E-mail usage down for PEN accounts

Commercial addresses attract student users

By Sara E. Figiel
Staff writer

An increase in transfer students and a decrease in freshmen has resulted in about 900 fewer students using their school e-mail accounts this semester.

The recent total taken from the number of new PEN accounts opened this semester has decreased from the past couple of years, said Bill Witsman, director of information technology services. The latest total from this semester reached 2,945, while totals reached 3,821 in 1998 and 3,117 in 1997.

Witsman credits the decrease to the growing popularity of e-mail, he said.

"E-mail is changing into a fast growing commodity and everybody wants to use it," Witsman said.

Many students have accounts before they come to Eastern and simply choose to keep the same address out of the mere convenience of not having to change their addresses.

"Anytime you change an (e-mail) address, it's a hassle," Witsman said.

John Henderson, director of user services, also said students having previous e-mail accounts plays a role in the decline of PEN account use.

"Most students have Hotmail or some other account," Henderson said. "They do not want to change because they already have them all set up when they get here."

A possible underlying factor causing more commercial e-mail accounts to be used also can be credited to a decrease in the number of incoming freshmen compared to an increase in the number of transfer students enrolling at Eastern, Witsman said.

Witsman said some students are simply thinking ahead to the future, because when they graduate, they will have to change their e-mail accounts.

"When you cease to be a student at Eastern, you no longer have that account," Witsman said. "Most students are choosing to carry their other account to Eastern for the convenience of not having to change it back after they leave."

While some students still use their PEN accounts, many have

Committee to revise student conduct code

By Melanie Schneider
Administration editor

A student conduct code revision committee was recently formed to discuss Eastern's conduct code, which has not been revised since 1989, to determine whether it needs to be changed.

Eastern's student conduct code is the backbone of the behavioral standards the university expects of its students, and it establishes the university's disciplinary system.

Keith Kohanzo, student judicial hearing officer, was appointed chair of the student conduct code revision committee by Lou Hencken, vice president for student affairs.

"We'll be meeting weekly to discuss the conduct policy at Eastern and whether conduct needs to be changed, and if so, in what ways," Kohanzo said. "It's not only rules we will be reviewing, but who is covered by them as well."

The student-faculty relations committee of the Faculty Senate will examine the present code and bring issues and suggestions to the senate. From there, suggestions will be passed on to the student conduct code revision committee that will solicit input from various campus groups during September and October.

"It's time for a revision," said Faculty

Senate Chair Bonnie Irwin. "It should be reviewed periodically and since the conduct code hasn't been changed in 10 years, I think we're due for a revision."

The student conduct code revision committee will go through the present code of conduct, compare it to those of other institutions and compile and consider whatever suggestions

Fund established in memory of student

By Geneva White
Campus editor

An Eastern student's 1998 suicide has prompted a fund to be established to sponsor yearly conferences addressing the issue of suicide and depression in hopes of preventing another tragedy.

The "Thomas A. Bonine Rainbow of Hope Fund" was created by Tom and Debbie Bonine of Geneva whose son, Thomas Allen Bonine, was found dead in his Charleston apartment June 21, 1998 from a self-inflicted gunshot wound. Thomas Allen Bonine, 21, was a senior graphic design major and a member of the Lambda Chi Alpha Fraternity.

The Bonines started the fund a year ago with the guidance of Lou Hencken, vice president for student affairs, and David Onestak, director of the counseling center, Tom Bonine said.

Currently, $18,505 has been raised for the conferences, Bonine said. The first conference is planned for April 7, 2000 at the Martin Luther King Jr. University Union. Titled "Ending the Silence," the conference will consist of several programs, including workshops on depression and screening and patterns of male and female grief. A survivors' panel of family members of suicide victims also will take place. Another workshop planned for the day is Quality Persuade and Refer (QPR), a program focusing on the chosen other options.

John Revello, a senior zoology major, said the university's service is an inconvenience.

"I use Eudora Light," Revello said. "I use it because it's easier. All you have to do is click on the little icon and then you can check your messages."

Toby Pearce, a graduate student with teachers' certification, said he uses Hotmail because it was the first e-mail service he was introduced to.

"I use Hotmail because when I was in junior college, it was the first one I heard of," he said.

Other students find nothing wrong with using their PEN accounts.

"I use the school's offered e-mail service," said Tara Mulcahy, a senior psychology major. "It is simple, free, and I just use it to keep in touch with my friends."

John Hinojosa, a junior physical education major, said he also takes advantage of Eastern's e-mail service.

"I use it three times a day," Hinojosa said. "I like what the school has to offer."

Sarah Jordan, a junior psychology major, uses Eastern's service but said she sometimes gets irritated with its problems.

"I use the school's service - when it works," she said.

Josh Burchacki, a senior environmental biology major, said he does not mind using his PEN account because he rarely e-mails people.

come from the campus community.

The current student conduct code reads, "Eastern Illinois University is an academic community committed to providing an environment in which learning and scholarship can flourish. As such it has a vested interest in both the safety and well-being of members of the community, and for the promotion and protection of the educational mission of the University."

The current code addresses many relevant issues on campus such as marijuana and controlled substances, falsification of information, weapons/fireworks, use and possession of alcoholic beverages, behavioral misconduct and academic dishonesty. The committees will review all of these issues to determine what changes need to be made. One of the possible changes includes collecting more money from students who misbehave.

"It has been suggested that the current maximum student fine of $50 should be raised because it is not a significant sanction for students," Kohanzo said.

How student conduct codes are phrased determines the procedures, or limitations, when addressing important issues on campus. Kohanzo said the committee might suggest that a specific reference to date rape be added to the updated conduct code. Presently date rape would fall under the broad section of behavioral misconduct.

Recommended revisions will be sent to Eastern President Carol Surles for approval. If there are substantial changes to the present code, they also may need Eastern's Board of Trustees approval.

Open meetings will be held at noon today and 2 p.m. Wednesday in the Shelbyville Room of the Martin Luther King Jr. University Union and at 7 p.m. Thursday in the Schahrer Room in the Union, and the student conduct revision committee will answer questions and take suggestions for updating the student conduct code.

importance of responding to suicide victims quickly.

"What's lacking in our society is open communication and education on suicide and depression," Tom Bonine said. "It's a disease no different than kidney disease or glaucoma."

Onestak, who has been director of the Counseling Center for about two years, said depression and suicide are bigger problems than most people think. National statistics show one to two college students out of 10,000 successfully commit suicide each year.

"If you base it on national statistics, a campus the size of Eastern would normally suffer the loss of about one student a year due to suicide," Onestak said. "I'm sure not a week goes by when someone on one of our campuses loses someone to suicide."

An evaluation of student needs conducted by the Counseling Center last year revealed about 150 students were feeling suicidal when they took the survey, Onestak said.

Tom Bonine said he would like to see depression screening become part of children's medical check-ups.

"Hopefully (the conference is) going to end the silence on depression and suicide and open up the doors of communication about depression," he said. "You have no idea what suicide does to the ones who are left behind."

Signs someone may be suicidal include veiled threats and comments such as "It won't matter soon" and "Nobody will miss me," Onestak said. Change in academic performance also is a sign, as well as getting things in order and giving away prized possessions.

"If there's one thing we really look at strongly it's a feeling of hopelessness that things are not going to get better and there's nothing to make them better," Onestak said.

The April conference is open to students, faculty, staff and members of the community. Onestak said the conference will teach people how to better handle depression and suicide.

"I hope some students will participate in (the conference)," he said. "They're likely going to come in contact with someone who's made an attempt or had those feelings."

It is also crucial for faculty and staff to attend the conference, Onestak said.

"I want them to be aware so they can look for the early warning signs of suicide," he said. "I think the goal is early intervention."

The goal for the fund was $20,000 for the first year, Tom Bonine said. While the goal was not met this year, he said he would like to see the fund reach $50,000 to $60,000 within the next three to five years.

Tom Bonine said he is glad to see some good can come out of the tragedy of his son's death.

"We've had three college-age kids come up and say by knowing what happened to my son, it turned them away from thinking about suicide and pointed them in the direction of getting help from depression," he said. "That's probably the greatest gift since Tom died. If (the conferences) stop another person from taking the route of killing themselves, then it's worth every penny."

Checks for the fund can be made payable to the EIU foundation.

Newspaper program may cost $18-$20

Students will not shoulder fee increase, says McDermott

By Michelle Jones
Staff writer

Students may have access to statewide and national newspapers on campus without having to be a subscriber.

Courtney McDermott, vice president for academic affairs, developed the idea of having USA Today, The Chicago Tribune, The Charleston Times-Courier, and possibly The St. Louis Post-Dispatch available to students daily, just as The Daily Eastern News currently is accessible.

"I read (an article in The Chicago Tribune) that Penn State did this program," she said.

To bring the newspapers on campus, McDermott estimated the cost would be about $18 to $20 per student per year, but she is looking at other means for resources.

"(The $18 to $20) is not a fee students will shoulder," she said.

A fee increase is possible, but

McDermott said she cannot estimate how much until determining the amount of support for outside funding.

"If (student fees rise), we'll need more student input," she said.

The program is gaining rapid support at universities elsewhere, she said.

Few universities were involved in the program a year ago, but now more and more are expressing interest. McDermott said she hopes students at Eastern also will be receptive of the idea.

McDermott said reading a newspaper increases global awareness along with providing an opportunity for students to improve reading and writing skills and participate in classroom discussions.

"I'm really excited about this program," she said.

Students who would like give input can contact McDermott at the Student Government office at 581-5522.

Candidate drops bid for alumni services assistant

By Tammie Sloup
News editor

One of the four candidates for assistant director of alumni services dropped out of the running Monday because of personal reasons.

Marjorie W. Henderson's on-campus interviews were supposed to begin today, but since she withdrew from the running, interviews will begin Wednesday and run through Friday.

The new assistant director of alumni services, a position that has been vacant since mid-May, is likely to be named at the beginning of next week, said Steve Rich, director of alumni services.

The position, which was previously held by Char Anderson, pays about $25,000 a year, Rich said. A national search was conducted, with advertisements placed in the Chronicle of Higher Education, the Champaign News-Gazette, the Mattoon News-Gazette and the Charleston Times-Courier.

Rich said search committee members will meet after the interviews are complete and will provide him with a list of strengths and weaknesses of each candidate.

"It's not necessarily a ranking," he said.

Rich said he will consider the search committee's list and then name the new assistant director.

The remaining three candidates are: Sarah Drury, who worked with the development and production of a comprehensive profile of all the environmental activities associated with the University of Colorado from October 1997 through June 1999; Janice Hunt, staff writer for Mid-Illinois Newspapers, Charleston, since March 1995 and Sarah Greider, editor of TED magazine in St. Louis.

With Homecoming approaching, Rich said it is important that someone be selected for the position soon.

"This is a very, very important tisement.

"I think that really helped," Rich said.

The assistant director's primary responsibilities include serving as editor of both the eight-page alumni newsletter, which is distributed to 65,000 alumni, and Old Main Line, the magazine distributed to members of the Alumni Association.

The position also includes responsibilities such as coordinating the alumni service's web site, organizing Homecoming activities, alumni reunions and select off-campus events.

Members of the search committee include: Alan Baharlou, professor of geology/geography and committee chair; William R. Benedict, associate professor of sociology and anthropology; Joe Dively, president of the Alumni Association; Shelly Flock, director of media relations; Kim Harris, of the development office and Sara Fergus, current student.

Strengthening diversity

A nationwide tradition will be celebrated at Eastern in the next month in an effort to inform people about the Latino culture and celebrate its existence.

The Latino Heritage Celebration, which begins Wednesday and runs through Oct. 15, is an opportunity all students, faculty and staff should participate in, not only to learn about the culture, but to get out of the class-work-study-sleep ritual.

The event originated at Eastern four years ago and is not limited to people of the Latino heritage.

Latino Heritage Month

A month-long series of events focusing on Latino heritage will give people the opportunity to learn about a different culture and celebrate the existence of Latino Heritage in the United States.

music and a lecture from a Chilean author.

While attending these events, people will have the chance to learn about the life, history and culture of Latin American heritage.

Most of the events sponsored by the Latino Heritage committee are free, which gives all students, faculty, staff and community members a chance to attend.

Isabel Castro, Latino Heritage Celebration committee chair, said the celebration will give people a chance to learn about a culture they may know very little about.

Diversity and unity are two goals the university has aimed at increasing, especially with the recent EIUnity Ring for Unity.

By attending some of the events during the Latino Heritage Celebration, students, staff and faculty can be involved in a national celebration right here on campus.

More importantly, by attending at least one event during the Latino Heritage Celebration, everyone will help bring Eastern's campus one step closer to being more culturally sound and culturally diverse.

Family Weekend: Just grin and bear it

It's the two-week countdown to Family Weekend, an event that means something different or nothing at all to students.

As a senior, I've experienced four Family Weekends with my parents and made it out alive. But still they managed to make certain points of the weekend unbearable.

Take, for instance, the ever-popular tour of campus. How many times do I need to show my parents where the library is or where I have most of my classes? Let's face it, the campus is not that big!

My mom has an entire photo album filled with pictures of me standing in the garden in front of Lumpkin Hall and Booth Library (when it didn't look like a crime scene). But the most embarrassing photos are of me standing behind the Eastern Illinois University sign in front of Old Main grimacing because it's rush hour on Lincoln Avenue. I know I'm not the only one.

But I can offer some advice for Family Weekend virgins. First, learn all the room numbers for your classes so you can rattle off "I have English in Room 307 in this building," and it really seems like you go to class. Make sure you know the names of the buildings, too. Parents will be happy to know all that tuition money is going somewhere.

Second, we've been at school for almost four weeks and I know I'm not the only one that's broke. Parents usually bring down lots of money with them for dinner, Eastern souvenirs, lodging and a little extra for emergencies. Take advantage of the emergency money. Just tell yourself it was really meant for you anyway.

It may take a little role playing on your part, but it's simple. Don't do any laundry from now until Sept. 26, and save your dirtiest and ugliest apparel for when they visit. Either they will feel sorry for you or they will be too embarrassed to take you anywhere. Tell them you didn't have any money for laundry and it's $1.25 to wash and $20 dollars to dry (if you want your clothes to actually dry).

Tammie Sloup
News editor

"And just remember, there are always other parents more embarrassing than yours."

Third, don't go grocery shopping until your parents arrive. Grocery shopping is kind of a given, but empty cupboards will guarantee a trip to the grocery store. Also, you have to make sure you open your cabinets when they're in your kitchen or residence hall room. Don't starve yourself for a week and then not carry out the most essential part of the plan.

Now it's time to select what activities you want to subject you and your family to during the weekend. Let's see, we have BINGO, a cookout, the Student Recreation Center open house and lots of buffets and brunches among the events.

If you're like me, getting out of the activities takes some serious planning. I'm not knocking the BINGO games or the color video buttons, but it kind of feels like my elementary school fun fair, complete with face painting.

The fact that almost all the events will be held in the Martin Luther King Jr. University Union can be good or bad. If it is your goal to avoid the activities, stay away from the University Union at all costs. Don't even go near it or your parents surely will be sucked in.

Pretty much the only event that has been successful in my family was the concerts. The Doobie Brothers concert was pretty humorous because my dad knew more words to the songs than I did, and my dad laughed uncontrollably through Bill Cosby's show. If anything, go to the Family Weekend concert. Since I've been here, most of them have been geared toward adults, and the parents always seem to have a good time.

There's no reason to be embarrassed because all the other students are there with their parents. And that's the point of Family Weekend; spending time with your family.

And just remember, there are always other parents more embarrassing than yours.

Guest viewpoint

School support is just what the team needs

This editorial has been reprinted from the Sept. 2 edition of The Northern Star with permission.

Fire up the grill, pack the cooler and throw on your red and black because Huskie Stadium is open for business.

Say you're not a football fan? You don't need to be. Take advantage of the fact that thousands of people will be gathered together at an all-ages event.

After last season's less than stellar year, things could only get better. But a huge crowd cheering the team on could be exactly what our Huskies need to make this year "the year."

Senate has not decided on fall forum topics

I appreciate the attention that the DEN has given the Faculty Senate over the time that I have been a member. The coverage of the senate's Sept. 1 discussion of the faculty forum, however, has been somewhat misleading. We are indeed starting to discuss possible topics, but none have been definitely determined, nor will they be for at least two more weeks. We have recently surveyed the faculty and we intend to honor our commitment to discuss what our constituency believes most

Letter policy

The Daily Eastern News accepts letters to the editor addressing local, state, national and international issues.

They should be less than 250 words and include the author's name, telephone number and address. Students should indicate their year in school and major. Faculty, administration and staff should indicate their position and department. Letters whose authors cannot be verified will not be printed.

Depending on space constraints, we may have to edit your letter, so keep it as concise as possible.

Today's topic:

The renovations to Booth Library have left some students confused about where to find book periodicals and other library materials. With four library relocation sites available, finding materials can be more challenging than last year, but administrators maintain the renovation will be a worthwhile improvement on campus — one that will strengthen the education Eastern students receive. For the next 30 months, though, students will have to suffer through the frustration of hunting for materials.

Your turn
Letters to the editor

Columnist should not berate people's behavior at the movies

I would like to respond to Ms. Laura Irvine's article which ran in The Daily Eastern News on Sept. 10. I find the material both offensive and irrelevant. Since when is it the job of the "development director" to dictate the behavior of others in movie theaters? Since when is a shared common experience news?

I noticed Ms. Irvine contributes to the paper on a monthly basis. Good thing, since she has nothing to say. First, she needs to be sensitive that in this community her age bracket is considered "annoying kids." This community has little tolerance for college students. Second, parents bring their children to movies because our consumer society has resulted in both parents having to work outside the home.

As a result, any opportunity to spend time with our children is taken advantage of. Perhaps her next article will be on neglectful parents who work all week and then selfishly go out alone. I'm taking a guess that Ms. Irvine is not a parent and that her perspective will change if she chooses to have children. Talkers, screen talkers and hygiene pigs are a fact of life. It's as a part of the movie going experience as popcorn and Junior Mints.

I noticed Ms. Irvine is a journalism major. Does she expect that all of her assignments as a journalist will be with properly mannered subjects with good hygiene and Eddie Bauer wardrobes? I'm glad Ms. Irvine's article ran out of space.

I'm guessing that if she had more space her article would have continued with sitting judgment of people of color, homosexuals, the poor and people with disabilities who go to her privileged white movie theater.

How dare you! How insensitive. Perhaps you should be the one who stays home and rents movies.

Ring for Unity encourages diversity among Eastern students

In regards to the letter in Friday's edition of The Daily Eastern on the lack of a need for unity in Charleston, I disagree. I took offense to his article, as did many people on my floor in my residence hall. I participated in Ring for Unity and I don't know if it benefitted anyone directly, but I am sure it made a difference.

Just because we might be "white 'Illinesians' from the same tax bracket" doesn't mean we don't need unity. Everyone is his/her own individual and anything that can bring people together with different interests is going to benefit everyone in some way or another. We all have our own opinions and beliefs and being able to share them with others is the beginning of every worthwhile relationship.

Expressing a new idea or view with someone can help promote peace and instill the knowledge that our generation has done something that was beneficial to the future. Therefore, unity is needed everywhere, including Charleston, Ill.

Renovations will pay off in long run

What a change! Booth Library has moved to McAfee! ...also to Gregg, the Union, and up on Lincoln Avenue. Yes, it seems radical, but is, in fact, a necessary part of the long-planned renovation of the library. Many on campus have waited for the day that we could control the temperature in the library, have more space in the computer carrels, quit tripping over the worn carpeting and put aside the worries of water pipes bursting over the periodicals or flooding the archives. We need better study spaces and more room for technology and collections. The renovation, to be completed by the end of 2001, will take care of these issues.

To accomplish Booth's renovation and expansion as quickly as possible, the solution demanded the library set up temporary headquarters elsewhere. This is not a first; although it has been 50 years since Eastern moved its library, this is actually the third move. The first library was in Old Main and for two years preceding the opening of Booth Library, collections were held in a WWII surplus munitions building near where the Union stands today.

In planning for the move, we made sure that no traditional Booth services were eliminated. All collections and service desks found new homes, most within steps of where they previously had been. Today, three of our four sites border the library quad. We have added a variety of electronic resources which may be accessed from outside the library. We hired additional student assistants to make sure that all locations are adequately staffed. We initiated a delivery system between Booth West and McAfee to make all materials available from a campus location. We have also developed several new instructional guides to help ease the confusion. Our web site is a good source for more information on library resources, programs, news, and publications. (www.eiu.edu/~booth)

What were the trade-offs? To keep Booth Library very close to campus and to include the largest number of reader spaces possible, we had to give up open stacks

Allen Lanham
Dean of library services

"We need better study spaces and more room for technology and collections."

at two of our branches. Students must request materials at the service desks in the Union Branch and at Booth West rather than retrieve the items themselves. Although we have great confidence in our online catalog and other finding aides, we know that browsing is important to many scholars. The library is currently studying a proposal whereby students might enter the stacks on a limited basis by appointment. Among other situations that we regret, no substitute was found for the BOG Room in Booth nor for the faculty carrels. Those items received lower priority compared to finding accommodations for one million volumes, 1.3 million microforms, and 250 computers while simultaneously providing work and study spaces for more than 500 readers, 200 persons using computers or other technology and 65 faculty and staff members.

This is a temporary, 28-month situation that demands patience and understanding. Making certain sacrifices now, such as starting research assignments early, taking a few extra steps between branch libraries and coping with the needs of others, will pay great dividends in the near future. We all look forward to the reopening of Booth Library, to sitting in the central atrium, finding our niche again amidst the stacks, using the new group study areas, pondering in the East Reading Room, or taking a quiet tour that begins below a ship in the north grand foyer.

We are all a part of this historic sacrifice that is helping Eastern prepare its library to serve the students and faculty during the next several decades. Together, we must overcome any temporary inconveniences that stand as obstacles to such an enormous long-term gain. Booth's faculty and staff remain dedicated to making our library responsive to the research needs of the university community. Your asking questions and keeping us informed will help us order our priorities and direct our attentions. We appreciate your help.

A big sacrifice for quality education

Upon returning to campus this semester, I was surprised to find the library surrounded by yellow tape. Not to say it came as a total shock; I was aware the university would be spending 30 months and millions of dollars renovating the library beginning in May.

While the library staff has gone to great lengths to make this transition period as easy as possible for Eastern's faculty, staff and students, it is doubtful the library renovation will go off without a hitch. And it is even more doubtful the library renovation will be completed without complaints from the university community about the difficulty of using the temporary library facilities.

The temporary library has already hit a brick wall in trying to relocate its computers to Gregg Triad. The computer lab, which was supposed to be open by mid-September, still needs to be wired and computers need to be installed before it can be opened, leaving students at a disadvantage.

This is only one of what will probably be many inevitable setbacks in the renovation project. Not to say the library cannot feasibly be completed in 30 months, but it is hard to project when a construction project can be completed because problems can arrive that could not be foreseen in the original planning.

Even supposing the library follows the construction schedule and is completed in 30 months, the Eastern community will have to suffer for the entire 30 months. And what about the students who have to suffer through this transition and will never see the benefits of the newly renovated library?

My biggest concern about the library relocation is my professors don't seem to have taken into consideration that it may be near impossible to locate some resources that would have been easy to find just six months ago.

I will be the first to admit that I, like most other college students, fall into that class of people that wait until the last possible minute to begin working on 10-page term papers, or any paper for that matter. But in reality, I wait until the last minute because I usually have no other time to work on a paper until I absolutely have to.

Waiting until the last minute may now be a disastrous situation because I may not be able to give myself enough time to find the materials I need to finish a paper.

While the library is obviously in need of renovation, it does not seem as if administrators put the students, faculty and staff first in mapping out the best possible plan. Moving library materials to four different campus locations may have been the easiest way to renovate the library, but is it a plan that keeps students in mind?

It seems like there would be a better way to renovate the library without relocating the entire library. If it was renovated section by section, it would save students the frustration of having to figure out if they have to go to McAfee, the Martin Luther King Jr. University Union Gallery, Gregg Triad or the former IGA Building, which is located on Lincoln Avenue near Wal-Mart.

Renovating the library section by section may take longer, but in the long run it will probably save everyone on campus a few headaches. And it would eliminate the costs of relocating the library materials ó twice.

I do believe the library is need of major renovations, and the proposed changes to the library seem to be in the best interest of the students, faculty and staff. Everyone who has ever been in the library would say the library is too hot, too dark and difficult to get around. The proposed renovation take these problems into account and will attempt to alleviate them, but is it worth sacrificing a student's education to make a cooler, lighter library that is easier to maneuver? Sacrificing a high-quality education is a high price to pay for an air-conditioned library.

New salons targeted at Eastern students

Beauty, tanning salon packages to 'revolve around Eastern events'

By Matt Neistein
City editor

If you are looking to spend a day relaxing and being pampered, two new businesses in downtown Charleston might be the places to go.

The Razor'z Edge, a beauty salon, and the Golden Goddess Tanning Studio, both at 605 Monroe Avenue, are new additions to the Square. The grand opening for the businesses will be held Oct. 16.

The two independent establishments are owned by two women who work in conjunction to provide packages combining their specialties.

Pam Nickell, the owner of the tanning studio, says a package may include a massage, haircut and a tan.

"We're setting up some real neat stuff," she said.

An AC/DC song was the inspiration for the name of The Razor'z Edge, and the tanning studio is Nickell's nickname, given to her by her husband.

Currently, Nickell works alone, but she will soon have her daughter working as well.

Michelle Drum, owner of the salon, also works with her daughter Beth, 19, who handles the styling aspects of the salon while Drum provides massages and body wraps.

Beth Drum said she was hair-dressing long before she was certified by a cosmetology school.

"I used to do people's hair for Homecoming in high school," she said, adding that she changes hairstyles on a whim herself.

"We decided to combine our talents," Michelle Drum said. She said she got her business sense from a manufacturing company she has owned for the past 12 years.

“Our atmosphere is geared toward the college crowd. We keep it fun and upbeat.”

Michelle Drum,
owner of The Razor'z Edge

“(My daughter and I) always thought about opening our own salon,” she said.

Beth saw the previous salon, Perfect 10 Nail Salon, go up for sale this summer and told her mother, who saw a business opportunity. Michelle Drum said it took about 10 days for the deal to go through and she had her first beauty salon.

Along with a friend, Pam Quinn, and her daughter, Drum redesigned the interior of the salon, making it a sharp blend of silver and black with splashes of color. Drum did the window displays, and her daughter designed the woman's face Razor'z Edge uses on its fliers.

"I styled it after salons in Germany," she said, which she has visited a number of times.

The hairstyling chairs have dividers between them, adding a sense of privacy for the customer. Steam cabinets will be added in about six months, said Drum, who currently employs three stylists.

She says she has been shocked at the amount of business the salon has received, considering it only opened Monday.

"We had 11 walk-ins on Saturday, and we weren't even officially open yet," she said.

On the other hand, Nickell has been open since July 24.

"I'm glad to be here," she said.

Sue Hilderbrandt, Martinsville resident and beautician, washes Geri McNamara's hair Monday afternoon at the Razor'z Edge Salon, located at 605 Monroe Ave. on the Square. The salon and the Golden Goddess Tanning Studio, located in the lower level of the shop, will have a grand opening on Oct. 16.

Nickell previously worked at Jamaican Tan for about five months before opening her own business. She and her husband of five months, Mike Nickell, a service worker at Eastern, also own Double Nickell Productions, a karaoke and disc jockey business.

She took over the business, previously called Sunations, and says between the studio and the DJ business, she has been very busy.

"I don't even know what cooking is anymore," she said with a laugh. "Which I actually think is kind of cool. This has been a big adjustment."

The mother of four currently has three tanning beds, but plans to add four more. She said the cozy atmosphere of her well-kept waiting room, where candles light the room, is especially important.

"It makes people feel good," she said, which is the goal of her business, along with health and safety.

"I don't want anybody to walk out of here burned," she said, which is why she allows her customers to split up the minutes of their packages instead of using them all at once, something she says many salons won't do.

"I feel it's safer than the sun, because you have control over the rays," she said. She also said keeping the business sanitary is very important.

"I clean the bed ... every time someone walks out," she said.

Both Nickell and Drum expect Eastern students to be a large part of their business. Drum said discounts will revolve around Eastern events, holidays and "off the wall" specials.

"Our atmosphere is geared toward the college crowd," Drum said. "We keep it fun and upbeat."

"People can come here and just hang out."

Fair to 'increase student awareness' of organizations

“This fair can also increase student awareness toward the goals and objectives (of RSOs).”

Kaleb Searcy,
student vice president
for student affairs

By Chris Sievers
Student Government editor

Students looking to get more involved with campus activities will have the opportunity to find out more about Recognized Student Organizations Thursday.

The RSO fair will be held from noon to 3 p.m. in the South Quad, said Kaleb Searcy, student vice president for student affairs.

Searcy said he hopes 30 to 40

RSOs will take advantage of the fair.

"This is the best recruiting tool for RSOs," he said. "This fair can also increase student awareness toward the goals and objectives (of RSOs)."

In a letter to presidents of RSOs, Searcy encouraged bringing food, snacks and cookies to attract students.

Searcy said he will have tables set up in the south quad for those organizations that have registered for the fair.

"Make your table the most colorful to catch the students' eyes," he said. "Be creative."

Searcy said the RSO fair is a great way to make RSOs known among students.

"This can be one of the best ways to get RSOs known among the student population."

Searcy said he had a band lined up to play during the fair, but the band will not be able to play because of the classes that are in attendance during the scheduled time.

For more information about the RSO fair or to register an organization, call the Student Life office at 581-3829 or the Student Government office at 581-5522.

Organizations also can e-mail registrations to ctlw@pen.eiu.edu or stop by the Student Government office or the Student Life office, both located in the Martin Luther King Jr. University Union.

You can draw. We need you. Call 581-2812. Ask for Meghan.

Ordering by Internet allows taxpayers to cheat sales tax

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (AP) — As a store manager, Scott knows bargains. When he saw he could save about $100 on parts for his personal computer by buying them over the Internet from an out-of-state vendor, he put in his order.

The parts arrived, Scott (who asked that his last name not be used) paid a reasonable delivery fee, and nobody has billed him for Illinois' 6.25 percent state sales tax on the $200 purchase.

Not yet. Probably not ever. State law says he should pay the tax. But only about 5,000 Illinois households volunteer each year to pay the version of the sales tax known as a "use tax," contributing $2.2 million. In practice, it is only collected when the vendor charges the tax during the purchase or when someone buys something, such as a car, that is registered with the state.

Dozens of other states have similar taxes and similar enforcement policies. And, with the growing popularity of Internet and catalog shopping, the number of out-of-state purchases is growing, too.

But when it comes to this tax, the hard-hearted auditor gives way to sympathetic public servants who think of the average working person.

"People have jobs. They are trying to feed their kids. They are trying to make sure their cars get them to work. They don't have any time to worry about what the requirements are of the Illinois Use Tax Act," said George Sorensen, a lawyer for the Illinois Department of Revenue.

For the past decade, Maine took perhaps the nation's most aggressive approach to collecting the tax. Taxpayers there faced the prospect of having a computer estimate what they owed in use tax unless they listed an amount on their income tax return.

Maine still asks taxpayers for an estimate, but it backed away from the computer-dictated payments.

Scott, like others interviewed at a mall, said he had never realized the law requires people to pay the Illinois tax rate on purchases they make in other states or countries for use in Illinois.

If another state charges a lower tax than Illinois, you must pay Illinois the difference. If you buy an item from another country, you must pay Illinois the full tax rate. Taxes over $600 are due the month after the purchase. Otherwise, you can pay it the following year when filling out a form accompanying your income tax return.

"Ignorance of the law is no excuse," Scott said, with a smile. "Am I going to fill out that form come tax time, probably not. What are the chances ..."

Of being caught? Not that great. "We are not concentrating on people where we think there is a potential to recover 50 bucks," said Mike Scaduto, Illinois Revenue Department's audit bureau manager.

Volleyball team uses Evansville as OVC tune-up

By Bill Ruthhart
Staff writer

Next set

 Evansville
vs. Purple Aces

4-3, 0-0      3-2, 0-0

What: Volleyball match vs. Evansville
Where: Evansville, Ind.
When: 7 p.m.
Notes: The Purple Aces defeated the Panthers last season in a five-game match in Charleston ... Evansville enters the match with a record of 3-2 and returns eight players, including five starters, from its first-ever Missouri Valley Tournament qualifying team ... the Purple Aces have been predicted to finish sixth in the MVC, but head coach Mark Hardaway has improved Evansville's season win total each of his four seasons at the helm.
Next up: Home and conference opener vs. Tennessee-Martin Friday, 7 p.m.

The Eastern volleyball team will continue to prepare for the upcoming conference season when it travels to Evansville today to take on the Purple Aces.

"I don't know a whole lot about Evansville," interim head coach Andrew Epperly said. "I know they lost a few key seniors and that they beat us last year."

The Panthers dropped that November meeting in a five-game match last year in Charleston after holding an early lead.

But Epperly sees tonight's match as just another tune-up for the conference season, which begins Friday with the Panthers' home opener against Tennessee-Martin.

"Even though it's a real match, I just see it all as preparation for conference," Epperly said.

The Panthers (4-3) put in a solid showing at the Wisconsin-Milwaukee Panther Invitational this past weekend, finishing second. Eastern defeated IUPUI - Indianapolis, Duquesne and Marshall, before falling to host UW-Milwaukee in the championship game.

Pleased with his team's performance over the weekend, Epperly said some strides were made from the previous weekend's effort at the Air Force Invitational in Colorado.

"It was a drastic improvement from Colorado as far as team play was concerned," Epperly said. "In Colorado, we had six different people doing six different things, but we came together as a unit and were much more fluid."

Finishing offensive attacks and improving on blocking still remain concerns for Epperly heading into this evening's match.

"We did terminate quite a bit better this weekend, but we still need to improve and block better," he said. "Even the matches we won in Wisconsin, we were out-blocked."

"We know we can play with anyone and we know we can play good defense," Epperly said. "But the question for us will always be our ability or inability to put the ball away."

Meleah Cutler added another award to her long resume of accomplishments over the weekend when she was named to the Panther Invitational All-Tournament Team.

"Meleah's definitely living up to all those awards she received last year," Epperly said. "We need to keep her healthy because she's getting the majority of the swings and she leads the team in number of attack attempts almost every game."

After playing in two grueling tournaments on the road, including playing four matches in two days this past weekend, Epperly gave his players a day off on Monday and is ready to get back on a regular schedule.

"Four matches in a day and a half is a grind," he said. "I'm not a big fan of the tournaments, but you have to play them. I'm really looking forward to playing single matches."

Coming into the season as a brand new coach in a new program, Epperly thinks the team has adjusted to his style of coaching.

"I think they're used to me by now," he said. "There was an adjustment period for a while, but now they know where I'm coming from and know what I'm all about."

When the Panthers take on the Purple Aces, they will be faced with a large height disadvantage on the court. Evansville boasts seven players that are at least 6 feet tall, while Eastern only has one six-footer on their squad, sophomore middle hitter Marcia Hahn who measures in at an even six feet.

"When we walk into the gym, we're almost always the smaller team," Epperly said. "If they based the season on the appearance of teams in warmups, we'd lose every match."

But Epperly doesn't feel height will play a major factor in tonight's match; in fact, it could possibly work to his squad's advantage.

"I don't think teams take us seriously when they walk into the gym and see how small we are," he said. "But when the whistle blows, we know how to play volleyball."

Panthers must now deal with injuries to top receivers

By Kyle Bauer
Associate sports editor

The fourth quarter of the Panthers' 31-27 loss at the hands of the University of Hawaii Saturday night was painful for tight end Seth Willingham for more than the obvious reason of watching Eastern fall just short of knocking off a Division I-A team.

The senior was forced to watch the final 15 minutes of the game laying on a bench on the sidelines after injuring his knee.

Then he had to watch a possible touchdown pass run through his replacement's hands. He witnessed the Panthers come up short on fourth and inches late in the game. And he also saw the nation's longest losing streak come to an end. Now it appears as though Willingham will have to adjust to the painful view from the sideline for at least a few more weeks.

Head trainer Rob Doyle said the extent of Willingham's injuries will not be known until he sees a doctor later this week, but he could be out for a couple of weeks.

To complicate matters, Willingham will have some company on the sidelines. Senior wide receiver Phil Taylor also injured his knee in the game.

Seth Willingham

Taylor will pay a visit to the doctor later in the week too, but Doyle said he had injuries to the medial-collateral ligaments in his knee. According to Doyle, he could miss two to four weeks.

Phil Taylor

"From a production standpoint, they are a couple of our leading receivers," offensive coordinator Roy Wittke said of the injured seniors. "But the things we will miss most is the experience and leadership. They have been in the program for a number of years and been in a lot of big ball games."

If there is one good thing Eastern can take from all this, it's the injuries to Willingham and Taylor will allow for younger players to step in and fill the voids - assuming they take full advantage of the opportunities being handed to them.

"We have always preached balance, not only between the pass and run, but with who we get the football to," Wittke said. "We have kids capable of stepping in if (Willingham and Taylor) aren't able to go. Either individuals or a group of people will have to step in and they will have to take advantage of the opportunity."

Offensively, Wittke said he was pleased with the performance and execution in the team's second loss in as many weeks, but recognizes there is still more that needs to be done.

"I'm tremendously disappointed in our ability to convert in short yardage situations," he said. "We had first and goal twice and got two fieldgoals."

"Then there was the critical fourth and short late in the game. It took away from a pretty good performance."

The Panthers won't be able to make mistakes like those this week when they open up at home against Southern Illinois Saturday night.

The defense will have to do its part to stop an offense that put up 58 points in a win over Murray State last weekend, while the offense will have to do all it can in case it needs to match the Salukis point-for-point.

C'mon, give us respect

It's a matter of respect. Often times in sports, the best teams can put a certain fear into their opponents before they ever take a step onto the playing field.

As of right now, the Panther football team has not reached that level of intimidation.

I have a friend who lives in Michigan. Two weeks ago he was watching the Michigan State home opener against Oregon. It just so happened that was the same night as Eastern's opener at Central Michigan.

My friend told me at one point in the MSU game, they were announcing scores. This is what he told me they said of the Eastern game:

"And at the half, Central leads a I-AA opponent 19-0.

A I-AA opponent? Are you telling me Eastern doesn't command enough respect to even have their name mentioned in the same sentence with a Division I-A opponent?

Granted, the Panthers were underdogs heading into that game and the game itself was pretty ugly at the half, but Eastern did come back to outscore CMU in the second half and made a respectable game out of it.

Last week in Hawaii, the Honolulu media treated Eastern much the same way. The Honolulu Star-Bulletin said quarterback Anthony Buich threw ducks compared to USC's Carson Palmer.

Personally, I think they are venting some of their anger after the Trojans put up 62 points on the Rainbows the previous week. But I guess losing 19 games in a row would make about anybody bitter.

It's also worthy to mention USC is now the No. 19 team in the country, the No. 20 team when that game was played.

Of course Eastern's talent level won't be as high as a top 20 team. How could Eastern compete with that? Not only does USC have a great football tradition, but they also have warm, sandy beaches and half-naked women as selling points. All Eastern has to offer is the night-life of scenic downtown Charleston.

Which would you choose? That's what I thought.

I guess I'll see you on the beach then.

And who is Hawaii to be knocking on Eastern in the first place? Isn't this the same team that brought the nation's longest losing streak into the game?

A recent poll ranked all the I-A and I-AA teams together. Of the 237 teams, the Scripps-Howard computer poll ranked Hawaii 161.

Eastern was 165.

What does that say for Hawaii? They only rank four spots above a supposedly-lowly I-AA team.

And Eastern demonstrated they deserved to be that close to Hawaii in the rankings when it gave the Rainbows a real scare and put themselves in a realistic position to win the game.

I realize these first two games were against opponents Eastern was supposed to lose to, but what's going to happen this week?

When Eastern opens at home against Southern Illinois, will the Salukis be intimidated by an 0-2 team?

Coming off of a 58-51 win over Murray State, the answer would have to be no. You know they're coming into this week's game with a lot of confidence and when they see those two blemishes in Eastern's record, it could spark an even greater arrogance.

The Panthers are a solid team that lost two games they were supposed to. A quick glance at the schedule and you could pick out a few games the Panthers were supposed to lose – and lose big.

Two of those games are in the past. And the results could be considered a moral victory for the Panthers, but seasons aren't made on moral victories.

Once that level of intimidation sets in, the real victories will come.

New formula, same results

Laura Strange / Staff photographer

While Katie Springer, Lindsay Speer, Kim Victor and Shelli Trocha are new to the women's cross country team, they have already contributed and added solid depth to the team.

Newcomers are key for women's cross country team

By Kristin Rojek
Staff writer

The pieces are starting to come together for the women's cross country team with the help of four new athletes who have already begun to successfully develop.

After a disappointing fourth-place finish last year in the Ohio Valley Conference, the young team must continue to build on its improvements, and helping them along is senior Lindsay Speer, juniors Kim Victor and Shelli Trocha, and freshman Katie Springer.

Speer, Victor, Trocha, and Springer represent Eastern for the first time in their collegiate cross country career and have each proved themselves as a strong focal point for the new season.

"It's exciting to have solid depth again," head coach John McInerney said. "They are all easing into the new team and coaches, but everything has gone smoothly so far."

Having joined their teammates for the first time last weekend at the Bradley Open after dividing between Colorado State and Indiana the previous weekend, the team as a whole succeeded in capturing a fifth place finish in Peoria.

"There was always another Eastern girl to pick them up if they started to slip," McInerney said. "To have ten girls within one minute and fifteen seconds is exciting because we haven't had that in awhile."

Although it is still early in the season, it is now just a matter of each of the athletes finding their own place in the race and gaining the confidence needed to push themselves to a higher caliber of competition.

Speer, who transferred from the University of Illinois said that even in high school she had not run for a team that was as unified as Eastern.

"It's awesome to be a part of this team," Speer said. "Throughout the race (at Bradley) everyone was there to help each other along because this team operates as one unit."

Also transferring to Eastern, Victor joins the Panthers from Danville Area Community College, and although the collegiate level remains fairly the same, she too will experience minor changes

Wheeler starts out strong, focused on men's OVC meet

By Kristin Rojek
Staff writer

There are not many differences between this year's men's cross country team and last year's conference championship group – unless you look at the performance of sophomore Eric Wheeler.

As a freshman last year, Wheeler contributed to the Panthers as the eighth man on the team, finishing 21st and earning All-OVC honors.

This season he has already placed himself among the leaders and has continued to improve.

"He's a hard-nosed competitor and this season he's got his work cut out for him," head coach John McInerney said. "He's already established himself as a top five runner."

Wheeler headed out to Colorado at the start of the season, and although competition was fierce, it only made the team stronger as it bounced back to a first place finish last weekend in Peoria.

Wheeler played a large role last weekend finishing third for the Panthers and eighth overall, much improved from last year's 40th place finish.

"It's all new and a lot harder, but I try to keep up the mind set to get better with everyday," Wheeler said.

"You'll only get better if you stick with it."

Adhering himself to the lead pack has helped him gain greater speed than last year and with every practice, he works on getting out and continuing at a faster pace.

along the way.

"There isn't a whole lot of difference, but the training is definitely more intense," Victor said. "I'm just trying to stay up in the top seven or as close to the top as I can get."

Trocha will experience minor collegiate changes into Eastern's team this

“Our big goal and motivation for the season to do well at the district meet because the OVC meet and the NCAA is important too.”

Eric Wheeler,
Sophomore runner

“Our big goal and motivation for the season is to do well at the district meet because the OVC meet and the NCAA is important too,” Wheeler said.

As an underclassman, McInerney acknowledges Wheeler's share of the leadership because he puts forth a larger leadership role within the team compared to last year.

"He is tough throughout the workouts and I know he'll be in the front for as long as he can hang on," McInerney said. "His confidence is growing because he was inconsistent as a freshman, but some guys never get to that point."

To be in the front of the pack takes guts and that is what McInerney attributes to part of his success this season.

"I am determined to be faster than last year and eventually get my time under 25 minutes," Wheeler said. "I'm really looking forward to the EIU Open (this weekend) because I didn't have as good of a meet last year as I would have liked to."

season as well. Although the mileage is much the same as she has been use to, the pace, Trocha noticed, has been faster.

"If I stay uninjured I really believe that I will have the best season ever," Trocha said. "I am much happier with this team because it seems that there is more team spirit and everyone gets along."

meet, even though the Panthers were competing at the Division II level at the time.

"(Sheeran) was a wild man, and completely fearless," McInerney said. "He didn't have much leg speed, and the longer the distance the the better he ran."

During the Panther's first season in the Mid-Continent Conference, Reinking made an immediate impact, McInerney said.

"The first year in the conference, he won the 5,000 and 10,000 meter runs," McInerney said. "He wound up being the conference Athlete of the Year that season and he finished second at the Division II level."

Last season Eastern junior Gabe Spezia was the Panthers' fourth All-American hurdler behind Rodney Jackson and Dan Steele who earned the title twice, including a national championship.

In the past two years, Steele competed in the 1999 World Championships, finishing eighth in the decathlon and in the 1998 Winter Olympics with his twin brother Darrin in the bobsled.

Augustine Oruwari, was a member of the 1976 Olympic team from Nigeria that withdrew from the games, and Robert Johnson were competitive teammates that earned the right to Division II nationals.

"The thing that I took most was the emphasis coach Neil Moore put on the team," said Oruwari, who lives in Mattoon. "It was a team concept and the more you worked, the better you and the team did and I have taken that success into my business."

Jackson was a two-time national champion at the Division II level.

Joining Craft as one of the greatest jumpers of all-time is Toni Abiano, a Division I All-American in the long and triple jumps in 1976.

Another set of twins, Braidy and Brent Miller were two of the best throwers in Panther history, with Braidy was an All-American in 1991 in the 35 lbs. weight throw and 1992 in the weight and the hammer throws. Braidy also holds the school record in the indoor shot, the weight and hammer throws and the discus.

Pole vaulter Tom Marchese holds the school record indoors, which he set last season, and Darrin Steele is the best ever to compete as a decathlete in a Panther uniform finishing with 7699 points in 1992. At one meet, Akers said Steele competed in 15 events in three days, winning the decathlon and placing in five events.

One of the easiest athletes to overlook is steeplechase participant Rick Liversay, since the event is contested outdoors, but he is a rare five-time All-American at the Division II level.

The women's team, which began competition in 1975 has numerous women that have been competitive. One of the best athletes ever to compete for the women is middle distance runner Lauren Lynch.

"She was just an awesome runner, and a coach-able person," Craft said. "Her senior year she was close to nationally qualifying that we took her across the Midwest to find someone to push her."

Joining Lynch was Janine Jarris another competitive distance runner both on the track and as a member of the cross country team.

"(Jarris) is another outstanding athlete," Craft said. "She was one that was a contributor in cross country; it was not her favorite thing, being a half-miler, but she did it well."

Donna Levy is tied for the school record in the 55-meter dash, the 55-meter hurdles and is among the top three in the 200-meter dash indoors. Levy is tied with current Panther Candy Phillips in the 55m hurdles, but Phillips is among the school record holders in the high jump, 100-meter hurdles and the long jump outdoors.

Tina Dawson and Kala Scott are 1-2 in the heptathlon in Eastern's history, and they also hold individual records. Dawson is the only Panther triple jumper to clear 40 feet outdoors and Scott holds the record indoors. Along with the triple jump, Dawson is also the record holder outdoors in the high jump.

"(The heptathlon) is an odd event because the athletes have one primary event and they have to do other events on top of that," Craft said.

Sprinters Lorry Plutz and Gail Stephens combined hold three all-time records in the 200 and 400-meter dashes. The throwers are anchored by Tisha Alvarez, who holds the school record in the hammer, and Valeta Strickland, Eastern's all-time female shot putter.

"Everyone we have mentioned are blue-collar athletes," Craft said. "They are phenomenal competitors and they were all self motivated."

Twins Robin and Ruth Smith were just as competitive as the Steele and Miller twins from the men's team. The two sisters competed in both cross country and track, with Robin holding an edge over Ruth.

"Robin had a few better times," McInerney said. "It is always tough when twins compete against each other, but they are competitive."

Joining the Smiths on the cross country and track teams are Margaret Smith, no relation, and Kiya Thomas. Margaret Smith holds the 3,000-meter record and Thomas made an immediate impact after transferring in.

"Thomas is the only conference champion in cross country on the women's side, which she accomplished in the Gateway Conference," Craft said. "Robin may be the all-time best in cross country."

Over the years, Eastern has had its share of great coaches including Pat O'Brien, Moore (11-time Coach of the Year) and Akers (10-time Coach of the Year), who said he has a lot of respect for the coaches before him.

The coach who brought the respect to Eastern was Pat O'Brien, and for that he is our coach.

"He was a very loyal person, a person of his word and a man of honor," Craft, an athlete under O'Brien, said. "He expected you to perform without any excuses, but he was also a compassionate person."

Akers agreed with the impact that O'Brien had on track and field at Eastern.

"Pat O'Brien is the one that established the tradition," Akers said. "He is the heart and soul of the Eastern athletic department for a while and he set a higher standard."

The blue and gray has always performed

By David Pump
Staff writer

Tradition is always mentioned when talking with past and present members of the men's and women's track and field and cross country teams.

"We have always had a strong tradition of track and field," women's coach and former Panther Olympian John Craft said. "You always know when you put on the blue and (gray) uniform that you are expected to perform."

Craft finished fifth in the triple jump at the 1972 Summer Olympics and was a NAIA and NCAA College National Champion in 1967 and 1969 while at Eastern.

Eastern's men's track team has had 10 different National Champions at four different levels of college competition. Four jumpers, four hurdlers and two sprinters earned those honors.

The men's cross country team was the 1977 Division II National Champion and was runner-up in 1976.

The 1977 National Championship squad was anchored by Mike Larson, who was a senior that season.

"He was a competitor and a team leader," said current Panther cross country coach John McInerney, who was a member of the championship squad. "At warm-up's everyone waited for Larson, because he was like an assistant coach under Coach (Tom) Woodall."

Over the years, Eastern has had a number of quality sprinters led by Claude Magee, who is among the top two all-time in Panther history in the 55-meter, 100-meter and 200-meter dashes.

If Magee isn't the leader, Obadiah Cooper is. Cooper, a 1994 graduate is still competing at the national level, men's coach Tom Akers said.

"(Cooper) is known for his blazing start," Akers said. "He was great at indoor running, since he took the turns really well. He is still running at the national level after being a qualifier at the U.S. Championships."

The strength continues into the 400 and 800 meter sprints, with a national champion coming in each event. Ed Hatch won the 400m in 1976 at the Division II level and Jim Maton was the first Division I National Champion in Panther history, earning the honor in the 800m in 1988.

Hatch's mark outdoors was surpassed by 1999 graduate Chad White, who also owns the school record in the 400m both indoors.

"Chad, with the marks he has put down, proves he is one of the great 400 runners of all-time, and he was repeatedly under the school mark," Akers said. "Eddie Hatch was one of the most fluid runners ever. Maton was one of the guys that put Eastern's name back on the national map."

The cross country and long distance runners competed all year-round, led by McInerney, Joe Sheeran, Larson and Casey Reinking. Each runner added their own style to the team. Sheeran was the first American finisher in 1971 in the Division I
