Talks focus on University College

By MATT ADRIAN
Staff Writer

The Student Senate Wednesday night discussed the proposed University College. But did not take an official stance on the subject.

Academic Affairs Chair Dayna Church gave the senate information about the University College.

She also discussed the taskforce that the Faculty Senate established to find out what effects the University College would have on the Counseling Center. The taskforce has recommended that Academic Records and Registration be joined under the Office of Academic Affairs.

Church said that by having these offices merge course scheduling problems for students would be reduced. Students and advisers would be better informed of students academic standings, Church said.

"I'm not trying to get (the senate) to vote one way or the other," said Church.

"I just wanted to inform them so they are accessible to their constituents."

Student Senate member Matt Thrun said the students he had talked to had questioned how the University College would be funded. The Distinguished Eastern alumna to speak at reading conference

Stanek will hold book signing of latest publication

By THERESA GAVLIN
Activities editor

A distinguished alumna will be the keynote speaker at the 32nd annual East Central EIU Reading Conference Friday.

Lou Stanek, a professor at The New School For Social Research in Greenwich, N.Y., will present her speech "Thinking like a Reader/Writer" at 8:45 a.m. Friday in the Grand Ballroom of the Martin Luther King Jr. University Union.

The conference begins at 8 a.m.

Stanek, who received an Outstanding Alumni Award from Eastern in 1981, writes novels, teaches writing skills and publishes children's novels, said Gail Lockart, co-chair of the conference.

Stanek will autograph copies of her latest publication following her keynote address.

Publishing companies and local authors also will be selling their books from 8 a.m. to 12:30 p.m.

Twenty-five small group sessions will be held at 10:40 a.m. and 11:40 a.m. to inform participants about the latest technologies and the current trends in education, Lockart said.

The EIU Midwest Funk Factory Drumline, directed by Peter Hussey, will perform at 8:45 a.m. in the Grand Ballroom.

"It's to start the general session," Lockart said. "We wanted some of Eastern's talent to be represented at the conference."

Conference registration begins at 8 a.m. Friday in front of the Union Bookstore.

The conference is open to the public, and admission charges are $2 for students, $4 for members of the East Central EIU Reading Council and $5 for the public.

New groups recognized by senate

By MINDY BUYCK
Student government editor

The Student Senate Wednesday night approved three of the four proposed recognized student organizations that were tabled at the Sept. 25 meeting.

The proposal to recognize the organizations was tabled last week because the senate had questions about the groups' constitutions and wanted representatives from each organization to answer its questions.

Representatives from "The Ancient Order of Formorians," the Archery Club and the Student Athletic Advisory Board fielded senate questions Wednesday and were approved as RSOs.

Representatives from the Student Education Association had scheduling conflicts and could not make the meeting. The senate tabled its vote about this organization until next week's meeting.

Senate member Jackie McGrath told the senate an easy way to stay consistent was to require representatives from organizations to answer questions before being approved as an RSO.

Zielinski and other student senators said they will meet with members of the organization before the senate meets next week.

The Student Senate also approved the In-line Skating Club as a new RSO.

Also at Wednesday's meeting, the senate discussed bringing tailgating parties back to Eastern. Senate members Kevin Piket and Curt Knox told the senate the tailgate parties would be held in a fenced-off area and only people 21 years or older would be allowed in the area.

According to the policy, student marshals would have to be appointed, and security would check identification. Students would have to bring their own food and beer to the events.

Knox told the senate that he wants to see tailgate

Dole aims campaign at women

WHEATON (AP) — Bob Dole lightened his tone on Wednesday in an appeal to women voters, one day after criticizing President Clinton with some of the harshest talk of the campaign. “I never thought I was mean,” he said.

Dole, sitting with more than 200 women here in this strongly Republican Chicago suburb, demurred when offered the chance to flay his opponent again.

“You’re such a nice guy, you walk around with the kid gloves,” Carol Higgins said to Dole. “You’ve got Clinton to deal with, slick Willie. When are you going to put the boxing gloves on and give him what he deserves?”

Once the approving applause died down, the Republican nominee chuckled, saying he had “had a lot of people tell me that the last few days.” Taking a more serious tone, Dole said,

“It’s a very fine line because there’s a myth out there that Bob Dole is mean. I never thought I was mean. The people that work in the Capitol voted me the nicest senator two times in a row.”

But, looking ahead to next week’s final presidential debate in San Diego, Dole added, “We may have a few surprises.” With just late-afternoon campaign stops, Dole kept somewhat of a low profile Wednesday as his running mate, Jack Kemp, prepared to take center stage in a debate with Vice President Al Gore in Florida.

Dole planned to watch the debate in the home of a Naperville, Ill. family.

Before that, at a GOP rally in Aurora, Ill., Dole said Kemp, a former professional quarterback, had given him some advice about polls showing the campaign trailing by double digits.

“Don’t watch the scoreboard,” Dole said. “We’re going to stay on our message. We’re out here campaigning for a better America.” In speeches and interviews Tuesday during the second day of a New Jersey bus tour, Dole repeatedly questioned Clinton’s integrity in tones considerably harsher than previously in the campaign. At one point, he bluntly dismissed the president, saying “His word is no good.”

In another instance, when one man in Lyndhurst, N.J., shouted to Dole, “Please get Bozo out of the White House,” the candidate called back. “Bozo’s on his way out.”

On Wednesday, Dole down played the name-calling incident, telling reporters, “I didn’t call him that. I just repeated what someone on the rope said. I don’t do things like that.”

Dole had also promised to hit Clinton harder in the San Diego debate for his administration’s ethical controversies, including Whitewater and the White House’s acquisition of FBI files on prominent Republicans.

students also said a unified Academic Affairs office was not needed, he said

Student Senator Keith Cosentino said he was concerned about the space that the consolidated departments might occupy.

“I think the senate is in a position to uncover the opinions of its constituents and I would hope we can form a representative opinion on that,” Student Senator Jackie McGrath said.

Student Body president Jason Anselment said that the student senate should focus on how the University College would effect the student.

Economic policy key in VP debate

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (AP) — Vice President Al Gore and Jack Kemp debated politely hut pointedly Wednesday night, agreeing to leave character issues aside but differing sharply over economic policy and President Clinton’s leadership abroad.

“This economy is overtaxed, over-regulated,” Kemp said in making the case for GOP presidential nominee Bob Dole’s plan to cut taxes 15 percent across the board. Kemp said the economy was growing a feeble 2.5 percent a year under Clinton. “Bob Dole and I believe we can do a lot better.” Gore, in turn, said repeatedly that Dole and Kemp were offering a “risky $550 billion tax scheme” that would “blow a hole in the deficit and cause much deeper cuts in Medicare, Medicaid, education and the environment.”

Asked if Dole would seek to change laws that make abortion legal in the United States, Kemp did not give a direct answer.

He said “every human life is precious” and that “there should be all of the protection that we can give to an unborn human being” but he did not endorse any specific restrictions. “This country should not be torn asunder over this debate,” Kemp said.

Gore was more specific. He said Kemp had voted 47 out of 47 times while in Congress to support restrictions on abortion. And he noted that Dole’s Republican platform calls for a constitutional amendment outlawing abortion.

Given a chance to rebut, Kemp said a “constitutional amendment would not pass,” a concession that could anger some Christian conservatives supporting the Republican ticket. Kemp did forcefully criticize Clinton for vetoing legislation banning certain late-term abortions.

“It is disgraceful, the campaign being waged to frighten the American people.”

—Jack Kemp, Republican candidate for vice president

Many of the salvos between Kemp and Gore closely tracked the positions staked out by Clinton and Dole in their first debate Sunday night.

Kemp, for example, said Clinton and Gore were practicing “demagoguery” in trying to frighten older Americans by claiming that Dole’s budget plan would require devastating Medicare cuts.

“It is disgraceful, the campaign being waged to frighten the American people,” Kemp said.

But Gore did not budge. “The word scary has been used,” he said of the Republican position. He continued by promising, “We will save Medicare” in a second Clinton term.

For activists in both parties, there was an inescapable subplot to the vice presidential debate. Gore, 48, is all but certain to seek the Democratic presidential nomination in four years. And if Dole loses to Clinton, the 61-year-old Kemp would be considered the top early prospect for the next Republican nomination.

The first half hour of the debate was dominated by economic and tax policy, and then the candidates moved on to discuss abortion, Bosnia, Haiti and a host of other issues.

“The problem with the foreign policy of this administration is there is none,” Kemp said.

parties happen but feared that if the parties were approved, students would get out of control and the parties would be canceled.

“I will even volunteer my time to walk around (as a student marshal),” Knox said.

Student Senate Speaker Jeff Zilch also said the policy will have to be updated. Piket and Knox hope the first tailgate party will be held by next week’s homecoming game.

Piket and Knox are scheduled to meet with Lou Hencken, vice president of student affairs, Wednesday to discuss the tailgating policy.

Zilch also told the senate that Congressman Glenn Poshard, D-Marion, will not debate his challenger Brent Winters of Martinsville at Eastern.

Zilch said he hopes to bring each candidate to Eastern separately. Winter’s is tentatively scheduled to appear on campus Oct. 23. Zilch said he is still trying to set up a date with Poshard.

Play gives a new look to historical fashion

By MARGARET KILLACKEY
Staff writer

A play written in early America that pokes fun at keeping up with society's standards will open tonight.

"Fashion" will be performed at 8 p.m. tonight through Saturday, at 8 p.m. Tuesday through Oct. 19 and at 2 p.m. Oct. 20. All the plays will be performed on the mainstage at the Doudna Fine Arts Building.

"It's a play about a woman who wants to be more important in society than she is and the comic scenes which surround it," said C.P. Blanchette, the director of the play.

"Fashion" is an early American play, a historical play, that the Eastern community rarely gets a chance to see, Blanchette said.

Blanchette said he feels the students, who have been practicing for the production for five or six weeks, are ready to perform for an audience.

"I think it's going to go pretty well, we certainly have worked hard at it," Blanchette said. "I think we're ready to have our audience come."

The 1996-97 season for the University Theater Department will also include several new productions, and tickets for them currently are on sale at the ticket office, located in the Doudna Fine Arts Building.

The upcoming shows include student directed one-act plays, "A Christmas Carol," "What Rough Beast Slouches," "On the Verge," "Slow Dance on the Killing Ground" and a children's play called "Wiley and the Hairy Man."

The cost of tickets will be less than usual for students because of student discounts, and admission for "Wiley and the Hairy Man" will be free.

The ticket office hours are from 1 to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday. The office is also open one hour prior to each performance.

To reserve tickets for upcoming performances, call the ticket office at 581-3110.

RHA will collect information on movie channels for dorms

By DEANA POOLE
Staff writer

Residence Hall Association members tonight will seek volunteers to form a Cable Task Force to find out about getting a movie channel for residence halls.

The RHA will meet at 5 p.m. tonight in the Lawson Hall lobby.

"The purpose of the Cable Task Force will be to research and collect information about getting a movie channel for residence halls," said Matt Donoho, RHA president.

The committee will be responsible for contacting the local cable affiliate and determining whether a movie channel is feasible. Committee members must also distribute a survey to residence halls to see which movie channel students prefer.

Members must also decide whether to have one universal movie channel for all residence halls or to have different movie channels across campus.

Another concern for the Cable Task Force to handle is how the movie channel will be paid for. Possibilities include increasing housing fees and using RHA funds to pay for the movie channel.

Members tonight will also discuss voting rights as outlined in the RHA constitution.

"We will discuss, as a member of RHA, what is needed in order to vote," Donoho said.

Attendance at RHA meetings and committee meetings is required in order to be eligible to vote. Members who meet the requirements can vote on elections and important issues that affect RHA and all residence hall students.

"We want everyone to know that in order to vote they need to be involved in RHA, both in meetings and in committees," Donoho said.

Enforcing voter requirements ensures that RHA members stay active and progressive.

Skate policy restricts stunts to prevent campus damage

By DENISE RENFRO
Campus editor

The university passed a policy that will restrict persons on bicycles, skateboards and in-line skates from doing anything that may cause damage to campus property after several buildings were damaged.

The President's Council approved a policy on July 31 forbidding stunt riding, excessive speed or any other use of bicycles, skateboards or in-line skates that may cause damage to stairs and rail around campus.

"It is not because of any intention of denying people their recreation. It's the nature of the equipment that the damage occurs," he said. "There is concern over the damage being done to steps," said Keith Kohanzo, student judicial hearing officer.

Most of the damage has been done outside the Martin Luther King Jr. University Union and outside Coleman and Lumpkin

“It is not because of any intention to denying people their recreation”
-Keith Kohanzo, student judicial hearing officer halls, said Sgt. John Hatfill.

"Anywhere there are steps and rails," he said.

Kohanzo served on a committee that reported to Vice President for Student Affairs Lou Hencken and he reported to the President's Council.

"We suggested and proposed the wording of it," Kohanzo said.

If an accident does occur while a person is doing stunts on a bicycle, the victim of the accident may decide to sue Eastern for the damages, he said.

"A lot of the people who end up doing this are local kids, juveniles," Kohanzo said. "They can't just say it's my own problem if I fall down."

Students would be warned of the infraction by Campus Police.

Hatfill said students are advised of the skating policy the first time they are cited.

Kohanzo said no students have been referred to Judicial Affairs for breaking the new policy.

"The police are just warning students to please stop. It's unfortunate that we have to take that step, but we can't afford to fix everything," he said.

Other universities are facing the same problems with damage caused by bicycles, skateboards and in-line skates.

"Some other universities banned them completely on their campus out of endurance and damage concerns, and we're hoping to avoid that," Kohanzo said.

At Illinois State University the official police policy forbids skate boarding everywhere on campus.

Blood drive to make up for loss

By THERESA GAVLIN
Activities editor

The American Red Cross is holding a make-up blood drive Friday for donors unable to give blood last week.

The drive will be held from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. in the Andrews Hall lobby, and the goal for the day will be 300 pints.

Dave Cline, donor services consultant for the American Red Cross, said those people who were deferred for medications, low iron or a slight temperature will be able to try to donate again at this drive.

"I know there was a lot of illness last week," Cline said.

He added many students have received tattoos, and are unable to give blood for 12 months because of a Hepatitis risk.

Cline said last week's blood drive went well, despite not collecting enough blood to make goal.

"It did go well, it went very well," Cline said. "We just didn't collect as much blood as we hoped to."

Another make-up drive will be held Oct. 31 in the Stevenson Hall lobby, and the next blood drive where everyone will be able to donate again will be Dec. 2 and 3, Cline said.

President Jorns must support, cooperate with the Foundation

Eastern's Foundation was created to support Eastern and its students, but the lack of communication between the Foundation and Eastern President David Jorns needs to be improved.

Recently, Foundation President Stan Rives issued an invitation to Jorns to discuss ongoing communication problems between the two.

Jorns has deferred all issues dealing with the Foundation to the Executive Director of Development Jim Hanna. Jorns should fulfill his responsibility as president and deal with the differences in the administration and the Foundation himself instead of passing the responsibility to someone else.

Jorns needs to be involved and have open communication with the group that gives so much support to the university and to scholarships. The Foundation raised $1.4 million in fiscal year 96.

The Foundation has already passed a no-confidence resolution regarding Jorns' presidency in May 1995 because of past executive decisions concerning the Foundation. Following a 1995 Board of Governors meeting, a committee was formed comprising Foundation members and administrators to help the two groups work together.

Jorns should be working with the Foundation to improve conditions for the students and the university. His job is to work for the students to benefit them and ensure they receive a high-level education.

Jorns needs to support the Foundation just like the Foundation supports the university. Jorns and the Foundation have had differing opinions over fund raising ideas, but Jorns needs to be open to new ideas.

The Foundation has reached about $12.5 million in endowments that solely benefit Eastern.

Jorns needs to fully back this philanthropy program because of its benefit to the university. The first step is to meet with the executive committee of the Foundation and set aside differences to focus on the purpose of the Foundation, which is to benefit the university as a whole.

“today's quote”

We must try to trust one another.
Stay and cooperate.

Student defends National Coming Out Day

Tomorrow is the start of Family Weekend, and many of us will be spending it with our families. Perhaps some families will go to the football game against Western Illinois University, the Doobie Brother concert or even the “All You Can Eat” spaghetti dinner in the Rathskeller.

No matter what students decide to do, Family Weekend is one of those rare opportunities to be a student and a family member at the same time.

Tomorrow I will have another one of these rare opportunities. I will be bringing my sexual orientation into my everyday life as part of National Coming Out Day.

It may be saying “I have a boyfriend” when someone asks if I’m dating. It may be confronting someone who decides to say “faggot” or “dyke” in my presence. Or it may be watching a “gay-themed” movie with my friends. Whatever happens tomorrow, I will try not to censor my sexual orientation out of my life.

I know some students believe that my sexual orientation is my own personal business or that today I’ll be “flaunting” the fact that I’m gay. Some people even think there shouldn’t be a National Coming Out Day because there isn’t a “Straight Day.” Well, this may surprise many students, but I agree.

I totally agree with everyone who thinks my sexual orientation is my own business. I totally agree that landlords shouldn’t evict gays and lesbians because they do not want “queers” living on their property. And I totally agree that school boards shouldn’t fire a teacher just because some parents object to their children being taught by a homosexual.

Sure, I might be “flaunting” my sexual orientation tomorrow, but no more than straight people “flaunt” their sexual orientation the rest of the year. After all, I never ask to hear about wedding plans, but it seems everyday I’m forced to hear about wedding gowns, honeymoon plans and dress fittings. I am also surprised almost daily at the audacity of male-female couples holding hands in public, or, even worse, kiss-

AARON GERLACH
Guest columnist

“But in reality, ‘Straight Day’ is everyday, and National Coming Out Day is only once a year.”

“Ellen” coming out as a lesbian has caused considerable debate.

Every day straight people express their sexual orientation without even realizing it. How often do we see “queers” expressing their sexual orientation? Not often.

Maybe some day you will see two men walking down the street, holding hands and not think twice about it. But until that day, you will see me celebrating National Coming Out Day every October 11.

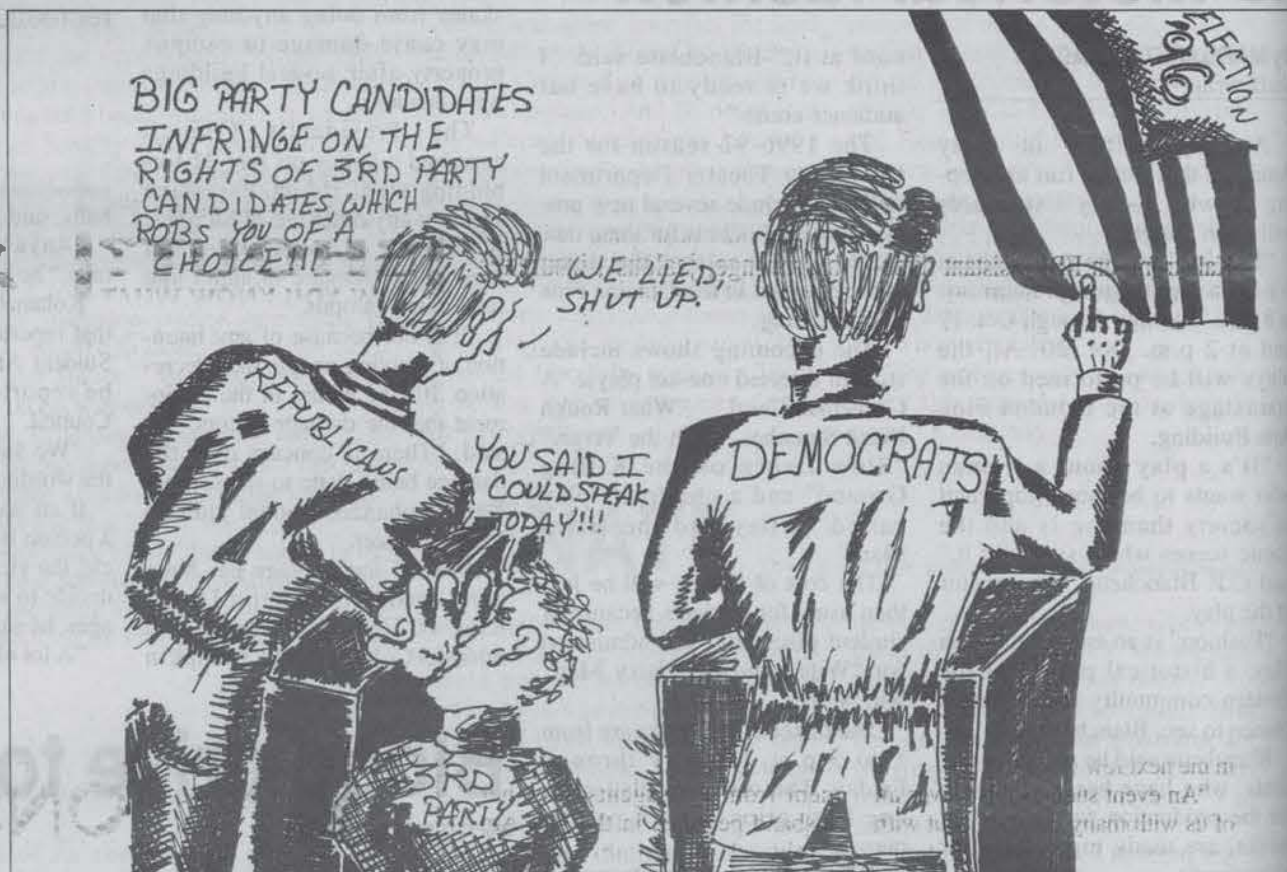

You see, if you are straight, you take a lot of things for granted everyday.

How many of you have back-up career plans in case you’re denied a job because of sexual orientation? How many of you have to wait to get married until the government decides it is OK? How many of you receive death threats because someone is threatened by your sexual orientation? How many of you know that if your parents find out about your sexual orientation, they will quit paying for college?

These are real questions that your gay, lesbian and bisexual peers deal with everyday.

All of these reasons are why National Coming Out Day is important to gays, lesbians and bisexuals. It is our chance once a year to forget why our sexual orientation is such a big deal to everyone else. It is a chance for us to just be ourselves.

—Aaron Gerlach is the executive director of the Lesbian, Gay, Bisexual and Allies Union and a guest columnist for The Daily Eastern News.

Charleston resident says parade planners have negative attitude

Dear editor:

A few weeks ago, I called Eastern to have an entry blank sent to me so I could enter two cars in the antique section of the Homecoming parade. I was then informed that I would need to send a $25 check with the entry blank as a deposit. Of course, it would be returned if my entries showed up the day of the parade. (In past years, the parade organizers didn’t like working most of the night marking the streets and then not having the entries show up the day of the parade.)

As the lady was explaining about the necessity of the deposit, I was remembering the times the car we had entered in the parades over the years wouldn’t start because they got over-heated, had dead batteries or any one of the many things that can happen to old cars. My thoughts were that the deposit requirement was not a very welcoming attitude for parade organizers to have, but I didn’t say anything at the time.

I mailed my entry around Sept. 20 and my son told me on Sept. 23 that a lady had called and said that the entry arrived two days late. My son and I looked at each other in amazement and shook our heads. We were both thinking, “An entry sent in a month early and it’s not being allowed in a parade?” The cars were not being entered for competition: they could have easily just been added to the end of the parade line-up. I was surprised since we have often entered parades in other towns where last minute parade participants were welcomed and encouraged. Requiring an entry a month in advance certainly does not allow for spontaneity or last minute creativity!

I am not writing this letter in order to have my cars allowed in the Homecoming parade. My concern is with the “nose-in-the-air” attitude from the parade committee that comes across loud and clear. I wonder how many other people have been in this same situation. If other people have had similar problems, the Homecoming Committee’s attitude certainly does not help the relationship between the community and Eastern.

I would like to suggest that the Homecoming Committee meet with parade organizers from some of the nearby towns such as Ashmore, Oakland, Kansas, Westfield, Mattoon, Arcola, etc. in order to discover how they organize their parades. I have been in parades in each of those towns and have always dealt with friendly people. Maybe if the parade committee members talked to organizers in nearby towns, they would learn how to develop a more welcoming attitude.

Muslim prayer hall built underground

JERUSALEM (AP) – Muslim authorities angered Israelis on Wednesday with plans to open a new underground prayer hall at the Al Aqsa Mosque, on the site revered by Jews as Temple Mount and beside the Israeli tourist tunnel project that set off rioting last month.

Hassan Tahboub, the Palestinian minister of religious affairs, said the hall would open in two days once floor tile has been laid – in time for weekly prayer services Friday.

The announcement comes as Israelis and Palestinians try to reconstruct a peace shattered after Israel opened a new entrance to the tunnel at the base of the complex. The riots and clashes last month killed 78 people.

Tahboub refused to comment Wednesday on the timing, saying only that the hall was not Israel's "responsibility or property." Muslims call the Al Aqsa complex Haram al-Sharif, or Noble Enclosure, and it is one of the holiest sites of Islam. Jews revere it as the Temple Mount, the site of the Second Temple that was destroyed by the Romans in A.D. 70.

The new Muslim prayer hall, which the Palestinians have named Marwani Mosque, is in a nearly 2,000-year-old chamber beneath the Al Aqsa Mosque known as Solomon's Stables. It was built in the time of King Herod as part of underground support structures for an expansion of the Temple Mount.

Islamic tradition says the site was visited by the prophet Mohammed and the chamber was used as a Muslim prayer hall as early as the 8th century.

Christian tradition says Jesus' feet were ritually washed on what is known as the "cradle" stone, and a chapel marks the site.

Christian Crusaders converted the structure into stables for their horses.

Relatives to be asked about TWA Flight 800

SMITHTOWN, N.Y. (AP) – After nearly three months of coming up dry in the investigation of TWA Flight 800, the FBI has informed the grieving relatives of the dead that agents will start asking them questions.

"We need the victims to be part of our team," said James Kallstrom, an FBI assistant director. "We want to obtain any information that they think may be of value to us." Kallstrom, who is leading the criminal probe into the cause of the July 17 explosion that killed all 230 people aboard, said the delay in interviewing relatives came because agents were focused on other areas and because he wanted to spare the family members for as long as possible.

In a two-page letter sent last week to relatives, Kallstrom expressed his condolences and informed them that they would be contacted to set up an appointment in the next few weeks.

"An event such as this leaves all of us with many questions but with few answers," Kallstrom wrote.

"You have our commitment as professional investigators that we will spare no effort to answer one of those questions: What caused this terrible tragedy?" In addition to trying to find out whether the crash was caused by a bomb, a missile or a mechanical malfunction, agents have been considering other scenarios – such as whether it was an individual crime motivated by revenge, jealousy, insurance fraud or even suicide.

As part of the preparation for asking tough questions, about 50 FBI agents attended a three-hour sensitivity session with family members from two prior plane disasters.

"We hope that they understand we want to do a professional job, but with as much gentleness and compassion as we can," Kallstrom said. "We didn't want to repeat what some victim's families said was offensive treatment in the past by law enforcement." Victoria Cummock of Coral Gables, Fla., said she got cold, even rude treatment from FBI agents after her husband perished in the Pan Am Flight 103 bombing over Lockerbie, Scotland, eight years ago.

IRA tries to gain ground with car bombing attacks

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) – For eight months, Catholics and Protestants watched the Irish Republican Army's renewed bombing campaign play out on distant English battlefields.

Belfasters hoped it would stay that way.

But as anti-terrorist police gradually got the upper hand in London – raiding IRA safe houses, arresting 13 suspects and seizing 10 tons of explosives – a demoralized IRA returned home to demonstrate its defiance.

Detonating two car bombs Monday inside the British army's command center, Thiepval Barracks, was an IRA coup that will keep the secret society united, for now, on a war footing.

However, the outlawed group's political leaders in the Sinn Fein party are losing hard-won friends and any hope of gaining admission to Northern Ireland's political negotiations.

More immediately, Catholic civilians fear "loyalist" paramilitary groups, which draw support from pro-British Protestant turf, will respond by killing Catholics.

"The dogs in the street know this attack was designed to provoke loyalists into action," said Gary McMichael, leader of a party linked to the largest pro-British paramilitary group, the Ulster Defense Association.

"Without loyalists going into Catholic areas and killing people, the IRA can't maintain its hold over those communities," said McMichael.

Education key to Hillary Clinton campaign in Southern Illinois

MOUNT VERNON (AP) — Campaigning before a friendly crowd of high school students, Hillary Rodham Clinton touted her husband's education programs Wednesday while reassuring teens they are "the finest generation ever." The media too often depicts teen crime and drug use, Mrs. Clinton told the crowd of about 800 packed into the Mount Vernon Township High School gym for a campaign pep rally.

"I have a very strong feeling that what is portrayed in the media does not do justice to America's young people," Mrs. Clinton said.

That touched a chord with many students in the audience, most of whom are still too young to vote.

"She was not against us. She was on our side, really," sophomore Jimmy Merchel, 15, said as he walked to class after the speech. "That's unlike a lot of politicians. Most people look at all the teens doing the bad stuff, and that's a one-sided thing." The morning swing through Southern Illinois was meant to bolster support for not only President Clinton but other Democrats on the ticket. Those appearing with Mrs. Clinton included the wife of U.S. Senate candidate Dick Durbin, congressional candidate Jay Hoffman, state Sen. William O'Daniel and state House candidate Joe Bob Pierce.

After being introduced by the high school marching band, Mrs. Clinton settled into a standard stump speech. She praised her husband's education proposals such as tax credits for community college tuition and hooking every classroom up to the Internet by the year 2000.

"If you do your part and study in school, there should not be any financial reason for you not to go to college," she told the students.

While making only oblique references to Republican challenger

Bob Dole, Mrs. Clinton addressed GOP criticisms such as those of Clinton's drug policy.

"The president can't make anybody stop using unsafe substances like drugs or alcohol," Mrs. Clinton said. "But he can support drug-free schools ... We've got to give young people something to say yes to, not to just say no to." Such messages appealed to students like senior Shawnika Lucks, 19, who said the first lady's speech strengthened her desire to vote for Clinton in November.

"It was profound," Lucks said after the speech. "The things she was saying were true and it hit home." Some students, however, looked at the speech as little more than an opportunity to get out of class.

"How we look at politics is how our parents look at politics. They just go by what their parents think," 17-year-old Corey Woodgett said of his fellow students. "

Salvi resigns from House position

SPRINGFIELD (AP) — Now, he's simply Citizen Salvi.

Republican U.S. Senate candidate Al Salvi has resigned his state House seat to devote full time to his quest for federal office.

"Obviously, he felt he couldn't devote the time needed to serve as a House member," said John Torre, a Salvi spokesman.

"Al feels he's more comfortable not having the title of state representative when he is ... devoting all of his time and resources to the campaign in the last few weeks," Torre said. "He thinks it's only fair to those who elected him." Salvi, 36, cut short his second term in the House, effective Oct. 3.

By choosing to run for U.S. Senate, Salvi already was a lame-duck state legislator, with his term set to expire in January.

Springfield Democrat Dick Durbin, Salvi's opponent, plans to keep his congressional seat as he runs for the Senate, said Terry Stephan, Durbin's spokeswoman.

"Most people who are running for office don't resign their seats," she said. "His offices downstate and in Washington will continue to provide constituent service." Salvi is borrowing a page from Bob Dole, the Republican who quit his position as U.S. Senate majority leader to devote all his efforts to running for the presidency, said John Jackson, professor of political science at Southern Illinois University at Carbondale.

While Salvi's move is surprising, it is not as dramatic as Dole's, Jackson said.

"It's not giving up nearly so much as what Bob Dole gave up," Jackson said.

The General Assembly's busiest season is in the spring, Jackson said.

"So my guess is it won't make much difference in his day-to-day activities," Jackson said.

Crisis Pregnancy Center offers a safe haven to women and men in need of counseling and care

The Crisis Pregnancy Center of Eastern Illinois, 914 Monroe St. in Charleston, provides counseling and other services to people affected by an unplanned pregnancy.

staff writer

Imagine: you are in the middle of the most hectic semester of your college education. You've made plans for your future and you're moving forward. But one night, you indulged in unprotected sex, and a few weeks later, you discover the truth. You're pregnant!

Whether it's you or your significant other, an unplanned pregnancy can cause confusion for just about anyone. After planning so carefully for the future, many people need help and support to get through this difficult time.

That help can sometimes be hard to find. The Crisis Pregnancy Center of Eastern Illinois has helped over 1,500 people in Coles County within the past six years. Approximately 80 percent of their clients are students. The center serves anyone with an unplanned pregnancy, not just unwed people.

Chris Bugle, executive director of the center, said the goal of the Crisis Pregnancy Center is to provide information, care and practical help for both women and men facing an unplanned (crisis) pregnancy.

Bugle has been with the center since it began in Charleston. She became involved with the center because, prior to its opening, a family member who is very close to her had a difficult time with an unplanned pregnancy. She thought the services offered by the center would be an asset to the community.

The Crisis Pregnancy Center makes a number of referrals to medical facilities, financial assistance and support groups. Trained volunteers at the center give people information on pregnancy including options, procedures, side effects and risks.

The center has two locations in the county: Charleston and Mattoon. The phone number for the Charleston office is 345-5000. The Mattoon office can be reached at 234-3312.

The center also has the Crisis Pregnancy Center Campus Outreach (CPCCO) program at Eastern.

Corrie Cunningham, president of CPCCO, has been a member for three years. Cunningham became involved with the outreach program because she believes it is important to educate students on crisis pregnancy, sexual responsibility and sexually transmitted diseases.

"We are always looking for volunteers," Cunningham said. The group currently has seven members, 10 fewer than last year, Cunningham said.

One of the main responsibilities of the CPCCO is to raise money. They hold fundraisers to buy paper for brochures and posters. The money also is used to place ads in The Verge and construct informational packets for the resident assistants in the residence halls.

In addition to fundraising, members may also work as night-line volunteers, receptionists and peer counselors in the center as well as be an emotional support system for fellow students.

Carly Huegelmann, a sophomore English major, said she was not aware of the campus outreach. "I think it's great because it gives students the opportunity to examine their options when it comes to pregnancy," Huegelmann said. "Actually, students at Eastern are lucky to have these services available to them."

The center offers free pregnancy tests, accurate information on pregnancy, adoption, abortion and foster care.

If a woman chooses to keep her child, the center offers ongoing support and friendship. They advise women to continue their educations and help prepare them to be self-sufficient.

Men are not excluded from the support and friendship that the center offers. "Men need to be educated and supported too," Bugle said. "If we can't be of help or a person needs additional help, we refer him/her to someone who can help."

"We give people accurate information on pregnancy and let them make decisions they feel best about. We help people make decisions based on fact, not feeling."

Chris Bugle,
executive director of the Crisis Pregnancy
Center of Eastern Illinois.

School lunch system requires labeling students with stickers

CHELSEA, Mass. (AP) — In Chelsea's impoverished school system, there's a new way to tell the poorest of the poor: Elementary pupils with blue stickers get free lunches, while those wearing yellow can afford to pay.

Some experts say the temporary system stigmatizes poor kids.

But in Chelsea, once one of the worst school districts in the nation, it's a non-issue to many parents.

"The kids kind of know who gets free lunch anyways," said Connie Ruelas, who has three children in the schools. "I'm more excited about the new facilities. They've finally got a gym and a cafeteria." This immigrant city of 30,000 just north of Boston recently overhauled all its school buildings and opened seven new schools on the same day last month. The schools had been in such poor shape that in 1989 Chelsea called in Boston University, which has run the district since then.

Outside the four-school elementary complex Wednesday, children with tags pinned to their chests played on shiny playground equipment. The tags have their name, their teacher, bus number and a little round sticker.

The stickers are meant to keep lines moving in the cafeteria by telling the cashier with a glance how much each youngster must pay.

Superintendent Douglas Sears argued that the notion that children bear a stigma because of the stickers is largely a creation of the media and academics.

"This is a stretch," he said. "I know what the allusion

“The kids kind of know who gets free lunch anyways.”

—Connie Ruelas, Chelsea, Mass., resident is there. But we're not in the business of identifying kids. We're in the business of educating kids." He emphasized that not a single parent has complained to his office since the schools began using the temporary tags for its 2,400 elementary pupils this month. The tags are to be replaced in about a month by photo IDs with readable magnetic strips.

Seventy-five percent of Chelsea's schoolchildren are eligible to receive free lunches through the U.S. Department of Agriculture program. Nearly 10 percent more pay reduced prices for lunch.

"You have a lot of kids who qualify for free lunch," Sears said. "If there is a stigma it's pretty widespread." Once the new cards are issued, Chelsea will be in line with school districts that take pains to conceal who pays and who doesn't — something required by federal regulations.

One educator countered that no matter how temporary, the colored stickers cross the line.

Principal fears for safety: needs private bathroom

CHICAGO (AP) — High school principal Steve Newton says he needs a private toilet and shower because he often works late and fears for his safety in the faculty bathroom across the hall.

But for a school without enough textbooks for students or toilet paper dispensers for their bathrooms, installing a toilet and shower costing about $14,000 in the principal's office seems inappropriate to some.

So a school board official has put the partially completed job on hold, citing a lack of construction permits.

"I would say it's going to be stopped because it's not a very good use of school money," said Bruce Bertalmio, the school board's construction manager.

"Although it is not against board policy or illegal, it was certainly inappropriate use of the funds," Blondean Davis, deputy chief education officer for the school system, said Wednesday.

Newton, principal at Marshall High School on the southwest side, said he left the cost up to a consulting firm his school uses but would have thought the project might be $2,000 or $3,000.

"The error, I guess, here was I did my own appraisal," he said.

Newton said his already-installed toilet is one of the cheapest made and sits in a tiny closet — 29 inches by 39 inches. The shower, started in a separate area of his office, is just a plastic deal with no tile, he said.

Mutant frogs invade Minnesota

HENDERSON, Minn. (AP) — Bruce Nelson was catching frogs for catfish bait last year when he realized something was horribly wrong: some of the frogs had stumps for legs, and others had as many as four tangled hind legs.

"You see deformed things all the time in nature, but nothing like this," Nelson said.

All across Minnesota and into neighboring Wisconsin, South Dakota and Quebec, scientists and locals are seeing the same kind of grotesquely misshapen limbs, along with frogs with tails, missing or shrunk eyes, and smaller sex organs.

In fact, scientists have had a hard time finding wetlands in Minnesota with no deformed frogs. Most recently, deformed frogs were found in Vermont.

"It scares me," said Judy Helgen, a research scientist with the Minnesota Pollution Control Agency. "I'm at different levels of getting a chill down my spine." Scientists aren't sure what's causing the deformities.

U.S. inches are faux pas

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States just doesn't measure up to the rest of the world. It stands virtually alone in resisting the metric system: among the family of nations, its only kin are Liberia and Burma.

Wait, don't turn the page! Sure, this is about that odd way that other countries measure stuff, but read on anyway — there's no quiz at the end. Thursday is National Metric Day — the 10th day of the 10th month — and a good time to see where America stands on the kilo-whatever.

Depending on your perspective, it's either making great strides or doing nothing much at all.

In trade and business, the changeover is going great: Think of 35 millimeter film or soft drinks sold in 1- and 2-liter bottles.

But in cultural areas, like measuring today's temperature or reading a highway sign, "We've gotten nowhere," said Gerard Iannelli of the National Institute of Standards and Technology.

It's his job to assess such things.

It's not actually true that the United States doesn't use the metric system. Metric has been the nation's official system since 1893.

Child's interference with homer costly

NEW YORK (AP) – Twelve-year-old Jeff Maier skipped a half-day of school to attend the first game of the American League championship series between the New York Yankees and Baltimore Orioles.

Little did he know he would make the game's biggest play.

Maier, from Old Tappan, N.J., reached down over the right-field wall and took away from the Orioles' Tony Tarasco what would have been a routine fly out by Derek Jeter in the eighth inning of Wednesday night's game.

Tarasco was parked under the fly and reached up to make the catch, when Maier's black glove swept the ball over the fence.

Right-field umpire Rich Garcia, standing on the warning track, ruled the ball was a home run, giving the Yankees a 4-4 tie.

"I was just trying to catch the ball," Maier said. "It bounced right out of my glove and bounced on the floor. I feel bad for the Baltimore fans, but as a Yankee fan, if I helped the team, I feel pretty good."

Maier didn't get his souvenir, which was snatched up by another fan.

"I think I had a right to catch it because I thought it was going to go out," said Maier, who was attending his fifth game at Yankee Stadium.

Asked if he thought he had interfered with Tarasco, Maier said: "I didn't think so. Maybe."

While Tarasco pleaded his case with Garcia, the rest of the Orioles on the field sprinted to right field along with manager Davey Johnson.

Crowd heckles Alomar

NEW YORK (AP) – Yankees fans expressed their opinion about Roberto Alomar's spit by showing a little polish.

They simply booed.

They booed and heckled him during batting practice. They booed heartily during the pregame introductions – and even louder during his first at-bat.

And those boos turned to thunderous cheers when he struck out looking in the first inning.

He gently laid down his helmet and bat, then teammate

Bobby Bonilla brought his glove out to him as he took the field for the bottom of the first.

In the second inning, the crowd cheered derisively when Paul O'Neill's grounder kicked off the heel of Alomar's glove for an error.

However, on the very next play, Alomar made a fine back-hand flip to second on Mariano Duncan's grounder.

But despite concerns about violence – in the form of hurled batteries, or other projectiles – nothing flew through the air except a few expletives and unprintable chants.

Yankees steal game one with extra-inning victory

There was no way anybody could interfere with this home run.

Bernie Williams homered deep into the left field seats in the 11th inning to give New York a 5-4 victory over Baltimore in the opener of the American League championship series Wednesday.

Along the way, the Yankees got a lot of help from a little fan.

Just like some predicted, the crowd managed to turn around Game 1.

But it wasn't by throwing anything at Roberto Alomar.

A 12-year-old created a game-tying homer by Derek Jeter in the eighth when he reached out and grabbed a fly ball that was about to be caught by right fielder Tony Tarasco.

Williams won it with his fourth homer of the postseason.

Williams connected on a 1-1 pitch from Randy Myers.

Myers, the former Cub, entered the game with two outs in the ninth inning of play.

While Williams' hit was big, 12-year-old Jeff Maier made just as big a play from the stands as he interfered with a catch and wound up sending the game into extra innings.

Due to the fact that The Daily Eastern News did not receive a Cardinals story before press time, the sports section was unable to run a story in today's newspaper.

Cox not sorry for outburst

LAKÉ FOREST (AP) – Bryan Cox contrite? No way. But after talking with teammates, former coaches, friends, relatives and teachers, he said Wednesday he plans to take a kinder, gentler approach to his criticism. Cox unleashed after Sunday's 37-6 loss to the Packers, saying the Bears needed more heart, needed to make more big plays and if they couldn't, needed to check the waiver wire for new players. He also questioned some players' ability to play through pain. "I think it was something that needed to be said, but at the same time the manner in which I said it wasn't the right format," Cox said Wednesday.

The tennis teams each have $10,000 operating budgets, down $2,000 from last year.

The golf teams each have $10,000 this year. For the men, this is a cut of $1,000 from last season.

This season is the first for women's golf.

As for the major cuts in women's athletics, the basketball team was hit with a cut of $15,000, and it now has an operating budget of $85,000 compared to the team's $100,000 budget it had last season.

The women's soccer team, as the team went from having $37,300 in 1995 – its first year as an official NCAA sport – to $30,000 this season, which is the team's first in the Missouri Valley Conference.

However, two athletic budgets did stay consistent since the budgets of both Eastern's volleyball team and its softball team remained the same from the previous year.

The volleyball team has a budget of $39,900 and the softball team has a budget of $34,200.

Regarding what routes the committee will go down when coming up with ideas on how to solve the budget problem, Samuels mentioned that fund raising is the key.

"There are a lot of avenues that can be pursued, and fund raising is the biggest avenue," Samuels said. "The committee has batted some ideas around, but it is going to come down to making the best suggestions (to the athletic department) with the money we have. We know the athletic department can become better funded."

Craft agreed that fund raising will be a key to bringing more money into the athletic department, but he adds that something different has to be done with it.

"Fund raising is a crucial issue," Craft said. "The fund raising model that was instituted back in the late 1970s is a good model, but there are ways of doing things better."

Craft adds that using the funds comes down to using them wisely.

"We have to have a way to use funds more wisely," Craft said. "We all have budgets at home and we have to stay within them. We just have to be able to better use our funds."

WESTERN

bombs, but I think they're a controlled passing game."

With both the running game and the passing game working together, it can be a difficult offense to stop.

"You can't shut down either guy (Knuckles or Hecklinski)," Spoo said. "You have to limit to some extent their output."

Defensively, Western has held its opponents to 11.8 points per game. That total has the Leathernecks ranked 10th in the country in points allowed.

The most points the Leathernecks have given up this season is 21 to Northwest Oklahoma State in the first week of the season. Western scored 44 points in that game to come away with a win.

Since then, the Leathernecks have pitched one shutout and held opponents to 10 or fewer points on two other occasions.

The defense features one of the area's best backfields.

Three Leatherneck defenders, Duntin Blount, Calvin Greene and Frank Spraggins, have three interceptions each.

"Frankie is as good a safety as there is," Spoo said. "They're (the backfield) alert back there. They play tough – they've always played tough."

Western can also hurt an opponent with the special teams.

Wide receiver Jamaine Blaylock leads the nation with his 29.67-yard punt return average.

"They've got some good kick returners," Spoo said. "Blaylock is (first) in the country with average of 30 yards – that's astronomical."

Blaylock also returned a punt for a touchdown this season.

The Leathernecks dropped to No. 25 in this week's poll after the loss to Indiana State, but Ball said his team will be ready to go Saturday.

"I think they'll be able to bounce back," he said. Ball also compared the season Western has had to Eastern's.

"Our season is similar to Eastern's in that they played Western Michigan and thumped them. It wasn't even close," he said in reference to his own team's win over a 1-A team.

Clayton has 192 digs so far this year.

Middle Tennessee has 41 solo blocks so far with Bishop and Junior middle blocker Tammy Eichholz tied for the lead in solo blocks with 15 while Miller has six.

The have 272 assisted blocks so far this year.

Bishop also leads this category with 75 while Eichholz has 47 and Miller has 29.

The Lady Raiders are beating their opponents in kills 1,246-1,137, in assists 1,117-998, in service aces 166-147, in digs

1,291-1,285 while opponents are beating them in solo blocks 54-41 and assisted blocks 279-272.

The Panthers have their work cut out for them.

Eastern head coach Betty Ralston knows what the Panthers need to do to beat the Raiders.

"Our serving has to be tough," Ralston said.

"I think a big key is being home and being familiar with the facility and use this to our advantage."

"The next two matches are exceptionally important because if we win them both, we'll be all alone in second place in the conference halfway through the season," she said.

Ralston does know some things about Middle Tennessee.

"We played them last spring and four of the players we played against are still playing," Ralston said.

"One of the players we don't know about is their setter who runs the offense."

Eastern's loss to Eastern Kentucky may come back to hunt them.

"It was a loss that we didn't need, and the kids know they dug themselves in a hole," Ralston said.

Gender equity key issue for budget committee

Editor's note: This is the second in a series of stories looking into the athletic budgets of Eastern as well as the other schools in the Ohio Valley Conference.

By BRIAN LESTER
Sports editor

While the five-person committee of coaches assigned to looking into this year's athletic budget is hoping to come up with useful recommendations about next year's budget, gender equity will have to be kept in mind.

"We (the committee) are trying as best we can to follow the time line the Office of Civil Rights (OCR) has given us to work within," said committee member John Craft, women's track coach. "Gender equity is part of our consideration for when we make recommendations for the budget."

The committee's plan is to make recommendations about how the budget can be improved and then the members will bring their recommendations to Vice President for Student Affairs and Acting Athletic Director Lou Hencken. From there, group meetings will be set up with the other coaches to discuss the recommendations.

The other four members of the committee are head men's basketball coach Rick Samuels, head volleyball coach

In Samuels' opinion on how the committee will handle the gender equity issue, he plans on seeing progress being made toward the issue when budget recommendations are made.

"We plan on making strides in regards to the gender equity issue," Samuels said. "We also have to look at our basic needs, too, regarding scholarships and basic sports operations."

Besides the fact that Eastern is low on funding in the athletic department, the gender equity issue is one of the main reasons behind the cuts that were made to certain sports.

And since every sport except for volleyball and softball have experienced cuts, Craft said some key decisions will have to be made about the budget because of gender equity.

"It (gender equity) means we are going to have to make some serious decisions," Craft said. "The funds the athletic department has are limited, and a whole-hearted effort has to be made to work with the funds we have. Crucial decisions about the budget are going to be made."

John Craft

In men's sports, basketball took the biggest cut this season. Last year the team had an operating budget of $141,800 compared to the $105,000 it has this season.

Eastern's football team took the next biggest cut in men's sports, as it now has an operating budget of $190,000. In the 1995-96 athletic season, it had an operating budget of $222,870.

The baseball team has $33,500 this year after having $34,200 the year before, and the wrestling team has a $17,000 budget, down $3,000 from 1995.

The men's soccer team went from a budget of $27,350 in 1995 to a budget of $25,000 for this season, and the men's swimming team has an operating budget of $18,000 compared to the $23,890 it had last season.

Both cross country teams went from $8,000 to $6,500, and both track teams have operating budgets of $25,000, down $3,000 from last year.

Spikers aim to stop streaking Raiders tonight

By MATT WILSON
Staff writer

Eastern returns to the friendly confines of Lantz Gym to take on Middle Tennessee State University at 7 p.m. tonight after spending last weekend in Kentucky.

"Eastern is an outstanding team, and they've already proven that," Middle Tennessee head coach Lisa Kissey said.

The Lady Raiders are coming in riding a two-game losing streak, their most recent defeat coming by the hands of intrastate rival Tennessee Tech University 15-7, 11-15, 14-16, 15-6 and 18-16.

"We didn't play well at all against Tennessee Tech," Kissey said. "Usually after you win the first game, you come out like gangbusters in the second, but we didn't. It's hard telling how we're going to react to this loss."

The Raiders (6-2 in the Ohio Valley Conference, 11-10 overall) have six people who are in triple figures for kills. Senior outside hitter Deb Anderson leads the way with 302 while junior outside hitter Leslie Burnside has 251 and junior outside hitter Tara Miller has 182.

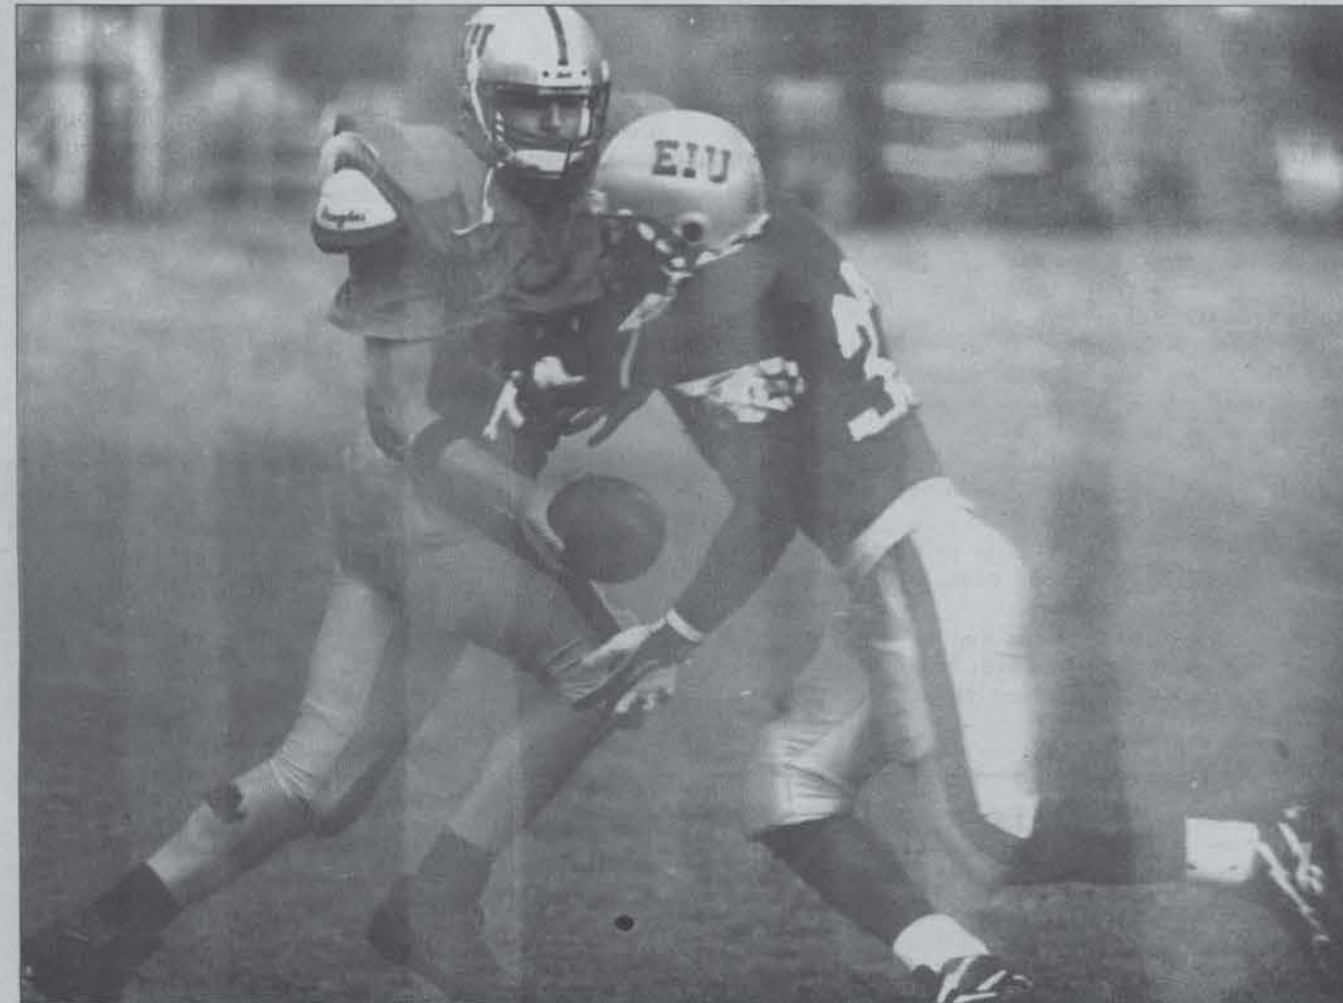

Middle Tennessee is led in assists by junior college transfer Jaetn Clayton who has 987 and an average of 11.5 per game. She is currently in first place in the OVC for assists per game just in front of Southeast Missouri's Tuba Meto.

Clayton also leads the team in service aces with 36, which puts her in eighth place in the OVC, just in front of Eastern's Kara Harper. Anderson has contributed 30 aces while senior middle blocker Susan Bishop has 27.

Leathernecks balanced offensively despite loss

By JOSH HARBECK
Associate sports editor

Western Illinois comes to Charleston Saturday following its first defeat of the year. The Leathernecks dropped a 10-7 decision to Indiana State, and Western head coach Randy Ball said the loss affected the team.

"It was a really disappointing loss," he said. "It was difficult to get (the team) back into the practices."

Coming into the Indiana State game, the Leathernecks were 4-0 and ranked 22nd in the Sports Network Division I-AA poll.

Western won some big games this season, including a victory over then 14th-ranked Hofstra 18-9 and a road win against Division I-A Northern Illinois 27-0.

During the season, Western has established itself offensively and defensively.

On offense, Western has two of the premiere players in I-AA football.

Running back Brian Knuckles is fifth in the nation in rushing yards per game with 142.25.

He is also 19th in the country with his average of nine points scored per game.

Knuckles ran for 139 yards and a touchdown during Eastern's 20-17 win last year.

And Panther head coach Bob Spoo knows how dangerous Knuckles can be.

"He's tough, mentally tough," he said. "He's got good speed and quickness, and he's a very confident kid."

Western also boasts a quarterback who is nationally ranked.

Jeff Hecklinski is the 12th-rated passer in I-AA football, and Spoo said the Panther defense has to watch for the Leatherneck passing game.

"They're a controlled, short, intermediate type (passing game)," he said. "They could come out and throw
