Gallery applauds as Gacy sentenced to chair

CHICAGO AP - The same jury that convicted John W. Gacy Jr. of 33 murders decided Thursday that he should die in the electric chair.

The jury of seven men and five women took 2 hours and 15 minutes to reach its decision. When the clerk of the court read the jurors decision, there was a burst of applause and hurrahs from parents, relatives and friends of the victims. The outburst was quickly subdued by security guards.

Gacy was sitting as the clerk read the jury's vote without an expression and staring straight ahead.

Gacy then was brought before Judge Louis B. Garippo and stood, flanked by attorneys and three guards, as the judge set June 2, 1980 for his execution date. No one has been executed in Illinois since 1962.

Gacy never said a word as the judge read off the names of 11 unidentified victims and, after each, told Gacy that he received the death penalty. As Gacy was led from the room, he was looking straight ahead, his lips clamped.

The death penalty automatically is appealed to the Illinois Supreme Court.

The death sentence was imposed for 12 murders Gacy committed after June 21, 1977, when Gov. James R. Thompson signed the Illinois capital punishment statute.

In each instance Thursday, the victim's name was read by the clerk, and Gacy was sentenced to die for the murder of Robert Gilroy; Robert Piest; David Talsma; William Kindred; Frank Landingan; Timothy O'Rourke; James Mazzara; Matthew Bowman; Robert Winch; Tommy Boling, Russell Nelson and John Mowery.

The sentencing hearing before the jury, who were chosen six weeks ago in Rockford, 75 miles west of Chicago, lasted only about an hour and a half before the jury began deliberating at 4 p.m.

Before the Circuit Court hearing began, the defense asked that the jury be discharged. Judge Louis B. Garippo denied the motion.

Twelve of Gacy's 33 victims were murdered after that date and it is only these that are involved in rendering a verdict that would send him to the electric chair.

Four-day blood drive sets record for Eastern

by David White

Keeping up a tradition, Eastern students and area residents once again donated a record number of pints in this week's Red Cross blood drive held on campus.

Thursday's total of 494 pints brought the final four-day total to 1,727 pints, 227 over the 1,500-pint goal.

Of the 1,727 donors, 491 were donating for the first time.

The 1,500-pint donor was sophomore Cindy Rock of Carman Hall and the final donor of the spring drive was junior Terry Hill of Weller Hall.

Nurse Ida Mae Feste, mobile unit supervisor, said, "I think the students did a terrific job. I'm looking forward to coming back next semester."

She added that "Eastern is easily the most successful school for the blood drive."

Junior Judy Corrington, student general chairman of the drive, said, "I just can't believe the generosity of the students and the support we got from the entire campus. Because of the success of the drive, many people in the Illinois and Missouri area will get free blood."

Coles County Red Cross Chairman Margaret Lowell said, "This is all very nice. I can't think of any other activity on campus where there are 1,700 active participants."

Student volunteer Randy Stocker senior, spoke highly of the con-

donors were treated to snacks to avoid tributions of Lowell and her husband, Walter. "Without them this whole thing wouldn't be possible."

While resting after giving blood, weakness. During the four-day drive, more than 550 dozen cookies, 80 pounds of ham, 40 pounds of cheese, 40 pounds of butter and 1,600 loaves of bread were eaten, Margaret Lowell said.

Appointment policy for boards, councils debated

by Melinda DeVries and Vicki Shaw

The recent effort of some Student Senate members to force senior Linda Phillips off the Council on Academic Affairs has raised the question of whether student members of campus boards and councils should be elected rather than appointed by the student body president.

Eastern Student Body President Bill Houlihan asked Phillips to step down from her CAA position because he did not feel "that she was representing the Houlihan administration as it should be represented."

CAA member Louise Murray of the English department, said student CAA members represent approximately one-fourth of the membership and therefore "it can be very damaging if the president of the student body controls these student votes."

All faculty CAA members are elected whereas the student members are appointed by the student body president.

Murray said several CAA members said they felt they should go before the Faculty Senate and support having student representatives elected rather than appointed.

Phillips also said she plans to go before the Student Senate to express the same idea.

When asked for her resignation by Houlihan a week ago, Phillips refused, saying she had done nothing wrong and that Houlihan had no right to remove her.

Houlihan said he appointed her, so he should have the right to dismiss her.

Houlihan said he asked for Phillips' resignation because she was not doing her job on the CAA.

"For one thing, members of the CAA asked her to be on a committee for a program proposed by Shirley Moore, and she just looked at them and laughed," Houlihan said.

Houlihan cited as another reason for his request Phillips' attitude toward the ROTC program being considered by the CAA.

"Statements like 'the next thing you know, Thomas Hall will be the barracks' is not something a student representative should say at a meeting," Houlihan said.

Phillips admitted she was rather rude when she presented the ROTC program to the Student Senate.

She said of the senate, "The people there just didn't like my attitude."

Houlihan explained that in order for a student representative to be removed from a position, a petition must be signed by five Student Senate members and then presented to the person in question.

In an executive session of the senate meeting Wednesday night, Phillips was given the opportunity to question the charges in the petition.

According to the senate bylaws, the person accused has the right to bring forth witnesses.

Ronald Wohlstein, a current CAA member, and Herbert Lasky, a former member, attended the senate meeting on behalf of Phillips, where they expressed their resentment towards the petition.

"I don't know why they wanted to kick her off. Nobody would give me a straight answer," Wohlstein said.

The senate voted Wednesday night to keep Phillips on the CAA.

At the CAA meeting Thursday, Houlihan voiced his disapproval of Wohlstein and Lasky's appearance at the senate meeting.

"I don't like the way the members of the faculty can come into a student meeting and threaten the student body," Houlihan said.

Houlihan said he felt the faculty members swayed the final vote of the senate.

Ford found innocent

A jury in Winamac, Ind. Thursday found Ford Motor Co. innocent of reckless homicide charges in the first criminal prosecution of a corporation in a products defects case—a verdict the prosecutor said “vindicates” the giant automaker.

Wage guidelines raised

The Carter administration raised its voluntary wage guidelines Thursday so the nation’s workers could receive wage increases of up to 9.5 percent this year and remain in compliance with government inflation-fighting efforts.

The administration, accepting a labor-backed recommendation, set a new guideline range of 7.5 percent to 9.5 percent for pay and fringe benefit increases, up from last year’s 7 percent guideline.

Oil taxes earmarked

The House decided Wednesday in Washington that most of the money from President Carter’s proposed “windfall” tax on the oil industry should be earmarked for cutting income taxes—not for energy programs.

By a non-binding vote of 215-201, the House rejected an attempt to set aside for energy production and conservation half the $227.7 billion that the new oil tax is expected to bring in over the 1980s. That vote left in the bill the suggested allocation of 60 percent of the money for income-tax reductions.

Scott defense rests

Lawyers for Illinois Attorney General William J. Scott in Chicago Thursday called the case against Scott an “anemic” one based on “smear” tactics and asked the jury to find Scott innocent of underreporting his income.

In closing arguments, defense attorney Vincent Bugliosi said that prosecutors have not proven the charges that Scott underreported his income to the Internal Revenue Service for the years 1972 through 1975.

Students at home at Mother's since 1930

(Editors note: This is the sixth in a series of articles exploring the bars in Charleston.)

by Tim Schmidt

A variety of changes over the past nine years has kept Mother's, at 506 Monroe, a continually popular night spot in Charleston.

Mother's formally known as the Last Chance, began business in the 1930s at the same location.

"It has always been a place where people come in off the square to relax," manager Dave Kinniard said.

"People from the square are lunch people," Kinniard said, "but generally it's an Eastern bar."

Last Chance changed owners in 1971 when it was purchased by Tony Robinson who renamed it Mother's. Kinniard, who also manages Marty's, said the picture of "Mom" in front of the bar was designed by an Eastern student in 1971. Since then, the picture has become the official logo.

Mother's expanded when Robinson purchased the adjacent J&M Restaurant in 1974.

The new section of Mother's "is a place where people can go for more intimate seating at different levels" Kinniard said. "It is set aside for more conversational purposes."

Robinson sold Mother's in 1975 to Dale Holt, Dave Kinniard and Dave Block. Holt and Block are both Eastern graduates and alumni members of Sigma Pi fraternity.

The new owners updated Mother's in 1976 when a dance floor and lighting were added.

Kinniard said the success of Mother's is due to the popularity of the dance floor among the students, and the popularity of the luncheon menu among the people who work and shop in the square.

Concerning the luncheon crowd Kinniard said, "The same customers have been coming in since we've opened up. Everybody knows everybody."

Besides the food, which is served from 11 a.m. to 8 p.m., and the dancing, Mother's has three pool tables and two pinball machines which get a lot of play Kinniard said.

Kinniard said Monday nights are ladies' nights and starting March 13, Thursday nights will be rock n' roll nights. That night will feature rock n' roll music plus all the beer patrons can drink from 9 p.m. until midnight at a charge of $2 for men and $1.50 for women. Thursday night will also be designated as "schooner night". For an extra 75 cents patrons will get to keep the schooner, Kinniard said.

Kinniard said a St. Patrick's Day celebration is also planned for Monday.

Green beer will be available and "I spent St. Patrick's Day at Mother's" T-shirts will be sold, Kinniard said.

Eastern professor terms conflicts in Iran, Afghanistan 'absurdities'

by Tina O'Keefe

According to an Eastern history instructor, the current situations in Iran and Afghanistan are just "theaters of absurdity," and Americans are letting the people there get away with it.

Herb Lasky, a specialist in Mid-East history, said President Carter is pretending to have a foreign policy when he actually does not. He said this is one reason for Carter's Olympic boycott plan.

"By boycotting the Olympics, Carter looks like he is doing something about the Russian invasion in Afghanistan," Lasky said.

Lasky said the United States should feel threatened by the Russian's invasion.

"If we allow them to succeed in Afghanistan, the Russians will continue to invade more and more countries," he said.

"The only thing Carter can do is stop trade and play the same game they are," he added.

Lasky said Carter should be using these same tactics with the Iranians. By shutting down America's oil ports and stopping food shipments to Iranians, Americans will get out of the position of taking whatever Iran gives them, he said.

Ford is the future for moderate Republicans

Is there a Ford in America's future?

From the rumblings in the Republican ranks during the last week, Gerald Ford is pushing his way back into the political limelight.

Yes, this is the same Gerald Ford who doubled as both night- and day-watchmen of the White House grounds for two years. The same Ford who was famous for pratfalls, golf balls and pardon calls. Gerald Ford, the former football player and former president of the United States.

Some rank and file Republicans were looking for another candidate to fill the gap between the GOP conservatives and liberals. Moderates, such as Howard Baker and Robert Dole, are either dropping out of the race or being trampled way back in the path.

Paul

Pinderski

On the other hand, liberal John Anderson is gaining strength as the primaries move along. He's getting a lot of votes from Democratic crossovers and independents. This worries some Republicans, since Anderson at times sounds more Democratic than normal GOP standards.

The real threat to the moderate hopes is the rise of Ronald Reagan to the dominate frontrunner position. Reagan's philosophy of conservatism is burying George Bush, especially recently in three southern primaries (Alabama, Georgia and Florida).

Ford and Reagan have been political foes before. The 1976 primaries saw a close race between the two, with Ford putting on a strong finish. He will have to do the same if he decides to run this year. Forty-five percent of the Republican convention delegates will be captured after the Illinois primary Tuesday.

The Western primaries, a Ford strength in the 1976 general election, is where Ford would have to campaign heavy and fast. He already has started. Wednesday night's attack of the Carter administration's vote foul up at the United Nations is the first step to get the free national attention he needs to get rolling.

Some cynics think Ford would not have a chance to overcome Reagan's lead at this point of the season. But consider Ford's track record on the economy (he left office with a 4.8 annual inflation rate), the stock market was making gains, and the executive leadership he had under his belt from Congress and the White House years, plus his razor-thin loss to Carter are all advantages. And he's improved his golf game to boot.

If Ford announces his candidacy soon, he can throw the nomination into the convention floor which would be another advantage to him. He can probably tie up enough delegates along with Anderson to stop Reagan from getting a clear majority of the delegates. A deadlocked convention will seek a compromise candidate, a moderate, and Ford would be one logical choice to face Jimmy Carter again.

But Ford has to decide whether to run. Right now he is hedging for prominent supporters to come out from hiding before he declares. The Republican leadership loyalty is divided already among the other candidates, so Ford will have to forge new ground with the electorate. He'll have to get the old bandwagon cleaned and oiled up for the campaign road ahead.

... March 23, 1981... as the hostage crisis enters the 504th day,
President Carter, serving his second term in office, today announced his plans for a wide-scale air-conditioner embargo of Iran... Hopefully, this will blah, blah...

Letter to the editor

John Anderson

Editor,

When I try to tell people about John Anderson, I usually get one of two replies: "Who's he?" or "Who cares?"

For the latter, all I can do is shake my head in despair. But for anyone who might care, I can do something a little more worthwhile.

John B. Anderson, elected U.S. Congressman of Illinois, for twenty years, has many impressive credentials. For years Mr. Anderson has been the respected chairman of the House Republican Conference. He has been elected to the Republican House leadership six times and is the ranking Republican on the ad hoc Energy Committee.

John B. Anderson is a most revered orator by his colleagues. Unlike Teddy, he can complete a sentence without swallowing his tongue. And the issues? Ask about any subject. Anderson has a clear and definite position. You know where he stands; unlike the "the flowing with the tide" strategy of many politicians. Also, it's not a position reached by professors, poll takers, and advertisers who usually do most of the candidate's thinking. Take away their hired mind-benders, some candidates would forget their name much less be able to make important decisions.

The most important issue in 1980 is energy. A candidate's position on energy will usually indicate where they stand on foreign affairs and inflation. Here, Anderson makes far more sense than the other candidates. They all know America's dependence on foreign oil has put our neck in the noose. Aside from President Carter's margin program, none seem willing to do much about it.

Anderson realizes there is no quick, overnight solution, but stresses the importance to start to loosen the noose now—before it's too late. The best way is to get Americans to conserve more: Anderson proposes a 50-cent-a-gallon tax.

While this would give conservation a healthy boost; in turn, it would give inflation an unhealthy one. Only if the government keeps the money, though.

Anderson would channel the money back into the economy by reducing Social Security withholding 50 percent; therefore larger paychecks. Tax credits would be allowed for businesses unfairly penalized.

Anderson suggests that the revenues from the windfall profits tax should be use solely for low income fuel assistance, and the research and development of alternative energy technologies—including solar energy and synthetic fuel. Imagine the boost of our economy, when we are finally emancipated of foreign oil!

COAL MINER'S DAUGHTER

Starring Sissy Spacek and Tommy Lee Jones

"Things have been going too fast. One day I was a little girl in Butcher Holler, the next day I was married. Then I started havin' babies and now I'm a-singin' for y'all."

Too exhausted to remember the words to her own songs, Loretta Lynn (Sissy Spacek) is having a nervous breakdown. She collapses on the stage. Her husband carries her off through a flash-bulb popping audience.

Coal Miner's Daughter, based on Lynn's autobiography, follows Loretta's life from ages 13 to 35. The film's advertisement does not describe the movie as accurately as the movie follows the book. Yes, Loretta Webb was married at 13 to brash Doolittle Lynn (Tommy Lee Jones). Yes, she was poor, but never hungry. She was loved, but not cheated on.

She did not become a singer "because it was the only thing she could do." At 20, Loretta is living a happy, if simple, life with Doolittle. On a whim he buys a guitar for her anniversary present because he likes the way she sings. Things progress from there until she cuts a record of one of her autobiographical songs.

The record, "Honky Tonk Girl," goes nowhere. In the most charming episode of the movie, Doolittle and Loretta set off by car to visit all Country and Western stations in Kentucky and Tennessee.

At the first station, the disc jockey says yes, he played "Honky Tonk Girl," but it got no response, so "bye, don't call us," etc. Then Loretta sees the sealed manila envelope with her record, picture and bio on a stack of other unopened envelopes. "You lied to us," she tells the deejay, now on the air.

Movie Review

by John Stockman

He tries to explain how he doesn't have enough time to listen to every home-made record sent to him by hopeful singers, but she keeps talking over him. Her dam of reserve and politeness has broken down and the words rush out non-stop.

He lets her keep talking on the air, plays the 45 and, to his surprise, likes it very much. Loretta and Doolittle leave the station triumphant. One down, more to go.

They continue down the road, living off bologna sandwiches, eyes peeled for transmitters. At each station the simple strategy is repeated. Loretta just opens her mouth and keeps it open until the disc jockey plays "Honky Tonk Girl."

The song becomes a hit, Loretta becomes a star. She appears at the Grand Ole Opry and goes on tour with her idol, Patsy Cline. As her public successes increase so do her private tensions. Most involve her and Doolittle but they are resolved one by one.

Loretta closes the movie in a circular fashion by singing the song "Coal Miner's Daughter," which tell about her early life. But Coal Miner's Daughter has no real "end," just a stopping point. It is open-ended. The story of Loretta Lynn is being added to right now. Coal Miner's Daughter fades off the screen with an ellipsis.

All art deals with different relationships to some extent, but personal relationships are the crux of this film. Loretta to her parents, especially her father; to her husband; to her children; to Patsy Cline; to her audience and to her music. Her personality echoes off each relationship. Her character is better illuminated by the reflections off each of these ties.

Sissy Spacek turns in a remarkable performance as Loretta Lynn. She is particularly good at projecting the younger Loretta's innocence and naivete. When she first appeared on the screen I thought of Carrie White, but a little way into the movie I thought Loretta Lynn. In Coal Miner's Daughter Sissy Spacek is Loretta Lynn.

Tommy Lee Jones plays the loving and trusty Doolittle to the hilt. Levon Helm (former drummer for The Band) turns in a compelling characterization of Loretta's father.

"That little girl is singing her tail off," says the engineer recording "Honky Tonk Girl." Though the line is about the character Loretta, it applies to Spacek too. When I went to the movie I knew Spacek was doing her own singing, so I expected her to be good. But her voice is so beautiful that it's a pleasant surprise, like the first buds of spring.

Beverly D'Angelo also turns in a sterling performance as Patsy Cline and a reliable source tells me D'Angelo's singing is better than Cline's was.

This movie has a very natural feel. The cinematography captures Appalachia perfectly. There is a nice balance of music and dialogue. The songs are all introduced smoothly, with none of the awkward "setting up" so apparent in many musicals.

As I was leaving the theater in Champaign I noticed that a lot of the audience seemed to be die-hard C&W fans. This is not just a movie for Lynn fans. Nor just for those that enjoy music. Coal Miner's Daughter is a delightfully true story about a very warm and talented lady. Anyone who has ever been emotionally moved by a movie should see Coal Miner's Daughter.

Vic Bobb—The English instructor

by Linda Charnesky

Breaking into the magazine market is not an easy thing to do for most people. But with true confessions like "I'll prove I love you...I'll kill you," Eastern English Professor Victor Bobb found a way to do it.

Bobb said this was the easiest type of writing that anyone could do to get into the magazine business.

"Towards the end of 1978, I had heard this was a way to get into the business, so I sat down and wrote some confessions," the writer said.

Peering out of his wire-framed glasses, Bobb said he just sat down and wrote about a dozen confessions in a couple of weeks and found that it came very easy for him.

"The first ones I wrote weren't very good, but I sent out stuff in late September of '78 and got accepted in early November," Bobb said.

"True Romance" accepted his version of "That Night I Didn't Call Home" and it appeared in the Feb. 1979 edition. Bobb earned $180 for writing something that took him about five hours to do.

Bobb's fellow faculty members laughed when one of his later works "Taking My Baby" first came out. "They were dying to see the pictures they were going to put with the story," he said.

Bobb said that his fellow faculty members do not even read his confessions anymore.

Fellow instructor Bruce Guernsey said kiddingly Bobb is "wasting his time," but added that he is making lots of money doing it.

"He's doing that (writing true confessions) and it prevents us from going ice fishing," Guernsey said of Bobb.

The contract Bobb has with McFadden magazines seems to be one of great flexibility. The contract states that the information contained in the confessions must be from "facts gained from actual experiences and/or interviews," Bobb explained.

He laughingly explained however that "Three Husbands and Still a Virgin" was a story he heard from his grandmother who had heard it from her stepmother.

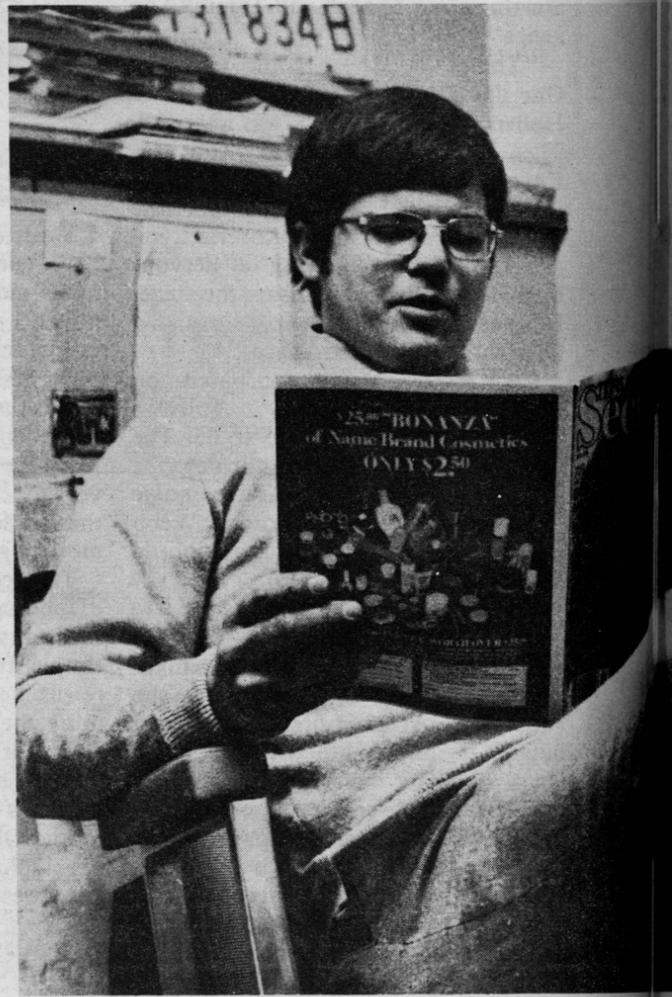

He said he writes for McFadden because they are not too sleazy or sexually oriented.

"McFadden magazines are much cleaner and are more love and family oriented," Bobb said.

However, he said he did submit one of his first works "My Sexual Hunger Almost Killed My Husband," to the more sexually oriented magazines like Dell and Ideal.

"I discovered no need to shut off the McFadden market, so I decided to clean up the writing," he said.

He talked very rapidly as he explained how McFadden gets several submissions. "These magazines get 60 to 120 submissions per week and getting picked up is not easy," Bobb reiterated. "But, it's still the easiest way to break into the business."

Eastern English instructor Vic Bobb enjoys a copy of "Secrets," which contains an article penned by Bobb titled "Rape." (News photo by Rich Bauer)

All the true confession magazines combined, print about 1,500 stories per year, Bobb noted.

"I heard that one woman in Pennsylvania has had 400 articles accepted by confession magazines," he said. "I submitted 12 to start out to various magazines and have gotten five accepted thus far."

Bobb's best results have come from "True Romance" where he has gotten four out of five submissions accepted. "I try not to send them bad stuff anymore," Bobb said.

Sitting back in his brown leather, sway-back chair, Bobb paused a moment to explain why he writes these

for who writes true confessions

He stepped forward and grabbed my blouse by the neckline and pulled.

"Come on, Walt," Truck encouraged. "Get that stuff out of the way." I gasped again as Walt yanked harder. The blouse and vest tore down the front and side.

I was being jerked around like a child in Walt's powerful grip.

"Oh man, lookee there, lookee those," Dub exclaimed as Walt's pull tore my bra off and exposed my full breasts. I burn easily, so I never sunbathe, and my breasts are creamy white.

All three men were laughing and hooting now, bouncing around in their perverted eagerness to rape me. Truck had already unbuckled his belt. I couldn't stand the one terrifying thought anymore, so I started to cry, and I gasped.

"Are...are you going to kill me?" The thought made me feel dizzy and sick, but I couldn't stand not knowing.

Walt's laugh was cruel. "Well now, honeybunch, that just depends on whether you're a good girl or not."

"Depends on how good you are," Dub cackled.

—Excerpt from "Gang Rape" by Vic Bobb

however, besides true confessions, such as non-fiction, short stories and satires. He is currently working on a Western novel.

Bobb explained that many times the magazines will change the title of his confessions after he submits them. He said "That Night I Didn't Call Home," accepted by "True Romance," was not his original title. His original title was "How I Can Live Knowing My Selfishness Killed My Mother."

Bobb said he caters to an audience mainly composed of high school and college females.

"I think females can usually identify with the stories more," he said.

His work "Gang Rape," which is already on the newsstand in the April 1980 edition of "True Life Secrets," was an emotional, gripping story that had a meaning to it, Bobb said.

Bobb's original title for the piece was "I Asked For It...Gang Rape Was the Only Cure For My Loneliness."

"Most of the stories I write have a theme and a lesson that the reader learns after he reads it, whether it is being a good wife or whatever," he said.

He said that the majority of those who read the magazines believe the stories in them.

They are geared to a lower audience and Bobb said he must condescend to that audience.

"But they do have central themes in them, where the victim learns to better herself in some way," Bobb said.

He believes his writing has improved as a result of writing these true confessions.

"My fiction writing is a lot better since I've written these—I've learned to have much more of an imagination," Bobb said.

"I think anybody can write a true confession though. I have no regard for the literary aspect of the stories, but I've created 7,000 words of fiction that is going to be worth something to someone," he said.

It seems rather amazing how a man who 10 years earlier, while in college, had wondered who wrote for these types of magazines and had concluded that anyone could do it. Well, in his spare time Victor Bobb has become part of that group.

His creativity on the side has thickened his pocketbook and at the same time gotten his stories published—a big step for any feature writer.

If Bobb is "wasting his time" making money from these stories, then he ought to take a long hard look at his alternatives. After all, he could be going ice fishing a lot more often.

Two boys are leashed to a van for 100 days

YORKTOWN HEIGHTS, N.Y. — Two teenagers have finished 100 dog days leashed to a van by 50 foot ropes.

The gimmick was a contest by Yorktown Heights Chevrolet dealer Bernard Curry, who offered a free $1,500 Caribbean vacation to whoever stayed attached the longest.

Thomas Watson 18, of Yorktown Heights, and Albert Green, 19, of Peekskill, completed 100 days Saturday. Six men started the contest Nov. 30. By day 54, only the two were left.

The pair had to do everything—eat, sleep, bathe and shave in buckets of water, even celebrate Christmas and New Year's—within 50 feet of the van. The early days were spent reading and exercising in and around the tents they pitched, but later they were able to have a television and a stereo.

After awhile, Watson said, "We knew the 100-day mark was getting close and one day we just looked at each other and agreed to pack it in on the same day and split the prize money. We had become such good friends there just wasn't any competitiveness."

They plan to submit the feat to the Guinness Book of World Records.

From Ohio to Mass., balloons are traveling

PEABODY, Mass. — When 6-year-old Jennifer LeGault checked her backyard this weekend, she found some long-distance surprises: balloons from Ohio.

The yellow and black balloons floated down Saturday. They were tagged with a message explaining the students from the Newbury School in Newbury, Ohio, had released them the day before in a contest promoting national Right-to-Read week.

Superman drops in, but Army is not thrilled

LONDON—When Superman drops in for tea he really drops in.

One moment Christopher Reeve, the movie Man of Steel, was soaring over the Buckinghamshire countryside.

Then KA-POOF, his glider plane ran out of air currents.

Slower than a dodo, more embarrassing than a run in his blue and red longjohns.

The vagaries of British weather had succeeded where the evil General Zod and the dastardly Lex Luthor failed.

Moments later, KA-BUMP, and Reeve had landed safely in the nearest field—which happened to be in the middle of a high-security defense research establishment 37 miles northwest of London.

And when military police approached with the bad news, "I said 'Oops, I'm sorry. I can explain everything'" Reeve recounted afterward.

Fortunately the security men knew their "it's-a-bird, it's-a-plane" routine and recognized the American actor, who recently completed filming "Superman 2" at Pinewood Studios here.

First Aardvark queen reigns at celebration

PHILADELPHIA — An 18-year-old New Jersey woman is the new Miss American Aardvark — capturing the title, 25 Susan B. Anthony dollars, an aardvark T-shirt and an aardvark calendar that begins in March.

Jacqueline Tencza of West Paterson, N.J. won the title Saturday in the second annual contest at the Philadelphia Zoo—part of the annual celebration of National Aardvark Week.

"We felt the aardvark has been overlooked," said Robert Bogart, president of the American Association of Aardvark Aficionados. "There's a Ground Hog Day and a National Pig Week."

The contest included an aardvark-calling segment. And Miss Tencza read her essay, "How the Aardvark Got Its Nose."

Man is arrested, turns up with a pet iguana

BOSTON — Guards at the Suffolk County Jail have come across an odd variety of personal effects during the 128 years the facility has been operating. But Harold McKeehan's iguana was a new one.

McKeehan had the iguana, known as "Mento," when he was arrested on charges of breaking and entering Friday night. The Somerville man was booked, fingerprinted and photographed by officers before they noticed the two-foot-long lizard.

The iguana turned up during the standard strip search.

"It was stuffed in his pocket," said sheriff's department spokesman Gregg Wilson. "The amazing thing was he went through a couple of steps, from arrest to booking, without anyone knowing it was there."

Wilson said McKeehan did not explain why he was carrying the iguana.

Teacher to collect new grading ideas

by Lola Burnham

An Eastern English teacher is in Washington, D.C. this week attending a college composition and communication seminar, James Quivey, English department chairman, said Thursday.

Dianna Vitanza will return from the trip Monday, Quivey said. The university is paying for the trip.

Quivey said the conference is "the big conference" for English instructors. Vitanza is there to learn new techniques in grading, he added. She will then report to other English faculty members about the grading system.

She will also be collecting ideas for the Council on Academic Affairs' proposed English graduation examination, Quivey said. Students would have to pass the written examination as a requirement for graduation if the proposed test is approved.

"If the exam is implemented, someone is going to have to be in charge of it," Quivey said. While Vitanza may not be picked to oversee the exam, she could advise whoever is, he added.

The CAA has asked the English department to make recommendations on the examination before it gives final approval and sends the proposal to President Daniel E. Marvin and the Board of Governors for approval.

Quivey said the department will report its recommendations at the CAA's regular meeting Thursday.

He said other schools in Illinois are either setting up exams or are requiring exams like the one proposed here.

"Western is a little bit farther along than we are. "Chicago State has had a writing proficiency exam for a few years," he said.

ID PROCEDURES CHANGED

New students must purchase an identification card with a photo for $2.00.

If a student loses her/her ID card, the loss should be reported immediately to the Assistant Dean, Student Personnel Services, Room 219, Old Main. He/she should wait at least 3 class days before getting a replacement made so that it is possible for someone finding the lost ID card to return it to the ID Office through the mail.

When a student comes in to get a lost ID replaced, he/she must show proper identification (driver's license or social security card) before an ID will be made. Paid fee cards will not be considered proper identification. The cost for replacing a lost ID is $2.00 and the paid fee card must be shown in order to validate the ID for the semester.

If an ID is mutilated or broken, or if the student has a name change or a social security number changed, the charge for replacement is $2.00. Students with mutilated broken IDs or name changes or social security changes, should NOT throw these IDs away. They should turn the IDs in at the ID office when they make their request for a new ID.

For the remainder of the student's enrollment, the card is validated each semester. This is done for full-time and part-time students with identification of a part-time student being placed on the ID. Example: full-time F-80, part-time P/F-80.

If the ID needs to be revalidated due to the stamp being rubbed off, the paid fee card must again be presented.

The ID card is non-transferrable. No student may use another student's ID card. ID cards are used when cashing checks, getting textbooks, checking out books from Booth Library, attending all student activities, and for the residence hall food services. IDs and paid fee cards should be carried at all times. Please DO NOT use your ID card for a key chain.

Birthdays will NOT be placed upon the ID cards.

Falsification of records can be grounds for dismissal from the University.

Three grapplers shoot for titles at national meet

by Dave Claypool

Three of Eastern's wrestlers will vie to conclude their season on an impressive note when they compete in the NCAA Division I national championships this weekend at Corvallis, Ore.

The field will consist of 399 wrestlers from Division I, II and III wrestling programs and also the top individual wrestlers from the NAIA schools.

The University of Iowa will be seeking its third straight Division I championship and is seeded No. 1, while intrastate rival Iowa State is seeded second.

Heavyweight Dave Klemm, 167-pounder Bob Stout and 190-pounder Geno Savegnago qualified from Eastern for the upper division competition when they each finished second in their respective weight classes at the Division II finals two weeks ago.

Klemm, who is making his third and final appearance at the Division I level, will try to avenge his somewhat surprising upset in the championship match of the Division II contest.

Grand Valley's Ron Essink pinned the three-time Division II All-American in the championship bout and Eastern coach Ron Clinton said he would not be surprised if the two met in the Division I championship.

"The two might just be the top two in the entire nation," the head coach said. "I think that Klemm should have another successful showing."

Klemm finished second in last year's Division I finals.

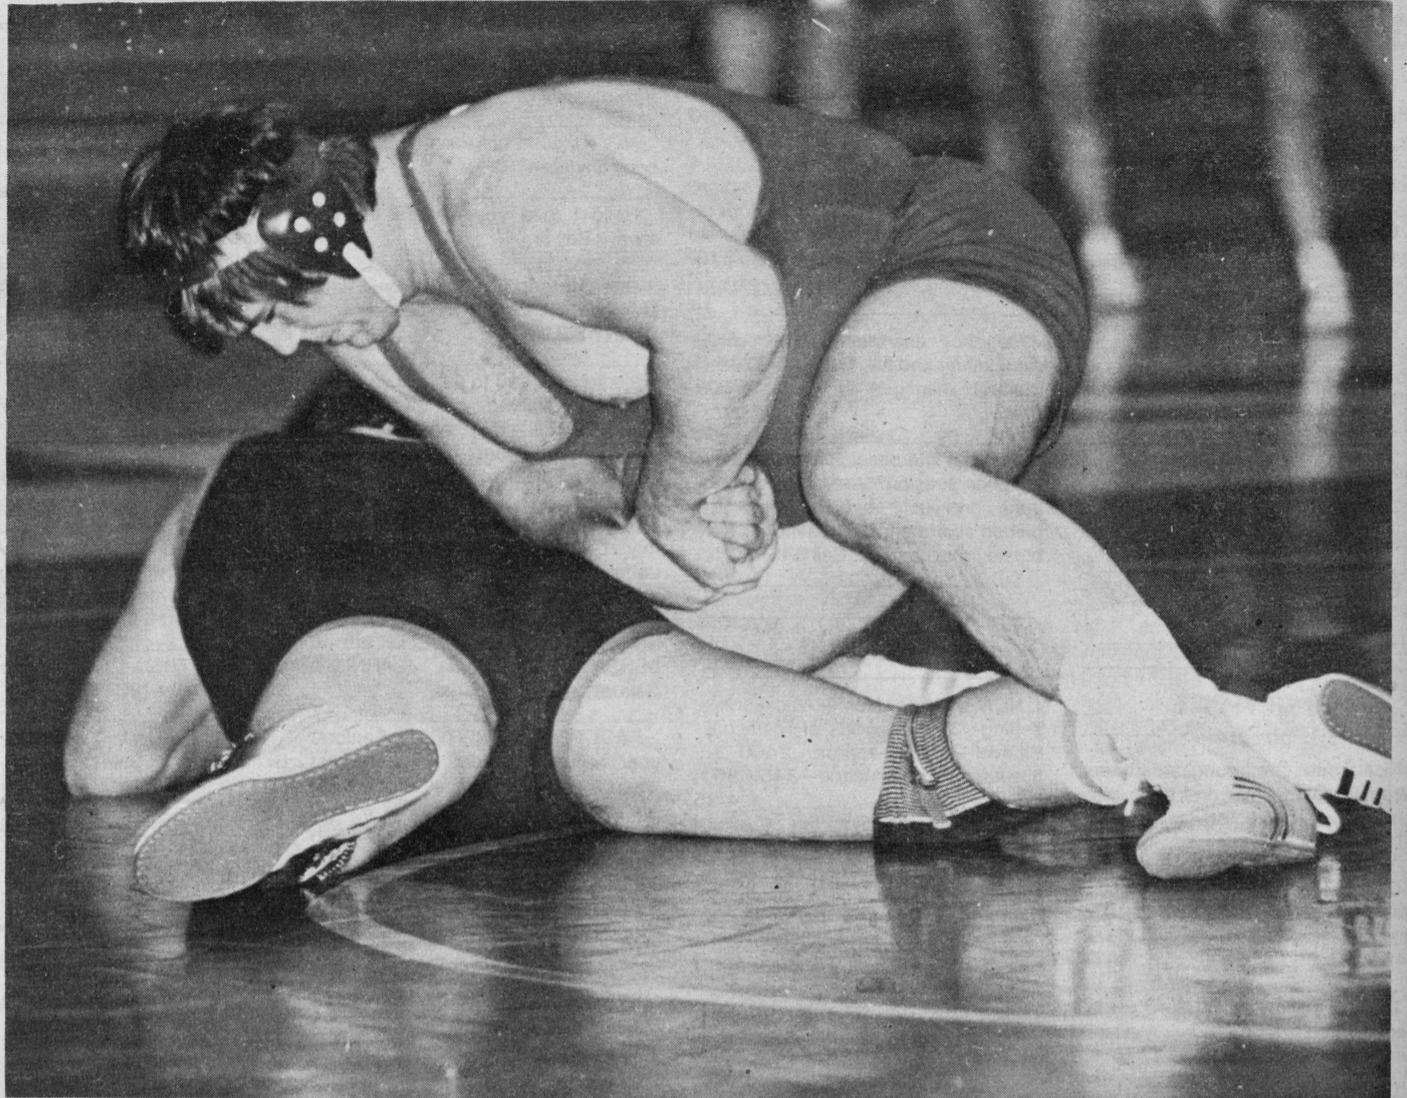

Another senior, Bob Stout, will be making his second appearance in a row at the Division I tourney.

The three-time Division II All-American finished his regular season with a 20-1 record and is 4-1 in post-season tournaments.

"I believe that Bob is capable of beating anyone," Clinton said. "Bob beat the kid from Iowa earlier this year in the Midlands, but a lot of things have changed since then."

The other veteran of Division I competition for the Panthers is Savegnago.

The two-time Division II All-American and Division I All-American of a year ago will attempt to better last year's eighth place showing.

"Geno should qualify again. I believe that he's capable of placing in the top four," Clinton said.

Clinton is optimistic of his squad's chances this weekend.

"We have three people who are capable of placing in the top eight," the coach said. "We have about the same quality that we had last year, except for the fact that we have three going this year instead of five."

Last season the Panthers took along Ralph McCausland and Bob Holland with this year's threesome. Savegnago, Klemm and Holland earned All-American status at the Division I level last year.

The grappler coach also said that although the competition is much better this year, he thinks his team will fare well.

"Our chances are much better than Northern Iowa's and I feel that we could finish as high as (California State) Bakersfield," Clinton said.

Although points are not tabulated for the Division II schools, Clinton said his squad finished one point better than Bakersfield last year.

"Our guys have a point to prove," Clinton said, referring to the Panthers' disappointing third place finish in the Division II finals. "They are really excited that they have another shot at wrestling. It's rare that a Division II wrestler gets a chance to compete at Division I."

Clinton said the goals of his three performers are to qualify Eastern in the top 10 teams and to have each man finish as an All-American.

Last year, the Panthers finished eighth.

"Both schools from Iowa and both Oklahoma teams (Oklahoma State and Oklahoma) will be fighting for the team championship. Lehigh and California-Poly will also be top contenders," Clinton said.

Six new recruits signed by Eastern's grid squad

Two honorable mention all-staters and five other high school football players have been added to the list of recruits who will be playing for Eastern next year, coach Darrell Mudra announced.

Mudra had previously released the names of 26 incoming freshman who signed on in February.

Heading the list of Eastern's most recent recruits are Alvin McMurray, a 6-foot-3, 260-pound offensive tackle from Chicago Dunbar and Scott Kobus, a 6-foot-3, 175-pound wide receiver from Chicago Elk Grove. Both received honorable mention on the Chicago Sun Times All-State team.

McMurray and another Panther signee, Unity of Tolono's 6-foot-3, 230-pound Len Seward will participate in the high school Shrine All-Star game this summer. Seward played linebacker and offensive guard for Unity of Tolono.

In addition to McMurray, two other Chicago Dunbar players announced they will come to Eastern. Charles Pearson, a 5-foot-10, 160-pound wide receiver and Robert Williams, a 6-foot, 185-pound defensive back are the other Panther recruits from Dunbar, which reached the first round of the Chicago Public League playoffs before losing.

Completing the list of Eastern's most recent recruits are Brian Kingston, a 6-foot-3, 238-pound defensive tackle from Belleville Althoff and Frank Walsh, a 6-foot-2, 220-pound offensive guard from Brother Rice.

Students, faculty invited to run

A five-mile road race for Eastern students and faculty members is scheduled for Sunday afternoon, Eastern Illinois Striders spokesman Tom Woodall said.

All students and faculty members are invited to participate in the race which begins at 3 p.m. at the base of Eads Hill, which is two miles west of Charleston.

Runners should meet at 2:30 p.m. at the south steps of Lantz Building and then walk, jog or ride to the starting line.

There will be no entry fee or awards at the informal competition, but times will be given at each mile mark.

Eastern places two in NCAA Hall of Fame

Former Eastern basketball coach William Healy and swimming standout Dan Furlan have been elected to the NCAA Hall of Fame.

Healy, who compiled a 136-41 record from 1946-53 for Eastern, was honored at a special luncheon in Kansas City's Continental Hotel Thursday.

Furlan was a three-time All-American swimmer and a national record holder in the late 1960s.
