Six American diplomats spirited out of Tehran

by The Associated Press

Six American diplomats who escaped capture when the U.S. Embassy was seized Nov. 4 slipped out of Tehran after 12 weeks in hiding, helped by the Canadian Embassy and an elaborate ruse of false identities and forged documents, it was disclosed Tuesday.

Word of the dramatic flight from Tehran came as ailing Iranian leader Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini went on national radio to make an emotional appeal for Iranians to support their new president, Abolhassan Bani Sadr.

The 79-year-old revolutionary leader, in an apparent allusion to his heart ailment, called on Iranians to remain "without fear, no matter whether a person comes or a person goes...." The last medical report on the hospitalized Khomeini listed him in satisfactory condition.

There were new signs Tuesday of friction between Bani Sadr and official backers of the Moslem militants holding some 50 American hostages at the U.S. Embassy.

The bold escape of a half-dozen U.S. diplomats from central Tehran caught the embassy militants off guard Tuesday.

"That's illegal! That's illegal!" one of the militants cried to a Western reporter when told of the ruse.

Ever since the militants seized the embassy Nov. 4 to press demands for the return of the ousted Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi, there have been unconfirmed reports in Tehran that embassy staff members who avoided capture were hiding out in the embassies of other friendly nations.

Then, after Canada unexpectedly shut down its embassy Monday and withdrew its small staff, the Montreal newspaper La Presse published an article in its Tuesday editions saying some U.S. diplomats had been harbored in the Canadian mission and were spirited out in the previous day or two under cover of false Canadian passports.

U.S. and Canadian officials later confirmed the basics of the report. State Department officials said the Americans had been in "friendly embassies," but the Canadians said all were at the Canadian mission.

Decision-makers in Washington and Ottawa decided to act when they did because "we knew everyday that the danger was becoming greater," Canadian Foreign Minister Flora MacDonald told a news briefing.

Spring enrollment up compared to last year

by Laura Rzepka

Although there is always a drop in enrollment between fall and spring semester, Eastern's spring enrollment of 9,166 still shows an increase of 132 from last spring.

However, there is a decrease of 551 students from last fall's enrollment of 9,717 according to official enrollment figures released Tuesday. Accounting for the decrease are 417 students who graduated at the end of last semester and 262 students who flunked out, Glenn Williams, vice president for student affairs, said.

"There is always a drop in the spring. You just don't get freshmen in the spring," Williams said.

"High schools are getting chintzy about letting students out. High schools get paid on the average daily membership and the average daily attendance," he said.

As was the case in the fall, the freshmen class has the largest enrollment, totalling 2,174. Sophomores comprise 1,928 of the total, juniors 2,046 and seniors 2,120.

Even though the freshman class remains the largest, figures show the number of freshmen has dropped from 2,889 in the fall to 2,174 this spring.

Graduate students number 898, up from last fall's total of 859.

Although not quite as high as last fall, the number of women attending Eastern far outweigh the number of men.

Last fall the difference totalled 1,005. This semester the gap is 957 with 5,061 women and 4,104 men.

Full-time students total 8,169 and part-time students number 997.

With the enrollment as it stands, there are no serious housing problems, Williams said.

"We are very tight in housing, we'll be 100 percent this semester (filling residence halls)," he said.

"There are still a number of people waiting to get in the residence halls," he added.

In an earlier story Williams was quoted as saying Eastern's housing facilities can handle a head count of approximately 10,000.

Commenting on future enrollment, Williams said, "I foresee a continued, healthy environment for Eastern."

December dropouts take heavy enrollment toll

by Melinda DeVries

The number of Eastern students dismissed in December because of low grades exceeds the fall 1978 total by 77 students, Glenn Williams, vice president for student affairs, said Tuesday.

A total of 262 students were dismissed from Eastern after this fall semester compared to 185 dismissed at this time last year, Williams said.

The number of those dismissed after fall 1979 is greater than after fall 1978 because of the enrollment increase of 132 students between two semesters, Samuel Taber, dean of student academic services said.

Williams said the percent of students who dropped out of school after last semester is 1.79 percent of the entire student body. In the fall of 1978, 2.49 percent dropped out.

Taber said there was a variety of reasons why students do not make good grades but he said he has never heard a student say that a lack of ability was one of those reasons.

"Things such as financial problems, work, health, family problems that cause mental stress and the new atmosphere is among the reasons students don't keep up their grades," Taber said.

Since Eastern has such high admission requirements, Taber said every student who is accepted at Eastern has the potential to make good grades.

Williams said since the date for dropping a class was moved up last semester, it has had definite effect on students' grades.

Students were not involved in their classes enough to know if they wanted to drop a class until the drop date was over, Williams said.

Williams said as long as the dropout figure stays within a "ball park figure," he does not get upset.

Williams said a student usually drops out after his third semester.

"If you are going to have grade problems it is going to be in your freshman and sophomore year, and we give a student three semesters on probation and then he's out," Williams said.

Williams said that there are 901 students on probation, a figure that has remained constant for a number of years.

"There are usually between 870 to 910 students on probation every semester," Williams said.

Calvin Campbell, director of the Academic Assistance Center, said counseling is offered for those students who are having problems with their grades.

"We receive a list of students at the mid-term who have received D's and F's, and then a schedule is set up so the kids can come and see us for counseling," Campbell said.

Campbell said they explore the background of students who come to get counseling to find out why those students are not making the grades they should.

"We look at their test scores in reading ability, mental ability and high school transcripts in hopes to find out why a student is not making acceptable grades," Campbell said.

Campbell said after exploring a student's background they may together even find a new major for the student.

Taber said there are a number of places a student can get counseling besides the Academic Assistance Center such as from faculty, administrators, hall counselors and friends.

"No one puts a collar on a person and says you have to go get counseling, but we would like to see every student get it," Taber said.

Both Taber and Campbell said a student should first go see their instructor if they find they are having problems in a class.

Durante dies at 86

Jimmy Durante, the honky-tonk comic with the outsized nose died Tuesday at age 86.

Durante was admitted to St. John's Hospital in Santa Monica on Jan. 7, suffering from acute lung congestion. The cause of death was listed as pneumonitis complicated by the effects of previous strokes, Chris Thomas, a hospital spokeswoman said.

Chicago teachers partially paid

Teachers returned to schools Tuesday to pick up partial paychecks and left soon after as their union continued to demand all their back salaries.

Throughout the nation's third largest school system the story was the same as on Monday—few students, fewer teachers and on-the-spot decisions by principals on what to do with students who did show up.

Court to hear suit

The Illinois Supreme Court agreed Tuesday to directly consider a suit challenging the constitutionality of a new law implementing a plan to rescue Chicago's financially strapped schools.

Faculty Senate to review adds-drops, fee increase by Dyna Cole

The Faculty Senate Tuesday proposed to investigate the possibility of reducing the number of days allowed for students to add and drop classes.

The senate also reviewed the proposed student fee increase to support athletic programs. Currently, during the first five days of each semester preregistered students can adjust their schedules by either adding or dropping classes.

However, Gerald Pierson of the School of Education said this is too long a period for the process.

"Drops and adds take too long. By the last day it's way too late to add classes unless instructors are playing around for the first four days of class."

He added that some students deliberately miss the first days of class to extend the Christmas holiday break.

Senate members agreed that the idea of adds and drops is essential since some students have problems with getting classes they require during preregistration. They decided to poll faculty and students for their reactions concerning the matter.

Lewis Coon, chairman of the Intercollegiate Athletics Board, also presented the senate with the IAB's proposal to increase student fees by $30 per student per semester.

Of the $30, $15 would go to the grant-in-aid program which provides athletic scholarships and awards to talented students in areas such as journalism, music and art.

Coon said Eastern is the only Board of Governors school which has not had an athletic fee increase in the past five years. The last increase in athletics came in 1974.

He added that inflation and Title IX the process which will equalize funding for men's and women's sports programs, have "started slowly years ago" to drain funds away from the athletic program.

He said another source of the athletic department's current deficit of approximately $100,000 was caused by pledges of financial support from the Panther Club which were never honored.

"Pledges come in and don't get paid," Coon said. "Only 50 to 60 percent of the money comes in."

Coon said most of the schools in Eastern's division, Division II, have moved up to Division I. In order for Eastern to do the same the athletic program needs more money to provide for a better program, he said.

He added that the women's program would also benefit, because funding would increase by $105,600 per year.

Coon said the student senate would draft a proposal in the next two weeks to bring the question to the students by referendum.

Underfunding said to affect quality of teaching

by Scott Hainzinger

Department heads and deans representing a major portion of Eastern's academic community agree with President Daniel E. Marvin's assessment that underfunding has affected the quality of instruction at Eastern.

Earlier this month the Illinois Board of Higher Education took a step toward alleviating the underfunding by recommending that Eastern decrease its enrollment by 400 students and allotting Eastern a 10.7 percent increase in its overall budget.

The underfunding occurred because the number of students at Eastern increased while the amount of funding did not keep pace with the enrollment.

Last week, Marvin pointed to larger class sizes which limit the personal contact between teachers and students, equipment which needed upgrading and fewer travel funds, as negative effects of the underfunding.

In relation to the larger class size, Dean Ted Ivarie of the School of Business said, "As a result of a less than full complement of faculty, we cannot serve the business community as we might."

He added that he felt the School of Business has done "a good job" with the instructional program and has received excellent support from the administration.

English Department chairman James Quivey and Leonard Durham, life science chairman, both pointed to reduced staff as a result of the underfunding.

They said as instructors retired or were promoted, the money which had been used for their salaries was reallocated to other areas, making it impossible to fill the positions, which they had vacated.

Clayton Ladd, chairman of the psychology department, said the workload which resulted from a shortage of staff made it impossible for instructors to gain any release time for research or for other necessary functions.

Alphonso DiPietro, chairman of the mathematics department, said underfunding forced his department to hire temporary help to teach the lower level classes.

DiPietro said hiring temporary help was "disruptive" to the department because these temporary instructors could not be counted on to participate in such necessary activities as advising and making decisions on curriculum activities, which permanent instructors engage in.

DiPietro also mentioned secretarial help as suffering from underfunding. He pointed out that for his staff of 22 instructors and 10 graduate assistants, there is only one secretary.

Mary Ruth Swope, dean of the School of Home Economics, said negative effects of underfunding in her department are insufficient faculty and a shortage of secretarial help. She said this placed overloads on the instructors.

While agreeing that underfunding created a shortage of instructors, speech communication department chairman Floyd Merritt said equipment was suffering. He said there has been a sharp increase in the number of speech communication majors, creating a greater strain on the available equipment.

Dean Donald Lauda of the School of Technology said the biggest problem for his department was equipment, too. He said the problem of underfunding was escalated by the inflation in the cost of equipment and supplies needed for instruction.

He pointed out that in the five years he has been with the School of Technology, prices on petrochemical products needed for classes have increased 300 percent.

Don Moler, acting dean of the School of Education, said the biggest handicap which underfunding caused in his area was in travel. He said many of the students in his department are enrolled in training programs outside the campus and ideally, instructors should be able to travel to these training sites to evaluate the students' progress.

Under the monetary conditions which have existed for the past few years, however, depleted travel money has all but eliminated that possibility, Moler said.

Moler likened the underfunding to being poor. "You just can't do what you want to," he said.

Durham and DiPietro also mentioned travel as suffering from the underfunding.

Journalism department chairman Daniel Thornburgh summed up the situation saying, "Eastern students are not getting a fair shake. They are paying as much as other BHE school students for less."

Conservation efforts are up to the individual

President Jimmy Carter appropriately called for 1980 to be the Year of Conservation in view of the energy conservation movement's progress.

Rural electrical usage, the fastest growing power outlet in the nation, only increased 5.8 percent compared to the average annual rate of 10 percent.

In Illinois, rural mega-watt sales by distribution cooperatives rose only four percent compared to the 10 percent average.

Although the growth of electric power consumption is lower, the demand at peak times is growing at a rapid rate. It seems consumers tend to forget about conservation on the hottest and coldest days of the year which in turn increases the demand for electricity.

Individuals make conservation programs. And from the signs by rural cooperatives, the programs can work.

Co-op spokesmen said they used local newsletters, bill stuffers, pamphlets and media advertising to increase conservation awareness with their customers. So far, results are encouraging.

Everyone can get involved in energy saving plans. Many citizens objected to the reduced speed limit of 55 miles per hour, but the reduced speed does save gasoline waste.

Car pooling is another method of conserving energy. In fact, several factories and corporations, with the incentive of the government, are hiring professionals to set up car pools for their employees.

Rapid transit services, buses and trains, are another economical device to save energy. A Charleston-Mattoon transit link is now in the initial planning stages.

Homeowners are now improving insulation, buying storm windows or installing solar panels to cut heating and cooling costs.

So the acceptance of a new energy conscious lifestyle is beginning to emerge. A variety of individuals are participating in a new movement to save natural resources by trimming energy waste around them.

From what has started, we are optimistic that more and more people will join in to make the Year of Conservation successful.

Crackdown of Sakharov is a return to the cold war

It has been a while since a Soviet human rights dissident and Nobel laureate was stripped of his citizenship. There were less tensions in 1974 when Alexander Solzhenitsyn paid the price for exercising his freedom of speech. The world was quieter, and U.S.-Soviet ties were not as fragile as they are today.

The Jan. 22 arrest of Andrei D. Sakharov, Soviet physicist and human rights spokesman, appears to have more serious and potentially dangerous implications to the United States and to the rest of the world. I think his arrest and subsequent internal exile is an omen of sorts—a redeclaration of a cold war that began after the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan.

Stripped of his titles, which include Hero of Socialist Labor Laureate of U.S.S.R., Sakharov and his wife Yelena are biding time in Gorky. An industrial city 250 miles east of Moscow, Gorky is conveniently closed to foreigners, visitors and journalists or anyone else looking for the truth.

The Soviets point to Sakharov's "subversive work," "betrayal of interest" and "anti-Communist" activities as the major reason for his banishment. Why now? It is puzzling to me that if Sakharov's activities are interpreted as such now, why were they not interpreted as warranting exile a long time ago?

For nearly 15 years, he has been an instrumental leader in the defense of human rights and freedom of speech in Russia. A probable Soviet embarrassment would be when Sakharov told an American correspondent recently that he felt the 1980 Moscow Olympics should be boycotted, and that the Afghan invasion was a mistake.

It's difficult to say why Sakharov was arrested when he was. The timing may have been coincidental. But the fact that perhaps it wasn't is something to consider. Even the Soviets, often less sensitive to world criticism than other countries, wouldn't conceivably do something to put themselves in a more unfavorable light by mere accident. It seems that Sakharov's arrest and exile revolves around something deeper, stronger and more calculating than the United States can pinpoint thus far.

There are a number of reasons that I can think of that make Sakharov's absence right now more comfortable for the Soviets. Without him, the dissent groups there are more or less leaderless and without strong direction they will be rendered ineffective. Right now, the U.S.S.R. does not have time or energy to contend with silencing calls for freedom on the home front.

Chris

Perhaps "the father of the Soviet H-bomb" simply knows too much about his profession.

Perhaps as some have speculated, there is a power struggle within the Kremlin. Maybe the extreme policies which ended with the Afghan invasion and the sudden arrest of Sakharov were formulated some time ago...when Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev and Prime Minister Alexei Kosygin were both ill and both experienced a temporary loss of control. It is also speculated that Brezhnev may be losing some of his authority in the Politburo, and that stronger military and/or police factions may be at work without his sanction.

At least Sakharov's exile has not gone unnoticed. In fact, it has drawn world criticism. The State Department issued a statement on the same day Sakharov was arrested that included a call to "all those who value freedom" to "deplore this official act of repression against a man who has struggled valiantly for human rights in the Soviet Union." In addition, the International League for Human Rights has wired Brezhnev and demanded the immediate release of Sakharov. So far no response.

Tatyana Yankelevitch, the daughter of Sakharov who lives in the United States, said recently on Good Morning, America her father's exile may be part of an "extensive wipeout campaign of dissidents" in the Soviet Union. Perhaps it is.

Whatever Sakharov's arrest and exile may indicate, it surely can serve to make things colder between the United States and the Soviet Union. We must remember to continue protesting the actions which lead to this end. We must never assume anything from this point on.

Locals support draft, differ on student policy

by Jerry Fallstrom

Three area officials contacted recently said they support President Jimmy Carter's call for reinstatement of draft registration and are in favor of drafting women for non-combat duty. The three, two 53rd District legislators and a Veterans of Foreign Wars official, have different views on the issue of exemptions for college students.

"I think we have to go to a draft system," said state Rep. Harold "Babe" Woodyard, R-Chrisman. "The volunteer army just isn't working. I like the idea of having women on the rolls, but I oppose a combat role for them," he said.

Carter called for reinstatement of draft registration due to Soviet intervention in Afghanistan, which Carter says poses a threat to Middle East oil supplies.

According to recent reports, White House Press Secretary Jody Powell has said the Carter administration is against exemptions for college students, which the administration says tend to benefit the privileged.

"I would be hesitant about pulling students out of college," Woodyard said. "I went into the army at 23 or 24 and I was involved in farming at the time, which created a lot of problems for me," he said.

State Rep. Charles Campbell, R-Danville, said that he is not in favor of exemptions for college students in an all-out war.

Campbell feels the role of women should be confined to clerical jobs and transportation of trucks and supplies. "I don't see why we shouldn't draft women if we're in a war situation that required a lot of manpower," he said.

There are currently 16 million men and 16 million women in the 18 to 26-year-old age group eligible for registration.

Campbell is not convinced that we are close to war.

"But if we really are that close, we should take an inventory to get everybody on the books," he said.

The commander of the Charleston chapter of the VFW, Frank Smith, said he does not feel the volunteer army has been successful.

"We need 'em," said Vietnam veteran Smith of the possible new draftees.

Smith, who spent four years in Da Nang and northern Cambodia, likes the idea of women being drafted.

"Women are needed to run the offices and they are needed in the front lines as nurses," he said.

The possible draft should be a fair one with no special exemptions for college students, Smith said.

"I do think they ought to start with the 18-year-olds. Men that are 23, 24, 25-years-old are more likely to have families. I wouldn't like to see them broken up."

One possible benefit from Smith's standpoint is that the local VFW could get some new members here at the VFW. But I hope we don't have to get them that way," he said.

Carman resident arrested

Eastern freshman Bruce Dicks has been charged with disorderly conduct due to his actions during the evacuation of Carman Hall early Saturday morning.

Jack Chambers, Campus Security Police Captain said the evacuation was caused by thick smoke on floors six through nine. Dicks was arrested because he was found in his room after the building was cleared.

Charleston firemen wanted to evacuate Dicks for his own safety. At the time Dicks was found, the possibility of flames still existed, Chambers said.

He said the urgent situation and Dick's slowness to leave caused the campus policeman at the scene to arrest him.

Dicks said he had been out earlier Friday evening and was asleep when the policeman and firemen entered.

Dicks' arrest may result in a maximum $500 fine or up to six months in jail.

Chambers said the cause of the smoke is still under investigation.

European study program offers change, four credits

by Sue Ann Rentfrow

Students looking for an exciting change in their college career should attend Eastern's European Studies program meeting at 7:30 p.m. Thursday in Coleman Hall Room 222.

Wolfgang Schlauch of the history department will be directing Eastern's European Studies Program scheduled for May 12 to June 5.

Students can obtain up to four hours of credit in one or more courses in history, economics, political science, German, French and art by participating in this program, Schlauch said.

Cost of the program is approximately $1,220, which includes airfare, rail transportation in Europe, tuition, hotel and breakfast. However, only 20 students may go, Schlauch said.

Students wishing to obtain the four hours of credit will be required to read three books before the program begins. There will also be lectures, readings and tests throughout the trip, he said.

The group will be leaving from Chicago with their first stop in Luxembourg.

Some of the highlights of the trip will include attending a session of the West German parliament and talking with members of the government. A three-day stay in Berlin and a trip to East Berlin will probably be the most informative, Schlauch said.

"Seeing the Berlin Wall and being in a communist country will be quite interesting," he said. "A different society, structure and set-up exists there than what we are familiar with."

Participants will have the opportunity to attend concerts and theaters in various cities, visit a European university, take a boat trip on the Rhine and see the Alps, he said.

Sopko keeps students in mind with projects

by Kit Walmsley

Jeff Sopko, student collective bargaining representative, has students' opinions in mind with his new project, but he is still concerned about an older project.

He said there needs to be more student input in the Department of Personnel Commission which uses student evaluations to evaluate teachers.

Sopko said he would like to see a junior or senior student major from each department serve on the commission. The representatives would voice their opinions on whether a teacher is effective, how teachers could improve their presentations, or any matter the representatives feel is important.

Another idea Sopko considered was forming a grievance committee where student workers could voice their complaints. He said he was concerned about the fact student workers still received $2.95 an hour last year when minimum wage was changed to $3.10 in January.

Student workers did not receive the pay increase until July when fiscal year 1980 began.

Vehicle publication delayed due to duplicating mix up

by Patty O'Neill

Students waiting for the fall edition of the Vehicle, Eastern's literary magazine, will have to wait a little longer due to a mix up in production.

The release date for the fall edition of the Vehicle is still unknown.

Victor Bobb, adviser to the Vehicle, said the delay is due to a "hang up" in duplicating.

Tom Hodges, adviser to the Eastern News who assists publication of the Vehicle, said it was "no one's or no thing's" fault.

"The delay is due to inexperienced people having to learn to do everything," Hodges said.

The publication of the Vehicle is a "symphonic blending of a large variety of skills and tasks that are not the property of college students," he added.

Two major problems with this fall's publication were a paper order that was never processed and a misprint on a master disc, Bobb said.

Welcome back students and faculty

E. Marvin met with Eastern coaches earlier this week to re-emphasize this cooperation.

Working within this system, Miller said Mullally intentionally underestimated his income this fiscal year so as to reduce expenditures and the deficit.

The result of this overestimation was Neil Moore to speak

Eastern head track coach Neil Moore will be the guest speaker at a meeting of the Eastern Eyes at noon Wednesday in the Rathskeller. The public is welcome.

that "we expect to find a slight increase in income over what was estimated," Miller said.

Miller said the advisory system was put into effect last year for several reasons. One factor he cited was Title IX (mandating increased funding in women's athletics) which "created a situation where we needed a sport by sport account."

Miller also said the Intercollegiate Athletic Board's interest in the budget and "concern about the deficit situation at that point" prompted institution of the system.

Panthers move up to No. 7 spot

Eastern moved up one notch to seventh in this week's NCAA Division II basketball ratings.

The Panthers, who won three games last week to improve their season mark to 14-3, are now the highest of three Mid-Continent Conference teams and the second best among four Great Lakes Region squads in the nation's top 15.

MCC member Youngstown State (14-2), which Eastern visits Thursday night, dropped from fifth to 13th this week.

Youngstown was upset by another MCC team, Northern Michigan, last Thursday. Northern Michigan (15-3), which is also one of the three teams to beat Eastern this year, jumped from honorable mention to 10th in the poll.

Other Eastern opponents in the ratings are No. 11 Puget Sound and

No. 14 Bryant College. Puget Sound walloped the Panthers 77-64 in December, while Eastern bombed Bryant 83-58 last week.

Wright State (16-1), is second in the poll and the top Great Lakes Region team. The three MCC teams are the only other teams from the region among the top 15.

Eastern jumped from No. 8 to No. 7 as a result of Youngstown's drop. The other top seven teams remained the same, although last week's No. 3 and No. 4, Central Florida and Florida Southern, changed places.

Four teams ranked last week—No. 10 St. Mary's, No. 11 Hartwick, No. 13 California-Poly and No. 15 West Georgia—dropped out of the top 15 this week.

They were replaced by Maryland-Baltimore County at No. 8, Northern Michigan at No. 10, Virginia Union at No. 12 and South Dakota at No. 15.

Another team making a big jump was defending national champ North Alabama, which went from 14th to ninth this week.

Athletic budget controls set

by Andy Savoie

Eastern's $100,000 athletic deficit should not increase this year, and controls are set up so that it will not increase in future years, Vice-President for Administration and Finance George Miller said Tuesday.

"It would have to be an unforeseen major expense for the deficit to grow larger" this fiscal year, Miller said.

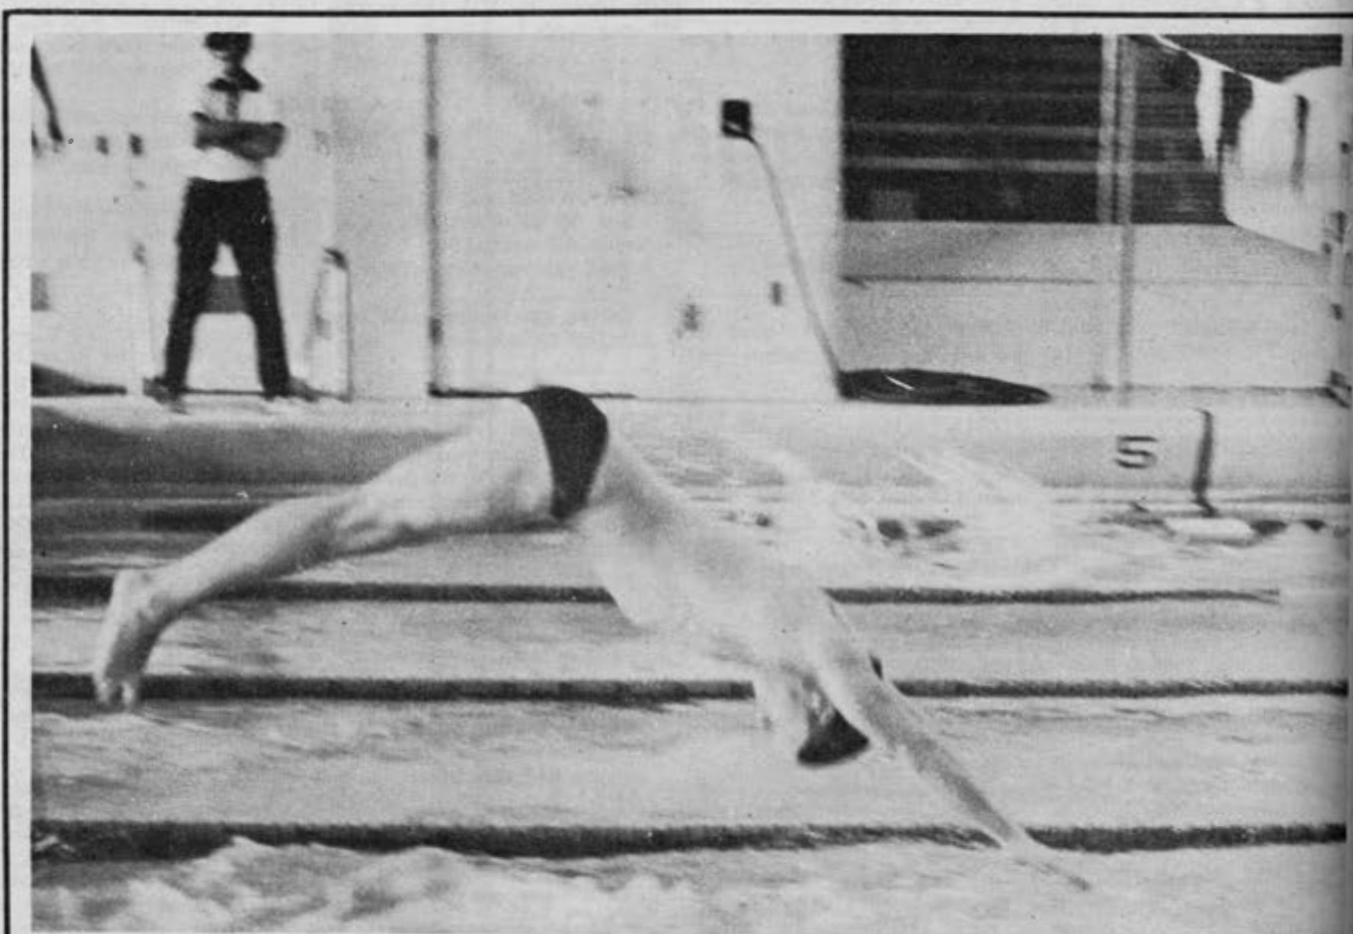

Miller said that based on current information "I have to admit that the business department has some doubt" as to former athletic director Mike Mullally's projection of a $33,000 surplus in the athletic department.

However, Miller said there does appear to be a "small" surplus, and that a final determination on the matter will be made after a meeting later this week with interim Athletic Director Ron Paap and Associate Athletic Director Joan Schmidt.

"We can't substantiate it (the amount of a surplus) until we've met with Paap and Schmidt," Miller said.

Miller said the deficit should not grow in future years because of an "in-depth analysis" the business department began providing the athletic department this fiscal year.

Miller said this analysis involves advising the athletic department on expenditures relative to inflation and "helping to establish a reasonable income estimate."

"We're just making sure that they're being financially responsible," Miller said.

Miller also said the business department helps to make sure each individual sport has a positive balance before making an expenditure, as well as ensuring the cooperation of the athletic department and its staff.

Four AD finalist's names submitted to Marvin

by Dan Brannan

Names of the final four candidates selected to fill Eastern's vacated athletic director spot have been submitted to President Daniel E. Marvin's office, Jimmie Franklin, head of the AD search committee said Tuesday.

Franklin said the names of the four finalists will be announced by the President's office after Marvin studies them.

Eastern's AD position was vacated when Mike Mullally accepted a similar post at Cal State-Fullerton.

"President Marvin should move quickly on the issue, and the athletic director could possibly be announced in February," Franklin said Tuesday at the Intercollegiate Athletic Board monthly meeting.

The IAB also discussed the possible necessity of Eastern becoming an NCAA Division I school in athletics after the 1980-81 season.

Ron Paap, interim athletic director, said the Mid-Continent Conference will probably fold after the 1980-81 season, since all MCC teams except Northern Michigan and Eastern are entering Division I conferences following that season.

Eastern applied for admission into the Ohio Valley Conference in 1979, but was not accepted.

"The IAB will have to examine the matter, and decide whether or not Eastern should go Division I after the 1980-81 season," Paap said. "The biggest problems for us in the decision are transportation and inflation."

A report on the annual AIAW and NCAA meetings was also presented by the IAB on Tuesday.

Joan Schmidt, associate athletic director, said the AIAW meeting was not all that dynamic in making changes.

"The hottest issue was the decision in New Orleans to support five women championships," Schmidt said. "Out of 42 proposals only 15 were passed."

Paap said one of the major issues passed at the NCAA meeting concerned awards to players.

Paap said the value of all awards for the academic year now cannot exceed $100 per student except when combined with senior awards.

Paap said the NCAA also decided Division I schools will now only be able to schedule a maximum of four basketball games against non-member Division I schools.

A discussion of budget timing was another matter the IAB discussed at the meeting.

Lewis Coon, IAB chairman, said the budget figures will be delayed until an athletic director is found.

The IAB also appointed a Title IX study committee on Tuesday.

Coon said the report by the committee will be completed over several months although some of the study will be given at the February IAB meeting.

IAB student member Bob Borschel gave a report concerning student athletic fee increases.

Borschel said if the Student Senate approves the proposal next week, a referendum for a fee increase will be presented to the students to vote on.

Borschel said the vote has been tentatively set for February 20.
