Nader set to speak at Eastern

by Marcel Bright

Consumer advocate Ralph Nader will discuss product safety and corporate responsibility at 8 p.m. Monday in the Union addition Grand Ballroom.

University Board lecture coordinator Kim McDevitt said Nader has been the United States' leading consumer advocate since the late 1960s.

"He takes on the large corporations for the consumer," she said. "He's not afraid. He's not in it for himself, but for the consumer."

McDevitt said Nader has challenged organizations ranging from General Motors to the Veteran's Administration.

Nader's rise to prominence began with the 1966 publication of "Unsafe at any Speed"—his indictment of General Motors Corvair automobile, she said.

The next year he was selected by several organizations as one of the ten outstanding young men in America, she added.

Currently he is advocating the mandatory use of air bags in automobiles to increase the survival rate of passengers in auto accidents.

"As far as I know this is the only appearance he (Nader) will make in this area," she said.

Admission to the lecture is $1 for students and $1.50 for the general public.

Courses revised by educators

by Lola Burnham

The School of Education has made revisions to its curriculum to bring it into compliance with a bill passed last year by the Illinois legislature.

The bill, passed Oct. 30, 1979, requires anyone receiving a teaching certificate after Sept. 1, 1981, to have completed course work in special education.

Frank Lutz, dean of the School of Education, said Wednesday that the school has made revisions, but those revisions must be judged by the Illinois Board of Education before he can say for sure if they are "up to HB 150 specifications."

Students who are majoring in education "have to have a course with special education units in it or they have to have a specific course on special ed.," Lutz said. The School of Education has added one course, "Special Education 3500," to its curriculum, he added.

Students who are not majoring in special education may take this course to satisfy the bill's specifications if one of their other courses does not include units on special education. "That is an opportunity for individuals to meet the 150 requirement," he said.

Lutz said the School of Education is trying to make certain that all students have courses available to satisfy the requirement. He noted that since every teacher candidate is not seeking a degree from the School of Education, the school is working with other colleges and departments to see that their education courses satisfy the requirement.

"It's not quite an integrated program," he said, "particularly in areas where the teacher education is not part of the school—where students might not have courses available (to fulfill the requirement.)"

Some schools outside the School of Education which have education courses include home economics, business, fine arts and physical education.

Lutz said he is "working with them closely" to develop special education programs for the other schools to infuse into their curriculum.

"We are applying for a federal grant to help other departments develop courses," he said. The grant could be used to develop courses in any department with teacher education courses.

"We will finally be required to judge if the program in another college—hopefully they're working with us—is in compliance," he said.

Lutz does not expect any problems next fall when the bill takes effect, but said, "I suspect that at the end there will be a few people who don't comply because they didn't get the word."

"Advisers and candidates need to be aware of the bill," he said. If students have questions about the requirements, they should contact their advisers first, not his office, he added. The advisers can then contact Lutz, Timothy Crowner of the special education department or George Schlinsog of the School of Education if they have any questions.

Gen ed change reaction delayed

by Melinda DeVries

Until the newly approved general education requirements are finally implemented, members of the Council on Academic Affairs said they cannot react to the new additions.

Carol Elder, of the English department, said the impression she received from people is that they are not sure as to how to react to the new additions until they find out how they are going to be implemented.

"I am still looking at bits and pieces, and until I can see how it all fits together I am not sure how I feel either," Elder said.

"My firm feeling is until we get the implementation down, I can't have a reaction," Donald Rogers, of the secondary education department, said Friday.

Eastern President Daniel E. Marvin recently approved changes to the general education requirements after more than 18 months of planning by the CAA.

The CAA presented its version of the general education requirements to Marvin in April for his action.

The package approved by Marvin includes the elimination of the two-hour requirement in health, the addition of three semester hours of mathematics as well as the requirement of at least one laboratory science course, the two semester hours of senior seminars as capstone courses and the writing English proficiency exam.

The requirements would affect incoming 1981 freshmen. Elder said because Marvin approved certain areas in a form different from that of the CAA's, discussion will have to be held between the president and the CAA as to how to carry out those areas.

Elder said she thought the CAA would begin discussion on how to implement the changes at its meeting Sept. 25.

Although Martin Miess, of the foreign language department, said he was not sure when discussion of the implementation would begin, he said, "the sooner the better."

Rogers said he feels the entire implementation will be completed by the end of the semester.

Robert Hennings, of the history department, said the general education additions will appear in the new 1981 catalog although complete planning may not be finished.

Steven Whitley, of the zoology department, said the majority of the planning will be done in the vice president for academic affairs office.

Those members of the council who did have an opinion about the general education requirements said they were generally pleased with what Marvin approved.

Miess said that in general he is pleased with what Marvin approved, although he would have liked to have seen the foreign language requirement also approved.

The addition of a foreign language requirement was one of the areas of the CAA's original general education package that Marvin did not approve.

The recommendation would have required a bachelor of arts candidate to show competency in a foreign language or take one year in foreign language courses.

Hennings said he would like to see a language requirement and that it should be encouraged.

"If other schools like us would agree that a language requirement is important, it might become a reality in the near future," Hennings said.

Hennings said the University of Illinois has recently made foreign language a requirement along with other institutions in California and Texas.

One of the concerns Marvin had with the requirement was its possible negative effect on the number of BA candidates who would opt for a BS to avoid the requirement.

"The distinction of what the difference between what a BA and a BS is fuzzy. An attempt was made to clear up that fuzziness, but Marvin didn't like it. Just because he didn't like it this time doesn't mean he won't like it later," he said.

Carter; Reagan running even in poll

WASHINGTON—President Carter and Ronald Reagan are running even in their race for the presidency but Carter's strength is limited to the South, according to a new public opinion poll by The Washington Post.

Carter and the Republican presidential nominee each drew 37 percent support in the Post survey published Sunday. Independent candidate John Anderson was favored by 13 percent of the 1,755 registered voters polled. The remaining 13 percent had no preference.

Mystery leaper parachutes off tower

NEW YORK—He looked like any other backpacking tourist atop Manhattan's World Trade Center - then suddenly he jumped the electrified fence ringing the observation deck, stripped off his rubber gloves and dove off the side of the world's second tallest building.

The Mystery Leaper's parachute unfurled and he floated 1,350 feet and 110 stories down to West Street, where he calmly unstrapped his chute, rolled it into a neat bundle and drove away in a waiting car, leaving officials scratching their heads Saturday afternoon.

Authorities said they were trying to establish the jumper's identity and added that he could be charged with trespass and reckless endangerment

No price increase of oil predicted

VIENNA, Austria—The world's major oil producers predicted Sunday there will be no price increase until reduced production eliminates the worldwide oversupply of oil, probably sometime next year.

World demand for oil dropped sharply following price increases amounting to 132 percent in 1979 and the first half of 1980. The cartel set the current target price of $32 a barrel at their last meeting in Algeria in June.

Higher prices, conservation efforts and slower economic growth combined to drive down oil imports in the United States by 37 percent last month compared to August 1979, and world inventories are estimated at more than 100 days of supplies.

Selective Service stands firm despite critic

by Vicki Shaw

The Selective Service department is "positive" its draft figures are correct, and they welcome any "reputable opposition," spokesman Joan Lamb said Tuesday.

This comment came following the announcement by Rev. Barry Lynn, chairman of the Committee Against Registration and Draft, requesting an independent audit of federal registration forms.

The Selective Service recently released the national results, reporting that 93 percent (3,593,187 out of 3,880,000) of those men required to register did so, as of the final official registration day, Aug. 22. Local figures have not been released.

Lynn said he requested the audit because he believes the Selective Service is knowingly counting cards with fictitious names and using them in the final count.

He said he has proof that people are sending cards in using such names as "Mickey Mouse from Cheesetown, USA," and the Selective Service is including these among the legitimate cards.

Lamb, public affairs officer for Selective Services, said she has heard that Lynn said he has affidavits proving the results of the Selective Service wrong.

"But it's funny because he won't show them to anyone," she said.

"We know our facts are correct and our director says he welcomes any reputable opposition to call for an audit since all information except the names and birthdates on the forms is confidential," Lamb said.

Brayton Harris, deputy director of Selective Services, and Lynn both say the appropriate agency to do the auditing would be the Congress's General Accounting Office, an agency Lynn terms as "a watchdog agency which examines the questions on federal programs."

Lynn said for him to get permission for the audit he would have to have approximately 10 members of Congress support him and so far he "does not have that much backing."

"My goal in life is to end registration. It's a meaningless and costly exercise," Lynn said.

"We spend all this money and it does nothing to help the country strengthen its military defense," he said.

Lynn said he feels Carter has more in mind than just registration. "I think it is the first step to military conscription," he said.

Lynn said although the Selective Service called the registration turnout a success, he thought it was a failure. "How can it be a success when at least 270,000 men did not comply with the rules?" he said.

The course will explore basic signs representing colors, verbs, feelings, environmental objects and animals.

Lamb said registration is still underway as forms are trickling in all the time.

Persons who have not registered yet can do so until approximately 110 days after the final official registration day without penalty, she said.

"This will allow us around 90 days to send out letters of acknowledgment, 10 days for those to be returned and 10 days for cross-reference," she said.

"For those who have not yet registered, they better get themselves to their post office and do so. After we track down the list of those who did not register, we will refer their names to the Justice Department," she said.

Sport budget banks on pledges

Eastern's athletic budget for fiscal 1980-81 is better planned than past budgets, but more conservative budgeting should be employed in the future to avoid the deficit spending that has plagued the department in the past.

Conservatism is necessary because a major portion of this year's budget is based on the collection of an unprecedented percentage of Panther Club pledges, which history tells us is unrealistic.

Two years ago, $90,000 in pledges were received by the Panther Club, but only $60,000 was collected. Last year, only $72,500 dollars were collected out of $110,000 in pledges.

Last spring, Athletic Director R.C. Johnson said his department's $100,000 deficit may have been caused in part by these collection figures, even though a typical department should be able to expect to collect between 85 and 92 percent of its pledges.

Even so, this year the athletic department is projecting an income of $100,000 from the Panther Club out of $113,000 in pledges.

Granted, Johnson has taken a positive measure to insure that at least $100,000 in pledges will be collected. He has helped form a Panther Club board of directors, which has "worked hard to secure solid pledges," Johnson said.

However, just what constitutes a solid pledge is more subjective judgment than anything else, which indicates to us that budgeting on the basis of an unprecedented amount of collected pledges is risky at best.

Consequently, we recommend the athletic department to pay more attention to past Panther Club pledge collection figures and budget accordingly.

This may involve lengthening Johnson's five-year deficit reduction plan, cutting some minor sports budgets, or even eliminating some minor sports entirely. None of these measures are pleasant. But they are more desirable than the less-than-conservative budgeting that contributed to the athletic department's past financial difficulties.

Soft drink price hikes vex us again

(Editor's Note: The hike in vending machine prices has affected college campus across the country, including the University of Oklahoma)

By Leslie Kahn

It has been rather hot lately; just the type of weather conducive to buying soda out of a vending machine. But just as most of us attempt to deposit our thirty-five or forty-cents, we are confronted not only with a price change, but in some machines, even a change in product.

It is bad enough the machine always eats my last two quarters, the candy bar I'm craving is sold out, when I'm dying of thirst the water has been turned off, and every machine within a walking distance is out of order. Now we are being asked to pay forty-five cents for a Coke and forty cents for a Shasta—a product that looks so familiar because you have seen it on Safeway shelves for twenty-four cents.

Curious as to where my money goes after being eaten by the machine, I called the vending office. The university claims the name brands keep raising their prices (yes, inflation), and stocking Shasta will save money. According to an employee of the vending office, Shasta is only found in university-owned machines and there is no profit being turned in right now.

How does Safeway do it? I questioned more, only to find a third voice on the line cutting off any further discussion. They are rather touchy in that office.

I realize the university has to make some money to operate in the black, but remember when prices were upped a few semesters ago? Everyone stopped buying and the prices decreased.

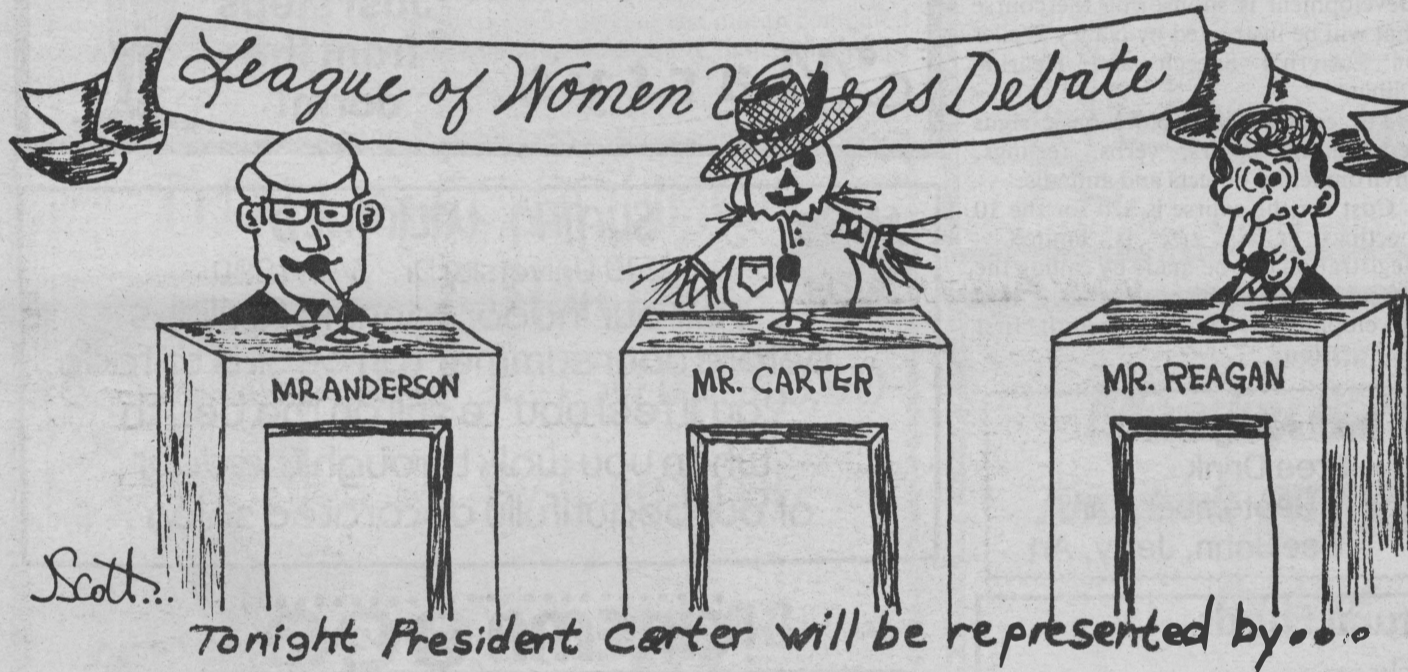

Rumor has it that psychology graduate students wanted to rent and stock their own machine but were told by Coca-Cola the university has a monopoly on it. They thought of just using a large refrigerator but there was too much thievery. You would think they could play on each other's guilt complexes to eliminate stealing. Consideration is being given to buying a used machine in order to stock the popular department choices at a lower price.

Actually, vending machines are a great innovation and I applaud the inventor. It is just the people who own, stock and repair the little devils who's necks I'd like to ring.

It is amazing that these man-made creations can turn a well-educated, calm and collective person into a frustrated, sniveling idiot. Full-fledged professors have been observed kicking poor machines that just don't know any better (not that they are undeserving).

See ya around the water fountain!

The News lacks facts on faculty apathy

(Editor's Note: Carol Elder is an Eastern English professor, who is currently AFT Chapter president at Eastern.)

A recent editorial in The Daily Eastern News, "Faculty turnout shows apathy," presents a picture of the Eastern faculty and the AFT union which is sufficiently misleading to call for some sort of reply. The editorial report that "only 50 of the 449 faculty members eligible voted at last Thursday's meeting" to ratify the new faculty contract for 1980, and on this basis makes the rather strange claim that the faculty "is apathetic" in regard to its own salary. Apparently this is meant to imply that the faculty is apathetic about things-in-general as well.

But what is not said is that the balloting continued on the following day, Friday, so that the final turnout amounted to 131—not 50—faculty members.

Granted, the correct figure is still rather low. Yet we strongly suspect that real reason for light turnout was precisely that Eastern faculty have learned to trust in the energy and competence of the AFT, and that many teachers thus regarded the ratification of an AFT-negotiated contract as virtually a matter of course. Light turnouts are typical in non-controversial elections, and this was one.

It is worth mentioning, too, that the faculty had a prior opportunity to influence the actual shaping of the contract since their opinions were solicited via AFT questionnaires long before contract talks ever began.

In this sense, many teachers who missed the Thursday-Friday balloting had no doubt "voted" already by returning their questionnaires, an action in some ways more significant than adding one's "yea" or "nay" to a tally whose final result appears already assured.

Viewpoint: Carol Elder

This is not to say that a light turnout in itself is a good thing, but in these circumstances it is at least understandable.

The editorial is likewise inaccurate in stating that the election provided an opportunity for teachers opposed to the current veto—override drive supposing there were any—to express their opposition by voting "no." The override drive is essentially a separate issue.

But what is most disturbing in the editorial is the assertion that "faculty members have shown little interest toward joining the teacher's union on campus,"—a statement that is demonstrably false.

At present AFT membership is 50 percent campus-wide, reaches as high as 90 percent in some departments and has been growing steadily since the beginning of fall semester.

Judging by the editorial, it seems likely that many people do not realize that Eastern is, in fact, a union campus. In contract negotiations and grievance procedures the AFT represents all bargaining unit faculty—whether they are union members or not. All bargaining unit faculty share in the numerous benefits and protections which the union has won since it began representing the BOG faculty in 1977.

But to suggest that the union attracts "little interest" on this campus is absurd. The AFT is directly and concretely involved in the lives of every person who teaches at Eastern and is thus a matter of vital interest to everyone.

Veep candidate expresses goals

by Stacy Wells

Robert Smith, the second candidate interviewed for the position of vice president for academic affairs, said if appointed to the position his goal would be to get faculty to work directly with students.

"If I were appointed to the post my main goal would be to structure things in a way so that faculty can work directly with the students," Smith said.

An informal meeting with Smith and interested campus individuals was held at 9:30 a.m. Friday in the Union.

Smith, who has been the dean of the College of Science, Mathematics, and Engineering at the University of Nevada-Las Vegas for 13 years and is a trained chemist, said because he has spent a lot of time in administration he qualified for the position.

Smith's teaching and administrative career began as assistant chemistry professor, after which he became a professor and chemistry department chairman and lastly the dean of the College of Science, Mathematics, and Engineering.

Although Smith is from out of state, he said he was attracted to the Illinois school because of Eastern's size as a traditional undergraduate campus.

He said if a school is too big the administration "kind of loses touch with its students."

Because Friday was his first visit to Eastern, Smith said he does not know too much about Eastern's programs — only what he has read in the catalog.

However, Smith was briefed Friday by faculty present on Eastern's general education requirements.

He said he is in favor of foreign language as a requirement because he said he feels it is important to know a foreign language if a student goes to another country.

Smith said because foreign language is no longer required at Eastern, Eastern "has lost it."

Eastern President Daniel E. Marvin recently approved additions to the general education requirements and although a foreign language requirement was included in the preliminary package, Marvin did not approve it in his final recommendations to the Council on Academic Affairs.

Smith said if appointed to the vice president position he would also like to improve faculty development.

"I would like to provide more opportunities for teachers to get away and go to places and explore," Smith said. "I would encourage that a teacher take other courses other than those in his own position."

Smith commented on Eastern's problem of hiring minority faculty and administrators when he said, "In general the problem will be solved in the generation to come, but we should always be looking for the best person possible."

He said, if hired, he will get the hiring process out in the open and as vice president for academic affairs, will work with faculty to influence the departments to recruit minorities.

"Having been in an institution for twenty years as department chairman, the mistakes I made in hiring are legendary," Smith said.

The next candidate to be interviewed for the open position will be Margaret Soderberg, Eastern's assistant vice president for academic affairs.

Soderberg will be interviewed on Tuesday.

The remaining candidates include Stanley Rives, associate provost and dean of instruction at Illinois State University, and Donald Lauda, dean of the School of Technology at Eastern.

CAA tables recital attendance requirement

by Laura Rzepka

The Council on Academic Affairs tabled an "important and exceptional" request from the music department proposing the addition of a recital attendance requirement for music majors Thursday.

Rhoderick Key, of the music department, presented the proposal to the council because "music students initiated this and it was approved by the faculty."

"We weren't having enough students attending the recitals. In the 60s we did this but the recital attendance requirement was never in the catalog," Key said.

The recital attendance requirement would require that music majors attend 30 music events per semester for five semesters. Junior transfer students would be required to attend 30 music events per semester for two semesters.

The music department will produce 140 music events throughout the year, Key said.

As proposed, music 1103 "Recital" would be a pass-fail course with no credit obtained.

Council member Martin Miess of the foreign language department said, "I think the students should get some credit."

However, council member Steve Whitley said of the attendance situation, "I appreciate the problem but this isn't the way to get at it."

The course "doesn't have to have grading," Whitley said. He suggested that the proposal be placed in the catalog as a graduation requirement for music majors.

After consensus with Whitley's suggestion, the CAA tabled the proposal for further discussion. Key said he would inform the music department of the council's advice.

In other business, the CAA approved a new history course 3065 "History of the American South."

The course is actually a combination of two courses, 3050 "The Old South" and 3060 "The New South." The new course will be offered in the spring.

Margaret Soderberg, assistant vice president for academic affairs, also addressed council member Don Roger's question concerning prerequisites in the School of Business.

Rogers, of the secondary education and foundations department asked, "Why are we getting flak?"

There has been some confusion recently concerning prerequisite requirements and waivers.

Soderberg said the School of Business has been re-examining the prerequisites. Soderberg currently has the "final batch" of requests for prerequisite changes.

"It's a rationalizing program.

They're (the School of Business) getting rid of prerequisite requirements that are not desirable," she said.

Soderberg said she wants to be assured that "students will not pay an unwarranted penalty. My major concern is, are any students going to be damaged by the history of the past."

Southern staves off Panther rally

by Dave Claypool

Following a wild display of offensive power, Eastern found itself two points short in its 37-35 loss to Southern Illinois University Saturday at Carbondale.

The setback, which ended the Eastern reign over non-conference opponents at 13 straight victories, set the Panthers' record at 1-1, while the Salukis raised their ledger to 1-1.

The Panthers, who battled back from a 21-0 first-quarter deficit, pulled to within six points with 13:13 left in the game on an 80-yard kick-off return by Kevin Staple.

Southern quarterback Gerald Carr and running back Walter Poole accounted for the early lead, with Carr scoring on a 1-yard run and Poole on runs of three and 23 yards.

But the Salukis, through the blessing of a misplayed punt by the Panthers, ended their scoring and iced the game when Paul Molla punched through a 44-yard field goal with 6:46 remaining, making score 37-28. The field goal was Molla's third of the contest.

The misplayed punt, which referees said hit an Eastern player before being recovered by Southern, resulted in Molla's final goal and Panther Defensive Coordinator Chuck Dickerson was unhappy with the call.

"It really killed the momentum we had built," Dickerson said. "I really don't know who they (the officials) think it hit, but it looked to me as if it hit a guy in red (Southern's jersey color). One official called it one way and another the other. They all just gutted out on the call."

But Saluki head coach Rey Dempsey saw it another way.

"I saw the ball hit their player's leg. I was shocked they didn't call it right away," Dempsey said. "I'm just glad someone had the guts to call it."

Despite the Panthers' misfortune with the outcome of the disputed call, their own mistakes took their toll.

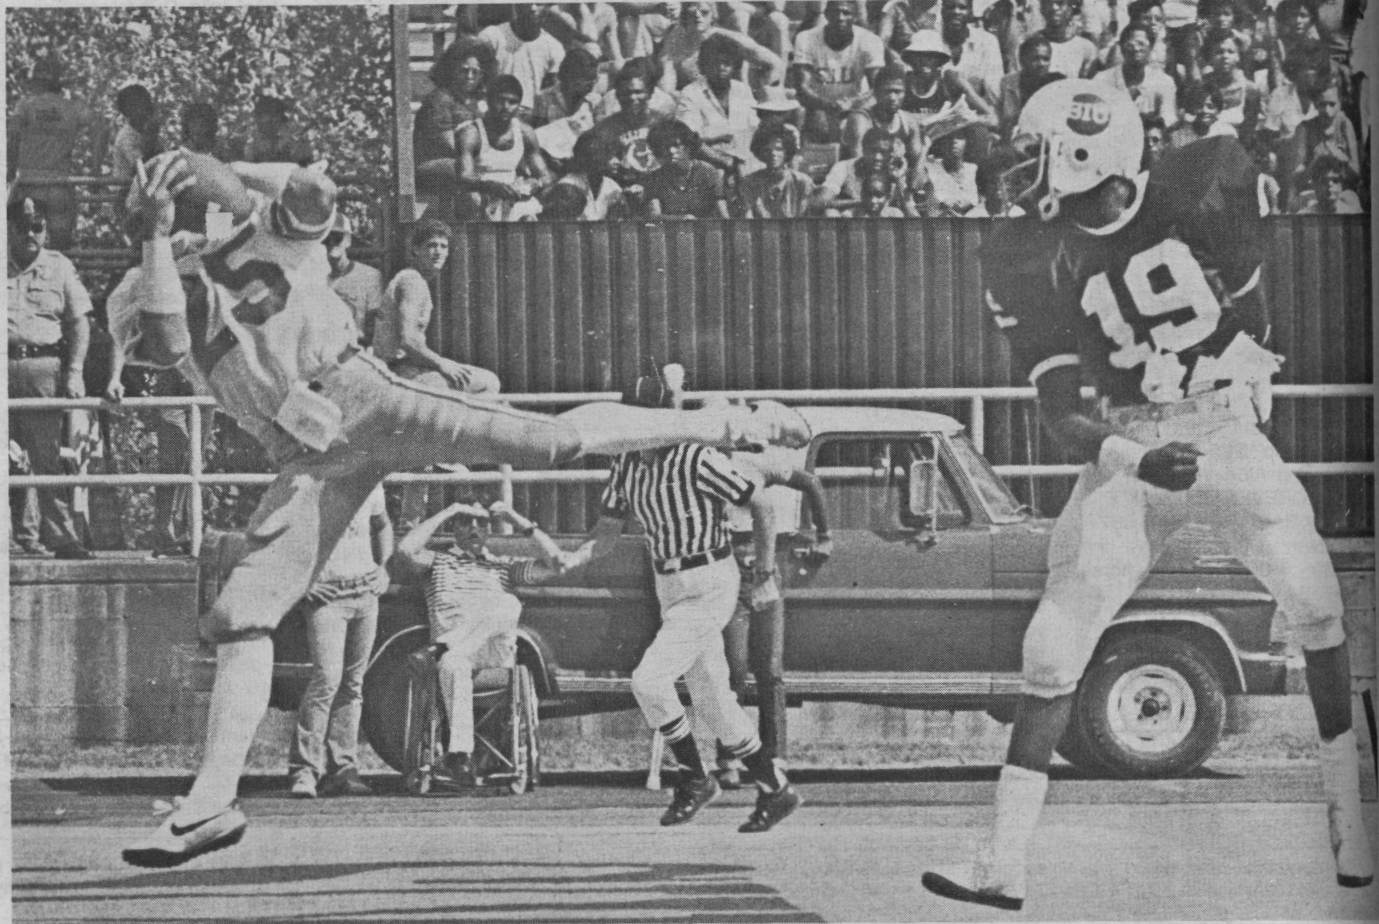

A total of nine offside penalties were called on the Panther defensive front line, with several of them occurring at crucial times.

"They (the officials) said that we lined up that way nine times and not once did they tell us who it was so I could try to correct it. But nevertheless, we dug ourselves into a huge hole early in the game," Dickerson said.

One of the offside calls came on a play in which the Panthers recovered a Saluki fumble inside the Eastern 10-yard line and thus the ball was given back to Southern.

"The offside calls were the difference in the game," Panther defensive tackle Charlie Krutsinger said.

But shining through the cloud of mental mistakes and controversial calls was one bright spot for Eastern—its passing attack.

Reserve quarterback Jeff Christensen, using a newly introduced shot gun offense, threw for 247 yards and at the receiving end of five of his completions was flanker Scott McGhee.

The senior hauled in three touchdown passes, raising his season total to five and accounted for Eastern's first three scores on TD strikes of 18, 25 and 15 yards.

Although McGhee faced a young Saluki defensive backfield, he offered praise for his counterparts.

"They are great athletes. Their inexperience showed at times, but overall they did a pretty decent job," McGhee said. "The thing is, when you face inexperienced (NCAA) Division II guys it shows a lot, but at the Division I level, they're still tough."

Aside from McGhee, Christensen also used Rob Mehalic effectively, hitting the tight end for six completions and 81 yards.

While the "Eastern Airlines" continued its flights into the end zone, the Panther "horror four" and company had its troubles defensively.

While the Salukis completed only three of eight passes for 13 yards, they also rolled up 277 yards on the ground, so Dickerson understandably expressed dissatisfaction with his defenses' early performance.

"In the first quarter I was disappointed with our linebackers. They weren't tackling well and Southern was getting outside on us a lot," Dickerson said. "But once we eliminated our mental mistakes we played pretty well."

UMSL wins battle of Midwest powers

by Holly Headland

The top two teams in the Midwest met Saturday and the underdog came out on top when the University of Missouri-St. Louis Rivermen beat Eastern's Panthers 2-1.

Although the Panthers led the match at Lakeside Field 1-0 at the half, they went on to lose due to a lack of offense and momentum in the second half, Eastern soccer coach Schellas Hyndman said.

"I am really disappointed in their play," Hyndman said. "We had a good first half, but they scored so quickly in the second half that we lost our lead and our momentum and could not regain it."

The loss at the hands of the Rivermen dropped the Panthers' record to 1-1 in their division and occurred despite repeated scoring attempts by the Panthers.

Silvano Corazza scored the booters' only goal 34 minutes into the first half off an assist from striker Damien Kelly.

UMSL's two goals, scored at 3:39 and 36:28 of the second half, were both unassisted. The first goal was scored by Pat McVey and the second by All-American Dan Muesenfechter.

Although the Panthers met with the same negative results when they played the Rivermen early last season, Hyndman is concerned with his booters' loss because it occurred on Eastern's home field instead of at UMSL.

"We didn't do the basics," Hyndman said about his team's second-half play. "We didn't mark off players and the ball was up in the air a lot. This is really going to be a long season unless we start playing heads-up ball."

Along with losing the game, the Panthers were given a scare when goalie Eric Hartman was downed on a play and had to be helped from the field.

"He has a sore shoulder, nothing else," Hyndman said about the freshman, who was replaced in the closing minutes of the game by Mike Howard.

Hyndman may have been disappointed in his booters performance Saturday, but he is still confident in their talent as a team.

"We are strong this year. We have a lot of depth and a lot of talent on the bench this year," Hyndman said.

The booters next contest will be in the EIU Classic Friday at Lakeside Field.
