Fall enrollment up, report shows

By JULIE CAMBRIA-BRECHBILL
Administration editor

Eastern's 1985 fall enrollment increased slightly from last fall's official enrollment, despite administrators' expectations of a decrease.

Official figures released from the academic services office show 9,926 students enrolled for classes at Eastern this fall compared to 9,908 enrolled in fall 1984, an 18 student increase.

Last year Eastern administrators were predicting that future enrollment would decline at a steady rate because of the decrease in the number of high school graduates in Illinois.

The administration established an enrollment target of 9,800 students for fall 1985.

According to a report from the Western Interstate Commission for Higher Education, the population of 18-year-olds in Illinois will drop 31 percent between 1981 and 1992.

However, Eastern's fall 1985 incoming freshman enrollment increased by 22 students over last year's 1,703 new freshmen.

"There was much speculation last fall," Sam Taber, dean of academic services, said. "Initially, last year, freshmen applications were lagging, but as we moved into spring, they passed the previous year."

The National Center for Educational Statistics predicted an average enrollment decrease of about 1 percent in both public and private universities and colleges across the nation.

Taber said he expected the enrollment to increase but he did not expect it "to be that high."

He added that the slight increase in Eastern's enrollment can not be pinpointed on one particular aspect of Eastern's recruitment.

"We try to visit as many high schools as we can," Taber said. "We did some telephoning on a limited basis to answer questions. We called 800 to 1,000 (prospective) students and talked to them and their parents."

But Taber added that the university does not know if the calling had any result on the enrollment increase.

"It's difficult to know which ones (recruitment tactics) produce," he said.

Eastern President Stanley Rives said he was pleased that the enrollment increased this fall.

"Eastern remains attractive to students and their parents," he said. "Students like Eastern because we continue to offer quality education at a reasonable cost, and we hope to keep it that way."

According to the figures from the academic services office, total freshman enrollment, which includes all students with under 30 semester hours, decreased by 60 students over last year's 2,875 figure.

Senior enrollment dropped to 2,056 students, 13 less than last year.

However, sophomore, junior and graduate enrollments all increased with the number of sophomores jumping from 2,026 in fall 1984 to 2,071 this fall.

Graduate students increased by 30 over last year's 818 figure, and the junior class showed an increase of 16 to 2,136.

Coal plant completion date named; Armstrong says work 'going great'

By AMY ZURAWSKI
Campus editor

Eastern's $8.5 million coal conversion project's tentative completion date has been pushed up by about four months.

Verna Armstrong, vice president for administration and finance, said "because of the way work is going," the completion date has been moved up from Nov. 1, 1986 to July 1, 1986.

"The work is going great," she said. "There have been no major problems. Everything is working like clockwork."

However, she added that in order to get the project started in July 1986, funds to pay workmen will have to be allocated.

"The problem with having the project done earlier than we planned is that there is no funding for workers this year," Armstrong said. "If we start it, we will have to find some way to pay workers from about April (for training and preliminary work) to June 30, when the new fiscal year starts."

Armstrong said no ways of allocating funds for workmen have been discussed yet.

The conversion project, which began Nov. 1984, will power the university on coal instead of the steam which is currently used.

To date, Physical Plant Director Everett Alms said several things have been completed in the conversion including the installation of three 40,000-gallon back-up fuel tanks on university-owned land across from the Physical Plant and baghouse system.

Although Alms said much of the visible work has been completed, "there still is a lot of work to be done."

He said piping connecting all the buildings, brick building facings and Environmental Protection Agency-required features still need to be finished before coal can be used to power the university.

Armstrong said, "We are about 70 percent done. There is still a long way to go but most of the the visible changes have been completed."

When the conversion is finished, Armstrong said the parking lot that was installed on top of the back-up fuel tanks will be returned to the university for parking.

"The lot will give us a needed 40 to 50 parking spaces," she said. The lot is currently being used to store conversion equipment.

Public school students may see fund hike

By SHEILA BILLERBECK

The Illinois State Scholarship Commission is considering a plan which would reduce monetary awards granted to private school students to make money available for public school students for the spring semester.

ISSC spokesman Bob Clement said half of the private school students who receive the maximum ISSC award of $2,850 could face reductions of $200 from their spring semester awards.

The plan, proposed to the ISSC by its board of commissioners, is expected to generate approximately $3 million for the estimated 25-30,000 applications that are awaiting processing, Clement said.

"We don't have the exact figures, but students at public institutions will be the main ones benefiting from this," Clement said.

The ISSC board is expected to decide on the plan at its next meeting Sept. 23, he added.

ISSC Executive Director Larry Matejka said the commission selected private school student award recipients because they are the only ones who receive the maximum award.

Approximately 90 percent of private school students eligible for ISSC grants receive the maximum award because the cost of attending a private institution is greater than a public university, Matejka said.

The commission has proposed that the ISSC identify all private school ISSC award recipients for review, Matejka said. The students will be ranked, based on need, and reductions will be made to the (See PUBLIC, page 8)

South Africa eyes law reform

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa—The white government today took its second step in two days toward revoking aspects of apartheid by suggesting an end to the "base law" that bars blacks from white areas and controls their movements throughout the country.

Piet Koornhof, chairman of the presidential panel that made the suggestions, said Parliament probably would not debate the issue until it reconvenes after Jan. 1, 1986.

"Of course this is a major step to remove apartheid. But more important, it is building toward a new South Africa," he told reporters in a briefing in Cape Town.

In Soweto, the black township near Johannesburg, a white teacher and 10 black high school students were wounded when police fired shotguns at a crowd of stone-throwing blacks, police said.

It was not clear now the Musi High School teacher, who suffered chest wounds, got into the line of fire, but witnesses told the Associated Press by telephone that police fired wildly at one point.

Portugal train crash takes 46 lives

VISEU, Portugal—An eastbound train carrying hundreds of migrant workers to France slammed head-on into a westbound local train in the mountains of central Portugal. At least 46 people died in the blazing wreckage and more than 100 were injured, news reports said.

The seven-coach express, bound from the coastal city of Oporto to Hendaye, France was behind schedule and did not wait for the Coimbra-bound train to move onto a siding, the Portuguese domestic news agency ANOP quoted railway officials as saying.

The wrecked coaches derailed and burst into flames, setting fire to a pine forest, firefighters and witnesses said. Some cars burned as long as three hours.

"People were being burned alive, shouting, jumping from the carriages and dying at the train windows," said Duarte Santos Correia, 37, a passenger.

Student group aids draft resisters

IOWA CITY, Iowa—A University of Iowa student government group has allocated $7,500 for students who are denied federal financial aid because they refuse to register for the draft.

Collegiate Associations Council voted 9-7 at a meeting earlier this week to create the fund from mandatory student fees. The fund requires approval from Philip Hubbard, vice president for students services.

"I'm sure there will be a knee-jerk reaction from people who say if you don't register, you shouldn't be funded," said Mike Reck, a CAC member. "But the issue is not draft registration. The issue is freedom of education."

The council was responding to the Solomon Amendment, a federal law that denies federal financial aid to students who refuse to verify they have registered for the draft. The rule has existed since the 1983-84 academic year. Students has aid

Governor signs new DUI law

CHICAGO (AP)—Drunken driving suspects will face a virtually automatic driver's license suspension beginning next year if they fail or refuse an alcohol test, under legislation signed Thursday by Governor Thompson.

The quick-suspension rule was included in one of three drunken-driving bills approved by Thompson, who called the measures "a strong step forward toward taking drunk and drugged drivers from the highways of Illinois."

"Few crimes have more chance of striking innocent people than drunken or drugged driving," he said.

The new law, effective Jan. 1, provides a three-month suspension for failing an alcohol test and a six-month suspension for refusing to take it.

Police have the authority to take the driver's license of any suspected drunken driver who fails or refuses a test. The motorist will get a driving permit good for 45 days, during which time he may request a court hearing to dispute the legality of his arrest.

If the arrest isn't thrown out by the judge, the suspension takes effect at the end of the 45-day "grace period," which is to shrink to 30 days beginning in 1987.

A motorist who demonstrates a pressing need to drive for work or other reasons can receive a restricted driving permit for all but the first 30 days of the suspension.

Under current law, a suspected drunken driver's license may be suspended only by a judge at a hearing that often comes several months after an arrest.

Law enforcement officials complained the motorists often were involved in other drunken-driving incidents between the first arrest and the hearing, and that too many were placed under court supervision but still allowed to drive.

Secretary of State Jim Edgar, who headed a task force that recommended the measure, said he expects it to result in license suspensions for 80 percent to 90 percent of first-time drunken-driving offenders.

"We have too many cases where a person is arrested for drunken driving, but before they come to trial they kill someone," Edgar said. "We hope this will change that."

Edgar said he expects court challenges to some aspects of the new law, but said he is confident it will be upheld.

The measures approved by Thompson also:

- Raise the amount of damages that can be recovered under "dram shop" lawsuits against taverns that serve drunken drivers.

- Require that distinctive color-coded driver's licenses be issued to people under 21 to make it more difficult for them to obtain alcohol.

- Define "being under the influence" as a reckless act, making it easier to obtain convictions against drunken drivers for reckless homicide and other crimes.

'Nuclear winter' would kill crops

WASHINGTON (AP)—Billions of people who somehow survived the first blast of a nuclear war would merely face drawn-out deaths by starvation, an international scientific group said Thursday in a new study supporting the theory of a crop-ruining global "nuclear winter."

Though an image of total devastation after a nuclear attack may well be accurate for areas around actual targets, one of the report's authors said famine conditions in unscathed areas would be far more typical as hundreds of millions of tons of black smoke drastically cut sunlight and robbed crops of needed warmth and light from the sun.

"We are left with images of Ethiopia and the Sudan as being more representative of what the world would look like after a nuclear war for most of the people than the sorts of images we have of Hiroshima and Nagasaki," Dr. Mark Harwell of Cornell University said at a news conference on the report.

He said it estimated famine deaths of 1 billion to 4 billion of the world's 5 billion people after direct blast and radiation effects of actual attacks cost several hundred millions of lives.

"The main mechanism by which people would die after a large-scale nuclear war would not be blast effect, would not be burns, would not be radiation but rather would be mass starvation," he said.

The two-volume report, prepared by a special committee of the International Council of Scientific Unions, suggests that black smoke from nuclear attack on urban areas—the main trigger for a "nuclear winter"—would cause sudden and perhaps long-term declines in temperatures and in light reaching the earth, even in nations far from those attacked.

The findings basically support those of other groups, including the National Academy of Sciences, which have used atmospheric models as evidence that even a limited exchange could touch off some form of nuclear war—especially in inland farm areas away from moderating influences of the oceans. The new report is based on more detailed modeling and computer work, the author said.

Talks continuing on strike

By LYNN GALBREATH
Staff writer

Charleston teachers met with school board officials Thursday to continue strike negotiations, which affect 3,100 public school students and 50 Eastern student teachers.

Jackie Adkins, president of the Charleston Education Association, said talks were "slow," but both sides had exchanged packages and were willing to make concessions.

The teachers are seeking a 16 percent raise over two years while the board is offering a 15.1 percent salary increase over two years.

Adkins would not say what concessions were reached during the meeting, but the two sides are scheduled to meet again Friday.

Francis Summers, Eastern's director of student teaching, said although the strike will not postpone student teachers' graduation, transfer locations will be found for all students if the strike persists.

The last day to finish the student teaching period is Dec. 6 which gives the students a two-week buffer for the strike to end before they have to be transferred, he said.

Special education students who have a 16-week student teaching requirement would be the first to be transferred.

Kelly Curry, a student teacher at Jefferson Grade school, said the delay is frustrating but she is hopeful the strike will end soon.

The biggest problems if she had to transfer to another school district would be car expenses and travel time.

Charleston teachers went on strike Wednesday after a CEA vote rejected the board's offer.

This marks the third time in nine years that the teachers and Community District No. 1 School Board have failed to reach an agreement and avert a strike.

Adkins said the last strike had lasted three to six days.

College senates looking at divestiture issue

By JULIE ZOOK
Government editor

Although few student groups at Illinois universities have had any impact on university investments in apartheid South Africa, student governments at Eastern and other state campuses are currently laying plans to speak up on the issue.

Eastern's student government has yet to take an official stand on the EIU Foundation's investments in companies that do business in South Africa.

However, Student Body President Floyd Akins said Thursday he has appointed a three-senator committee to study the divestment issue.

"We have a proposal written up but it hasn't been introduced to senate yet," Akins said.

Akins said the committee is still doing research, but if it "finds something out, we'll submit the proposal to senate and send it to (Eastern President Stanley) Rives as a recommendation."

At the University of Illinois at Champaign-Urbana, Student Body President Rhonda Kirts said Thursday U of I's student government association held a rally at the end of spring semester and called on the U of I Board of Trustees for total university divestment from South Africa. The U of I board, however, rejected that proposal, Kirts said.

She added that the U of I is planning to participate in the National Divestment Day, set for Oct. 11. The student government is also sponsoring a statewide Illinois State Association workshop next weekend to discuss divestment.

Kirts noted that during a referendum last spring, university students voted by a 2-1 ratio for the university to divest its holdings in South Africa.

The official position of the U of I's student government calls for full divestiture. The university has some $12-15 million invested in South Africa, Kirts said, adding the majority of those funds are from student fees.

ISA president Mark Phillips said the statewide organization is planning a possible rally late in October in Springfield, when ISA representatives meet with state lawmakers to discuss complete divestment from all state universities.

"Some schools aren't strong in their feelings on divestment," Phillips said. He added that, at the Oct. 11 ISA meeting in Champaign, "We'll be reaffirming our support for divestment."

Last spring, students at Northern Illinois University at DeKalb passed a resolution asking for divestment, said NIU Student Association President Mike Danforth. The university then sold its stock and "broke all ties with South Africa."

NIU Vice President for Business Affairs James Benson was not available for comment Thursday.

"We're no longer involved with apartheid regulations," Danforth said. "The SA is not dealing directly with the issue."

"My experience is that students are against apartheid and for divestment. It's something that shouldn't exist in the twentieth century, but it's not a student issue right now," he said. "It's an American issue."

NIU is not the only school which has broken its ties to South Africa.

Dan Prachar, Board of Regents representative from Illinois State University at Normal, said Thursday that BOR passed a resolution last fall stipulating that BOR universities will not hold investments nor accept gifts from companies involved in South Africa.

Pracher added that ISU's student association has compiled a list of 613 companies that have ties to South Africa, and the group plans to distribute that list to students.

Pracher said the student association hopes students will become aware of which companies are involved in South Africa, and will write those companies expressing their protest.

"Like every other American citizen, we (ISU students) are against racial discrimination."

Tracy Stone, vice president of the Undergraduate Student Organization at Southern Illinois University at Carbondale, said Thursday that although the university is not investing student fees in South Africa, the SIU-C Foundation does invest in South African companies.

Statistics from 1984 show that SIU-C has some $1.93 million invested in South Africa, Stone said.

The USO passed a resolution last spring which called on university officials to divest holdings in South Africa, she said.

The resolution stated that "USO condemns the financing of the university by investing in companies doing business with or having holdings in South Africa," as well as asking the SIU Foundation divest all interest in those companies.

"Our students are definitely for divestment. They do not approve of apartheid government," she said.

"We have a very high minority and international student population, and the students especially feel investments from our university are wrong," Stone said.

Student government representatives at Northwestern University in Evanston could not be reached for comment.

Time to show responsibility with tailgating

There's nothing like a good old-fashioned tailgate party to get the spirits flowing.

But students attending tailgate parties before this year's first home football game Saturday should make sure that they have the right kind of "spirits" in mind.

During the past two football seasons, heated controversy surrounded the university's tailgate policy.

The university and Athletic Department were apparently frustrated with the fact many who attended parties outside O'Brien weren't around to see the first kickoff. Consequently, restrictions were slapped on tailgaters before the parties were eliminated altogether last fall.

This year, however, the administration reversed its stand—but not without stipulations.

The revised policy states that parties may be conducted from 10:30 a.m. until 15 minutes prior to the start of the football game.

Only pony kegs are permitted, and all students in the tailgate area must be 21 years old and possess tickets to the game.

While these rules don't provide for any huge beer bashes, the administration is trying to create a tailgate atmosphere which is conducive to small, private groups.

The administration has backed down from its initial harsh stand. Now it's the students' turn to prove they are worthy of the new-found trust.

Perhaps if students party responsibly at Saturday's home opener, the policy could be relaxed more.

It's a give and take situation. During the last few years the student body did much of the taking—taking advantage of a liberal tailgate policy.

This year, it's time to do some giving.

Come out and support the Panthers during the first home game, and if you're going to tailgate, do it responsibly. Let's not have the privilege taken away again this year.

Your turn

Still for divestiture

Editor:

I have been asked to explain myself about my previous letter of Aug. 28 1985 (on divestiture).

I am a student of higher education, one of millions worldwide and one of 10,000 at this university. More importantly, I am a legal, tax-paying, voting citizen of the U.S. and that entitles me to my own opinion.

As a student I have been taught by my mentors to gain knowledge, question that knowledge, question authority and then make a decision based on these principles. I do not claim to be an authority on South Africa, but then again it doesn't take a genius to figure out what is happening over there.

Newspapers, magazines and television are filled with reports that, no matter how biased they may be claimed to be, cannot cover up the simple facts—the people crave freedom and those in power would rather kill than relinquish control.

It has been claimed that divestiture would be the worst thing the U.S. could do; however 77 percent of recently polled upper-middle class South African Blacks said they favored economic sanctions, even though they would be the most hurt.

As for the matter of the money invested by the foundation, I stand corrected. However, I still feel divestiture is the best solution.

Finally, while we sit here and argue, precious time and blood are being wasted. A solution should be enacted as soon as possible, otherwise, the whole situation will blow up, and the whole world will hold its head in shame.

A 'territory' lesson

Editor:

Jim Roberts, vice president of the EIU Foundation, may have visited South Africa and dined with non-whites, but he is wrong when he says that "blacks and whites came into this previously vacant territory at the same time."

This myth was created by South African whites to justify their occupation of land taken by force from Bushmen, Hottentot, and Bantu peoples.

Roberts should review the archeological record in South Africa which presents irrefutable evidence of non-white settlement at dozens of Iron Age sites ranging in age from the fourth to the ninth century A.D.

Moreover, the whites who disembarked in 1652 at what is today Cape Town to establish their colony were "greeted" by Hottentot herdsmen whose numbers were decimated by war in 1658 and epidemics of smallpox, one of many diseases introduced to the area by whites.

The history written by white South Africans and their racist supporters is propaganda.

Primary race for governor close—observers

By JIM ALLEN
City editor

Local political observers predict the Democratic primary for governor will be a tight race, should former U.S. Sen. Adlai Stevenson challenge Democratic Attorney General Neil Hartigan.

But regardless of who wins, the observers—both Democratic and Republican—said they believe either Democrat has a chance at toppling James Thompson, currently serving his third term.

Prior to his announcement Monday, Hartigan had all the earmarks of a campaign organized—nearly $600,000 in campaign funds, a tax cut plan and even an offer to debate Stevenson, according to Associated Press reports.

Stevenson, who came within 5,000 votes of unseating Thompson in 1982, has hinted he will run again for governor and will formally announce his intentions Sept. 24.

Eastern political science instructor Joe Connelly said while the Democratic primary will be very close, he believes Hartigan holds an edge with Democratic Party commitments.

"I feel, as I've told (Stevenson), he's had his shot once and now it may be time to give someone else a chance," Connelly said.

But another Eastern political science instructor, Andrew McNitt, said while Stevenson's loss in 1982 might hurt his chances, he is not convinced it will be the decisive factor for voters.

"Stevenson is well connected with

Instructors say 'write off' Nowlan

By JIM ALLEN
City editor

Independent gubernatorial candidate Jim Nowlan has no chance of even working as a spoiler in the 1986 Illinois race, according to two Eastern political science instructors.

Nowlan, a republican lieutenant governor under Richard Ogilvie, first began his independent bid for the Springfield mansion in 1984, looking to ride into office on a new method of campaigning.

Planning to use public forums and cable television appearances, Nowlan said he would attract the attention of the nightly television news.

The University of Illinois political science instructor also promised to refuse campaign contributions greater than $100 and not use any 30-second television commercials.

However, Nowlan's plans are self-defeating, according to Eastern political science instructors Joe Connelly and Andrew McNitt.

(Illinois House Speaker Michael) Madigan and (Chicago Mayor Harold) Washington," McNitt said.

"With their support, then I think it would be a close race. My hunch is that Hartigan would have a better chance but it all depends on what the Chicago politicians do."

Both Connelly and McNitt said support for Stevenson from the sputtering, yet powerful, Chicago

"(Nowlan has) no chance. He won't get 5 percent of the vote," Connelly said. "The only votes he might get are those of republicans unhappy with (incumbant James) Thompson."

"He won't get enough money to afford a media campaign and won't get name recognition. He has no basis of support," he said. "People don't throw their votes away on a weak third-party candidate. No money, no support, you have no chance."

McNitt was expressed less optimism for Nowlan.

"Who? Nowlan? Oh, him. I don't know why in the world he's doing this. I don't like to make predictions, but I would predict he gets 1 percent of the vote."

McNitt said an independent as a governor would be difficult, because there's no support in the legislature and the administration "can turn out to be a disaster."

"You can pretty safely write him off," McNitt said.

machine could easily make the race a tossup.

While Stevenson has been politically inactive since his loss, both said Hartigan's head start could prove a winning strategy.

Hartigan has "had an effective campaign downstate," Connelly said, adding that 16 of 18 area committeemen he polled said they were ready to back the attorney general.

But even as a "vigorous campaigner, a hard worker and an articulate speaker," Connelly said Hartigan will have to overcome Stevenson's stronger name recognition across the state.

Whatever the outcome, all those contacted believe Thompson can be defeated if the two democrats can refrain from overspending on the primary campaigns as well as from "crippling" each other.

Democrat Coles County Treasurer Jacqueline Record said she does not expect a mudslinging primary race, but she does fear it.

"I don't want to see a nasty primary that cripples the winner," she said.

Randy Saucier, former leader of Eastern's Young Republicans, said, "Thompson's definitely at a disadvantage as the incumbent, especially when he's been in for 10 years. I'm not saying Stevenson or Hartigan will sweep in there, but (Thompson) will definitely have an uphill battle."

Saucier said Thompson's downstate GOP support has declined and could cost him the race, but not a big switch from the staunch republicans.

McNitt agreed that Thompson is losing his hold on downstate voters.

"Living in Chicago doesn't necessarily endear him to downstate supporters," McNitt said.

Connelly said while Thompson is an effective campaigner, appears well in the media, and has a huge patronage vote, his vulnerabilities lie in the state's lagging economy, his tax hike, his support of the seatbelt law, and past cuts in education funding.

"When you're in office 10 years, there's a lot your opponents can point to," Connelly said. "I think (Thompson's) going to be in a lot of trouble."

Swanson puts experience to work in executive seat

By JULIE ZOOK
Government editor

Only one of the four top officers in the Student Senate has experience from a previous administration.

Sophomore Kim Swanson, who serves as executive vice president, has held her position since a special election in February.

Swanson said she likes her job with Student Body President Floyd Akins' new administration, which was elected in April.

She said she has some individual ideas for the betterment of the various student/faculty boards, including a meeting of all board chairmen each semester to discuss their boards with students and interested persons.

She also plans to have the board chairmen report monthly to the senate.

Swanson said she hopes to update the boards' bylaws, as well as outline the chairman's responsibilities.

Last year's board chairmen were unaware of their complete responsibilities to the boards, she said.

"I'm personally trying to organize (the boards) from square one," she said. "It'll be much easier and much smoother."

Her experience on senate last spring gave Swanson "a chance to get a feel for senate," she said.

Swanson said security is not one of her main priorities, but "financial aid is one of our main concerns."

She said she plans to speak with Eastern President Stanley Rives and Glenn Williams, vice president for student affairs, about qualifications for financial aid.

Swanson said several students had spoken with her about their problems with financial aid.

As executive vice president, Swanson is required by the senate constitution to attend sessions on collective bargaining, where every three years, members of the teachers' union and the Board of Governors meet to discuss contract negotiations.

The group meets regularly, and Swanson said that last year "people told me it was like watching grass grow. It is."

Swanson said she believes that senate should consider abolishing the policy of having an executive go to the meetings.

"I attended as many meetings as possible," she said, and she had no say and no vote. "I'm just there to observe and give student input. It's a lot of just sitting around."

RHA tables proposals

By AMY CARR
Staff writer

The Residence Hall Association tabled several proposed changes to the RHA constitution at Thursday's meeting.

The members of RHA discussed the proposals and approved a motion to table the constitutional changes for one week. This move will give the hall representatives an opportunity to present the proposed changes to their hall councils, explained RHA President Dave Ascolani.

RHA will vote on the changes at next week's meeting. A two-thirds majority is required to approve the proposed constitutional changes.

One proposed change asks that there be one representative for every 100 residents in a hall. The constitution now allows for one representative for each 350 residents.

Ascolani stressed that the constitutional revision would not require a representative for each 100 residents, but would instead give interested residents a better chance at becoming involved in RHA.

If the proposal is approved at next week's meeting, the new ruling would go into effect immediately. This would give those interested members an opportunity to attend the RHA retreat scheduled for Sept. 28 at Lake Shelbyville.

Other constitutional revisions would include redefining the duties of both the president and the treasurer. The proposal states that the president will approve all expenditures with the treasurer's assistance. This proposed change will enable RHA to keep track of expenses more efficiently, Ascolani said.

Another proposal states that any resident residing in a residence hall can become an ex-officio member of RHA, which would allow all residence hall residents to become involved in RHA, but would restrict them from voting.

In other business, RHA discussed the opening of a new computer room in Taylor Hall. The room contains 12 IBM personal computers and eight MICC terminals. Taylor's computer room is open to all residence hall residents.

Ascolani proposed that RHA sponsor a Halloween costume party at The Subway. The party would be open to all residence hall residents. No decision was reached on the proposed party.

Also mentioned at the meeting was the Great Lakes Association of College and University Residence Halls conference. The conference is to be held Oct. 31-Nov. 2 at Western Illinois University in Macomb. There will be an informative meeting Wednesday Sept. 18 in the Illinois Room in Stevenson Hall for anyone interested in attending the GLACURH conference.

More parking permits go on sale

By AMY ZURAWSKI
Campus editor

A limited number of parking permits go on sale for three campus lots Monday, a campus police official said Thursday.

Sgt. George Bosler said parking permits for lots S, located across from Andrews Hall, W, located across from Lawson Hall and J, the gravel lot behind O'Brien Stadium, will go on sale at 7:30 a.m. Monday at the Campus Police Station.

Bosler said the permits will be sold according to distance, employment and physical disability at a cost of $6 per year.

Although the exact number of permits to be sold was not available, Campus Police Chief Tom Larson said all campus parking lots are being reassessed this week for extra spaces.

He said, however, that the only lots that appeared they would have extra spaces would be S, W and J.

"Each day, about every hour, we check the lots for unused spaces," Larson said. "We try to make an educated guess about how many spaces we have available."

Bosler added students who have already purchased permits for the 1985-86 school year will not be allowed to exchange them for other lots.

Friday the 13th: Loathe it, love it or leave it?

By DONELLE PARDEE
Staff writer

For some people, Friday the 13th is a very unlucky day while others think it is just a silly superstition. Today, they find out if their suspicions come true.

But freshman Jenny Hile said, "It's just another day to me."

Although the exact origin of Friday the 13th superstition is unknown, it is believed to have begun many years ago as a day of misfortune.

Eve offered the apple to Adam on a Friday, on the night between Friday and Saturday devils and witches met at Sabbath and many believe Friday the 13th is unlucky because it was set under the sign of Venus, according to the Dictionary of Magic and Superstition, written by Biren Bonnerjea.

Thirteen is unlucky because, according to Bonnerjea, the 13th person at the dinner table or at a function will die within a year.

He also stated that if there are 12 people seated for a meal and one more arrives, he will be a traitor because the 13th person at The Last Supper was a traitor.

The book also states when you add Friday and the number 13 "it will be a very significant day," most often unlucky except "in games of chance."

Some Eastern students believe in Friday the 13th.

For example, freshman Lisa Matgous said, "I'm very superstitious." She said she "has bad luck the whole day (13th)."

Matgous said she wishes she could stay in all day and she has bad feelings about going to classes, especially her first one.

"I have a test in that class," she said.

Matgous said she has even had some bad experiences to aid in her belief.

"When I first met my ex-boyfriend, he got into a car accident on Friday 13," she said. And Matgous "got hit in the head with a baseball bat and I had twelve stitches."

However, other students don't believe in Friday the 13th.

For example, Matgous' three roommates said, "It's just another day."

Freshman Barb Rogers said she "never had bad luck." She added that she believes the bad luck people have on Friday the 13th is "just in their minds."

Freshman Linda Kapl also said, "If you're not superstitious, then it's nothing big."

There are even some Eastern students who have good luck on Friday the 13th.

Freshman Don Cervenka said he is "slightly superstitious," but added, "It's my good luck day. I don't have fights with my friends. I get gifts and checks in the mail."

Informer leads to 25 Soviets expelled from Britain

LONDON (AP)—Acting on information supplied by a top KGB defector, Britain today ordered 25 purported Soviet spies to leave the country in the biggest such expulsion in 14 years.

The Foreign Office said that in ordering out the six accredited diplomats and 19 business officials, journalists and embassy workers, it was going on the word of Oleg A. Gordievski, 46, posted in London since 1982 and officially listed as a Soviet Embassy counselor, had defected saying he "wishes to become a citizen of a democratic country and live in a free society." He was given political asylum, it said, without revealing when he defected.

A Foreign Office statement said Gordievski was "in a position to know full details of Soviet intelligence activities and personnel in this country."

The Foreign Office dispensed with the usual diplomatic language and bluntly accused the 25 of spying. It gave them three weeks to leave Britain.

It said it summoned the Soviet charge d'affaires, Lev. A. Panchine, and told him "that a significant number of Soviet representatives in London have been engaging in intelligence activities which are of course totally incompatible with their status and declared tasks."

It did not spell out their alleged actions but said "the nature and scale of the activities are completely unacceptable."

Parchine's response was not known and the Soviet Embassy said no one was available to comment.

It was the biggest single expulsion by Britain since 1971, when Britain threw out 105 Soviet diplomats and officials for alleged spying. Last April five Soviets were ordered to leave because of purported espionage activities.

In 1983, France expelled 47 Soviets who were believed engaged in espionage.

CHICAGO (AP)—Public misconceptions about acquired immune deficiency syndrome are apparently keeping people from donating blood and, as a result, supplies in at least three states are critically low, health officials say.

"Giving blood is an extremely safe and easy procedure," said Dr. William C. Sherwood, director of Red Cross Blood Services in Philadelphia. "You cannot contract AIDS by giving blood. All needles and equipment used are brand new, disposable and discarded after use."

"Some people have the mistaken impression that they can get AIDS when they give blood," said Lenore Gobel, a spokeswoman for the Nashville, Tenn., office of the American Red Cross.

AIDS is an affliction in which the body's immune system becomes unable to resist disease. It is spread through the sharing of transfusions of contaminated blood or sexual contact, usually between homosexual males, researchers say.

Ms. Gobel said the local inventory of blood in Nashville stood at 670 pints Wednesday, down from the usual stockpile of between 2,000 and 2,500 pints.

"This is just short of the point where we would say to hospitals that we recommend cancellation of elective surgery until supplies are back up," Ms. Gobel said.

The Oklahoma Blood Institute normally has 1,500 to 2,500 units, or pints, of blood in reserve, but on Wednesday the reserve was down to 500 units and dwindling daily, said Dr. Ronald Gilcher, director of the institute.

group of students with the least amount of need.

John Flynn, Eastern's financial aid director, said the ISSC's proposed action to reduce the private school student's award is legitimate.

"Although the ISSC cannot exceed awarding $2,850, they don't have to give out a certain amount just because it is established," Flynn said.

"I really don't know what the effect is going to be," he said. "I don't see us benefiting because it won't affect our awards already established."

Clement said students in the "suspension status," those who applied late for ISSC awards, will receive an undetermined amount of money.

"The commission wants to save money through one source and spread the allocations further so more students receive awards," Clement said.

However, Martin Abegg, president of Bradley University, a private institution located in Peoria, Ill., said he believes the commissioners' proposed plan "appears to be arbitrary."

Students who attend private universities will be unfairly penalized, Abegg said.

"I think they need to either find a way to get more funds or let everybody lose a little," he said.

He added that one out of every three Bradley students receives an ISSC award.

Matejka said he agreed that if the proposal was approved, "it could have a devastating effect" on students who plan to attend private institutions in the future.

Chief debaters go south

By DINO TIBERI
Staff writer

Eastern's debate team starts this season in impressive fashion with two of its members competing in the Kentucky Round Tournament Oct. 8-10.

Seniors Jon Frenza and Jim Lucas will represent Eastern at the prestigious tournament that will be held at the University of Kentucky in Lexington.

Eastern Debate Coach Michael Bryant said this is the first time that Eastern has been invited to the 15-year-old tournament. The top nine teams in the nation are invited based on their previous year's performances.

In addition to Eastern, eight other schools—Baylor, Dartmouth, Emory, Redlands, Massachusetts, Northwestern, North Carolina, and Kentucky—are also scheduled to compete.

Bryant said Baylor is considered the favorite.

"Baylor has their number one team back, and they have the best coaching staff," he said.

Bryant said he would like Eastern to finish in the top two, but he added that "realistically" Frenza and Lucas should place third.

However, Frenza has more of a long-range goal going into this competition.

"I just want to get our bid to the NDT (National Debate Tournament)," he said.

Bryant said Eastern has received a bid to the NDT every year since 1973 and he is optimistic of his team's chances to be invited this year because of the squad's depth.

Bryant said recruiting four top high school debaters will help Eastern form four nationally-competitive teams for the first time.

The second team consists senior Dan Hintz and junior Missy Deem, who return this season with Frenza and Lucas as the team's nucleus.

Freshmen Jay Zuzevich and Chris Mounts have already made an impression on the squad by placing third at the New England Debate Institute in Massachusetts this summer.

The other two recruits are Allan Haley of Tulsa, Okla., and Jim Conley of Pekin, who was an Illinois high school championship finalist.

Hintz, Deems, and the four freshmen begin their season at Vanderbilt University in Nashville, Tenn., Oct. 4-6.

Success in these two tournaments may give Eastern the recognition it deserves for all the hard work put into preparing for the meets that goes unseen, Bryant said.

"Debating takes quite a bit of time," Bryant said. "There is sometimes 70-80 hours a week put in on researching the debate topic chosen."

Last year's team proved that the hard work paid off as they made it past the qualifying round of every tournament. The outlook for this year will be to continue that success throughout this season.

Dance club looks to grow

By JULIE LEWIS
Staff writer

If a square dance complete with stars, promenades and swings sounds like fun, Eastern's Square Dance club may be for you.

Robert Hussey, Square Dance Club adviser and physical education instructor, said the club held its first meeting Monday evening from 7 to 9 p.m. in Buzzard Gym and will continue holding meetings every Monday night.

The club is open to all students, faculty and Charleston residents wishing to participate, he said.

"Beginners are welcome also," Hussey said. "We start fresh each semester and the calls are easy to pick up."

Hussey and his wife Laura have been instructing the club since it began in 1970. They are also members of Charleston's square dance club, Swing—N—Swayers. Hussey does the calling for both groups.

Eastern's group meets purely for self-enjoyment, Hussey said.

"We have been asked to perform at Celebration Weekend in the past, but our group was much bigger then."

Hussey said there is a $2.50 charge for each person per semester, but all proceeds go towards a pizza party.

The group basically dances Western-style square dances, which uses calls from Callerlab, part of the International Square Dancing Organization. These same calls are used throughout the United States.

"The more practice you get, the better you get," said sophomore geology major David Faust, who has been with the group for a year.

"It's a lot of fun," he added, "but we need more members."

Hussey said he is hoping to make a minimum of two squares consisting of eight persons each.

"Last year we had more men in the group than women," he added. "That is very unusual."

Both Hussey and his wife spent the first week of school in Boston, Mass., at a caller's workshop. Hussey said the workshop helped him better his caller skills.

Hussey instructs kinesiology, badminton, and a graduate study group in addition to square dancing. Laura is employed at Health Services.

Administrative Development Program

Applications are now being accepted for a new on-campus three-phase program to begin October 1985 which will offer career development workshops, seminars in higher education administration and administrative internships. This university-wide program administered through the Office of the President is designed for civil service, faculty, and administrative/professional staff. Deadline for completed application is September 27, 1985. For further information or application materials contact Judith Anderson, 106 Old Main, 581-5020.

PROGRAMS FOR PROFESSIONAL ENRICHMENT

Eastern Illinois University has adopted as one of its institutional goals the encouragement and support of faculty and staff development. Career planning and enrichment programs offer effective approaches in achieving this goal. The Programs for Professional Enrichment have been developed to provide professional development opportunities for civil service, faculty, and administrative/professional staff interested in higher education administration. The program has internal and external components.

In the Programs for Professional Enrichment, higher education administration is defined broadly to include administrative and supervisory positions that are found in academic affairs, student affairs, business/finance, administrative services, external affairs, and system offices. While participation in the Programs for Professional Enrichment will not guarantee an administrative position, or preference to participants when internal vacancies occur, it will offer participants an opportunity to explore interests and options, to gain information, and in some instances to receive training in higher education administration. Women and minorities are particularly encouraged to apply.

THE INTERNAL PROGRAM

The internal program is an on-campus three-phase program offering career development workshops, seminars in higher education administration and administrative internships.

An application and selection process will be used to select participants for the internal program. A screening committee will review applications and the Programs for Professional Enrichment Director will recommend to the President individuals for admission to the internal program.

Since the career planning workshops, seminar series, and administrative internships are designed as sequential in nature, only those individuals selected for participation in the career planning workshops will be eligible to participate in the seminar series. Those individuals completing the seminar series may apply for an administrative internship.

PHASE 1: Career Planning Workshops
During Fall 1985 a twelve- to fifteen-hour career planning workshop will be presented. Participants will be assisted in evaluating their career goals and objectives, with an emphasis on higher education administration. Workshop topics will include: self-assessment of skills, training, experience and values; analysis of options in higher education and other settings; career mapping and goal setting; and career advancement strategies. Those participants completing the career planning workshops may participate in the seminar in higher education administration series.

PHASE 2: Seminars in Higher Education Administration
During Spring 1986 a seminar series in higher education administration will be presented. Participants who have completed the career planning workshop will be invited to attend. This seminar series is designed to increase knowledge of various aspects of higher education administration. Topics may include: issues and trends in higher education; aspects of management and leadership; financial planning and accounting applications of computer systems; decision-making and human relation skills, and organizational development and structure. The seminars will be conducted by individuals from a diversity of institutions.

Participants completing the seminars program will be eligible to apply for an administrative internship.

PHASE 3: Administrative Internships
Up to two participants for each semester (Fall and Spring, beginning Fall 1986) will be selected for internship placement from among those applicants who have completed the seminar series. Internships will normally be limited to one semester during which time interns may receive up to one-fourth released time.

THE EXTERNAL PROGRAM

Through the external program the University may sponsor the nomination of individuals to nationally recognized external administrative training programs, depending on the availability of funds and the identification of qualified applicants. Participation in an external training program will be independent of the internal program.

An application and selection process will be used to identify participants or nominees for external administrative training programs. A screening committee will review applications and the Programs for Professional Enrichment Director will recommend to the President individuals for participation or nomination to external programs. The application and selection process for the external training programs will be separate and independent from that of the internal program.

Applications are being accepted for the internal program and may be obtained by calling 581-5020 or picked up in 106 Old Main. The deadline for completed applications is 4:30 p.m. September 27, 1985.

Questions regarding the Programs for Professional Enrichment may be directed to Dr. Judith Anderson, 106 Old Main, 581-5020.

Judith Anderson, Director
Programs for Professional Enrichment

ISU invades O'Brien for crucial I-AA matchup

By JEFF LONG
Sports editor

When Al Molde talks of how coaching can be a nightmare, Indiana State is most likely featured as the main character.

The Sycamores have jangled the third-year coach's nerves more than any other team since he took over in 1983.

The Panthers' arch-rival has had its share of ulcers against Eastern as well, but has managed to fare better.

When these teams get together for football games, even the most laid back are at the edge of their seats. In the previous three meetings, the outcome has been decided by a total of 14 points—all of which have been ISU victories.

The Panthers would like nothing better than to break the Sycamores' modest streak Saturday when they open their home season with a 1:30 p.m. kickoff at O'Brien Stadium.

"Indiana State is a big game for Eastern every year," Molde said. "I think past contests certainly reflect that."

ISU edged the Panthers 24-17 in Terre Haute last season on a fourth-quarter touchdown. In 1983, the Sycamores squeaked out a 17-13 regular season win before eliminating the Panthers from the NCAA I-AA playoffs in the first round with a 16-13 overtime win.

"Every game we've had against Eastern since I got here has been close," said Sycamore coach Dennis Raetz, who arrived at ISU in 1980.

With that in mind, the Panthers have had little trouble this week getting fired up to play, a shortcoming which tragically led to their downfall last week in a 31-24 upset-loss at Northeast Missouri.

"We've been talking of the need to be emotionally prepared to play," Molde said. "Somehow we forgot that last week. Too much has been said about the potential of this team. We do have talent, but that doesn't show up unless you're ready to play."

The Panthers will need to exhibit the same intensity they showed in the final quarter last week, when they erupted for 21 points in an eight-minute span while holding NEMO scoreless.

That means tightening down defensively from the start.

"Our defense is an area of concern right now," he said. "If we're going to be a championship-caliber team we must stop people and get turnovers."

After yielding 450 yards last week, the defense will have its work cut out again. Controlling All-American quarterback Jeff Miller will be a task in itself.

The senior was named the MVC's offensive player of the year last season and has led the Sycamores to victories in 22 of the 32 games he's started.

Eastern will counter with its own All-American at quarterback, junior Sean Payton, in what looks to be a premier matchup of two of the finest QB's in I-AA. Payton has passed for over 300 yards in 10 of his last 12 games.

"Both quarterbacks are excellent players in their own right," Raetz said. "Nobody can completely stop them. If you throw 50 times, half of those will be completions. We need to guard against big plays."

Payton will be trying to dissect a secondary that is relatively inexperienced, with three newcomers to the starting lineup.

Last year, Payton picked the Sycamore defense apart for 323 yards when it was rated as one of the best in the country.

Miller got a good start on the new season last week, passing for a personal-high 266 yards.

"He (Miller) is the catalyst in their offense like Payton is to ours," Molde said. "The first thing we need to do is take them out of their tempo by shutting down their running game, but they're also a very capable passing team."

Frustrated Panthers to battle strong Phoenix

By DOBIE HOLLAND

Eastern's soccer Panthers will try to rebound from Wednesday's 0-0 tie at MacMurray College and rise for a major challenge Saturday against an extremely tough Wisconsin-Green Bay team at Lakeside Field.

The game, which opens Association of Mid-Continent Universities' conference play for Eastern was originally scheduled at 1 p.m., has been rescheduled for 11 a.m. and it may prove to be a big obstacle for the Panthers.

Presently, the Pheonix is riding high following a significant upset-victory over the University of Wisconsin-Madison, which is the ranked second in the Big Ten Conference.

"They have an English coach (Aldo Santaga) and some really good players," Panther coach Cizo Mosnia said. "They have two players from England (Peter Morris and Mark Whittaker) and they are good players,"

Morris will be the player that Eastern will have to keep an eye on, while goalkeeper Whittaker is "supposed to be really good," Mosnia said.

Another prominent player on the Phoenix is sophomore mid-fielder Eric Quidzinski from Mt. Prospect's Hersey High School.

"He (Quidzinski) didn't play much last year, but he is getting time this year and he's a dangerous little mid-fielder," Mosnia said.

Mosnia hinted toward the possibility of making some minor changes in the line-up on Saturday. Nothing is definite, but he is considering the idea, he said.

The main concern at the moment is to get the Panther booters in the right frame of mind.

"They have to start speaking positive again. We built up some kind of pressure on ourselves and we have to find a way to relieve it. There will be a lot of talking done while we are practicing," Mosnia said.

Men harriers to confront Illini, Purdue; women looking to fly past Westerwinds

By JOHN STROUD
Staff writer

Eastern's men's assistant cross country coach Tom Akers expects to face some stiff competition in Friday's triangular meet with Illinois and Purdue at 4:30 on Lantz Course.

"I know Purdue will be very tough," said Akers. "They have three of their top five from last year returning, and they put three runners in front of our No. 1 runner (Nick Whiteside) last year."

Nevertheless, Akers is confident that his team is well-prepared for Friday's contest.

"We're coming off two good weeks of hard work and things are looking pretty good at this point," said Akers.

"I heard Illinois may be a little weak this year after losing some of their top runners," added Akers. "So they might be a little young and inexperienced and we could be able to be competitive against them."

Both Illinois and Purdue were ranked in the Top 20 in the nation last year.

At this early point in the season, Akers stressed that this meet isn't going to be that important from a win or lose standpoint. But he would like to see his runners turn in some good performances.

"Right now our top five runners are looking pretty much in tact," said Akers. "The main thing is keeping them healthy."

Senior letterman Scott Tracy has been taking it easy on a sore hamstring for the last couple of days in order to get ready for the meet.

"What's really going to be the key is how our fourth through 10th runners perform," Akers said. "A lot of our young guys are coming around and some of the older guys are just getting their feet back under them."

Friday's meet will also be a big one for the individual runners because it will help Akers determine who will be on the traveling squad which will take its first trip next week to Kenosha, Wis. for the Midwest Championships.

"Right now we are mainly concentrating on getting ready for the conference meet (Nov. 2)," said Akers. "That's when we want to peak."

Craft pleased

Eastern's women's cross country team can expect to have a tough meet Friday as they take on the Westerwinds from Western Illinois at 5 p.m. on Lantz Course.

This will be the first scored meet for the women after having two practice meets in which coach John Craft saw some fine performances turned in by his team.

"I'm very pleased with this group of ladies," said Craft. "They are very dedicated and they are working very hard as a team."

"They've been getting more confident with every practice and feeling real good about themselves," added Craft.

Although Craft expects Western to be tough, like the men's team, the women are not keying on Friday's meet as much as some of the ones coming up in the near future.

"We're just training through the first several meets," said Craft.

"I expect Western to be very tough," said Craft. "They have three seniors along with a lot of other veterans returning."

"Lately we've been working a lot on running form; keeping the arms to the side and keeping good eye contact with the runners up ahead instead of looking at the ground," explained Craft. "Another thing is trying to make the runners aware of their pace and keeping their composure."

Team captain Janine Jarris, who finished first for the team in the two practice meets, is expected to be the No. 1 runner for the team this year.

"If we can keep her and the other runners healthy, I think everything else will fall in place."

Spikers set for tourney in St. Louis

By DAN VERDUN
Assistant sports editor

Eastern volleyball coach Betty Ralston is hoping that her team plays to its full potential in this weekend's five-team St. Louis Invitational.

"We have to try to play our game, not worry about the other teams," Ralston said. "We really should do well here, I'll be very disappointed if we don't."

Eastern, 5-1, opens tournament action at 2:30 p.m. Friday against Tulsa. The Panthers then take on host-St. Louis University at 7:30 p.m.

The round-robin tourney continues Saturday with Eastern battling NAIA-power Quincy College at 11:30 a.m. and Arkansas State at 2:30 p.m.

Ralston is concerned that her team is prepared for each match mentally as well as physically.

"When we play a weaker team, they (the players) tend not to care and don't seem to play hard," Ralston said.

The Panthers did just that Wednesday night, but managed to defeat Evansville 15-11, 16-14 and 15-7.

Ralston added that she was worried about Eastern looking past this weekend's invitational to Tuesday's match against the Top 20-ranked University of Illinois.

"I want to make a good showing this weekend so we'll be going into Illinois confident, but we can't overlook this tournament," Ralston said.

The third-year Panther coach said she will stress improvement on blocking and serve-receive in this weekend's matches.

"We only had two block solos in the three games against Evansville," Ralston said. "We've got to do better than that."

Ralston, however, is pleased with the quality play of the bench so far this season.

"There are still a few jitters but they're coming along really well," Ralston said. "They've done a super job."

Ralston especially commended the performances of defensive specialist Pandora Nelis and middle-outside hitter Gianna Galanti.

"Usually the back row falls apart first and Pandora has really helped out," Ralston said. "Gianna is coming along well on the weakside."

Panther Update

What to expect: Eastern, 0-1, enters today's game against Indiana State, 1-0, seeking its first win of the 1985 season. Last week, the Panthers were upset by Northeast Missouri, 31-24, at Kirksville, Mo. Eastern's offensive attack relies on the arm of All-American quarterback Sean Payton. The junior from Naperville completed 31 of 56 passes for 337 yards last week, but also tied a personal high by throwing four interceptions. Junior slotback Calvin Pierce is one of Payton's prime targets. Pierce was awarded the Panthers' offensive 'player of the week' honor last week after catching a career-high 12 passes for 166 yards. All-American receiver Roy Banks is the Panthers' deep-threat. Although Banks hauled in six receptions against Northeast Missouri, the Bulldogs held the junior to just 50 receiving yards. Sophomore running back DuWayne Pitts established the Panthers' running game by rushing for 111 yards, just one short of his personal best against Western Illinois last fall. Pitts also hauled in nine passes, tying his Eastern record for pass receptions by a running back. Eastern's main concern is stopping Indiana State's versatile offense led by quarterback Jeff Miller, last season's Missouri Conference 'Offensive Player of the Year.' The Panthers surrendered 450 yards of offense—336 through the air, while Northeast Missouri's offense took 15 first downs and to control the ball in time of possession. The Panthers also reduce their penalties. Eastern was penalized 11 times for 115 yards.

Who to watch: Junior quarterback Sean Payton is the catalyst of Eastern's offense. Payton topped the 300-yard mark for the 10th time in his career. Juniors Roy Banks and Calvin Pierce are Payton's prime targets, along with sophomore DuWayne Pitts.

Key injuries: Halfback Ben Miller (out); offensive tackle Chris Miller (questionable).

What's at stake: An Eastern win would snap a three-game losing streak and would mark the first time since coach Al Molde has beaten the Bulldogs. A loss would severely diminish the Panthers' playoff chances with an 0-2 start.

Sycamore Update

What to expect: The Sycamores have consistently been one of the most solid teams in NCAA Division I-AA the last several years, appearing in the post-season playoffs for two straight years. Since coach Dennis Raetz took the reins in 1980, ISU has posted a 5-1 record vs. the Panthers. The Sycamores will be looking to continue their dominance they have held over Eastern, which has been keyed by their ability to win the close ones. ISU has won the last three meetings by a combined 14 points; even Eastern's victory in 1982 was by a slim four-point margin. Saturday's contest looms as a key early-season matchup by two teams with legitimate playoff aspirations. The Sycamores are coming off a 9-3 playoff year, after being ranked among the top five for the majority of last season. But this is not the same caliber team Raetz has had in previous years, despite the return of 15 starters. With a shortage of depth and a relatively untested secondary, the Sycamores may have trouble containing the speed and versatility of "Eastern Airlines." ISU yielded 364 yards to St. Cloud State last week. The Sycamores' strength clearly lies with their offense, bolstered by the return of senior All-American QB Jeff Miller. The junior is the player of the year in the Missouri Conference in 1984. Miller holds school records for career passing yards and total offense this season, but he'll have plenty of targets, with quarterback position being a strong need for the Sycamores.

Who to watch: In the 32nd year of his career, quarterback Jeff Miller has started 22 games. He'll be the fulcrum for the Sycamores. Split end Steve Bell heads a list of talented players. Defensively, safety Vencie Glenn picked off two passes last week and is a young secondary.

Key injuries: Defensive end Mike Miller (questionable); linebacker Tim Miller (questionable); nose guard David Miller (probable); offensive guard Mike Miller (probable).

At stake: Although only the first game of the season, this contest is crucial for the Sycamores in their quest to reach the playoffs. A win over Eastern would certainly be a large feather in the Sycamores' helmet.

Hernandez' hit propels Mets into first place

NEW YORK (AP)—Keith Hernandez's tie-breaking single in the bottom of the ninth inning sent Mookie Wilson sprinting home from second base, giving New York a 7-6 victory Thursday over the St. Louis Cardinals and propelling the Mets back into sole possession of first place in the National League East.

Wilson led off the bottom of the ninth with his third hit, an infield single to third base off Ken Dayley, 3-2. Wally Backman bunted Wilson to second and he scored when Hernandez lined a single to left. Any chance the Cardinals had of preventing the run ended when left fielder Vince Coleman over-ran the ball.

It was Hernandez's 22nd game-winning hit, breaking his own NL record and tying the major league record set in 1983 by Harold Baines of the Chicago White Sox.

Reliever Jesse Orosco, 6-5, was the winner despite surrendering Willie McGee's game-tying home run in the top of the ninth. Orosco also had been the victim of Cesar Cedeno's 10th-inning homer in the Cardinals' 1-0 victory Wednesday night.

The victory, the Mets' second in the three-game series, gave New York a one-game lead over the Cardinals with 24 games remaining. The teams play three more games, in St. Louis.

The Mets struck for four runs in the first inning and widened their lead to 6-0 in the second, chasing 20-game winner Joaquin Andujar in the process, before the Cardinals began their comeback with three runs in the third inning and two in the fourth.

In the first inning, Wilson walked, took third on Backman's hit-and-run single and scored when Hernandez bounced into a double play. Gary Carter then singled and Darryl Strawberry lined to right field. Andy Van Slyke appeared to lose the ball in the sun, Carter scored and Strawberry reached second base.

Danny Heep followed with another liner to right and again Van Slyke misplayed it into an RBI double. Howard Johnson followed with another double.

Easy-going Niekro eyeing career milestone

NEW YORK (AP)—Phil Niekro's actions never give a hint of what is ahead. By his easy-going ways, he could be preparing to go fishing, go hunting or win his 300th major league game.

"If I ever ran like the other pitchers did, I'd fall down," said Niekro, a 46-year-old knuckleball specialist for the New York Yankees who tries for victory No. 300 Friday night against the Toronto Blue Jays.

"I guess I've been lucky because I let my body tell me what to do, not the clock," he said. "When I'm hungry, I eat, regardless of what time it is. When I'm sleepy, I sleep, regardless of what time it is. Who's to say you have to do everything on a time schedule?"

It's an unorthodox lifestyle, but one that certainly has worked for Niekro, now 15-9, with victories in each of his last five starts.

In an era of fastballs and strikeouts, of Dwight Gooden and other young arms performing amazing feats on the mound, Niekro is a throwback.

It is the knuckleball, that bane of batters and catchers alike. Niekro throws his from a motion that never seems quite complete, his follow-through sometimes winding up with his right hand at his knees and other times with it about belt high.

The pitch dips and darts, slides in and out, and—as often as not—leaves the batter helpless. It can backfire, too, and that is why Niekro's ledger lists a National League-leading winning percentage of .810 with Atlanta in 1982 as well as a tie for the major league record for wild pitches in an inning (4) and a game (6), both set with the Braves on Aug. 4, 1979.

Niekro hit the majors for good with Atlanta in 1967. He won 23 games in 1969, 20 in '74 and 21 in '79. He threw a no-hitter for the Braves against San Diego in 1973 and was named to the All-Star pitching staff four times.

But when his contract expired at the end of the 1983 season, Braves owner Ted Turner decided Niekro was too old and let him go. The Yankees signed him as a free agent in January 1984.

Bears' McMahon not satisfied by game against Bucs

LAKE FOREST, Ill. (AP)—When quarterback Jim McMahon flatly states, "I like to think I can get better," it can only be taken as a matter of fact.

The former Brigham Young star—the Chicago Bears' No. 1 choice in the 1982 National Football League draft—is off to a flying start less than a year after his career was jeopardized by a serious kidney laceration.

McMahon rallied the Bears to a 38-28 opening victory Sunday over Tampa Bay, completing 23 of 34 passes for 274 yards and two touchdowns. He also carried the ball four times for 18 yards and scored two touchdowns on short-yardage plays.

Although his 23 completions were a career high, McMahon said, "I could have done better. I had guys open at times and threw over their heads. Things like that bother me. Overall, I threw well but I have to keep throwing and I have guys who can make the catches."

If anything pleased McMahon in the Tampa Bay opener, it was balance in the offensive attack. The Bears, who usually rely on a punishing ground attack led by Walter Payton, split the difference.

Of the 68 plays they had against the Buccaneers, 34 were by air and 34 were on the ground, with Payton carrying 17 times for 120 yards.

"That's the balance we need," said McMahon. "Walter had a good average. It's better to save him than to give him the ball 30 times in a game."

Games a favorite way to brighten weekends

By KIRSTEN MANGAN
Staff writer

After a hard week of classes and studying, college students are notorious for making the most of the weekend.

One of the things they do to enjoy the time off from class is playing games, including Trivial Pursuit, other board games and the inevitable drinking games.

"Drinking games are a good way to relax after the grind of the day," freshman Pam Lawton said.

Most people agree that drinking games make the beer and the time go faster.

"I think that drinking games make it easier to get sloshed than casual drinking," freshman Gina Loughmiller said.

Freshman Lisa Genovese said, "I think that beer goes down easier and faster when you play drinking games."

"It's easier to find the bottom of the glass," said one drinking veteran, sophomore Dave Smith.

Some guys said they like drinking games because they find that the games make girls more receptive to their attention.

"It's the only way to get girls to chug beer," sophomore George Avanti said.

Most students find that drinking to the tune of 'quarters' or 'Mexican' is more fun than just drinking.

"Games are a way to get rid of the tedious boredom," Lawton said.

On the other side of the coin, some think that the games can be boring.

"Games are great, but they grow monotonous," said junior Joe Taipe.

The sweet taste of competition seems to help the taste of beer, according to one beer lover.

"Sweat and anxiety feelings help make the beer taste better," said junior John Daley.

But no matter how ardent a partier, one cannot drink all the time. There are games other than drinking games to fill time.

"Games are always fun if you want them to be," said senior Alissa Vermont.

The popularity of games seems to constantly change.

"Games follow trends. Like everything (See GAMES, page 4)

Prince creates a new album classic

By DAN VERDUN
Album Critic

With Around the World in a Day, Prince has reverted back to the psychedelic era of the late '60s both musically and lyrically. This is even reflected in the album's collaged cover that merits a close look in itself.

The album begins by taking the listener on a psychedelic trip in the title cut. The instrumentation consisting of a cello, loud, fingercymbals and tambourine provides quite a contrast to today's pop sound.

The lyrics also attempt to set the listener up for the rest of the album. "Open your heart, open your mind A train is leaving all day A wonderful trip through our time And laughter is all you pay," Prince invites a la the title-opener to The Beatles' Sgt. Pepper's Lonely Hearts Club Band.

This journey continues along into the magical "Paisley Park" which tells of a dreamlike place inside each of us that we can go when alone.

It is Prince who heads into his own "Paisley Park" in the next cut "Condition of the Heart." He slows down the pace with a beautifully orchestrated piano, synthesizer introduction.

His lyrics reflect upon what is apparently a lost love: "There was a dame from London who insisted that he love her, then left him for a real prince from Arabia Now isn't that a shame that sometimes money buys you everything and nothing."

Prince, however, comes out of his "shell" with the final two songs on the first side. First, Prince sings of his fascination for a girl in "Raspberry Beret," then for an instrument in the funky "Tambourine."

Side two kicks off in strong psychedelic fashion with "America." The cut begins as if the power is being switched on and off repeatedly, then into a grinding version of "America the Beautiful" before settling into a dancy beat. Although the song may not be "Born In the U.S.A." Prince gets his message across.

The LP's best cut by far follows in "Pop Life." Here Prince advises us to enjoy life for what it is and not to dissatisfied all the time.

His lyrics clearly put down false enjoyments such as drugs in lines like: "Whatcha puttin' in your nose, is that where all your money really goes The river of addiction flows, but there will be no water when the river blows."

Prince further illustrates society's desire for answers with the album's closers "The Ladder" and "Temptation."

On "Temptation" the Minnesota native begins speaking through a lustful voice while backed by hard-driving instrumentation. During the song Prince goes through a transformation that ends with him begging forgiveness from God and realizing love is much more powerful than lust.

This LP features the by-now standard excellent instrumental work of The Revolution. Prince's sizzling Jimi Hendrix-like guitar, (although he feels he plays more like Carlos Santana) makes its triumphant return.

Prince and The Revolution have created another masterpiece with Around the World in a Day. They have shown their diversity by staying away from the styles incorporated on Purple Rain or 1999. Yet, like those albums, this one will only get better as time passes and will go down as a classic.

else, they come and go," said junior Barbara Devicki. "Four years ago, the market was unbelievable. It's starting all over again."

Freshman Mike Devun said, "The trends in the games are like a pendulum. They rise in popularity with new games and fall when they get old."

"With the craze of Trivial Pursuit, games are back in style," senior Dave Taake said.

Many said the same games are sold and resold under different names.

"The entertainment industry has thought of 1,001 ways to do every type of game twice," sophomore Nancy Fish said.

Sophomore Tim Jones said, "The people (who make the games) are out only to make money. Look at how many different versions of the same game there are."

Games that undoubtedly have many versions are drinking games.

Different people have their own way of playing these games, but the majority opinion seemed to favor the following versions:

Quarters

A glass is placed in the middle of the table. Players try to bounce a quarter into the glass. If the shot is successful, the player can make someone else drink. If the shot is missed, the person missing the shot must drink.

Chandellers

Same format as quarters except everyone's glasses are around the center glass. The object is to get the quarter in the middle glass. If this happens, everyone chugs his beer. The last player to finish drinks the middle glass also. If the quarter falls into a player's glass, that person must drink.

Mexican

A pair of dice is rolled from a cup in such a way that only the person rolling can read the dice. The roller can either tell what he has rolled or bluff. Anyone who calls a number can have it challenged by someone else. If that number is right, the challenger drinks. If he bluffed the roller drinks. High rolls and doubles are considered the best rolls. On 31 everyone drinks.

Buzz

The game is played by calling off numbers starting with one and continuing until seven, a multiple of seven or a pair of doubles. At that point the player must call Buzz. If he fails to do so, he must drink. After buzz is called the direction of play is reversed.

Hi Bob

While watching the Bob Newhart Show, everytime the name Bob is said players drink. When someone on the show says, 'Hi Bob,' players must chug the whole beer.

Praise the Lord

A 'Hi Bob' game for the sacrilegious. Players watch a religious program and every time 'Praise the Lord' is said, everyone drinks.

Play continues until everyone either passes out or gets religion.

Eastern students take some time from studying to enjoy a game of "Pass Out." Games have become a favorite pass time of college students across the country

STING

Sting blends old and new at unique performance

By BOB GAYDOS
Rock Critic

"Woke up in my clothes again this morning. . ."

The slightly gruff, tenor voice pierced the dark amphitheater for a moment, backed only by a frenetic drum backbeat.

Then the explosion. Sting had arrived at Alpine Valley.

His newly recruited touring band of seasoned jazz musicians swung into "Shadows in the Rain," playing with an enviable smoothness that gave a whole new meaning to the old Police tune.

The tone was set for a night which offered a unique and challenging blend of old and new material to an audience which had learned to love both.

With the release of his first solo album, "The Dream Of The Blue Turtles," Sting has finally received a chance to realize his true potential as a composer and performer.

No longer limited by the constraints that come with being a member of a band (The Police), and free of the Top 40 stranglehold imposed on newer artists by the music industry, the new LP offers mostly food for thought.

Songs exploring such diverse and provoking subjects as third-world poverty, cold war politics and the changing face of England's coal mining industry out-number the free spirited tomfoolery which dominated much of Sting's earlier compositions.

While he performed an equal share of old Police songs and tracks from the "Turtles" album, the older material Sting chose was more topical.

Bathed in purple, despite his denim jacket and white, baggy pants, he raised both hands, and along with sax virtuoso Branford Marsalis, got the near capacity crowd clapping in time to a percussion-laden wedding of "One World" to "Love is the Seventh Wave."

Back-up singer/dancers Janet Pen-darvis and Dolette McDowell cavorted and bopped playfully around the other musicians but kept a safe distance from

Sting, perhaps due to the attention they lured away from the artist with their exuberance in the video for "If You Love Someone, Set Them Free."

The above single, which was nearly played to death this summer, took on a fresh, swing-like feel—free to random improvisation by the group which accented the harpsichord melody floating across the chorus of the song, played with expertise by the keyboardist.

At most rock concerts fans usually dance or jump hyperactively. However, this audience, comprised mostly of older, more mature fans in the 21- to 35-year-old bracket, sat back and enjoyed the more mellow, relaxed R & B feel generated by tunes such as "Consider Me Gone," undercut with a mean, slinking bass rhythm by Kenny Kirkland.

The true stars of the show are Marsalis and drummer Omar Hakim, however.

Hakim shows his verve and versatility working with a stew of percussion instruments as well keeping his crisp, spit-fire drumming style up to par.

The usually reserved Sting seemed to break loose only twice during the show and open up to the audience.

His intro to a ballad about a vampire's troubles, "Moon Over Bourbon Street," had him kidding the younger crowd about their noisiness, since the hushed tones of the melody required a more quiet atmosphere than the louder numbers.

His enjoyment was readily apparent during the four encores the flicked Bics of the crowd commanded. He performed an accapella version of "Roxanne" after mercilessly teasing the audience and had everyone singing alternate lines on the classic "Message In a Bottle."

If the show put on at Alpine Valley is any demonstration of what Sting and his newly jazzed persona can construct, a reunion of the Police, complete with their old style and material, seems highly unlikely—and one might guess, not nearly as satisfying.

Passengers of sunken Titanic died needlessly, scientist says

WASHINGTON (AP) — "Tragedy needn't have existed" with the 1912 sinking of the oceanliner Titanic because a nearby ship, the Californian, could have rescued the passengers who died, a scientist who discovered the sunken vessel claims.

"There is no doubt it (The Californian) could have gone in there and rescued those people," when the elegant oceanliner struck an iceberg and went down, Robert Ballard told reporters Wednesday.

Ballard, 43, chief scientist of the U.S.-French team that found the Titanic in 13,000 feet of water about 560 miles from Newfoundland on Sept. 1, said his evidence shows the Californian's captain "didn't report his position right." The Californian made no attempt to reach the wreck in which more than 1,500 perished.

About 700 people were rescued, largely because a third ship, the Carpathia, steamed to the scene when the Titanic foundered on its maiden voyage from Southampton, England to New York.

Ballard, who refused to disclose the precise location of the Titanic on grounds that scavengers might seek it out, said there "is no doubt that that tragedy needn't have existed. . . The Californian was inside of 10 miles, perhaps as close as four miles, and there is no doubt it could have gone in there and rescued those people. It's just tragic."

"I'd like to say more about that, but I probably shouldn't," Ballard declared. "What I've said already isn't very nice."

The role of the Californian in the disaster has been debated for years.

'Banshee' band members ready for a 'wild' weekend

By LAURA SEYMOUR
Staff writer

Charleston music lovers will have the opportunity to experience the music of "Banshee" at 8:30 p.m. Friday at Page One Tavern.

Banshee provides a program of songs from popular tunes and old rock 'n' roll to heavy metal.

Although the band is new to Charleston, Banshee has been performing at Mabel's Tavern in Champaign for the past couple of months.

Banshee, which has been together since January, consists of four members: bass player Don Drake from Charleston, lead singer Rob Ponder, guitarist Mark Baker and drummer Kyle Long from Champaign.

The four members range from 25- to 28-years-old. Each has their own career, but enjoys getting together with the the others for practice or a performance.

"It takes a heck of a commitment to get together and practice. But the other guys drive down at least four times a week to do it (practice)," bass player Don Drake said.

"It takes a lot more than people realize to put on a live show if they want it to be good," he said.

"We play good music that people will enjoy and have fun listening to.

"When we go to Champaign people really know how to rock," Drake said. "We're looking for people who really want to rock here in Charleston."

Although Banshee is new, Drake and Baker have been performing together for four years with other bands.

Drake said he hopes Banshee stays together for a long time because "they're a great bunch of guys."

As to Banshee's future, "Everyone secretly dreams of stardom," Drake said. "Realistically, I am a musician. I enjoy playing music whether it be alone or in front of a group. But it really makes me feel good when I play in front of a group, because it is a talent to be shared."

Movie has

By DIANA WINSON
Movie Critic

As westerns go, "Silverado" is pure formula: good guys on horses vs. bad guys on horses, chases through wild frontier and not-so-sleepy little towns, and, of course, an ample amount of six-gun shoot-outs.

However, the presence of several well-known actors—as opposed to John Wayne or Clint Eastwood and a small cast of unknowns—and just the right touch of humor enable this movie to break out of the traditional mold set by previous westerns.

The standard good guy³/₄bad guy plot focuses on four men: brothers Emmett and Jake (Scott Glenn, from "The Right Stuff," and Kevin Costner, respectively), drifter Paden (Kevin Kline, from "The Big Chill"), and Malachi (Danny Glover), a Negro who knows the pain of racial discrimination.

These are the good guys, en route to the "hot spot" of the West—Silverado.

The bad guys appear at the very beginning of the movie, when two of them shoot up Emmett's cabin for no apparent reason.

There is a reason, but it's not until later that we find out they're part of the notorious McHendrickson Gang, which is after Emmett because he killed father Murto McHendrickson in self-defense.

Since bad guys are bad, they're generally nameless. But the "baddest" of them all is Sheriff Cobb, played by Brian Dennehy, head honcho of law and entertainment—the Morning Star Saloon—in Silverado.

Cobb and Paden used to ride together, doing who knows what, but have since gone separate ways. The two end up at opposite sides of the fence when they meet up again in Silverado.

It's easy to tell the good guys from the bad guys in this flick, as in most westerns. The good guys are good-looking and clean-cut. The nice teeth and wear snappy western clothes.

Editor's note: The number in the card the man above holds represents how the critic rated the movie. This scale runs from one with one being the worst and 10 the best.

Some of the good guys are even women. A couple of the saloon girls pitch in to help the bad guys. The Morning Star Saloon maid, Stella, (played by Linda Hunt, known for the tiny native man in her role in "The Living Dangerously") is particularly charming and helpful.

The bad guys wear scraggly clothes and apparently never stand too close to razors. One of them even wears the ultimate bad guy giveaway—an eyepatch.

One of the major flaws in the movie is the amount of characters which just pop up and disappear nowhere.

Cleese, of "Monty Python" fame, is famous as a domineering yet wimpy British but his role is nothing more than a seven-minute cameo.

Same is true of Rosanna "Desperately Seeking Susan" Arquette, whose presence in the movie is nothing more than an attempt to cash in on her name because of the success of her previous film.

Arquette is riding in a wagon train heading to the west, which not-so-coincidentally gets robbed on the way there. The culprits? The McHenry Gang, of course.

Arquette does serve as a minor love interest for Emmett, then Emmett, but her role is boring, redundant and unnecessary.

Goldblum, another of "The Big Chill"-ers, serves as a con artist, appropriately named, but his presence is not all that necessary, nor plays an important role in setting this apart from the traditional westerns. However, that's not to say it is a comedy; too many people get killed. But it is funny in a few one particular shoot-out, an innocent character runs up to Cobb and asks him the obvious question, "What's going on, Sheriff?" Cobb's reply, "Watch and wait," is Cobb's reply.

Now laughs are also provided by cocky, Jake, the little brother who likes to hide under the beds and swing from the rafters. Jake seems to be getting in trouble for kissing the beautiful mountain scenery adds to the beauty along with the driving, western-sounding background music.

Although "Silverado" won't convince you that the western is making a comeback, it's a change of pace.

Zone into... 'The Twilight Zone'

By JUDY WEIDMAN
Staff writer

Will the new Twilight Zone be entering a different dimension?

Back in the 1950s, when the original series premiered, viewers were captivated by Rod Serling's eerie voice and dared to enter into "The Twilight Zone."

Until now, people who enjoyed the show had to be content with late night reruns. And to some the "Zone" was a type of cult.

However, Sept. 27 viewers will once again have the pleasure of entering... The Twilight Zone.

Will it be worth the trip?

Most students agree that it was a waste to invade the the original "Zone."

With the new episodes we will have to guess what's going to happen. It'll be a surprise.

"Only if they make it more apt to believe," junior Paul Williams said.

Sophomore Jeff Alder said, "I doubt it because it won't be as good as the old one."

Junior Dennis Kress said, "No, I don't think they can make them better than the other ones."

Other students are looking forward to the show's premiere.

Sophomore Pat Wissell said he'd like it "because it won't be reruns."

Sophomore Christine Flynn said, "With the new episodes we will have to guess what's going to happen. It'll be a surprise."

"It has the type of things that nightmares and dreams are made of," she said.

Whether or not you are excited about the new premier, you never know what to expect in... The Twilight Zone.

Hoffman extraordinary in TV's 'Death of a Salesman'

NEW YORK (AP)—Dustin Hoffman's portrayal of Willy Loman in "Death of a Salesman" galvanized Broadway last year. It was an extraordinary performance by a major actor willing to test his mettle in an important play.

Now television audiences get a chance to learn what the fuss was all about. While Hoffman and Arthur Miller's masterpiece are just as good as they were on stage, what viewers will see for three hours Sunday night on CBS is not a carbon copy of the play seen in Chicago, Washington and New York.

The television version, done with most of the Broadway cast, is not simply the play transferred intact to the small screen or a movie that tries to open up the drama in realistic terms. It's been filmed, not taped, in a kind of fractured reality, at times a reality that filters the past through Willy's eyes, at other times through the eyes of his family, especially his son Biff.

Director Volker Schlöndorff, who did not supervise the Broadway revival, recreates this past as Willy peers into mirrors of darkened hallways. The concept works surprisingly well while allowing the poetry of Miller's script to come through.

Schlöndorff, best known as the director of film versions of "The Tin Drum" and "Swan in Love" emphasizes the bleakness of Willy's life and what his delusions have done to him. Most of the drama takes place in the Loman house, and designer Tony Walton has constructed a snappy, decaying homestead that looks left over from an Edward Hopper painting.

The furniture is simple and worn. Paint peels from the window sills. Towering over the house is a huge red apartment building blotting out the sky as well as Willy's hopes. It's no accident that beyond the Loman backyard, a cemetery can be seen.

Schlöndorff depends on the actors to anchor the play in reality, to give the drama the truthfulness that makes it work. Hoffman's Willy is remarkable. Physically, he's just right for the role. When Lee J. Cobb created the role on Broadway in 1949, Miller had to change another character's description of Willy to "Walrus." For the bantam-sized Hoffman, the playwright returned to the original description, "shrimp."

A note of praise also for the haunting, mournful music of Alex North, which was used in the original production, the year's revival and now this television version. But then every component seems to mesh successfully in this production.

Tale End

Knowing when to say stop

By JEFF LONG
Sports Editor

Suddenly the realization hit me faster than that last shot of whiskey which exploded in my stomach.

I gritted my teeth and cleared my watering eyes as I watched the person next to me in our circle of four refill that little one-ounce glass with yet another shot from that dwindling bottle of Jack Daniels.

And guess what? While feeling relieved that the next shot would not have to go down my throat, I opened my eyes, which were quickly becoming slits, only to find that the next shot was going the same place the last one went.

Apparently I had failed one of the requirements necessary in the game of Bang-Zoom, a game which to this day I don't know who concocted. Maybe it was someone who was as smashed as I had quickly become.

Outraged and still reeling from the last shot, I demanded an explanation as to why another fuming shot of JD was in my face.

"You forgot to say 'Bang-Zoom' before you drank it," one of the other players slurred.

Okay, I thought, taking a deep breath in preparation of my 'penalty shot.' I'll get this one right, I said to myself, raising the glass to my lips again.

With a cringe it went down. Finally I'm done. I know the rules now. No more shots for me.

"Guess what, Jeff? You didn't fill the glass before you let go of it. You have to do another one."

It was right then and there that I announced my permanent retirement from drinking games. This 21-year-old body had had just about enough of the 'quarters,' 'Mexican,' 'red and black,'

'Bang-Zoom' and numerous other games I can't even remember.

I could put up with the peer pressure of being called a wimp and what have you. The thing is, I could no longer put away the liquor at somebody else's pace.

Maybe I was past my drinking prime. It seemed that in high school those games were a weekly event, the most popular way to imbibe at social gatherings.

But as my tolerance for alcohol had gone up, my tolerance for these games had dwindled, as did my ability to drink hard alcohol.

The problem is that after several years of social drinking, I had developed my own pace, and it was nothing as fast or as frequent as the drinking was in these games.

More often than not, these events ended early when players found themselves hugging the porcelain god.

As anyone who has ever participated in these games knows, the object is to get drunk. But on that fateful evening I concluded that you can just as easily accomplish that without the aid of drinking games.

Surely you've met those people who are bombed after two beers while on the flip side there are those who are still sober after 12.

That's the problem with drinking games. Everybody is drinking at the same pace. So the less-hardy soon become the victims and most likely end up visiting the lavatory.

As the caffeine-free Pepsi commercial says, 'life is stimulating enough.' With that, so is alcohol. The only game provided by drinking games is that of standing up trying to find the nearest porcelain god to worship.
