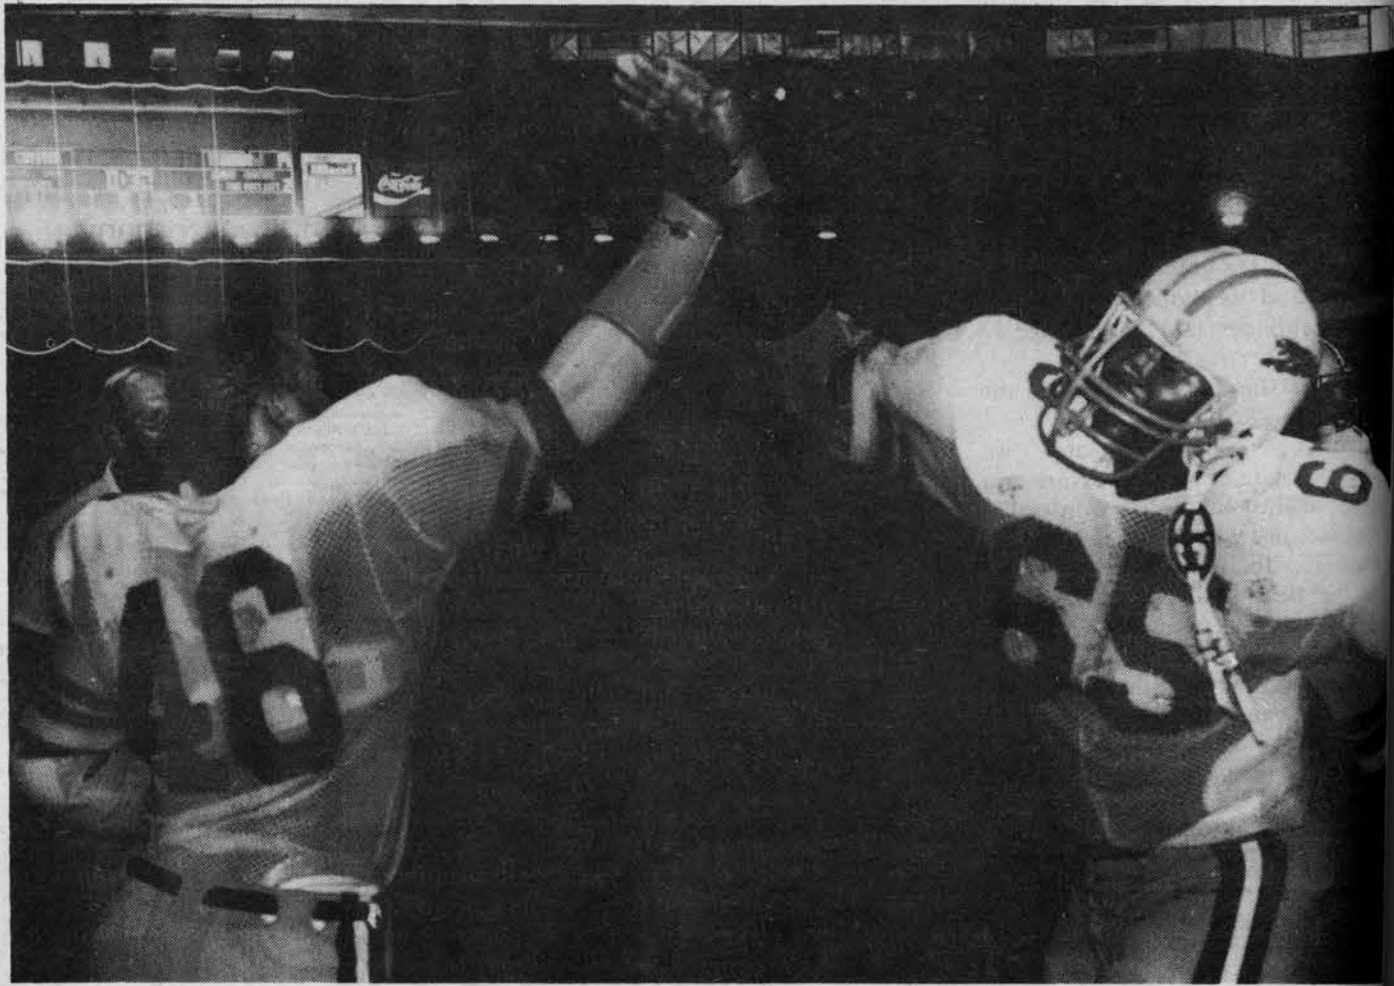

The Bear-Panther matchup Saturday will kick-off Mid-Continent Conference action this year, with Southwest beginning its first year in the MCC after ending its 57-year stint in the Missouri Intercollegiate Conference.

Consequently, Panther coaches have stressed the importance of winning against the Bears.

Head coach Darrell Mudra said, "If we are to make any kind of run at the Division I-AA playoffs, we'll need to do well in the conference, and that first step comes Saturday against Southwest."

Offensive Coordinator Mike Faulkner agreed with Mudra and said, "We want to win the conference, so it is very important for us to win this game."

Although Panther coaches acknowledge the game's importance, Johanningmeier's comments show that he underscores his team's interpretation of the contest.

"We are not making that big of a deal out of this being our first conference game," he said. "We were in a conference for 57 years, and until now our kids did not know much about Eastern."

However, Johanningmeier's squad may know enough about the Panthers, having scouted Eastern in its shaky 19-17 victory over South Dakota Saturday.

"We have a lot of respect for Eastern, as they are a very physical team, and they have no major weaknesses," Johanningmeier said.

"Our defense will have its hands full because Christensen can really throw the football and Staple has great speed. Eastern is a heavy pressure outfit, so we have to adjust to it," he added. "We are just going to have to play football."

The Bears are known for its Delaware Wing-T offense, solidified by an outstanding backfield tandem in halfback Brian Keegan and fullback Bill Hedgepath, whose combined rushing total for each of the last two seasons surpasses 1,400 yards.

"Our backs are not flashy, but consistent players," Johanningmeier said. "They block and run very well."

Schachner said the Bears Wing-T will force some Panther adjustments but not drastic enough changes that will substantially hurt Eastern.

"It is different than we are used to so we have to make some adjustments," he said. "I don't see any danger about it, though."

Mudra noted that "not too many people utilize the Wing-T, but they have had good success with it."

Other offensive guns for the Bears include junior tight end John Finders and senior guard Tim Bauer.

"Finders and Bauer are both good," he said. (See PANTHERS, page 11)

Booters 'outstanding' in tourney upset

COLORADO SPRINGS, COLO.—Eastern's soccer team overwhelmingly upset Southern Methodist University 2-0 Thursday in first round action of the Budweiser Tournament in Colorado Springs, Colo.

Panther head coach Schellas Hyndman said his squad played an outstanding ballgame, constantly pressuring the Mustang defense.

With 15 minutes remaining in the first half, forward Damien Kelly, on a corner kick from defenseman Sandro Addressi, headed the ball past Southern's goal keeper to put the Panthers on top 1-0.

After somewhat equal play, Eastern took the one-goal lead into the halftime break.

But Hyndman said the Mustangs came out strong and played a solid second half, but to no avail.

With about 12 minutes left in the game, Kelly maneuvered past two Mustang defenders and added an insurance goal to secure the Panther win.

Grid contest to be 'famous'

by Bill Mulvaney

Saturday's grid contest against Southwest Missouri has been labeled as the first Eastern Illinois University "Hall of Fame" game.

At the game, members of the newly formed E.I. Club will be honored.

Johnson said the E.I. Club was formed last year at homecoming and consists of about 3,000 former Eastern letter and award winning athletes.

Johnson added that the money collected by the club covers the cost of plaques and a possible Hall of Fame banquet.

Johnson said that the "Hall of Fame" game will become an annual event, occurring on the Panthers' home opener each season.

Next year will be the first year in which any members will be inducted into the E.I. Club Hall of Fame.

Celebrate German Schuetzenfest fun

by Mark Evans

Beer drinking, dancing and German food will be featured at the 16th annual Altamont Schuetzenfest scheduled from 4 to 9:30 p.m. Friday and 10 a.m. to 9:30 p.m. Saturday.

The Schuetzenfest, a traditional German festival, will be complete with many events such as trap shooting, square and polka dancing, German food, drinks and traditional German bands. All events will be taking place in Altamont, a community of predominantly German descent, located west of Effingham on Interstate 70.

The festival is a good chance to meet people and try a hand at friendly competition. The Germans call the event "Gemuetlichkeit" or good cheer.

A variety of German bands will entertain throughout the celebration. The bands signed to play are the Heildelburg Dutchman Band, The Echo's and the returning Waterloo German Band.

A rather unusual event is a "Stumpf Off" contest. A Stumpf Off is a unique fiddling match because the fiddler does not have to know how to read music, in fact, he only has to count one and two and bounce a stumpf fiddle, a stick attached to a pie pan by a spring, while hitting various noise makers.

Other contests planned are a polka contest, a horseshoe pitching contest, a beer drinking contest and a Schuetzenkoenig shoot off. The shoot off will climax with the crownings of the Schuetzenkoenig (shooting king), the Schuetzenfest Queen and the Hufeisenkoenig (horseshoe king).

Professor truly 'digs' her recreation activity

by Barb Brewer

All over the world there are people with a zest for adventure, a taste for life and the desire to learn, who search for experiences farther than their own backyards.

Eastern has such a person, Annie Lee Jones, an associate professor in recreation and leisure studies, who engages in a rather unusual, yet most interesting hobby. For the past six summers she has been participating in extensive archeological studies all over the world.

Jones, along with several other persons, works as a volunteer archeologist digging for ancient artifacts.

Although her interest in archeology has been present since childhood when she enjoyed looking through and later reading National Geographic magazines, the opportunity to actually partake in such an activity came about through advertisements and articles she said she saw in Natural History, Smithsonian and Archeology magazines.

Jones said she was interested in what she read and discovered the ads and articles were run by a professional organization looking for volunteer workers for various archeological digs. After responding to the advertisements, she said she was accepted to work on the island of Cypress off the coast of Greece in the summer of 1976.

Jones humbly explained that she believes the sole reason for her acceptance in the Cypress dig was because of the fighting and extreme tension between the Greeks and Turkish people at the time. She added that the country would have settled for "any warm body" willing to enter it.

Jones said her first experience into the world of archeology proved memorable in that she and the crew of volunteers and professionals discovered entire pots, not just pieces, from the Early Iron Age of about 700 B.C. The pots were believed to have been carefully buried by priests from the Phoenician Temple.

Why the pots were buried and why they are still whole is something Jones and her companions were never entirely sure of.

Jones' most recent dig, this summer, took her to Swaziland in Southern Africa.

There she had the opportunity to work with the director of the dig, David Price Williams. Williams, an Englishman at the University of London, may be planning a two-week visit to Eastern in November,

Annie Lee Jones, an associate professor in recreation and leisure studies, tells of her archeological adventures that have taken her from the island of Cypress to South Africa. Jones volunteers to go on various archeological digs. (News photo by Brad Wright) she added.

Jones said that although William's visit is extremely tentative, if he does come he will be bringing artifacts thousands of years old and also many slides of his archeological voyages.

While in Swaziland, Jones, along with a crew consisting mostly of Englishmen, concentrated on Stone Age sites in hopes of learning from where man evolved and also of his technology before the Iron Age.

In addition to finding artifacts nearly 75,000 years old, the first complete pots ever found in Swaziland were discovered, she said.

Caesarea, an ancient Israeli city built by King Herod, was another site the group explored. Jones said she studied Mediterranean archeology from the Bronze Age of 2,000 B.C. to 500 A.D. at the site.

Jones said a volunteer digger's duties are many. Her work includes searching for artifacts excavating, hauling away dirt, helping surveyors decide whether or not a certain area should be dug, careful and precise recording and preparing sites for photographers.

She said her work is like "digging through history."

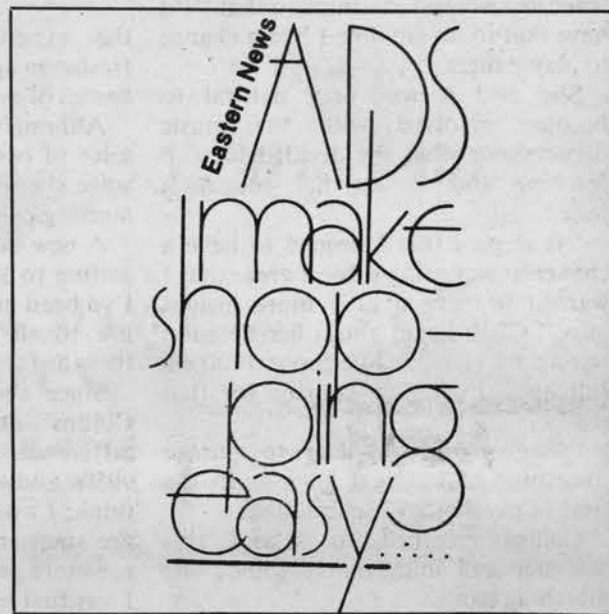

Jones said she feels her archeological experiences have given her the chance to "explore past civilizations, yet live in a contemporary world and culture."

"Going on these digs has made my life much more interesting in that they've offered me a flavor of other cultures, the chance to meet new and interesting people and the opportunity to learn."

As far as considering a career in archeology, Jones says, "Never, it would take all the fun out of it."

Once a person makes archeology a job, she said, the person is then too preoccupied with directing, instructing and returning to the same places. When one is a summer volunteer, however, she added that the person is free to enjoy the experience as simply that—a volunteer.

Jones said archeology is a form of leisure to her, a special way of spending her spare time. She said she plans to continue digging, "as long as the opportunity is there, I'll take it."

Marching Blue get new (?) flutist

by Becky Hurst

Every day Eastern's band, the Marching Blue, parades along the soggy field south of the Tarble Arts Center. For some band members it is a continuation of last year, for others it is a new experience, but for Anna Lee Collins it is a return to something she has not done here for 28 years.

Annie ("Only my mother called me Anna Lee,") Collins graduated from Eastern in 1953 with a bachelor's in physical education. While she was here, she was involved in sports, the Cecilian singers, mixed chorus and, of course, the band where she played flute and piccolo.

After college, sports and music continued to take up a large part of Collins' time. She began teaching physical education and earned her master's in physical education at the University of Colorado. Meanwhile, she continued to play in municipal bands.

She said she would also bring her piccolo along during the summers when she worked at camps so that "I'd have that to do anytime I had a chance to play it there."

She said it was only natural to become involved with the music department when she decided to stop teaching and further her education here.

"It seemed that I needed to have a chance at exploring subject areas that I wanted to have a little more insight into," Collins said about her decision to return to school. She chose to take a full load of pre-law courses for that reason.

"Maybe I would like to pursue something along legal lines or in the field of psychology," she added.

Collins returned to school this semester and immediately joined the marching band.

"The band was one of the most spirited groups I had remembered and I figured that since I could jog two or three miles, and I never stopped playing my instrument, I could be in the marching band," Collins said. "I'm also in the Cecilian singers."

To get to class and band practice, Collins travels 22 miles from her home in Casey. She said she does not have some of the problems other women have when returning to school because she never married, but she does share

Annie Collins, a 1953 Eastern graduate with a degree in Physical Education, is back attending classes and marching in the band after 28 years. Collins said she always enjoyed the band the first time she was at Eastern and decided it was worth returning to. She is taking pre-law courses and is also a member of the Cecilian singers this semester. (News photo by Becky Hurst) the experience of feeling like a freshman again. "I still don't know the names of everything."

Although she said she does not know a lot of people who have arrived here since she graduated, she added, "I'm meeting people all the time."

A new experience for her this year is getting to know freshmen. "Although I've been around young people all my life, this is the first time I've observed them as full-time students."

Since she has returned to school, Collins said she has noted one difference between students in the 1950s and students today. "I seem to think; I would almost assume that they are smarter today. I also think there are more pressures on them than when I was first here," she said.

The similarities outweigh the differences though, she says. "There are the scholarly ones, the ordinary ones, the ones holding jobs to pay for school and there are still the ones who are here for a social life. These are the same types of students who were here when I was young," she added.

Collins finds that there is one thing in common between the faculty, students, administrators and people here now and those present 28 years ago: "Everyone here is still very friendly and is more than willing to give you information you might need," she said.

Collins said she has noticed the people in the band are different now. The most notable change to her was the replacement of George Westcott, who was band director when she was an undergraduate. Harold Hillyer, the current director, replaced Westcott in 1974.

"Dr. Westcott was one of the most outstanding directors that I have ever had," she said. "As my instructor for band, he got us out there and really kept our spirits up."

Collins said she sees many similarities between Westcott and Hillyer, though. "They both have a tremendous talent in the art of organizing band shows. It is an art. I don't know how they do it; it looks like such a puzzle to me. Both men are very intelligent and talented in their field and their enthusiasm for what they do spreads to other members of the band."

Perhaps this is why the band is more than "the way I get exercise," to Collins. For her, band practice "turns into a recreation where I can play the music I enjoy."

'Brick pickers' strike at night, steal buildings

Chicago (AP)—Thar's gold in them there bricks, so much so that vacant, old brick buildings are being stolen every night.

Recycled bricks are in great demand, says John Dean, director of demolition for the city.

He said brick stealers are making hits about six nights a week.

Mattie Miller, an 83-year-old widow was stunned to learn that someone stole her old, unoccupied two-story brick building one night.

But she shouldn't be surprised, said James Malleck, an assistant corporation counsel in the division of housing and community renewal actions. He said brick pickers could be working on as many as 10 sites daily.

"We've got brick stealers, all right," Dean said Tuesday. "Mostly in demand are dark red bricks common in the Chicago area. They came from clay pits on the Northwest Side and there seems to be a good market for them down South. Also in demand are bricks of light brown that came from pits on the South Side. They are wanted in the Southeast and Southwest."

Dean said that in some cases, demolition firms enter bids to the city to pay for tearing down buildings just to get the bricks.

"It's really a twist, they're paying us instead of us paying them. Recently, a company paid $1,550 for a job," said Dean. "The brick stealers hear of buildings coming down and they show up at midnight and start picking the bricks out of the walls. The mortar is old and crumbly so it's not much of a job getting the bricks."

Dean said recycled bricks have been selling for $100 per thousand but the price has dropped to about $60 lately.

Kim Schmitt, owner of a wholesale brick yard, says old Chicago bricks really come in various clay pits that closed in the 1930's.

"There is a buff which is popular with home buildings," he said. "And there are light pink and dark pink that are used to produce an antique look on new fireplaces."

Schmitt said in recent years brick makers in other regions have tried without success to duplicate the Chicago colors.

High-speed adventure abounds for local speedway thrill seekers

by Becky Suprenant

People looking for all the thrill and excitement a day at the races offers can find it only moments away at the Charleston Speedway.

The speedway, three miles east of Charleston on Rt. 16, has been in existence for 18 years and for the past six years it has been owned and operated by Dave McDonald.

McDonald said he bought the speedway because he felt it would be a new adventure.

"I wanted a challenge," he said. "People like the thrill and the suspense they get at a speedway."

A speedway, for those unfamiliar with the racing scene, is a race track where drivers race stock cars.

"A stock car is a car that is modified to run faster than the cars on the street," McDonald added.

"We only allow American-made cars to race at the speedway because foreign cars are not always that safe," he added.

The speedway mostly attracts drivers from Illinois and Indiana, he said. On an average night there are usually about 50 drivers competing. The drivers are anywhere from 17 to 50 years old, he added.

"We have had one guy from Mattoon who has been driving since the speedway has been in existence," McDonald said.

"For most drivers it's a hobby. I have seen drivers who have tried to make a living at it, but it doesn't work out that well," McDonald added.

McDonald said that the spectators come from a 100 mile radius of Charleston.

"Usually it is the same people who attend all the time because those are the people interested in race cars," McDonald said.

"Once in awhile we will get some new people but not very often," he added. "If someone attends more than two times then they must have some sort of enthusiasm for the sport."

He added that the Speedway draws a family crowd and the age ranges from teenagers to people in their 70s or 80s.

On an average night the Speedway draws a crowd of about 700 to 800 people, he said.

McDonald added, "The spectators can sit in the grandstand but if they really like to get into the action, they can stand in the pit."

"The pit is located by the track where the pit crews and the drivers are," he said. "It costs a little more to get into the pit but some people do not mind because they like the action," McDonald added.

He said it is dangerous in the pit but it is every place else also. "I don't want to see anybody get hurt but it does happen," McDonald said.

Some people have been hurt while standing in the pit but accidents do not occur very often, McDonald said.

He said spectators seem to like the suspense of seeing if the driver will get out of his car after he has had an accident. "As long as I have owned the Speedway there have been no fatalities, but before I bought it one guy died," McDonald said.

The speedway has its own fire and crash crew to take care of the accidents that do occasionally happen, McDonald said.

He said that the more accidents that occur the bigger the crowd the next time there is a race. "The word just passes around that there were quite a few accidents and the crowd increases," he said.

The news of a crash seems to make the crowd bigger because of the thrill of danger, he said.

McDonald said the speedway is a way of getting your mind off your troubles. "When you are watching the race, you don't think about things at home," he added.

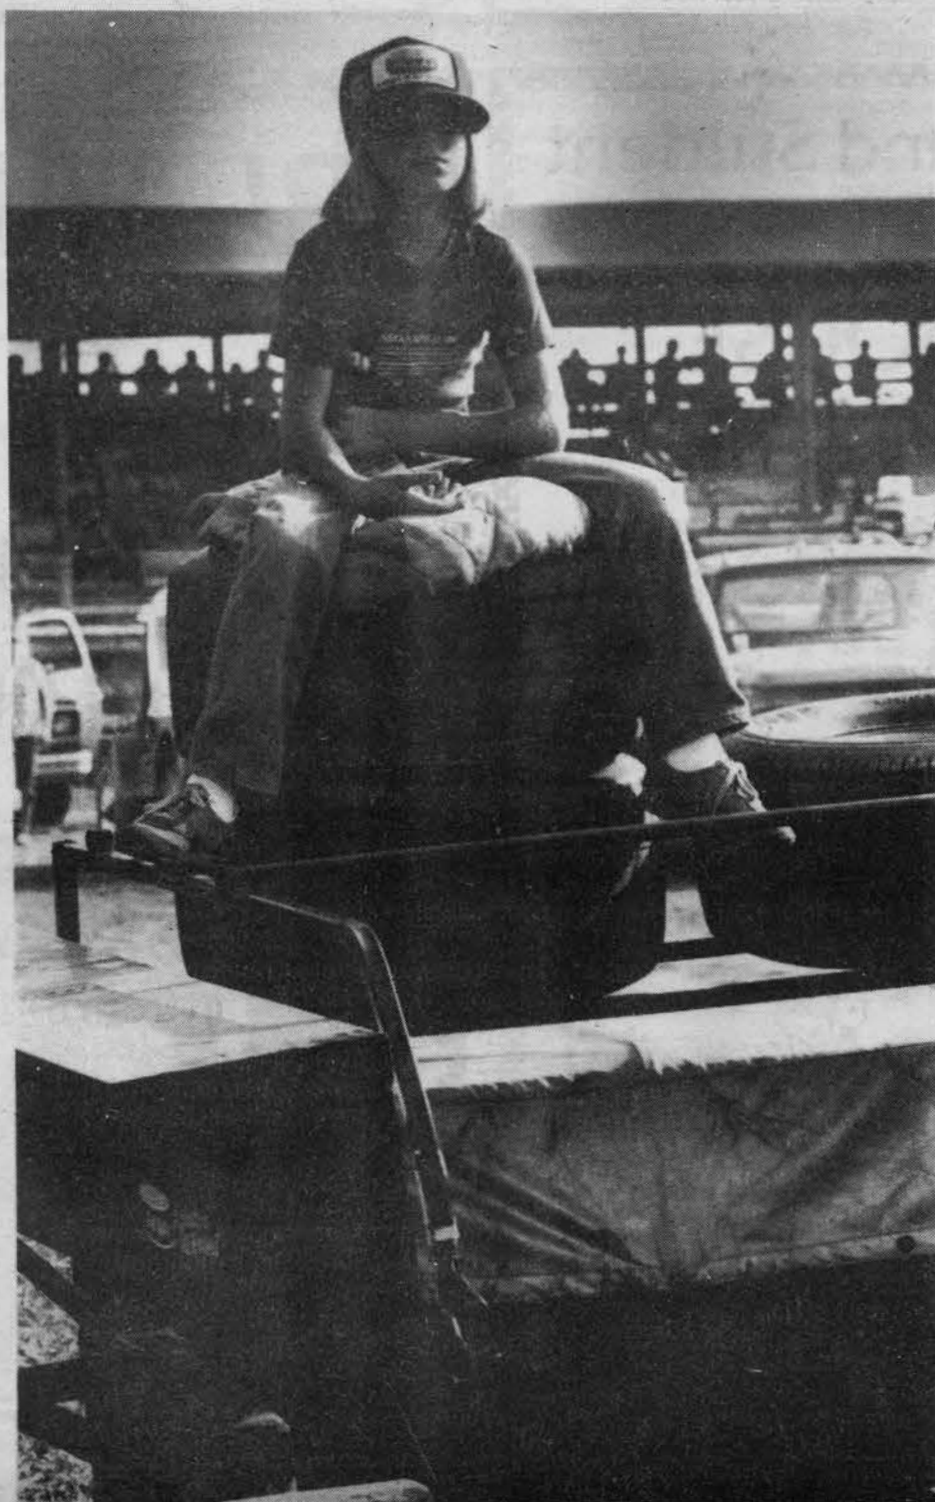

Right now the speedway is just a hobby for McDonald, but he said he is trying to sell his other business so he can devote all his attention to the speedway.

"I want to be able to have the time to run a few shows during the week," McDonald said.

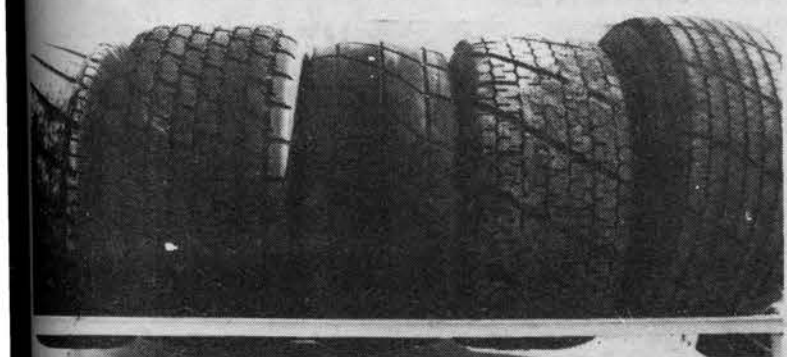

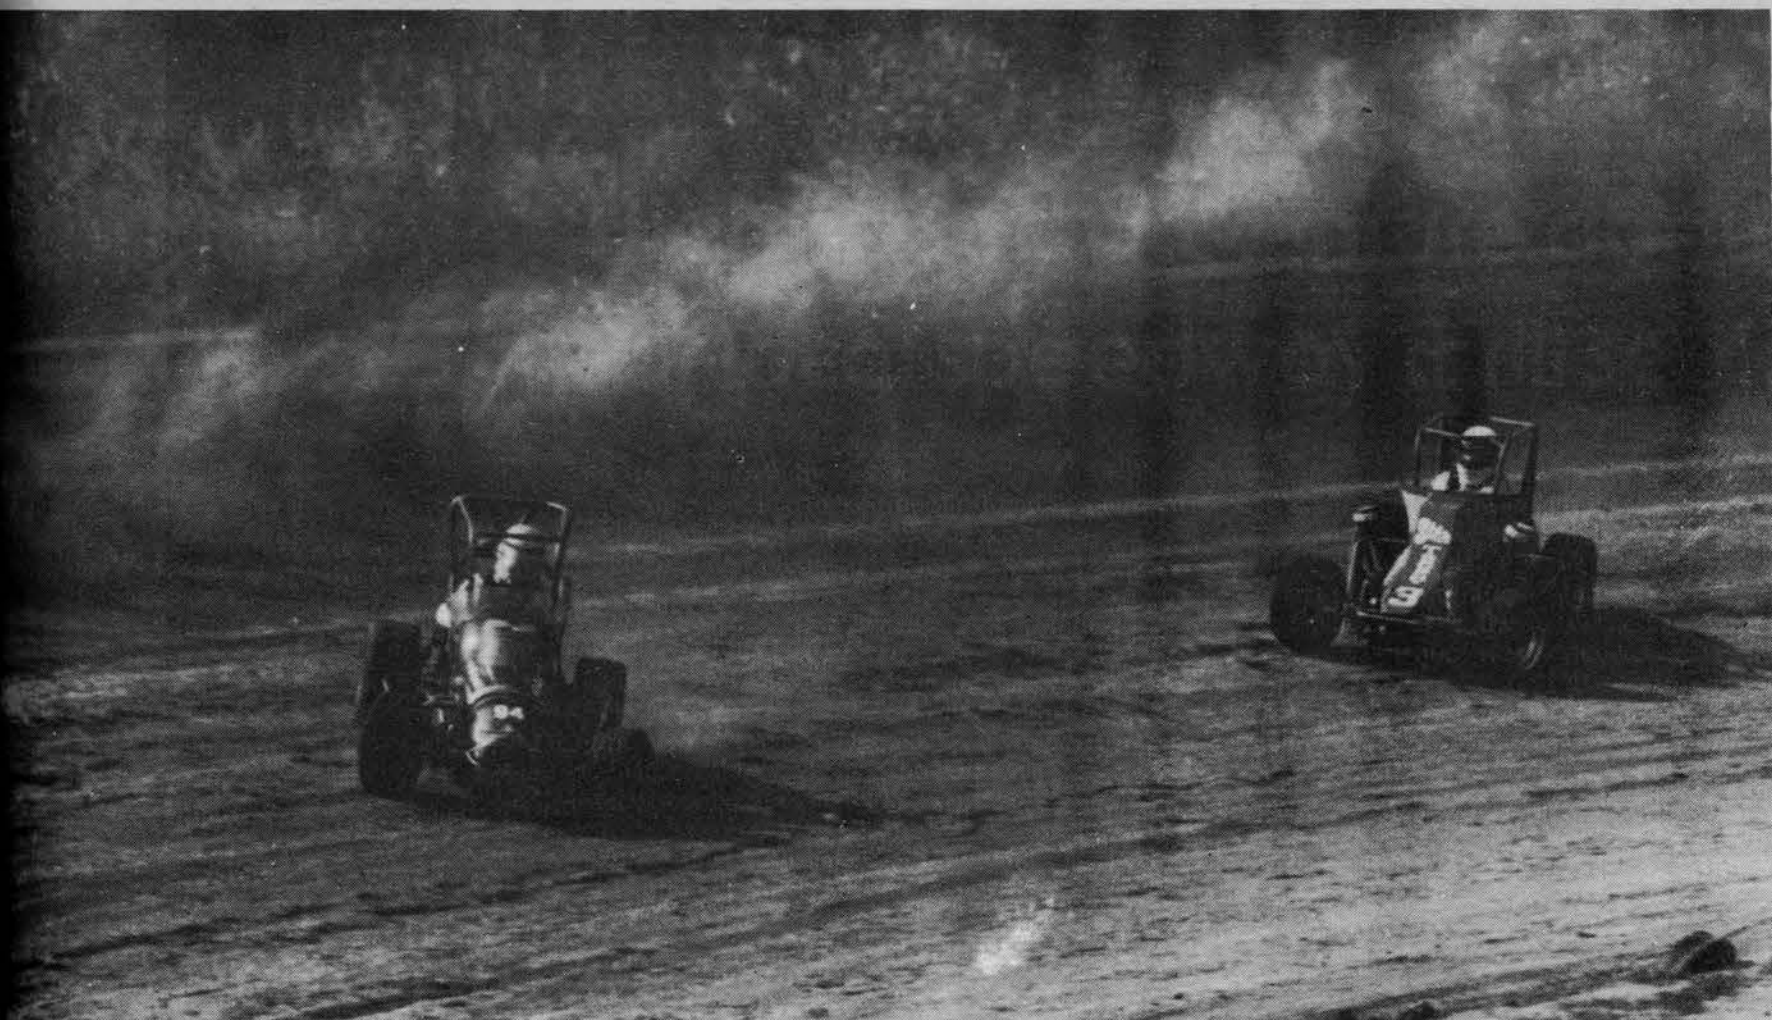

The races mainly take place on the weekends from the beginning of May to the end of September, McDonald said.

Last year the speedway also hosted a circus and animal shows at the track, but he said he does not get the opportunity to book these kind of shows often.

Admission to the track for regular shows is $3.50 for adults and $1.50 for children.

8 Unveil espionage in 'Top Secret' spy game

"Top Secret," TSR Games, 1980, $10.00

"Top Secret", as the name suggests, is a game of James Bond-type espionage and adventure. Players may assume the roles of assassins, confiscators, or investigators. The rules are quite comprehensive, covering security systems, explosives, underwater combat, bullet use against vehicles and numerous rarities. Accompanying these rules is a list of espionage-related organizations and a glossary of espionage-related terms.

The playing module, called "Operation: Sprechenhaltestelle", has a map of part of the town of that name. The map is three levels, showing rooftop level, ground level, and an elaborate underground level. The modular book is twenty-seven pages of buildingroom descriptions, personalities to be scattered about the town, and a long list of missions to be assigned to players.

Although the combat seems a bit unwieldy (and the martial arts tables are a little strange), the rules are very realistic and enjoyable. In my own group, three different "worlds" used Sprechenhaltestelle for a couple of months with enjoyment for all. "Top Secret" is a good game for all players who are into intrigue and espionage.

Lasagna lovers take heed—Garfield is back

Book Review

by Patricia Malcolm-Lynn

Garfield Gains Weight by Jim Davis
Ballantine Books, 1981. $4.95

Garfield's back! In Jim Davis' second book of cartoons we continue to follow the antics of his gluttonous creation.

Everyone who turns to the comic section first and then reads the rest of the paper will love Garfield.

Even people who dislike cats, like Garfield. He is cynical, witty and urbane. Like all of us, Garfield sleeps late. Like some of us, he hates joggers and loves lasagna.

Garfield's love of lasagna causes his biggest problem—his obesity.

Garfield gets revenge for everyone who fights a losing battle of the bulge. For example, Jon, Garfield's owner, says, "Garfield, you are disgustingly, slovenly, sloppy fat." Garfield replies, "Poor Jon, he obviously has disgustingly slovenly, sloppy fat confused with 'big boned'."

In another strip when Jon says, "Why the droopy demeanor, Garfield?" Garfield hits him and replies, "Never say droop to a fat person."

Garfield appears in one series of strips as the 'caped avenger' who goes out to fight evil—late morning evil, that is.

In other strips he is the great cow cat riding his faithful steed through the living room and runs into a foot stool. Garfield flies off, landing on his head. Lynman, another character, notices that Odie, the steed, has hurt his paw and asks what to do. Garfield, still standing on his head, replies, "Shoot him."

But, whether he is the great cowcat, the caped avenger, or just Garfield, his adventures are amusing. The cat is a mean, fat, slovenly grouch. In spite of that, or because of it, he is frightfully funny.

Here's to you, Garfield. Have a double helping of lasagna on me.

Man 'ducks out' of suburban life

LACON, Ill. (AP)—Out there somewhere away from the pressure cooker of Chicago business, amid the grind of real estate deals, the hustle to make a buck, John McKean heard the call of the wild.

Calls of the wild, actually—the brassy honk of the goose, the cry of the duck, of the crow, the quail, the dove.

McKean heard them as a sailor hears a siren song, and the music led him here to a little, green, metal building surrounded by high, hard timber on the banks of the Illinois River.

"I decided to put my money into something I really liked," he said. "And for once in my life, I'm doing something I enjoy."

What he enjoys is making bird calls, some of the most unusual calls made anywhere.

"They're the only adjustable—tone duck and goose calls in the world," he said. "When duck hunters are out and it's misty and damp, calls tend to lose their tone. To adjust them, you have to take them apart, and then all the pieces fall all over the place."

The adjustable calls, however, feature a green dial a hunter can turn to alter the reed and raise or lower the pitch.

It has been a year since McKean quit selling real estate in Chicago suburbia and settled here near this tiny, wooded, river town in the heart of duck—hunting country.

He revived the Green Head Co., which had been idle for four years following the death of its founder, Louis Biccocchi, a convivial Italian who began making bird calls a quarter-century ago in a garage behind his tavern in nearby LaSalle.

The adjustable—tone call was Biccocchi's invention. But Biccocchi's motto was, "You want my call, you come see me," says McKean, and eventually the business flourished.

Figuring if you build a better bird call, the hunting world will beat a path to your door, McKean has resumed production, at times loading the back of his pickup with calls and heading to dealers, wholesalers, and shows.

The little metal shop is a study in disarray: lathes, sanders, rows of boxes, wall racks for hunting caps and jackets, mountains of black walnut lumber awaiting transformation into glossy cocoa—colored calls with a green gizmo on the barrel.

The gizmo helps a hunter set both pitch and volume, says Charlie Smith, national coon squall champ and Illinois' best duck caller.

"If you're out hunting in the timbers, you can adjust down to a fine, little sound. But if you're out hunting on open water, just let that sucker out for a long, hard quack," says Smith, who sometimes tours with McKean at demonstrations.

"Every call is personally tested by me before it's sent out," he said. "And believe me, after a full day of blowing ducks, I hear ducks in my sleep."

Congratulations to Phi Beta Lambda!!

DUFFY

"On a space station, in an old maintenance tunnel leading to a guarded storage area. On how much of a pain a claustrophobic thief can be..."
