Eastern president gives blood on opening day of spring blood drive

By CRAIG EDWARDS
Activities editor

Eastern President Stanley Rives was just one of more than 200 people who donated blood Monday at the American Red Cross blood drive in the University Ballroom.

Mindy Knopf, publicity chair for the blood drive, said 274 pints of blood were collected Monday, adding that a large amount of donors will be needed when the doors open at 11 a.m. Tuesday.

She said bad weather and poor road conditions in the St. Louis area last week canceled all blood drives, causing a shortage in parts of Illinois and Missouri.

Mark Baumball, faculty adviser for the blood drive, said an emergency flight of blood collected from 11 a.m. until noon Tuesday will be made from Coles County Memorial Airport to Lambert Field in St. Louis.

Spring Blood Drive

Goal: 1,650 Pints

He said although the blood collected each day is usually driven to St. Louis, "they are in need of additional blood, so we will fly out our first hour's contributions."

For that reason, Blood Drive Chair Sue Rachford, hopes "as many people as possible" donate blood before noon Tuesday. Knopf said although the drive is 274 pints closer to the 1,650-pint goal, she expected they would collect 350 pints Monday.

Misinformation is one of the reasons many people don't give blood, said Counseling Center Director Bud Sanders at a workshop Monday night. He said although some people fear getting diseases from giving blood, "you cannot contract AIDS by donating blood."

Sanders said although only 10 percent of the general population donates blood, the percentage of Eastern students that give blood is much higher.

Sanders, who has donated blood more than 67 times, suggested going through the donation process with a friend to overcome any fears.

Rachford said Wednesday is Buddy Day, adding that she hopes to attract people who wouldn't normally give blood alone on that day.

Enrollment overload bogs down courses

The economics department is taking a beating from its own theory of supply and demand because its students can't get into required classes because of a shortage of instructors.

The Student Senate recently passed a bill requesting an increase in class size and/or staff.

The bill, passed by the senate last Wednesday, states that because the number of economic majors is growing rapidly, many students are finding it very difficult to get into the classes.

It says in the bill that the economics department is not adjusting to this increase, causing students unnecessary semesters of tuition and fees.

The senate suggests steps be taken to eliminate "this growing problem." They say in the bill that an increase in economics faculty would seem to rectify the problem.

Lori Lockman, co-sponsor of the bill and chair of the academic affairs committee, said, "The economics majors on campus seem to be growing semester by semester and the economics department is not adjusting."

Tom Doherty is co-sponsor and originator of the bill. Lockman said, "I've been aware of it, but Tom came to me with concern about the problem. We've simply made a recommendation that the university look through it."

According to Lockman, many business majors are taking economics courses, causing the number of majors to grow in hurricane proportions and progressively worsen.

"The classes required to get into a school of business and the classes required for an economics major are similar," said Lockman, a business major.

The difference, she said, is that students have to meet requirements to get into a "school of business," but there are no requirements to fulfill for an economics major because there is no school.

Economics instructors agree a problem exists, but they think the solution lies in increasing the staff, not the class size.

Thomas Corley, undergraduate adviser for economics majors, said, "I think there's no doubt about it (that a problem exists). It's a simple supply and demand imbalance."

He said large classes can hurt the quality of education.

"I don't think they should increase the class size because I don't believe in big classes, Corley added. "We ought to increase the faculty."

He said the business majors are taking many economics classes "because they have to take those three courses." Principles of Macroeconomics I and II and International Economics are required of most business majors.

The business school requires that students get a (See ENROLLMENT, page 6)

Poll shows students' views vary on senior seminars

By JEFF BRITT
Staff writer

Of 90 Eastern students polled by a student senator, 36 percent believe senior seminar is a good idea, 56 percent believe it should be changed and 66 percent said it should encompass a pass/fail option.

Student Senate members are currently taking a survey to gather the opinions of Eastern students about the senior seminar program.

The poll was taken by student Senator Gus Swanson. Board of Governors Representative Mike Ashack is currently in the process of polling 400 students.

Swanson's poll included the questions:

•Do you believe senior seminar is a good idea?

•If senior seminar is retained in its present form, do you feel change is necessary?

•Would you favor a pass/fail guideline over elimination of senior seminar?

•If you have already had a senior seminar, was it satisfactory?

Both survey forms requested the students write comments on the back. "On the new one, I really hope that the students fill out the back of it," said Ashack.

"I'm opposed to it (senior seminar)" he said. "Right now my main concern is with the students. I just want to give the students what they want."

This way the Student Senate will have an idea on what course of action to take. "Through the findings of this report," he said, "the Student Senate can find out what they want and pass a resolution on it."

Ashack will submit a report on the poll to the Student Senate on Feb. 27.

The comments on back of the preliminary survey forms were anonymous, but they included some interesting opinions regarding senior seminar:

"It's stupid and senseless. I have been through three-and-a-half years of school and I don't feel that senior seminar class is any test of my academic ability after I have taken 90 hours of college classes," one student said.

"As I can see, the seminar's not like a seminar. The teachers are treating it like a regular class. It should be more informative than demanding," a student commented.

"It's a waste of time," another student said about the seminar.

"Honors senior seminar should have more variety and options. I was only offered spring '87," a student comment read.

"Grading scales should not be 93 percent for an 'A'. It is unnecessary for seniors who are already swamped with upper-level course work to write term papers. Attendance may be used with a pass/fail option. Discussions rather than papers would be nice," a student said.

Supreme Court decides to rule on legality of executing minors

Candidates battle up to election

CHICAGO (AP)—Mayor Harold Washington fretted about vote fraud and overconfidence hours before Tuesday's Democratic primary, while challenger Jane Byrne's camp said a new poll showing the incumbent pulling away was "phony, phony, phony."

The candidates' Monday campaign schedules included city-wide blitzes to maximize turnout among the faithful, and each called a heavy turnout crucial to the outcome.

The mayor went one step further, reiterating his contention made over the weekend that his foes might try to "steal, steal, steal" the election.

"We should put (ballots) on an assembly line and open the computers to the people, let the people observe it," Washington said at a campaign stop.

Otherwise, he added, "You can jam them, jog them, and fake them."

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Supreme Court said Monday it will decide whether the death penalty is a valid punishment for convicted murderers who committed their crimes before they were 18-years-old.

The justices agreed to hear the appeal of Oklahoma death row inmate William Hayes Thompson, convicted of a murder committed when he was 15.

Thompson's appeal contends that executing teenage killers violates the Constitution's ban on "cruel and unusual punishment."

Of the more than 1,800 men and women on death rows nationwide, about 35 of them were convicted of crimes they committed as juveniles.

Of the 69 U.S. prison inmates executed since 1977, three were killed for murders committed before they were 18.

The high court attempted to resolve the same issue in 1982, in the case of Oklahoma death row inmate Monte Lee Eddings, but decided his case on other constitutional grounds.

A decision in Thompson's case is expected sometime in 1988.

Returning from a four-week recess with a flurry of activity, the court also:

•Refused to use a case from Minnesota to reconsider its past rulings that let states require some girls who seek abortions to get permission from their parents or a judge.

•Agreed to judge the validity of a Virginia law banning the commercial display of some sexually explicit materials where children might get at them.

Development firm gets funds

Corporation plans 3 projects with money

By JEFF BRITT
Staff writer

An East Central Illinois firm is receiving $75,000 from the the Corridors of Opportunity program in the governor's office.

Former Eastern president Daniel Marvin is president of the East Central Illinois Development Corporation, the recipient of the funds.

Marvin explained the Corridors of Opportunity. "It's a program initiated by Governor Thompson's administration and it fundamentally says there are regions of the state that are natural regions and that these natural regions of the state have similar opportunities for economic development."

The purpose of the corridors program, he said, is to "promote regional economic development."

Describing the purpose of the development corporation, a not-for-profit organization, he said, "We are involved in economic development . . . to promote new business and industrial growth."

Three plans have been made for the money. "We will use it to undertake a research project to identify markets and suppliers of our existing business industry."

The second plan is "to do a regional promotional effort," Marvin said.

The third part of the plan is to "provide an economical assistance network that is actively engaged in economics."

The Corridors of Opportunity awarded $340,000 throughout the state, the ECIDC being but one of five recipients.

Internships for minorities available

By ANDRE LEVIE
Staff writer

The Board of Governors' Minority Internship Program is offering a limited number of paid internships for eligible Eastern students during the 1987 summer session.

Informational meetings concerning the program will be held at 6 and 7 p.m. Tuesday in the Union addition Schahrer room.

Shirley Moore, dean of academic development, said the meetings will cover such topics as how the program is funded, what the program has done and requirements for students. She added that "applications will be passed out to interested students."

To be eligible for a paid intership, the student must be of at least junior standing, have a 2.75 or higher grade point average and be a minority and American citizen.

Each internship pays $1,000 a month for either an eight week or twelve week assignment in a government post or in an Illinois business or association.

Eastern juniors Diane Hubbartt and Paul Johnson are currently receiving money for spring semester BOG internships, Moore said.

Hubbartt is serving her internship at the Charleston Coalition Against Domestic Violence and Johnson is in Chicago serving under Mayor Harold Washington, she said.

Moore said last year Illinois provided $300,000 for the program, financing 61 internships for students in BOG schools.

Students interested in pursuing public service careers or policy-making positions are encouraged to apply, Moore said. The application deadline for the program is March 13.

Judicial Board sets penalty guidelines for students

Editor's note: This is the second article in a five part series focusing on Eastern's Judicial Review Board. The various sanctions the board can impose is the topic of this article.)

By JEFF MCCOMBS
Staff writer

Students found guilty of violating Eastern's Student Conduct Code will find more than just a judicial board hearing awaiting them. They will also discover a wide range of penalties.

Keith Kohanzo, Eastern's judicial hearing officer, said there are certain guidelines the board follows in setting its disciplinary sanctions, but these sanctions are not etched in stone.

"We handle each student and situation individually," Kohanzo said.

Some of the common violations that require disciplinary sanctions include; the removal of window screens, violation of visitation policies, misuse of meal stickers, alcohol, fireworks, disruptive conduct/destruction of property, tampering with fire and safety equipment and possession of marijuana.

The sanction for many of these violations include a fine to the student. Kohanzo noted that the money collected goes directly to the housing office.

The biggest fine levied against a student is for possession of marijuana, he added. The first offense will cost the student $50.

Kohanzo said that if the student is caught in the residence hall or even by the University Police with marijuana, the suspects normally are not turned over to the Charleston City Police.

In situations where the disciplinary sanctions are not suggested, Kohanzo said they take each incident case by case.

"We try to weigh the relative severity in connection with the expectations of the student," Kohanzo said.

Once the student has been found guilty, or has admitted their guilt, usually someone in Eastern's judicial affairs office will consult with Kohanzo on the action planned to be taken.

In some circumstances, the student is placed on university disciplinary probation, which Kohanzo said is just one step short of suspension.

Kohanzo said a student who is on university disciplinary probation is not allowed to serve on any student/faculty board or university government committee. The student also cannot participate in intramural athletic competition.

A student found in violation of the code may also be placed on residence hall probation. Students on this probation cannot represent their hall on any residence hall council, committee, judicial board or hall intramural team. The student also may not be a member of the Residence Hall Association and is ineligible for RHA awards.

"There is an extra burden for freshman who are on residence hall probation because freshman are required to live on campus. Therefore, if a freshman is expelled from the residence hall for a disruptive action, the president will normally suspend the student from the university as well," Kohanzo said.

"During the average semester, we have 15 students at any one time on disciplinary probation," Kohanzo said.

Kohanzo noted that currently there are 27 students on university disciplinary probation, while 23 are on residence hall probation.

The most severe disciplinary sanctions a student could have placed on him is suspension or expulsion from the university, Kohanzo said.

Violations which would meet these requirements are instances of theft; inflicting bodily harm; dealing in controlled substances; possession of more than one ounce of marijuana or possession of any amount of "hard" drugs, such as cocaine, PCP, heroine and others, he noted.

One instance in the past in which a student was expelled from Eastern was when that student was found to be manufacturing amphetamines, Kohanzo said.

Students have also been suspended for creating false fire alarms, forging checks, assault and possession of cocaine, Kohanzo said.

This year, there have been four expulsions, (cocaine dealing, sending a person to take a writing competency exam, two students for hard drugs) and five suspensions, (stealing keys to an office and stealing an exam; two students for stealing and forging of checks; one student involved in the Phi Sigma Kappa handcuffing incident, and repeated violations of possession of marijuana), Kohanzo said.

"It might seem like we have a lawless campus, which is anything but the truth," Kohanzo said. "On the whole, we have well-mannered students that conform to expectations."

Proposed town relations plan good idea but...

A recent administration proposal is taking yet another shot at the elusive goal of better town-gown relations.

Eastern President Stanley Rives has suggested a city-university committee to look at the situation, and Student Body President Mike Madigan says he's ready to run with the idea. Madigan and Rives have both said discussion will likely revolve around conflicts between residents and off-campus students—loud parties, neighbor relations and so forth.

The idea of better communications is obviously a good one, but there are a few factors the Student Senate should consider before charging.

First of all, we have to wonder just what the student and city representatives think they are going to do about loud parties.

Realistically, this committee could study problems and make recommendations from now until doomsday, but there will always be students intent on drinking a few more beers and cranking the music up a little louder. The only real solution to the "loud party" problem is a more visible police presence—a solution which hardly needs a committee behind it.

We're not saying the senate should scrap the whole committee, but we would suggest that the issues focus on more tangible town-gown problems, such as parking, utility taxes and apartment rental practices.

But there is also the problem of the historic failure of these "better relations" committees. It seems that every Charleston politician in recent memory—whether for the Student Senate or the City Council—lists better town-gown relations as an important goal. Yet nothing ever comes of it.

Most recently, there was the idea to appoint a student senator to attend City Council meetings as a non-voting member. Far from improving relations, the senator, in his first chance to speak, discredited the city's building inspector, and that was the end of that idea.

This proposed committee is a good idea and the senate should definitely go ahead with it. But if it's going to work, we need to go in with a solid lesson from the past and a clear agenda for the future.

Grasping the meaning of 'Platoon'

War. Death. Dying. Suffering. Inevitable insanity. Survival.

I wanted to write about the movie Platoon, but I don't know where to start.

I was overwhelmed. Was it really like that, or did Hollywood spice it up to draw in the box office bucks?

I had heard that it was a realistic account of the Vietnam war. I didn't like the movie. I was glad I saw it.

It scared me. Killing seemed so easy and so senseless. We have such a tentative hold on life.

The men in the movie could have been my dad or my uncle. They were just guys molded by what was.

The scene in the movie I'm about to describe is not the worst by far. In fact, it was rather tame compared to some of the other atrocities perpetuated in the name of patriotism.

The platoon took over a civilian village. The village was filled with the usual. Women, children, old men, cripples, weapons.

A soldier, who could have easily been the boy next door, beat the brains out of a village boy. The boy didn't have a right leg or arm or eye. The soldier killed him because he thought he was smiling at him. At least that was the surface reason an armed, 18 year-old, baby-faced soldier brained a defenseless cripple.

Before the soldier killed him, another soldier made the cripple dance while he shot a rain of bullets at the boy's foot.

You see, the platoon had just found one of their buddies strung up on a tree. I think he was garrotted. I'm not for sure. All I know is he was dead at the hands of the Vietnamese.

I guess it didn't matter to the killer soldier whether or not the cripple was an enemy or one of the people he was there to protect and possibly liberate. The cripple looked like the people who had brutally ended the life of his comrade. And anyway, how could he be sure he wasn't from the other side?

Did the soldier focus his feelings of helplessness and unreasoning fury on the cripple? Did it feel good to kill? What kind of release was it?

Everybody seemed so impotent. They couldn't control the brutality of life. They couldn't control the brutality of death. And they certainly couldn't control the war.

All the carefully maintained rules of civilization were gone. Idealism didn't count. Reality spoke for itself. They seemed to hide their humanity in order to survive with their sanity and lives intact.

I wonder what it was like coming back the American way of life. I can remember being a little girl and asking a vet if they had killed someone. What do you say to an innocent 5-year-old about the things you survived and the reason you fought.

Two men sitting in front of us at the movie got up and left after the first killing. They said that was enough of that. They looked about the right age. What did they remember watching the giant screen? Were they propelled back to the inescapable reality of the Vietnamese jungles?

The movie didn't blame anyone for what they did. It didn't seem to be a statement against the Vietnam war. It just seemed to be a statement of the Vietnam war.

Even if it had been World War I or II with the national feelings of justification and rightness—men killing men, women and children would have been wrong. It just doesn't make any sense.

War just doesn't seem to be the way to protect peace. The movie scared me so much because war is still a reality. What if the next one is the last one? What if the people I love are asked to give not only their lives, but their souls next time?

There is so much at stake. Why can't we learn? Hopefully Platoon will make us think. Hopefully it'll be the last movie they have to make about a war.

AMA is celebrating its 50th anniversary

Editor: I would like to issue a little reminder to undecided majors to think strongly about a career in marketing. I would also like to take this opportunity to welcome you to "Marketing Week."

This week, we are celebrating the American Marketing Association's 50th anniversary. It is a week devoted to making marketing more visible throughout the country. At the collegiate level, its purpose is to encourage students to think about marketing as a possible career.

Marketing is a strong major here at Eastern. Backed by a strong, diversified curriculum and good faculty. Marketing graduates had one of the highest starting salaries among graduates of last year. The AMA chapter here, one of the largest organizations on campus, is also enjoying continued success.

Help needed for $2 million dream

By KEVIN McDERMOTT
Senior reporter

On a late Monday afternoon some 90 residents of Heritage House—a home for the mentally handicapped on 18th Street—are eating dinner.

The scene is almost festive, with a lot of talk and laughter echoing around the cavernous dining hall. But tucked away in one corner of the hall is a more serious scene.

There's a small adjoining room, loaded with desks, boxes, charts, stacks of paperwork, file cabinets—bureaucratic necessities of every kind. In the room, three young people are stamping envelopes and chatting about whatever.

It's a little hard to believe they're laying the groundwork for an ambitious, multi-million dollar community project.

"I know this project is going to go through," says Augustine "Augie" Oruwari, one of a handful of area residents working toward the construction of the Graywood Center, a proposed $2 million recreational facility for the mentally handicapped.

"We're raising money any which-way you could think of," Oruwari said. "We have 4,000 letters (asking for contributions) ready to go, and we're also going to deal with professional fundraising organizations.

"Right now, we're just waiting for the money. If we get the money today, we'll start building today."

In fact, Oruwari, a counselor at Heritage House, already refers to the Graywood Center in the present tense—as if the fact that it hasn't yet been built is a mere technicality.

Oruwari first dreamt up the facility in November. At that time, it was a modest, $10,000 building containing little more than a basketball court.

Now it's a $2 million complex, complete with classrooms, a kitchen, a pool room, an Olympic-size swimming pool, a weight room, a gymnasium and just about everything else the typical athlete could want.

To be located on two acres of donated land on 18th Street, the center will be privately run, with no official ties to Heritage House or anyone raising campaign. The staff plans to send out 4,000 envelopes in hopes of raising $2 million for a recreational facility for the mentally handicapped.

else—except the community.

Although the foremost purpose of center will be to train athletes for competition in the Special Olympics, Oruwari stressed that he is counting on the community to help build it and to use it.

"We're talking about the Special Population (mentally handicapped) in all these areas that want it," he said. "But it's going to be open to anyone. They (the handicapped) will have priority, but it will be open to the public in general."

He added that, as a community project, Graywood Center will give local donors something to be proud of. "Ten years from now, they could come back to Charleston and say, I helped build that."

Although tentatively scheduled for spring, even Oruwari is not sure when construction on the building will actually begin. The final architectural plans for the center are expected this week, and the contractor—Tom Lynch & Associates of Charleston—has agreed to begin construction as soon as half of the necessary $2 million has been raised.

"There have been a lot of promises (of contributions)," Oruwari said. "Right now, all we're waiting for is the money."

Oruwari originally tested the waters for the fundraising project by sending out 10 random letters asking for citizens' support. He knew he was onto something when five of the letters came back with pledged contributions.

Oruwari has since expanded his fundraising contacts to include major corporations, social agencies and even Eastern's Greek system. Because most of the contributions are only in the form of pledges, he could not estimate how much has already been raised.

One donor Oruwari is definitely not counting is local government. He said it is important to keep the facility in private hands, free of city ties.

"We wanted to keep the city out of this because of all the politics," he said. "We do not want politicians to slow us down. We don't want this to become another Rotary Pool."

He was referring to the current Charleston City Council controversy over funding for the city swimming pool.

"We're getting a lot of support (for the project)," Oruwari said. "We do have a need for this. We're going very carefully and, at the same time, we're going very fast."

minimum C grade for each course.

Doherty, an economics major, said he would have been able to graduate this coming summer if all his classes had been taken on schedule. As it turns out, he'll have to wait until December.

"Last semester I had all my classes dropped," he said. This was despite the fact that he pre-enrolled. "I ended up taking electives I didn't need or want.

"Yeah, it's overloaded," said economics instructor Bill Lynn. "It's the university's fault.

"Now they got a million dollars (referring to R. A. Lumpkin's donation to the school of business). They should be able to get another instructor," Lynn added.

Lynn theorized that a contributing factor to the problem is students opting for an economics major after they had academic difficulties in the business school.

"The ones who are not making it in business are coming over here. The GPA required to get into business is pretty high."

He referred to overcrowded conditions in his classes. "I have two classes with a 40 maximum and I've got 48 in each class."

He said he allows an excess in his classes. "Now if they drop the class, that's their problem. We can at least let them in if we can."

Edgar Schick, vice president for academic affairs, said he is aware of a problem and actions have been taken in the past.

He said the economics faculty has been increased every year since he has held his position.

Corley doesn't know how much the increase has been, but he said, "That's not enough."

"This past year the CAA (Council on Academic Affairs), at the request of the department of economics and the curriculum committee of the college of arts and sciences, put limitations on a GPA requirement" to have an economics major, Schick said.

"There are one or two courses that are specifically required for the student to have a 2.0 GPA to major in economics," Schick said.

If the problem is not rectified, students will have to wait another semester to get in the classes, said economics department chair Ahmad Murad.

COTE will not meet

The Council on Teacher Education will not meet Tuesday because of a lack of agenda items.

The COTE meets Tuesdays at 2 p.m. in the Union.

"We just didn't have any business that came up and we didn't have any old business," said COTE chair Patricia Barnhart.

CIPS conversion will cut off power

CHRISTAL PHILPOTT
Editor

Students may experience a slight inconvenience today as the Central Illinois Public Service Company shuts down power in one section of Easton.

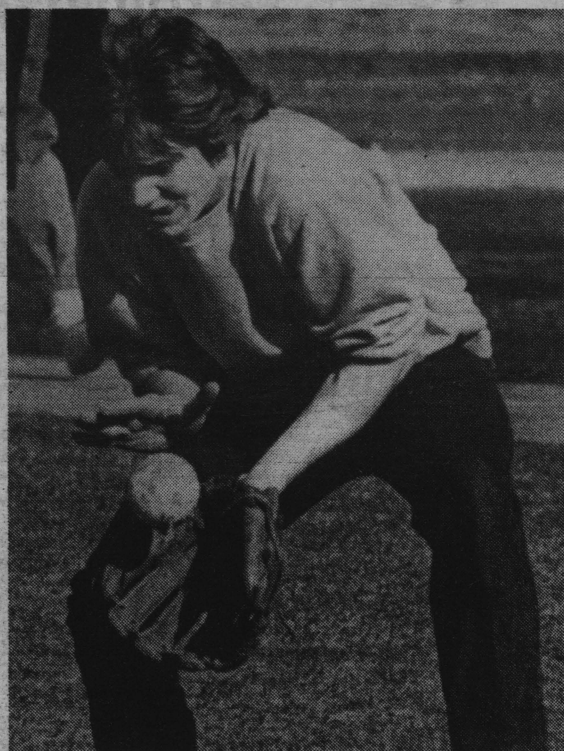

Power will be shut down from 2 until 3:30 p.m. in an area from Grant Street to the south, along the east side of Division Avenue to Lincoln Avenue, to the north and westward including Orchard Drive, Chamberlin Street and south side of Mason Avenue.

Only two business buildings will be effected during the shutdown—McDonald's, 12 W. Lincoln Ave., and the Howard Eads/Personal Finance Building complex, 10 Lincoln Ave., CIPS District Superintendent Norm Spear said.

The shutdown will enable CIPS workers to finish conversion project, which will convert a transformer from 4,160 Volts to 12,500 Volts.

Wednesday's planned conversion is the last part of a two-part conversion, which began about a year ago, Spear said.

The users won't change at all. But, it increases the opportunity for growth in that area three-fold, Spear said.

Senate to discuss oral proficiency

By JEFF BRITT
Staff writer

Edgar Schick, vice president for academic affairs, will discuss the progress made on implementing the oral proficiency exam at the Faculty Senate meeting Tuesday in the Union addition Martinsville room.

"The Faculty Senate had expressed concern over the passage of that oral proficiency test," said Faculty Senate Chair Mary Wohlrahe.

Schick is on a committee comprised of all the vice presidents for academic affairs in the five Board of Governors schools. He will report on whatever progress the committee has made.

The senate had expressed opposition to the law before it was passed by the General Assembly over Gov. James Thompson's veto.

"We got a response from Dean (Samuel) Taber (of student academic services) on getting more information in the academic calendar," Wohlrahe said. The calendar will have additional information beginning with the fall semester of 1988.

"Scott Smith and myself met with (Student Body President Mike) Madigan to discuss a Faculty Senate report on the student housing issue," Wohlrahe said. The senate has expressed concern over some students living in poor housing.

Cole Scholarship available for graduates and seniors

PATRICK VELASCO
Staff writer

Applications for the Cole Scholarship, available to Marshall High School graduates and current seniors, are now being accepted.

The Cole Scholarship (started in 1963) is a cash payment of $1,000," said Charles Titus, secretary for the Foundation.

The winner of this scholarship is chosen by a committee of Eastern's faculty. "The executive officer forms the committee," Titus said.

The executive officer of the Foundation is Daniel Thornburgh. Thornburgh is also the director of University Relations.

"The scholarship winner must be a graduate of Marshall High School," Thornburgh said. Economic need, moral and civil character and academic achievement are taken into consideration when choosing a recipient. He said the same person may be chosen two consecutive years in a row.

The donor of the Cole Scholarship wishes to remain anonymous until the time of his or her death, Thornburgh said. Therefore, there are "no ceremonies because the donor is not desirous of a lot of publicity."

Last year's recipient of the Cole Scholarship was senior Cornelia Marie Wieck, an English major with a minor in Latin.

Wieck applied as a junior and is receiving the scholarship award now, for her senior year.

Wieck said that "being involved in campus activities, having a fairly good GPA and showing good leadership through clubs and sports" are some good edges for winning the award.

Wieck is a captain on Eastern's swim team and a member of several honor societies, such as the English Honor Society.

Applications for the scholarship will be accepted until March 13 and may be turned in at the Alumni Office in the Brainard House, 1548 Fourth St., or to the principal of Marshall High School. Winners of the award will be notified in the spring.

Spring training 'big' test for 2 ex-Panthers

DAN VERDUN
Sports editor

Two ex-Eastern baseball standouts, Kevin Pyznarski and Kevin Seitzer, the next six weeks may prove to be the most important of their careers.

Both former Panthers will report to spring training camps in late February with the intent to make a major league impact on their clubs.

While Pyznarski will report to the Milwaukee Brewer camp in Arizona, Seitzer will be with the Kansas City Royals at Fort Meyers, Fla.

Pyznarski

Spring generally brings fresh hope and enthusiasm, and that's certainly true for Pyznarski this season.

Last year's Sporting News Minor League Player of the Year finds himself with a new team this spring. Pyznarski was dealt to Milwaukee from the San Diego Padres in December.

Consequently, Pyznarski—Eastern's lifetime home run and RBI king—finds himself in a battle with other players for the Brewers' first base-designated hitter slot.

In less than a week, Pyznarski will begin the head-to-head competition with Greg Brock, Cecil Cooper, Joey Meyer, Billy Jo Robidoux and Jim Adduci for coveted playing time.

Ironically, Pyznarski and Adduci spent the winter working out together at former major leaguer Eric Soderholm's hitting school and at Marist High School in Chicago.

"We went through a pretty vigorous program six days a week," Pyznarski said in a telephone interview. "We lifted, ran sprints, played one-on-one full-court basketball, threw and hit."

Thus, just as his body is in shape for the coming conflict, so is his mental focus.

"I hope that I can sneak in there and show them what I can do," Pyznarski said.

The ex-Panther noted that being a right-handed hitter should help him to get playing time.

"For now I'll be satisfied playing against left-handers until I do well enough to get regular time," he said.

Pyznarski is coming off a sparkling season in which he hit .326 with 23 homers, 25 steals and 119 RBI for Las Vegas of the Pacific Coast League.

However, after the 27-year-old was recalled by San Diego, he had more at-bats without an RBI (42) than any major leaguer.

"I know I'm going to get my chance, so now I've just got to go out and have a good spring training," Pyznarski said.

Kevin Seitzer

Seitzer appears to have a shot at cracking the Royals' starting lineup on a platoon basis. But he isn't about to count on anything.

"I'm just going to do what I've always done and that's relax and play ball the way I know how," Seitzer said in a telephone interview from Milledgeville, Ga. where he has been working out at tiny Georgia College with former Eastern graduate assistant Matt Fincher.

Following an all-star season with Triple-A Omaha, Seitzer spent the final month of the season in the Royal lineup.

A hit from his very first appearance in which he scored the tying run and drove in the game-winner against the Chicago White Sox, Seitzer went on to hit .323 for Kansas City.

Despite being named the Royals' Minor League Player of the Year, Seitzer knows all too well that he must have a strong spring to impress the Royal front office.

"My chances are really good, but you never know what could happen," Seitzer said.

Dean Taylor, assistant to the general manager for Kansas City, said that it "isn't a forgone conclusion that Kevin Seitzer will even make our club."

However, Taylor added that the Panthers' all-time leading hitter does stand a pretty good chance.

"It's difficult to say where he would play," Taylor said. "A lot depends upon Steve Balboni's back injury."

"I've just got to be ready and play to my ability," Seitzer said.

Eastern to form bicycling club

An organizational meeting will be held at 5 p.m. Thursday for those interested in joining an Eastern bicycling club.

The meeting will be held in Room 108 of McAfee Gym. The club will seek to meet the needs of all serious, long-distance and recreational cyclists.

Further information can be obtained by contacting Dr. Ewen Bryden at 581-3018.

The final four spots in the poll were hotly contested as they all were within two points of each other.

The Bud Lights, 3-0, and Red Raiders, 3-0, tied for the seventh spot with 18 points. The Bud Lights did not play last week while the Red Raiders trounced the Unknowns 110-

Sigma Chi, 2-1, and Delta Chi, 3-0, finish out the Top Ten with 17 and 16 points respectively. Neither team played last week. The entry of Sigma Chi in the poll marks the first time this season that a team with a loss has entered the poll. Sigma Chi's only loss was to Delta Chi.

Schaefer Light, NOYFB and the Motor City Players fell out of the poll and into the Honorable Mention category this week.

Pintos take over fourth place in intramural poll

By TIM LEE
Staff writer

In an unprecedented move in the short history of the Daily Eastern News recreational men's basketball poll, the Pintos, unranked last week, moved into the fourth spot after defeating previously unbeaten Schaefer Light, 60-58.

The Pintos, 4-0, also defeated Half Fast last week 66-34 to claim the highest entry ever into the poll.

The loss by Schaefer Light, which had been ranked second for the past two weeks and were inching toward the top spot, has shaken up the poll which is voted on by recreational sports supervisors and officials.

R-Meat, 3-0, remains the top team in the poll for the fourth straight week and they did it in convincing fashion. After defeating Delta Tau Delta last week 68-41, R-Meat garnered five out of six first-place votes and 59 of 60 total points, the closest a team has come to unanimity since last year's final poll when the Connection received 69 of 70.

The Supreme Court, 3-0, though inactive last week moved up into the vacancy at the second spot and claimed 40 points, easily outdistancing Sigma Pi.

Sigma Pi, 4-0, jumped two spots in the poll and claimed 29 points after defeating the Jacksons 87-32. The Pintos received 25 points.

Immediately behind the Pintos with 24 points were both the Request Line, 3-0, and the Known, 4-0. The Request Line received the final first-

Cagers scrap for tough 65-55 win over No. Iowa

By JOHN STROUD
Associate sports editor

Tough clutch play by Eastern propelled the Panther men's basketball team to victory at Northern Iowa Monday for their second AMCU-8 win of the season 65-55.

Northern Iowa didn't take the fall easy though, as the purple Panthers' Nick Nurse connected on back-to-back three pointers inside five minutes to cut Eastern's lead to two, 49-47.

Eastern's Panthers were paced by guard Jay Taylor, who answered Nurse's long shots with a tough basket underneath to break the Northern Iowa momentum. Norm Evans hit eight free throws in the final 1:50 to give the Panthers a 63-55 lead with only 19 second remaining. Tony Hemphill hit two free throws with one second left for the final margin.

"That kind of scared me," Eastern coach Rick Samuels said of the quick six points by Nurse. "That's just his competitive nature. But Taylor hit a tough shot and it broke their momentum."

The Panthers move to 2-10 in the league and 7-17 overall. Northern Iowa drops to 12-13 and 6-6 in the AMCU.

"I thought we were alert and playing well," Samuels said. "We showed the same spirit we had Saturday night" against conference-leading Southwest Missouri, when the Panthers took the Bears to the wire but lost by two.

Balanced Panther scoring helped the cause. Taylor burned the nets with 23 points (14 in the second half) to lead the team. He also led in rebounding with 12. Hemphill had 18 points and Evans had 11 (nine on free throws) while Dave Stein added nine points.

Northern Iowa was led in scoring by Jason Reese and Nurse who both had 12 points. Greg McDermott added 11 points.

Although the Panthers went zero for nine to open the first seven minutes of play, tough defensive play kept Northern Iowa in check, and Eastern was able to stay in the fight. Both teams shot poorly in the first half as the Panthers connected on only eight of 26 attempts from the field while Northern Iowa was 10 of 25.

Eastern grabbed a 26-22 halftime advantage on a pair of buckets by Stein in the final minute.

A four corners spread-out offense, which was successful against Southwest Missouri Saturday, was used to the Panthers' advantage again Monday.

"We didn't really get many scoring opportunities out of it," Samuels said, "but it allowed us to stay in the game." He added that the four corners also cut down on turnovers as the Panthers gave up the ball 13 times. Northern Iowa had 12 turnovers.

The Panthers also held a substantial 38-27 rebounding advantage over the purple Panthers.

"We did a good job switching defenses, and we shut off Northern Iowa's inside game," Samuels said.

"Obviously we'd like to win the rest of our games, especially the rest of our conference games" as the Panthers prepare for next week's post-season conference tournament at Southwest Missouri.

Boards and high scoring keys in Lady Panthers triumph over Butler

By MIKE FITZGERALD
Staff writer

INDIANAPOLIS—Eastern forward Lisa Tyler and guard Sheryl Bonsett not only had Butler's number Monday, but also the number of their family members that watched Eastern thrash Butler 81-58.

Tyler, a native of Aurora, Ind. scored 20 points, one point for each of the family members that saw her play. Bonsett, a native of Scottsburg, Ind. dished out 10 assists, one for each family member in attendance, as the Lady Panthers raised its record to 14-12.

Both Tyler and Bonsett said their families attendance played big roles in their performances.

"My family really helped me as did Sheryl's family," Tyler said.

"It was nice. They got me keyed up and I wanted to do well in front of them," Bonsett said.

The victory over Butler, which fell to 9-16, was a tune-up for the two important Gateway Conference games this week which will decide if the Panthers continue on to post season play.

Eastern broke from the gate early, opening an 18-12 lead with 10:23 to play in the first half.

The Panthers then proceeded to outscore the Bulldogs 22-15 during the remaining 10 plus minutes of the half with center Brenda Webb hitting six of seven from the floor to pace Eastern.

The Panthers led Butler at the half 40-27, with Webb leading all scorers with 12 points.

"Brenda had a great shooting night even though she was hampered by foul trouble," head coach Robbie Hilke said.

Eastern's play midway in the second half almost spoiled the family affair.

The Panthers opened up a 48-31 cushion with 14:59 to play, but Butler outscored Eastern 17-6 over a five minute stretch to pull to 54-48 with 9:30 to play.

"We started extremely well and got a large lead, but then gave it back," Hilke said.

Bonsett agreed.

"We played good in the first half, but then we got a little relaxed after we got the lead," Bonsett said.

It was Bonsett's jumper that got Eastern rolling again. Center Laura Mull then put in three short jumpers in a row to give the Panthers a 62-50 lead which they just kept building on.

Mull scored 14 points and grabbed nine rebounds, while Webb finished with 12 points and three boards.

"Laura and Brenda posted well for us tonight. We're in good shape when they do this because it takes pressure off of the guards," Hilke added.

The Panthers dominated Butler on the boards, out-rebounding them 47-31 despite giving up some height underneath.

Tyler continued her fine board work by leading Eastern with 11 rebounds.

"We need to feel Lisa (Tyler's) presence on the boards and she was there tonight," Hilke said.

Eastern also shot 54 percent from the floor for the game while holding Butler to 30 percent from the floor for the night.

The Panthers will return to action on Thursday night when they host GCAC foe Wichita State at 7:30 p.m. in Lantz Gym.
