Fund set to remember life of Matthew Shepard

By Matt Neistein
City editor

Today is the one-year anniversary of the murder of Matthew Shepard, a University of Wyoming student who was allegedly killed because he was homosexual.

Michael Welsh of Mattoon is determined that no one will forget it.

"It's too late to bring him back," Welsh said, but he hopes that through a fund he created a year ago, everyone will remember Shepard.

Welsh set the fund up Oct. 16, 1998, four days after Shepard died.

"I got up in the morning and heard on the news that Matthew had died," he said.

The original $100 was donated by Welsh to start the fund, which is held by a bank in Laramie, Wyo., where Shepard was killed. That $100 has mushroomed into $2,000, he said, with donations coming from concerned citizens.

"A lot of it came from Wyoming," he said, where his fund, one of "two or three" such funds that were set up at the same time, was covered extensively by Wyoming newspapers. "It has been beautifully received."

Other funds paid for burial expenses, among other things, but Welsh has bigger plans.

"Fifty years from now, I hope that someone walks onto (the University of Wyoming campus), someone who isn't even born yet, and looks up and sees the Matthew Shepard Building," he said.

Welsh, who received a master's degree in speech communication from Eastern in 1979, said he only recently attempted to contact Shepard's parents, after seeing Shepard's mother, who has become a crusader against similar hate crimes, on CNN. The letter he wrote conveys his understanding that the first year after a loved one's death is the most difficult.

"The first birthday (afterwards), the first Christmas, those are the hardest," he said.

Eastern faculty negotiations at a stand still

UPI bargaining unit members to meet today to discuss current contract negotiations and actions

By Melanie Schneider
Administration editor

Negotiations for a new agreement between Eastern's chapter of the University Professionals of Illinois and the administrative team are still not complete, with faculty salaries being the main concern UPI members are still debating.

"The most important issue is the need to address low faculty and staff salaries," said David Radavich, UPI vice president and chief negotiator. "Eastern's faculty performance is at a very high level and we need to bring faculty and staff salaries up."

Statistics indicate Eastern has a graduation rate second only to the University of Illinois in Urbana-Champaign, and the student satisfaction rate is very high, Radavich said.

"These results indicate a high level of satisfaction with faculty at Eastern," Radavich said.

One of the main concerns of UPI is if faculty members are not compensated for their accomplishments, it can only result in a serious decrease in morale, which would have a subsequent decline in quality, he said.

Currently, UPI is using the methods and approaches of interest-based bargaining offered by the Harvard Negotiation Project. Faculty, staff and administration at Eastern received training from a team that used this Harvard-based approach to negotiating. This is a "win-win" type of negotiation, Radavich said.

"This is a different type of “ Eastern's faculty performance is at a very high level and we need to bring faculty and staff salaries up.

David Radavich,
UPI vice president and chief negotiator

” negotiation where we try to find an outcome that is positive for both sides," he said. "We examine options that enhance faculty, but we are also aware of what benefits students and community service projects."

Radavich said UPI has agreed on such issues as tenure, promotion, leave policy, grievance procedures and retention.

"We are still negotiating evaluation, summer school, overload and workload," he said.

Radavich said these negotiations have a direct effect on faculty and an indirect effect on students because of which courses are offered during the school year and class size.

UPI will meet today from 4 to 6 p.m. in Lumpkin Hall room 122. All bargaining unit members are invited to discuss the current contract negotiations and possible actions. Radavich said he could not predict how quickly the negotiations will be completed.

"We could finish this week," he said. "It is difficult to predict one way or the other because it depends on both sides."

Senate looks into designated driver's program

Goal will be to help get students home safely on weekends

By Chris Sievers
Student Government editor

Student Senate members are looking into the possibility of establishing a designated driver's program on campus.

"It is a program that will be promoting safe drinking habits," said Amanda Furlan, senate member and organizer of the program. "It does not condone underage drinking, alcohol abuse, or the like."

Furlan said the program is intended to give those under the influence a safe ride home. Furlan hopes the program will deter students from drinking and driving.

Furlan said this program will be for students who attend Eastern and will operate during the evening and night hours.

"Designated drivers who are part of the program will pick up people and drive them home or elsewhere," Furlan said.

The volunteers will be from campus and Furlan said she would like to work with the city, including the police department.

Furlan said she has talked to Lou Hencken, vice president for student affairs, about using university-owned, 15-passenger vans.

"I have to get a more solidified program before he'll let them be used," she said. "But he's interested."

The drivers would be student volunteers who will be trained in CPR and defensive driving before they would be able to drive, Furlan said.

Furlan said she wants to bring the program to campus because there is not currently a program that gets students safely to their homes.

"The Mom's shuttle does a good job bringing people from the Square to the campus, but these people still must walk home," she said.

Furlan said she will be conducting surveys in the future to decide specifics of the program.

Once the surveys are complete and a formal proposal is made to the administration, Furlan hopes to have the program "up and running" sometime near the beginning of next semester.

Brain stimulation fights depression

WASHINGTON (AP) The former ship-builder had such severe depression, unrelieved by any of today's therapies, that he had trouble even leaving the house. Then doctors implanted a pacemaker-like device to stimulate a part of his brain thought important for mood and that very day the man laughed.

"It was remarkable," recalled Dr. Mark George of the Medical University of South Carolina, who performed the experimental implant. "I said, 'Are you being forced to laugh or do you feel good inside?' He said both."

Stimulating a nerve that runs from the neck into one of the brain's most mysterious regions appears promising enough at relieving once-untreatable depression that the government has granted permission for a study at 15 U.S. hospitals.

The treatment, called vague nerve stimulation, involves sending tiny electric shocks into a nerve in the neck which the relays the messages deep into the brain.

About half of the 30 depressed patients treated in a pilot study, people who had failed every other treatment, "got a very good response," George said in an interview.

The results are not definitive, he cautioned. But he added, "Stimulating there really is a wonderful portal into the base of the brain."

Indeed, scientists think stimulating this nerve could have even more far-reaching effects, such as enhancing memory or treating obesity by curbing appetite.

That's because the vagus nerve is what Dr. Mitchell Roslin of Brooklyn's Maimonides Medical Center calls "one of the information superhighways" between the brain and other organs. It relays messages, such as signals to regulate heartbeat, and sends messages back to the brain, such as when the stomach is full.

Clinton sends letter requesting vote delay

WASHINGTON (AP) President Clinton asked the Senate in writing on Monday to put off voting on the nuclear test ban treaty, warning that a likely defeat in Tuesday's scheduled vote would "severely harm the national security."

Republicans called his letter a first step toward possibly postponing the vote but sought further assurances the issue wouldn't come up again during this 106th Congress.

"I firmly believe the treaty is in the national interest," Clinton wrote to Senate Majority Leader Trent Lott, R-Miss., and Minority Leader Tom Daschle, D-S.D. But he wrote that he recognized he lacked the two-thirds vote needed for ratification. "Accordingly, I request that you postpone consideration of the Comprehensive Test Ban Treaty on the Senate floor."

By putting his request in writing, Clinton met one demand of his Republican opponents. The letter was silent on their insistence that Clinton promise not to revive it during the 2000 election season, but White House officials rejected that request.

"Even though there are campaigns under way in the United States, we have to take into account the larger national interest," said National Security Council spokesman David Leavy. "It would be irresponsible for the president to limit his tools in dealing with something as sensitive as nuclear testing."

Lott's spokesman, John Czwartacki, said the letter was "merely a first step," and noted that Lott, joined by Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., Foreign Relations Committee chairman, has asked for agreement that the treaty not come before the Senate again before 2001.

"Senator Lott will discuss this reversal by the White House with his fellow senators on Tuesday," Czwartacki said. "Now there must be agreement reached in the Senate that it not come up again."

Sen. John Warner, R-Va., chairman of the Armed Services Committee, called the letter "a significant step forward" and was working with Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan, D-N.Y., to build support in both parties for postponing the vote until 2001.

A Warner aide said the two senators hoped to have a letter supporting the delay signed by a majority of senators from both parties on the desks of party leaders Tuesday.

"This should be an easy call," Sen. Joseph Biden of Delaware, the Foreign Relations Committee's ranking Democrat, said in a statement. "The president has asked for a delay. Most Democrats and many Republicans support a delay. It's clearly in our national interest to put off this vote without any further wrangling. I hope the Senate puts the national interest first."

The treaty would impose a blanket international ban on all nuclear test explosions. Supporters estimate they are 15 to 20 votes short of the two-thirds majority needed for Senate ratification.

The pact has been signed by 154 nations, including the United States, but ratified by only 51. It will not go into effect if the United States fails to ratify it.

Gravel to be laid for parking lot

By Geneva White
Campus editor

University police may find themselves issuing less parking tickets this semester once the extension to the parking lot at the corner of Ninth and Garfield streets is completed to make way for 41 parking spaces.

The extra spaces will occupy the vacant lot next to the current parking lot where the university had two houses torn down this summer.

Work to lay gravel down in the lot is expected to begin after Eastern's Board of Trustees approves the construction contract for the $275,000 project at the upcoming board meeting Oct. 18, Ted Weidner, director of Facilities Planning and Management, said in an e-mail.

Because the asphalt plants will be closed through the winter, a gravel base will be laid down so the lot can be used this semester, Weidner said. Work will be completed when the asphalt plants reopen in late spring.

"If we went and did it all right now, we would not be able to do the paving," said Michael Doerr, manager of design and construction.

"What we're looking at doing is graveling the area and doing the work around the existing spaces. We'll increase the spaces this fall."

Besides laying down asphalt in the vacant lot, a storm sewer also will be installed at the end of the spring semester, Doerr said. This will involve closing off the entire lot, including the area currently being used.

"We have to close the lot when we do that, and we don't want to do it during school," he said.

Weidner said he is waiting until after the BOT meeting to discuss a schedule to begin the work with the contractor.

"We'll just have to wait and see what happens," he said.

Another parking lot planned in the near future will involve the demolition of the tennis courts near Weller Hall, Doerr said. An architect was recently selected to design the lot, which is part of the Campus Master Plan.

"It's probably the first (parking lot) we're going to do under the new master plan guideline," Doerr said.

"We're just in the very beginning stages of this project."

Local officials to discuss education

By Melanie Schneider
Administration editor

Local state officials will share their perspectives on values in higher education today, which is a "topic for the times" according to David Bateman, distinguished professor in business.

Former U.S. Rep. Glenn Poshard, Illinois Rep. Dale Righter, R-Mattoon, and Charleston Mayor Dan Coughill will present their independent views on higher education at 7:30 p.m. in the Gilomen Auditorium of Lumpkin Hall.

Illinois Community College Board Core Values Initiative staff liaison, Yvonne Singley, also will join in the discussion of higher education, relating to Eastern and other higher education institutions.

"Most likely, some students and faculty members don't realize how important this issue of values in higher education is," Bateman said. "I think students will be interested by what the mayor has to say. He usually has a fascinating story to tell."

The speakers will trace the development of values among people and institutions in the past, present and future.

Poshard currently serves as assistant chancellor at Southern Illinois University in Carbondale. Coughill is a retired brigadier general. Bateman has a distinguished teaching career of 35 years. He was also the recipient of the Mitau Award for creating one of the "Great Ideas in Higher Education" of the 20th century.

Bateman said he developed a method to get feedback to students very quickly and in a productive manner, which had great results.

The lecture is sponsored by Eastern's Lumpkin College of Business and Applied Sciences, and is a part of the symposium honoring the inauguration of Eastern President Carol Surles.

A reception will follow the presentation.

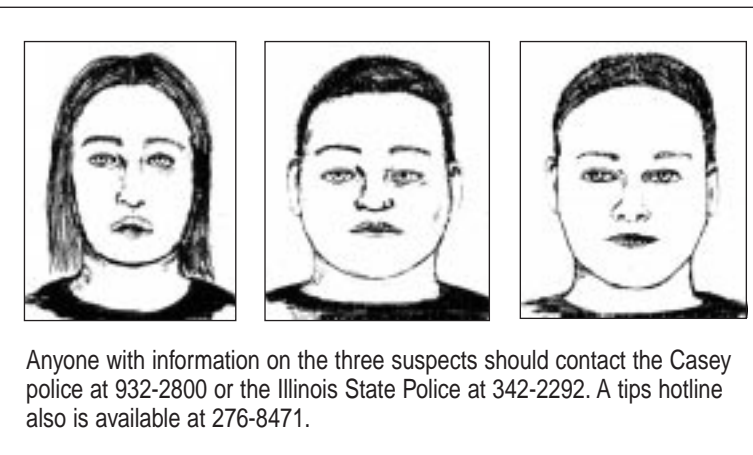

Three suspects sought in burning of boy

A new way to get home

It looks as though the first step has been taken to target the destruction of Eastern's and Charleston residents' property — at least the type that occurs when people are on their way home from bars or parties.

The Student Senate is looking into creating a designated driver program on campus. This would go one step further than the Mother's shuttle and take students to their homes, rather than to and from bars.

This program is a positive step toward promoting responsible drinking; while drinking on a college campus is inevitable, being smart and using common sense while doing so is important.

The senate move to sponsor a designated driving program on campus is a good idea — it's something that is definitely needed and protects not only students, but other people's property.

The program, which originated from Student Senate member Amanda Furlan, emerges in the midst of the debate over extending the bar hours an extra hour on Saturdays and Sundays.

City officials say students are not acting responsibly — too many after-hour parties are occurring that result in destruction of residents' property.

"It is a program that will be promoting safe drinking habits," Furlan said. "It does not condone underage drinking, alcohol abuse or the like."

The program, which is still in the preliminary stages, will rely on volunteers from the campus and if all goes well, Furlan said, 15-passenger university vans will be used. The volunteer drivers would be required to have CPR training and have training in defensive driving, she said.

Surveys will be conducted to determine the specifics of the program, mainly whether such a program is of interest to students.

With city officials looking for Eastern students to take responsibility for their actions, the designated driving program is a smart move on the Student Senate's part.

While it's one small step toward fighting the battle, it's a step forward. The administration should lend a hand in helping promote a safe social environment and help push this program through.

Today's quote

I believe that every right implies a responsibility; every opportunity, an obligation; every possession, a duty.

John Davison Rockefeller Jr.
American industrialist and philanthropist, 1839-1937

They're watching you; be responsible

Since the Peer Cooperation Program proposed by student senate member Will Brooks has pretty much been shot down, Charleston and Eastern community members are gearing up to provide ulterior solutions to the problem of college students drinking.

The initial peer program, though never implemented, would have been a bust to begin with. The idea of a Peer Cooperation Program that would focus on students taking care of other students who have had too much to drink is a good concept, it just isn't feasible.

Groups on campus such as BACCHUS and FOCUS make attempts to educate students about the affects of alcohol, but obviously can't reach all students. The Peer Cooperation Program would have just been lost in the shuffle, and City Council members knew it.

But the idea of taking care of peers who have had too much to drink shouldn't die. Upon hearing about the ordinance that would extend bars until 2 a.m., I was excited.

City Council members asked Student Senate to implement the Peer Cooperation Program before they approved the ordinance, but Brooks said they would not do anything with the program until council members agreed to extend the bar hours.

Although the two bodies clashed and the ordinance was voted down, the result of the last City Council meeting brought a glimmer of hope to improving the relationship between the city and campus communities. But the underlying fact remains — students need to be watching out for each other when they are out drinking.

As one of the participants of The Daily Eastern News bar crawl on Oct. 2, I not only appreciated being chauffeured around all night by designated drivers, but I realized baby-sitters, yes, that's what they sometimes are, do come in handy.

I'm not saying that students should drag one friend out who has to stay sober the entire night, just take care of people

Tammie Sloup
News editor

"Regardless of whether the person is a friend, if you see someone who doesn't look too good, ask them who to call for help."

On the other hand, students are still going to drink until the wee hours of the night whether it's at a bar or in a house.

But here's some advice: If you do want the bars to stay open later, now is the time to play it safe. We are definitely being watched by the Charleston community since the ordinance to extend bar hours will be brought up again next month. For example, me and a friend were told about at least four different after-hours parties Saturday night. As we attempted to go to the after hours, police had already broken up two of them.

So while we are under the scrutinizing eye of Charleston, keep in mind that we need to be watching our own actions.

Put down the drink and help a friend home if he or she is too drunk to walk. You don't have to be a watchdog all night, but it's kind of obvious when someone has had too much to drink.

Regardless of whether the person is a friend, if you see someone who doesn't look too good, ask them who to call for help. If you don't get a response, call the police as a last measure.

I am not trying to preach a code of ethics for drinking, just merely lay out the simplicity of taking care of peers. And we shouldn't need a program to handle that.

who have had too much to drink. It's all about common sense.

Upon hearing about two instances Saturday that involved intoxicated people passing out outside and another person having to get rushed to Sarah Bush Lincoln Health Systems to get his stomach pumped, I realized two things: Eastern has a reputation of a party school for a good reason and maybe we're not ready for later bar hours.

Speaker deserves credit for accomplishments

I write this letter as a means to give some positive press to a very deserving and humble man. Dr. Tom Woodall has been teaching in the physical education department at Eastern since 1965. That is nearly 35 years! He has coached three NCAA cross country national champion teams, is the recipient of numerous awards, has climbed Long's Peak in Colorado numerous times and accomplished and experienced things to numerous to list.

But these are not the reasons I feel Dr. Woodall deserves some public appreciation. Wednesday night at a presidential inaugural symposium address, Dr. Woodall presented "Ya Gotta Have Heart." His message was a lively one in which he spoke not only about the physical heart and its amazing design, but more importantly the spiritual heart. In his address, Woodall invited his audience to not trust their own understanding, but the seek to know God, who created them.

Those who know Dr. Woodall describe him as kind, sincere, caring and very young at heart. Because he cares he encourages others to have courage, steadfastness and determination in their daily lives. Woodall does all of this humbly. While some professor might be reluctant to be a role model for their students, Dr. Woodall is an excellent example of a man who is not afraid to share what has made his life so rich, Jesus Christ. Woodall is truly a blessing for this university.

Letter policy

The Daily Eastern News accepts letters to the editor addressing local, state, national and international issues.

They should be less than 250 words and include the author's name, telephone number and address. Students should indicate their year in school and major. Faculty, administration and staff should indicate their position and department. Letters whose authors cannot be verified will not be printed.

Depending on space constraints, we may have to edit your letter, so keep it as concise as possible.

Earthquake lecture kicks off Earth Science Week

By Amy Andrews
Staff writer

John Stimac, professor of geology, said his main focus in lecturing is to get students to realize earthquakes can happen anywhere in the United States.

Stimac led National Earth Science Week off Monday with his speech, "Paleoseismology - In Search of the Extreme Event." He discussed how to find the extreme earthquakes and the effects they have.

Stimac presented a slide show of his travels and research and demonstrated how large the faults of earthquakes could be. Stimac talked in depth about what he looked for in the earthquakes.

"We choose the areas very carefully," Stimac said.

Stimac said the research team he travels with has to age date everything, in addition to mapping the fault, which can prove to be "very tedious work." Though geological mapping takes a while, the process would take much longer without the help of modern technology, he said. Research that would normally take about two to three hours, now takes 25 to 30 minutes thanks to the "beauty of computers," Stimac said.

The research team works with is funded by the National Science Foundation which is located in Washington, DC. The team also is funded by the National Geological Survey which heads the National Earthquake Hazards Reduction Program.

The San Andreas Fault and Home Pass located in California were two main subjects for Stimac's research. By collecting the information at the site, Stimac and the other researchers could identify when the earthquake happened, how large the faults were, how often erosions happen, and can tell what offset the earthquake in the first place.

"Once we get a better understanding of large events, we can understand what is happening here at home," Stimac said.

Stimac said he has traveled and researched mostly on the west coast, including southern California and the Mexican border. Stimac predicts a 30 percent probability the greater Los Angeles area will have a catastrophic earthquake in the next 30 years that will be at least 7.8 on the Richter scale. This would in turn cause approximately $7 to $10 million worth of damage.

Stimac has done research in southern Illinois, southern Kentucky, and foreign countries such as China, and Arman. He said the main reason for his research is to educate students and others that earthquake hazards do not just affect one place, and that they have resounding effects.

"Besides the traveling and sightseeing, my main focus is to bring back useful data to apply here in the United States," Stimac said.

Various law schools to have reps at annual law day

About 10 Illinois state law schools to be represented

By Elizabeth O'Riley
Activities editor

Students interested in attending law school are encouraged to come out to the Martin Luther King Jr. University Union Wednesday to speak with representatives from various law schools.

Law day has been an annual event for more than 20 years, said Peter Leigh, a professor of political science.

The event will take place from 10 a.m. until 3 p.m. on the third floor of the Union.

Representatives from about 10 Illinois state schools will be available to speak with about admission requirements and advantages of their schools.

Representatives from St. Louis University and Indiana University also will be available.

The event is very helpful, will provide students with a service and hopefully, students will benefit from the day, Leigh said.

Leigh said the representatives will be able to provide students with information on what they are looking for and every school will have brochures and catalogs about the schools' law programs.

"Everyone is welcome to attend the event; it is not specifically for pre-law majors or minors," said Leigh. "Anyone who is interested in attending law school is invited."

Leigh said this event is very beneficial to students interested in attending law school. Students will be given the chance to learn about the personality of the school, its advantages and unique characteristics.

Law day "will be very helpful, it will help students make decisions on where they do and don't want to go," Leigh said.

The event is sponsored by the pre-law society, Sigma Iota Lambda, and is free and open to the public.

Informational to be held on graduate studies

Students interested in attending graduate school can explore their options at Graduate School Information Day.

The informational day will be held from 9:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. Wednesday in the Grand Ballroom of the Martin Luther King Jr. University Union.

"This day is designed to help students apply to schools and help move the application process along," said Robert Augustine, acting dean of the graduate school.

A variety of representatives from different universities will be present to answer questions about how to apply for graduate school, what scholarships and assistant-ships are available and contact people from the university, Augustine said.

The representatives also will be able to answer any questions or clear up any concerns students may have about graduate school.

Universities slated to attend Graduate School Information Day include Ball State University, Drake Law School, Illinois State University, Indiana State University, Purdue University and the University of Illinois in Urbana/Champaign. The event is being sponsored by Career Services.

Students should begin thinking about graduate school at the end of their junior year and into the beginning of their senior year, Augustine said.

Procrastination workshop to be held today

Causes of procrastination and strategies to stop it will be addressed at the life skills workshop titled "Procrastination" to be held today.

The workshop will be held at 7 p.m. in the Effingham Room of the Martin Luther King Jr. University Union.

The Counseling Center is sponsoring the workshop as part of a life skills series. Karola Alford, associate professor in the counseling center, will speak at the event.

Alford said procrastination builds stress and anxiety, and the goal of the workshop is to help students who have problems with procrastination learn what to do about their problems.

"I would really encourage students to attend. This could be an excellent beginning for change, if they want to change," Alford said.

Alford said upon entering the workshop, students will receive a checklist to fill out concerning their procrastination habits. By doing this, they will find where their problems lie and assess their patterns.

Other topics covered will include talking about how thinking affects procrastination and common excuses students use.

The workshop is free and open to the public.

UB to sponsor lecture for Latino Heritage Month

Wrapping up a month of celebrations for Latino Heritage Month, the University Board will be sponsoring the lecture "Wandering Peoples: Colonialism, Ethnic Space, and Ecological Frontiers in Northwestern Mexico."

The lecture will be held today at 3 p.m. in the Effingham Room of the Martin Luther King Jr. University Union.

Cynthia Radding is a leading practitioner of environmental history, said Ben Fallaw, an assistant professor of history and coordinator of the event.

Radding will be speaking on her research pertaining to the natural environment and the people of Northern Mexico.

"I think anyone who is interested in the past of America and the relationship between the people and the environment, should come," said Fallaw.

The lecture is free and open to the public.

Surles to address Faculty Senate

President Surles will address the Faculty Senate today at 2 p.m.

The meeting, which will be held in room 2504 in Buzzard Hall, will focus mainly on Surles' goals for the future of Eastern.

"She'll present some aspects of her vision for the university and we'll be able to respond," said John Best, vice chair of faculty senate.

Faculty Senate chair Bonnie Irwin said the talk with Surles would be somewhat like a question and answer session.

Irwin also said the senate will hear a report about the student conduct code, which is in the process of being revised.

The senate also will discuss their upcoming fall forum.

Tragic timing kills six on roadside

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — Had Brandon Kallmeyer dozed off and let his truck slide onto the shoulder almost anywhere else, he might have simply awakened and steered back onto the highway.

But police said Kallmeyer tragically veered off a straight, flat four-lane road at precisely the place where a group of college students had gathered en route to a fraternity party, leaving six dead.

"We could hear screaming and stuff but at first we didn't have any idea he was running over people," said Daniel Lara, a 22-year-old student who lives nearby. "We walked out and saw bodies all over the place."

The accident occurred just after midnight Sunday about two miles west of the Texas A&M University main campus, said police Maj. Mike Patterson.

The victims, four students from Baylor University, one from Texas A&M and one from Southwest Texas State, had gathered to attend a party at the Tau Kappa Epsilon house along the four-lane highway. Some had just parked on the road's shoulder, and the pickup side-swiped two parked cars and struck a third.

Kallmeyer, 18, also a Texas A&M student, was not injured and apparently had not been drinking, police said. He was driving back to College Station after dropping off his girlfriend about 30 miles away.

Patterson said investigators will present evidence to Brazos County prosecutors without recommending charges.

The victims were identified as Emily Hollister, 18, of South Bend, Ind.; Tricia Calp, 18, of Houston; Dolan Wostal III, 22, of Alvin, Texas and Erika Lanham, 18, of Fort Collins, Colo. all Baylor students; William Flores, 22, a Southwest Texas student from San Marcos, Texas; and Ted Bruton, 21, a Texas A&M student from San Angelo, Texas.

Two other students were hospitalized with non life-threatening injuries, one with a broken pelvis. Both were treated and released on Sunday.

The Baylor students had made the trip for their school's football game at Texas A&M earlier in the day. Miss Lanham, Miss Hollister and Miss Calp lived on the same floor of a Baylor dormitory.

About 200 people attended the party at a house about 30 yards off the road. Witnesses said parties there often draw large crowds who must park on the shoulder of a highway with a 65-mph speed limit.

"There really shouldn't be any parking on this four-lane highway," Lara said.

Fraternity members wouldn't discuss the accident Sunday, and covered a large sign bearing their Greek letters with black plastic sheeting.

Clinton, Congress face four veto fights over spending

WASHINGTON (AP) — As this year's budget battle nears a climax, President Clinton is threatening to veto four spending bills.

He and Congress are at odds over such issues as hiring teachers and police officers and regulating oil and gas companies that use federal lands.

The two sides are separated by about $10 billion to $20 billion, about the same magnitude as most end-of-session spending fights since Republicans took over Congress in 1995.

Though substantial, the funds at stake amount to about 1 percent of the near $1.8 trillion federal budget.

This year's tussle, however, is complicated by the GOP's stated refusal to pay for extra spending from the Social Security surplus. For decades, both parties have used that till to find needed billions of dollars.

Having lost their coveted tax cut to a Clinton veto, GOP leaders want to cast themselves as defenders of the huge pension system, and are daring the president to do otherwise.

"Please work with us to guarantee the retirement security of our seniors and the quality of life of Americans before we give even more money to other nations," House Speaker Dennis Hastert, R-Ill., and other GOP leaders said after Clinton threatened to veto a foreign aid bill he said was too

I don't think they ought to make themselves into a lame-duck Congress.

President Bill Clinton

small.
Clinton wants to be seen as the champion of education and other popular programs, and has begun tweaking Congress for not doing its work. Eleven days into fiscal 2000, he has signed just five of the new year's 13 spending bills.

"They're still drawing a paycheck up there," he said last week. "And it's a little larger than it was before a bill that I signed. And I don't think they ought to make themselves into a lame-duck Congress."

He referred to a measure that gave members of Congress a 4.6 percent pay raise.

Three fiscal 2000 measures covering defense, veterans, housing, science, agriculture, and environment, seem likely to be completed by Congress and signed soon.

That leaves five other bills as the remaining battleground.

To pay for them, GOP leaders are considering across-the-board spending cuts ranging from $3 billion to $8 billion.

Lacking support for other ideas, GOP leaders say such cuts are fair, but the administration opposes the plan as a meat-ax approach that will hurt needed programs.

One remaining bill, covering the District of Columbia, has already been vetoed. GOP leaders say they will remove some items Clinton has objected to covering city council members' salaries and fees paid to lawyers suing the schools.

But the bill would still prohibit the medical use of marijuana and needle distribution to drug addicts, and is likely to continue drawing administration objections.

Michigan State sophomore hospitalized with meningitis

EAST LANSING, Mich. (AP) — Antibiotics were being made available to more than 1,500 students at Michigan State University after a sophomore came down with bacterial meningitis.

Students who live in the university's Wilson Hall began lining up Sunday night to receive drugs to fight the potentially fatal disease. Valentine Gutierrez, 18, a business freshman from Texas, was among those in line.

"At first I wasn't going to, but then I thought, 'I do live on his floor,'" she said. "Better safe than sorry."

Adam Busuttill began feeling ill Friday night, passed out in his Wilson Hall dorm room on Saturday evening and was taken by ambulance to Sparrow Hospital.

A hospital spokesman declined to give out information on Busuttill's condition. But Daniel Havlichek, an associate professor in Michigan State's Department of Medicine, said Busuttill's condition was considered critical.

Two Michigan State students have died of bacterial meningitis since 1996.

Busuttill is a member of the school's marching band but did not perform Saturday during the game against Michigan University, school officials said. They declined to say what instrument he played, but said it was not an instrument in which he would share a mouthpiece with others.

School officials declined to disclose further information about Busuttill, saying the only reason they were releasing Busuttill's name was so that students who had come into contact with him could take action.

The school already has notified Busuttill's suitemate and was contacting people who may have had contact with him. Antibiotics also were to be made available to the 200 band members today.

A vaccine will be made available to other students, faculty and staff throughout the week and through the rest of the month, university President Peter McPherson said.

The vaccine is generally about 80 percent to 90 percent effective, but takes 10 days to two weeks before it begins to work. McPherson says the vaccine costs more than $50 per dose and will be paid by the school.

"Clearly this is a major expense, but on the other hand this is a health step we have to take," McPherson said. "It will be a sizable bill, no question."

The vaccine protects against four of the five strains of bacterial meningitis. Doctors have not yet determined which strain Busuttill contracted.

A fact sheet e-mailed to students said bacterial meningitis has an average mortality rate of between 2 percent and 10 percent, with early recognition and treatment being the crucial variables.

Bacterial meningitis is an inflammation of the tissues that cover the brain and spinal cord. Symptoms include fever, headache, a stiff neck, vomiting, confusion and sleepiness.

It is usually spread through intimate contact, being touched or kissed, sharing eating utensils or any secretions or excretions from the body.

Second trial opens in gay college student's beating

LARAMIE, Wyo. (AP) Almost a year to the day after gay college student Matthew Shepard died with a cracked skull, jury selection began in the murder trial of the man accused of instigating the attack.

A few anti-gay protesters demonstrated outside the courthouse Monday, along with people who came to honor Shepard's memory by wearing angel costumes to spread what they said was a message of love.

Inside, the defendant, Aaron McKinney, 22, talked with his lawyers, looked at his notes and smiled occasionally as prosecutor Cal Rerucha briefed prospective jurors on the selection process and warned them they will be shown graphic evidence such as autopsy photos.

"Murder is never pretty," Rerucha said. "In order to be a good juror, you have to be able to examine those photographs."

Shepard, 21, a University of Wyoming freshman majoring in political science, died a year ago Tuesday, five days after he was lured out of a bar, driven to a remote spot on the freezing prairie, lashed to a wooden fence and pistol-whipped into a coma.

Prosecutors say McKinney, accompanied by fellow roofer Russell Henderson, 22, instigated the crime to rob Shepard of $20, but that Shepard may have been targeted because he was gay.

McKinney could get the death penalty. Henderson pleaded guilty in April to murder and is serving life in prison. He is expected to testify.

McKinney has said he had no idea Shepard was gay and does not hate homosexuals. His lawyers are expected to try to pin the crime on Henderson by arguing that he lied to save himself from the death penalty when he implicated McKinney.

The killing provoked a national debate over hate crimes and led to measures across the country adding sexual orientation to anti-discrimination laws.

However, hate-crime legislation failed in Wyoming last winter after lawmakers argued that gays and other protected groups would get special treatment.

AT TIAA-CREF, LOW EXPENSES ARE A HIGH PRIORITY.

All financial companies charge operating fees and expenses — some more than others. Of course, the lower the expenses you pay, the better. That way, more of your money goes where it should — toward building a comfortable future.

As the largest retirement system in the world,¹ we have among the lowest expenses in the insurance and mutual fund industries.²

In fact, TIAA-CREF's 0.36% average fund expenses are a fraction of the expense charges of comparable funds.³ It's one reason why Morningstar says, "TIAA-CREF sets the standard in the

Eastern seeks revenge against SEMO

By Troy Hinkel
Staff writer

Thus far this season Eastern's volleyball team has compiled a 10-6 overall record and a 5-1 conference record by using a rotation of players in and out of games to gain key match-ups on the court.

One of these key players that has emerged for the Panthers has been outside hitter Erin Morrison.

The junior from Colchester has played at Eastern the past two years. This season she has been able to come into her own as her experience and ability are leading her to a career season.

"This year Erin is playing very well and blocking has become a key point to her game," said teammate Leslie Przekwas.

One of the main roles for Morrison has been a to act as a spark plug at times when the team has hit a stagnant point in its game.

"Erin is an enthusiastic and encouraging player who always tries to pick the team up emotionally," interim head coach Andrew Epperly said.

"We look to her to get a kill when we are not getting it from other places."

Morrison averages 1.78 kills a game, which is fifth on the team and she's third on the team in blocking.

"She's the type of player that never complains and she does whatever is asked of her. She also has great athletic ability that includes an explosive jumping ability," said Epperly.

On Tuesday Eastern plays host to Southeast Missouri (12-5, 4-1) in a rematch of last season's Ohio Valley Conference tournament championship game in which SEMO beat Eastern on its home court.

They are led by seniors Angie Aschoff, Jackie Derwort, and Amy Henken. Aschoff is a returning OVC first team selection, while Derwort and Henken are returning OVC second team selections.

SEMO has an advantage on paper in the form of height. The Othakians have 11 players on their roster with only three shorter than five-foot-ten inches.

Eastern, with only five of its 14 players over five-feet-ten-inches, has faced multiple teams this season that have towered over it with height but have been able to play well despite the disadvantage.

"As long as we pass well and play with defensive intensity while minimizing errors we can beat a lot of teams, including SEMO," said Epperly.

One-third of the way into the conference season Eastern is second place in the OVC, while SEMO is in third and Austin Peay is in first.

"The conference is wide open meaning that one loss is not going to make a season and as long as we compete while playing hard and do the things we are capable of doing I'll be pleased as a coach," Epperly said.

"I just want the team to play our best volleyball in mid to late November when the tournaments start."

To counterbalance SEMO's height, Eastern will use its digging ability to its advantage. Eastern is currently fifth in the nation, averaging 19.3 digs per game.

The Panthers are also pacing the conference in digs, recording almost five more digs per game than any other team.

Eastern also ranks 19th nationally in kills and assists per match.

Next set

VS.

10-6, 5-1

12-5, 4-1

What: Volleyball game vs. Southeast Missouri

Where: Lantz Gym

When: Tonight, 7 p.m.

Notes: The Panthers square off against SEMO for the first time since the Othakians ended Eastern's season last year at home in the championship game of the OVC tournament ... Eastern won both regular season meetings last year. Eastern is currently in second place in the conference while the Othakians are in third ... SEMO is riding a four-game winning streak, coming into the match, but all five of their losses this season have come on the road.

Next up: At Tennessee-Martin, Friday at 7 p.m.

Panthers still sporting that 'kick me' sign

Is it just me or does it seem like the Panther football team has been wearing a gigantic "Kick Me" sign on their backs for the past few seasons?

The most recent boot to the rear came courtesy of defending Ohio Valley Conference champion Tennessee State.

Not only did the Tigers run away with a 43-25 victory, but it appeared as though they tried to humiliate the Panthers in doing it.

Just as a year ago, the University of Central Florida threw the now infamous flee flicker to boost Daunte Culpepper's Heisman standing. Saturday, TSU threw a 30-yard touchdown pass with only a half of a minute remaining on the game clock.

The Tigers already secured the win, leading 36-25, but head coach L.C. Cole made the call to have third-string quarterback Dion Graham take one more shot at the endzone.

The Tigers are the No. 4 team in Division I-AA.

There's no doubt an 18 point win will make a bigger impression on voters than a seven point win. In this day and age of power rankings and polls, running up the score is deemed acceptable when given the opportunity.

If it will move your team up a few spots in the poll, why wouldn't you do it?

What is in question here is not so much the fact TSU went for the endzone. The problem lies more within the reason for going for it.

Cole's reason for throwing the pass was that he and several of his players took offense to the fact that the Panthers called a timeout on the goal line.

The Power Alley

Kyle Bauer

Sports editor
email: cukmb12@pen.eiu.edu

Down 36-17 with 49 seconds left to play, Eastern stopped the clock. It scored on the next play.

The Panthers came out for the ensuing kickoff and attempted an on-side kick.

They didn't recover and that's when Cole made the decision to punch it in, and at the same time, punch Eastern in the stomach.

It sounds like Eastern was playing like a team that was losing in the closing seconds of a game and was holding on for dear life. Sure, the game may have been out of hand, but the Panthers weren't giving up.

And as it turns out, they were punished for that.

By Cole's logic, Eastern should have given up and ran the clock out on the goal line.

In other words lay down for TSU.

The Panthers didn't and Cole was offended that they had not rolled over for the mighty OVC champs.

Instead of letting it go and being happy with an 11-point win, Cole made the call for a 30-yard pass, attempting to teach Eastern a lesson in humility.

How dare they not give up or roll over for the champs. How dare they think they still had a chance to win. How dare they keep playing until the final whistle blows.

Apparently they teach a different game of football down in Tennessee. I was always taught the game wasn't over until the game clock reads all zeroes.

The Panthers refused to die and TSU took exception to that. Eastern didn't give up so the Tigers tried to humiliate the Panther defense.

Real classy move.

TSU came away with the win as it has nearly every time it has taken the field in the past two seasons.

Eastern came away with yet another kick in the rear. And for what? Doing the right thing?

The lesson here is not a pretty one. It is a sad but true fact of life these days: More often than not, nice guys finish last.

"He did have a good run in the NBA and he was a nice guy to work with and all I did was work with his grip on the ball."

The NBA second round pick (33rd overall) holds two Eastern career records in rebounds (867) and blocks (123) and is the school's fourth all-time scorer (1,569).

"His junior season, he broke his hand and missed five games," Samuels said. "We would have been better as a team and his statistics would have been better."

In Duckworth's senior season, media and the scouts started to pay more attention to the center.

"Senior year, he was recognized by CBS, which did a feature on him being the most underrated player in the nation," Samuels said. "That season he was fifth or sixth in the nation in field goal shooting and he was the highest pick ever in Eastern history."

Every team needs a human highlight reel. Former guard, Jay Taylor fits that mode. As the all-time Panther scoring leader (1,926) Taylor would bring the crowd to its feet with gravity defying moves, Samuels said.

"(He was) by far the most gifted athlete that has played here for me," Samuels said. "Jay had Michael Jordan type of ability. He could hang in the air and I swear he changed directions in the air too."

"Jay was a spectators delight," Samuels said. "We could put together a highlight tape of him playing and it would make up the plays of the week."

Not only could Taylor drive, but he also had an unbelievable outside shot.

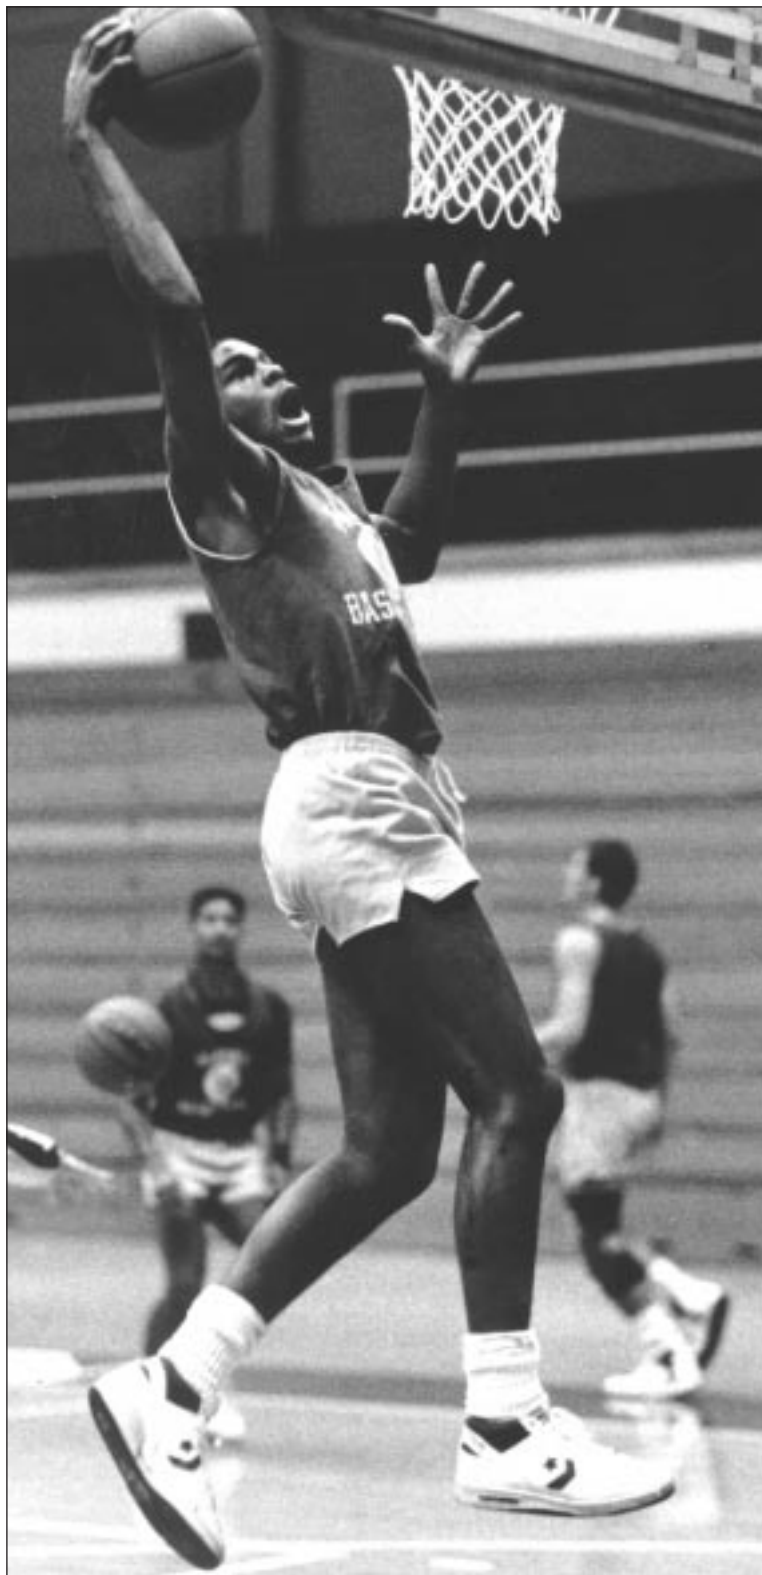

"He had great range on his shot and great confidence," Samuels said. "There were days in practice when he could go through shooting drills without missing a shot."

Milholland also had a great outside shot, but he played long before the introduction of the three-point line.

Milholland is the third all-time career scorer in Eastern's history and was a member of the NAIA third place team, and he held the career record until 1986.

"Having the scoring record was a highlight," he said. "So much of the scoring were highlights and the group I played with was more of a transition game."

Coming off the bench for the Panthers is two-time Division II All-American Craig DeWitt. The No. 7 leading scorer in Eastern history was voted by the team as a most valuable player in 1979 and earned Mid-Continent all-conference honors in Bill Healy was chosen to coach this team, with Don Eddy finishing a close second. Healy posted a 136-41 (76.8 percent) record and took the team to five post season appearances. But what Healy was most remembered for was not putting a winner on the court, but by being able to win over his players.

"He got along well with all of his players," Katsimpalis said. "He never hollered at anyone, and he was still able to correct a problem without getting into someone's face."

In his seven seasons, Healy established a winner and it showed by the appreciation the players had for the fans.

"I have a great appreciation for the people of Charleston and the fans were fantastic," Katsimpalis said. "The stands were always full and lines for people wanting to get tickets went around McAfee because that was where we played."

The offense that Healy established was used by Eastern even after he left. Milholland, who played two years after Healy left, said Healy had an influence on the offense he played.

"Coach (Robert) Carey used Healy's offense," Milholland said. "It was more of a transition game that produced more shots with more pursuit on the basketball."

Panthers hold on to No. 7 spot after opening round

By Kyle Bauer
Sports editor

After the first day of competition in the 1999 Eastern Illinois University Iron Horse Golf Invitational, the Panthers find themselves holding on to seventh place in the nine-team tournament.

Creighton and Western Carolina lead the pack with scores of 336 and 341 respectively.

The Panthers (355) hold a slim lead over St. Francis College (358).

Eastern is still easily within striking distance of Loyola (354), the University of Dayton (352), Youngstown State (347) and Butler University (346).

"I expected Creighton and Western Carolina to be near the top and that was no surprise to me," head coach Jay Albaugh said following the first day of competition.

"I don't think it is unrealistic to say we could finish third. That is a realistic possibility we just need to get breaks our way."

As far as the individual performances went, Eastern only managed to place one participant in the top 20.

Freshman Tyra Fredrick's 84 was good enough to put her in a five-way tie for fourth place.

"I am pleased with how Tyra played for us," Albaugh said.

"She was the one bright spot." The next highest finisher for the Panthers was Kara Dohman who finished the day 24th, with an 89.

"It was a poor effort for our team today," Albaugh said.

"We should have played better on one of our home courses. We need to come out Tuesday focused and ready to play better if we want to move up in the standings."

Play resumes this morning with tee times starting at 8 a.m.

Dwight high school football team accused of using racial slurs

DWIGHT, III. (AP) — Officials at Dwight Township High School are investigating allegations that some of their football players uttered racial slurs at rival black players from suburban Chicago and left a Ku Klux Klan symbol in their locker room.

Dan Sanko, head coach of Lisle High School, said Sunday the incidents happened during a road trip to north-central Illinois when his team played at the Dwight school.

Dan Sanko said four black players from Lisle were confronted with racial slurs by Dwight players during the game. He said his players found a KKK carving in their locker room after the contest.

Sanko said Lisle's principal planned to contact school leaders at Dwight this week to complain about what he called "ugly" racial incidents.

Drunken soccer officials suspended

MOSCOW (AP) — Four Russian soccer officials were suspended for the rest of the season Monday by the national association following allegations they got drunk before a UEFA match in Israel.

The officials — Sergei

Khusainov, Sergei Martynov, Pavel Ginzburg and Feizudin Erzimanov — reportedly drank heavily before a match last month between Hapoel Haifa Israel and FC Brugge Belgium.

They were barred by local soccer officials from refereeing the match, which Hapoel Haifa won 3-1.

The decision to suspend them for the rest of the season was made by the executive committee of the Russian Football Union, but is subject to review, the ITAR-Tass news agency reported.

Rams are NFL's lone undefeated team

ST. LOUIS (AP) — The St. Louis Rams are 4-0 for the second time since they moved from California, and this time no mirrors are involved.

In 1995, the Rams required trick plays that earned then-coach Rich Brooks the derisive nickname of "Harry High School," to go unbeaten in their first four games.

Keith Lyle set up one victory by running on a fake punt, there were numerous reverses and end-arounds, and the Rams were also just plain lucky with an unheard of plus-14 turnover margin.

Then it all fell apart in a 7-9 finish. Well, the handful of players still around insist it won't happen again.

"Some of those wins were kind of gimmick wins," said cornerback Todd Lyght, a 1990 first-round draft pick who is the senior of the current Rams. "Before, it was kind of a fluke thing. We're beating people soundly now."

MEN'S BASKETBALL TEAM OF THE CENTURY

Posting up successes

Many have driven the lane to Eastern glory

By David Pump
Staff writer

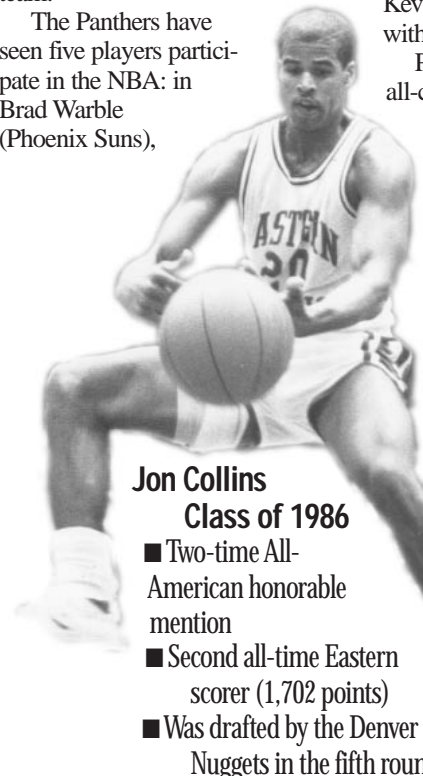

Eastern basketball will be celebrating its 91st anniversary this season, boasting a 1076-952 record in the team's history. The Panthers didn't produce a winning season in their first two years, but under first-year coach Charles Lantz in 1911-12, Eastern finished 8-2.

Along the way, Eastern has had 12 head coaches, 16 All-Americans and has made the NCAA Division I National Tournament in 1991-92, losing to Indiana 94-55.

The Panthers' best finish in a post season tournament was third in Division II in 1976 and 1978 and third in NAIA in 1957.

"One of the most memorable times was when we finished third in the NAIA tournament," Eastern guard John Milholland said. "I was also named to the all-tournament team."

The Panthers have seen five players participate in the NBA: in Brad Warble (Phoenix Suns),

Jon Collins
Class of 1986

- Two-time All-American honorable mention
- Second all-time Eastern scorer (1,702 points)
- Was drafted by the Denver Nuggets in the fifth round

*As selected by the Daily Eastern News sports staff.

Rich Rhodes (Chicago Bulls), Jon Collins (Denver Nuggets), Jay Taylor (New Jersey Nets) and Kevin Duckworth (10-year career with four different teams).

Putting together a six-member all-century team came down to selecting a coach, a starting member at each position and the ever important player off the bench.

Possibly the greatest player in Eastern history to play in the post was forward Tom Katsimpalis (1949-52). Along with being a great athlete, Katsimpalis also was a good teacher.

"He was way ahead of his time," Eastern head coach Rick Samuels said. "He helped me coach Duckworth. He taught him a couple of different ways to grip the basketball." Despite standing 6-foot-2, Katsimpalis played center and forward for the Panthers, which went undefeated at home during his career.

"We were undefeated at home in the four years that I was there," said Katsimpalis, Eastern's fifth all-time leading scorer (1,538 points). "We played just as much offense as defense."

That was during the era when teams scored off jump shots and lay-ups.

"In the days that I played, the last thing that we wanted to do was touch the rim," Katsimpalis said. "Then the dunk came along and changed everything."

Jon Collins, second all-time in Eastern scoring (1,702 points), used his ability to drive to the basket and hit the open jumper to earn a spot on the team.

"He had an explosive first step," Samuels said. "Because of his quick first step, he was as much of a pull-up shooter as he was a take-it-to-the-basket type of guy."

Collins, a two-time All-American honorable mention in 1985-1986, was drafted by the Denver Nuggets in the fifth round in 1986.

"He was not an NBA type of player because he could not bring the ball up on the dribble at the time he played," Samuels said. "But he does know his abilities well."

One of the forward's greatest abilities was to feed off the center — Duckworth.

"Duckworth was the first Division I big man we recruited, and as he developed he gave us a low post threat," Samuels said. "Combine that with Collins' jumping ability and we had a tough duo to guard."

Duckworth, "The Duck", probably the most recognizable basketball player to attend Eastern, didn't develop into a dominate center until his junior season, Samuels said.

"Kevin was a four-year starter that continually got better," Samuels said. "By his junior season he started getting attention as being one of the better center prospects."

Katsimpalis worked on Duckworth's shot, teaching him how grip the ball on the jump hook.

"I worked with Kevin for two seasons and he was a good perimeter shooter," Katsimpalis said.

Kevin Duckworth Class of 1986

■ Holds school record for career rebounds (867) and blocks (123) and is No. 4 on the career scoring list (1,569 points).

■ Duckworth was the highest NBA draft pick in Eastern history when he was taken by the Portland Trailblazers in the second round with the 33rd pick overall.

■ Played with four different NBA teams, was on two-time All-Star selection and two Finals teams.
