Eastern freshman charged with criminal trespassing

By CLARK CARLSON
and DONELLE PARDEE
Staff writers

Freshman Kyle Garrett was arrested Thursday in connection with an incident in Weller Hall where a 19-year-old student was awakened by someone tugging on her foot.

Police took Garrett into custody based on a description from witnesses and the victim. After conducting an investigation and interrogating Garrett, he was charged with battery and criminal trespassing, said University Police Chief Tom Larson.

Larson said the woman's room was unlocked, however, he added he was not sure how Garrett could have gotten into the women's side of Weller Hall. It is suspected that Garrett's Weller Hall room key could have unlocked the corridor to the women's side.

Director of Housing Lou

Hencken said although he is not certain if the rumor of a key being used is true, the lock cores were changed by 3 p.m. Wednesday. Hencken added this was done before Garrett was arrested because "we did not want to take any chances."

If necessary, Garrett's key, which was confiscated by investigating officer Jack Chambers, will be checked with the core that was originally in Weller Hall. The Physical Plant will put the core back in the door and check the key to see if it does open the door, Hencken said.

Hencken added it is vital the Housing Office be informed if there is a problem with keys opening up doors other than the ones they are intended to open.

State's attorney Nancy Owen said because the charges are misdemeanors the paperwork is handled by the Circuit Clerk's office and she does not have any information on the case.

Charleston police crack down on six Eastern party houses

By JEFF MADSEN
Staff editor

The residents of Eastern's six biggest "party houses" may be reluctant to throw another party over the next few months.

The day after the six "party houses" were featured in Friday's On The Verge of the Weekend, Charleston Police took action to stop future parties.

The Charleston Police Department used the article to crack down on the houses. The feature story said some of the residents made $150 profits on after-party parties and collected various road signs from area highways.

On Saturday morning, a Charleston police officer went to each of the six houses listed in the story to issue a "blanket warning" that the residents could be arrested if they continued to have parties, and in two cases, confiscated road signs from inside the home.

"They can't sell cups and give away liquor," Charleston Police Chief Maurice Johnson said Monday. "We're not against them having a party, but they can't infringe on anyone else's rights by having a party."

Johnson said if the houses were sponsoring parties and selling cups to students, they could be charged with operating a bar without a license.

He added if minors were drinking at any of the parties, the "party house" residents and their landlords could be charged with contributing to the delinquency of minors.

"There are several different charges depending on the circumstances. They're (the party house residents) well aware of that and there should not be any doubts in their minds."

Senior zoology major Dan Klett, 22, and resident of "The Bedrock Inn," 1803 12th St., said he and his housemates understand what the police told them

Saturday.

"They gave us a blanket warning and in our case, confiscated our road signs," Klett said. "They said if we had a party and they (the police) get called, an officer could arrest us (without warning)."

"The officer was doing his job and everything he said was correct," Klett added. "The article, as it was written, was causing a lot of hardships between the city and the students. If you were a neighbor and read that, you would have been worried. There was no blood, they were just laying down the law," he said.

The other houses; "The Vomit House," 1225 Second St., "The Penguin House," 1415 Ninth St., "The Tri-Ted House," 1061 Seventh St., "The Football House," 1125 Fourth St., and "The Jizz House," 1603 Tenth St., were all given similar warnings. The police also confiscated road signs from The Penguin House.

"They (police) just basically said that they'll come and arrest us and that there were no second chances," said Steve Siciliano, 22, a resident of the Penguin House. "They also took three or four of our road signs and told us to take the rest down and bring them to them."

Lanman said he hopes to open communication lines

By SUSAN THOMAS
Staff writer

Wayne Lanman is asking the residents of Charleston to "help me help you" as he seeks the city's mayoral seat in the upcoming Feb. 28 primary election.

Lanman, 63, of 1404 Division St., has been involved in Charleston politics for 24 years. His goals include opening a better line of communication all around Charleston.

Lanman said if he wins he hopes to improve communications between the university, city council and economic chambers.

Although he would favor a tax increase to support higher education, he said he is not certain of how to improve the educational system. "There are some very intelligent people in education," he said, "and some of them know how to improve the system."

Lanman is taking an opposing side on the issue of raising the local bar admittance age to 21. He said he does not favor minors drinking but that "it's important for students to have a place to go. If they don't stay in Charleston they will go to the nearby towns. I don't see any reason why they should be on the road after drinking."

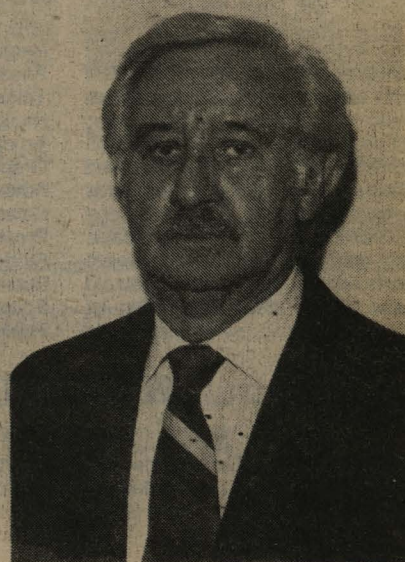

Lanman said he has taken pride in his work as the city's streets commissioner since 1977, but said there is still room for improvement.

"Our streets and water need improvements. We need more police and a new city council. The city needs money," he said, pointing toward an open line of communication as the means for achieving it all.

This Charleston native, now retired as an assistant vice president at the Charleston National Bank, will have to give up his position as streets commissioner in the event of a loss during the February election. Lanman said if he does not win the mayoral seat he will "continue to be retired."

However, he noted that for him "communication lines will always be open."

Wayne Lanman

Bush began the second week of his presidency nursing the persistent cold that had forced him to cancel a Sunday visit to the presidential retreat at Camp David with House Speaker Jim Wright.

Soviet soldiers entered Afghanistan's civil war nine years ago and are to be gone by Feb. 15 under a U.N.-mediated agreement. Moslem insurgents, who get most of their support from the United States and Pakistan, were not parties to the agreement and predict victory soon after the Red army is gone.

Stephen Selig, a commodities law professor at New York University and former chairman for the New York Bar Association's committee on futures regulation, said he expects investors who feel cheated to go to court to recover their losses.

Wall prefers workload at Health Service

By MARIE GROVES
and DONELLE PARDEE

Although many physicians would rather work in the busy setting of a private practice and hospital, Dr. Joseph Wall prefers the workload at Eastern's Health Service.

Maintaining free time is the essential enjoyment of working at Health Service, Wall said, adding he prefers the hours.

Wall formerly worked as an emergency physician at the Carle and Christi clinics in Champaign.

He said emergency medicine offers excitement, but the routine is very stressful and after awhile many doctors choose to settle down to something not as hectic, Wall said. He added he is no exception.

He decided to work for Eastern because he believes he has reached the point in his life when he wants to settle down.

Although each Eastern doctor is on call from 4:30 to 11 p.m., he still gets more time for himself, said Wall, who has been with the Health Service for three years.

The time that Wall, 40, does have to himself is currently being spent building a log cabin in the country just east of Charleston, he said.

"Dr. (Jerry) Heath (from Health Service) built a cabin not too far from where I am building mine. It's kind of neat," Wall said, adding he hired a company to build the cabin while he does all the finishing work himself.

Originally from Alton, Ill., Wall earned his degree from the University of Illinois-Chicago, which is "the real U of I," Wall said.

He now lives on a small piece of farmland near his parents outside of Charleston.

Wall said he didn't decide to go into medicine until he was in college as a biology major. He said a student can't really do anything with a degree in biology unless they plan to teach, so he went on to medical school.

One thing Wall said he is most proud of is the year he spent in the Antarctic as a physician for the National Science Foundation on a research base.

Wall expressed satisfaction in helping students in Health Service because they are intelligent enough to decipher medical terminology and understand the nature of their illnesses.

Many students' illnesses come in epidemics, Wall said, especially the students who live in the residence halls.

With all the different diseases students can come down with, keeping up with current medical advancements is vital.

Several states require practicing doctors to enroll in continuing education classes. Although Illinois doesn't require continuing education courses, many physicians attend seminars.

Faculty Senate to discuss BOG amendments

Eastern's Faculty Senate will meet at 2 p.m. Tuesday in the Union addition Arcola-Tuscola Room to discuss upcoming amendments for Board of Governors regulations affecting faculty work.

Gary Foster, Faculty Senate chair, said BOG Chancellor Thomas Layzell has notified the senate that the board will discuss copyrights and patents at the next BOG meeting on Feb. 23 at Governors State University in University Park.

Foster said the board's regulations will affect books and articles written by faculty at the five BOG universities. "The copyrights and patents have to be in place to protect the work of the faculty," Foster said. He also said some patents and copyrights are necessary for some laboratory inventions.

In other business, the senate has been asked to appoint a replacement for Marilyn Wilkings, a representative from the Lumpkin College of Business on the Council On Teacher Education.

Tuition at Illinois colleges skyrockets

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (AP)—

Tuition and fees at Illinois' cash-strapped universities have gone up nearly three times as fast as state support to higher education over the last decade, the state comptroller's office reported Monday.

State support for higher education increased about 58 percent from fiscal year 1979 through the fiscal year that ended last June 30, while the average tuition and fees at public universities rose 150 percent during the same period, according to Comptroller Roland Burris' monthly report on state finances.

During the period, state tax money spent on higher education increased from $799 million to nearly $1.3 billion, while average annual tuition and fees jumped from $757 to $1,924.

Richard Wagner, executive director of the Illinois Board of Higher Education, said the report "confirms the things we have been saying relative to the state's investment in higher education over the years."

The board is asking the state to raise taxpayer-financed funding for colleges and universities by $305 million, or nearly 23 percent, in the fiscal year that begins

July 1.

Wagner, in unveiling the proposed budget increases, renewed the board's call for an income tax hike that has been rejected by the General Assembly in each of its last two sessions.

The proposal, which would give professors 10 percent salary increases, allows educators to freeze tuition for at least a year.

The comptroller's report also noted that the University of Illinois accounted for 49 percent of public university spending in fiscal year 1988.

That compares with about 17 percent for Southern Illinois University, about 17 percent for the three schools in the Board of Regents system and about 16 percent for the five schools run by the Board of Governors.

The report also said state support for 50 community colleges in 39 districts declined over the period.

The colleges operating revenues increased nearly 86 percent over the period to $561 million in fiscal year 1988, but the share contributed by the state went from about 34 percent in 1979 to just less than 30 percent in fiscal year 1988.

Economics professor writes study guide

By RENAE ENGLISH
Staff writer

When economics professor William Weber was asked to review a textbook he never knew it would lead to writing one.

Weber recently wrote a study guide for intermediate microeconomics published by Dryden Press. The study guide will accompany the textbook "Price Theory and Applications" by Steven Landsburg.

Unlike other study guides Weber said his is different because it has a "working through graphs section."

The section gives the steps leading up to the end result. "In other words it gives step by step process of how to complete (a graph)," Weber said. The guide also has study material such as review questions and problems for analysis, Weber said.

Weber said he was contacted by an editor of Dryden Press after reviewing one of their texts. "He (the editor) must have remembered my review and liked my writing because he asked if I was interested in helping with a new textbook," Weber said.

"Economics doesn't have to be a hard subject,"

William Weber,
Economics professor

Dryden must continue to like Weber's writing because they have asked Dryden to help on another textbook to be published next fall.

Weber said he has worked on several chapters of the new textbook, which is application oriented.

The new text will begin each chapter with "real world problems," then move to teach the economics behind the problem and finally return to solve the problem. "It's a circular process," Weber said.

Weber said he didn't really intend to get into textbook writing. "I agreed to help with one textbook and I've been working on doing them ever since," Weber said.

Weber said his interest in textbook writing grows out of an interest to simplify economics.

New absence policy needs some work

Instructors are now making the decision on whether a student is legitimately sick even though those instructors don't have medical degrees.

Although Eastern students haven't built up some impenetrable immunity to the flu and cold season which has hit, students now must often attend classes when they are ill.

The absence policy, which was recently reformed, leaves the decision making in the instructor's hands.

Under the new absence policy, students no longer go through Dean James Johnson's office for an excuse; but instead they receive a verification of the time they sought medical attention from Health Service. From that point on, the instructor decides if the reason merits an excused absence.

According to the old policy, students received an excuse through Health Service which then had to be approved by Dean Johnson. The new policy eliminates the need for any communication between Dean Johnson's office and Health Service. Presently, the only time Dean Johnson is involved with on-campus health service excuses is if the student has been absent for more than three days.

Sounds less confusing now, doesn't it? Think again. It seems that you could plead your case (not that you should have to if you're really sick) to Dean Johnson more effectively. It's kind of nice to know you have that kind of weight behind you if you need it.

Administrative Nurse Sue Lipka said in an earlier article the absence policy was always up to the instructors. Still, if Dean Johnson said the excuse was valid, we doubt the teacher would have put up to much effort to block it.

Now it's the student's word against the instructor's.

When we're sick, we'll continue to go to Health Service, but when we want sympathy, we'll phone home for chicken soup. It's still the most reliable cure for a cold or flu, yet.

Mayoral race losing ground on campus

There is going to be a mayoral primary in Charleston in 29 days and by the looks of things, you'd never know it. Four men have indicated an interest for the mayor's job, but yet only one has actively campaigned for the post.

You'd think if these guys were really interested in becoming mayor, they'd work hard to win some votes — especially on campus.

Here at Eastern, where students comprise about 25 percent of Charleston's voting population, the only candidate students identify with is Brian Nordin. Nordin, 25, a graduate economics student, has plastered his name on billboards throughout Charleston and every once and a while, unlike his opponents, you'll find his name on a sign erected in someone's front yard.

But keep driving around Charleston and you won't find many signs that read ~"Vote for Choate, Lanman or Heise." But then again, Murray Choate, Wayne Lanman and Bill Heise may not have to resort to making all kinds of campaign signs like their young challenger has. For Choate, Lanman and Heise are all long-time Charleston residents, all have been active in city politics. So when it comes to Choate, Lanman, and Heise, the residents of Charleston, not counting college students, know who they are.

But college students, about 2,500 of them who are registered to vote, don't know who they are. And if Choate, Lanman and Heise were smart, they'd introduce themselves. Sure, they're going to participate in a public forum at Coleman Hall on Feb. 16, but until then, with the exception of Nordin, none have actively campaigned on campus. They may not realize that although students only constitute 25 percent of the vote, that 25 percent is going to help knock two of

And one issue in particular is one college students are especially concerned with. For depending on who becomes mayor in the general election April 4, this decision may drastically affect a college student's social life.

And that decision is whether or not to raise the bar admittance age in Charleston to 21. Presently, 19-year-olds are admitted into bars, but prohibited (sure) from drinking. Just prior to the start of the fall semester, an 18-year-old Eastern student, Jennifer Woods, was killed in an auto accident after she had been drinking pitchers of beer all night at Marty's with two of her friends, who were both students at Charleston High School. A coroner's jury recommended the city raise the bar admittance age to 21, and now, in the midst of a mayoral election, Charleston residents have somewhat pressured the candidates to consider it.

Heise is the only candidate who has specifically declared a platform on the bar age issue. Heise, whose daughter was one of the Charleston High School students with Jennifer Woods on the night she was killed, favors raising the bar admittance age to 21 to parallel state law.

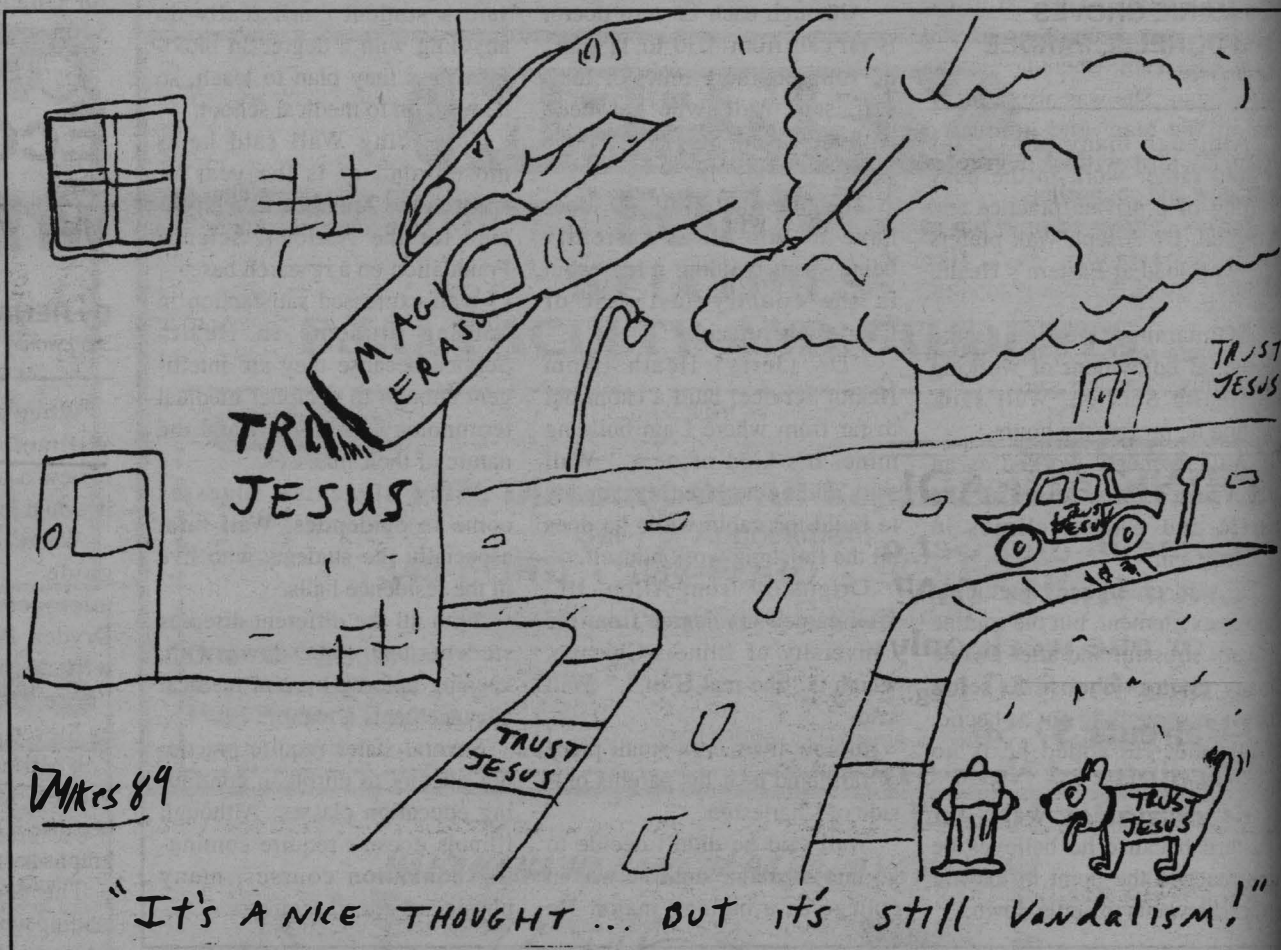

Nordin has also made a stance, a kind of ideological one. He doesn't favor raising the bar age to 21, but advocates a clear, consistently enforced liquor policy. Choate and Lanman, the two with the most municipal experience, have not yet declared a specific stand on the bar age issue.

There are about 10,800 registered voters in Charleston, including students. Only about 35 percent of them will probably vote in the actual election.

Students constitute at least one-fourth of those registered voters.

I wonder if Murray Choate, Wayne Lanman and Bill Heise have thought about that.

— Jeff Madsen is the editorial page editor and a regular columnist for The Daily Eastern News

Your turn

Student favors bar age hike

Dear editor;

I am writing in regards to mayoral candidate Bill Heise's platform stated in The Daily Eastern News on Jan. 24. I should state that I am a sophomore business major here at Eastern. At present, I am 18 years old and unlike most students in my class, I am in favor of Mr. Heise's proposal to develop an ordinance to not allow anyone under 21 to enter drinking establishments. I have heard many fellow students express their dismay at this proposition and feel I need to reply to this.

I will be honest and say that when I first arrived, I visited the bars of Charleston, but I can also count the number of times I returned (to the bars) on one hand.

Students tell me there is nothing else to do, so they go to the bars. So if I'm, not mistaken, none of these students purchase liquor, yet they protest the raising of the entrance age. Last time I checked, the only activities in the bars besides drinking consisted of playing pool, video games, eating, and listening to jukeboxes. I have seen all of these items elsewhere in Charleston. As a matter of fact, all of these can be found right here on campus.

Now, I know there is one last issue to be brought up. That being, if we are old enough to vote and fight in a war, we are old enough and responsible enough to drink. If this were the fact, then why do so many of them drive while intoxicated or vandalize our campus? Is this being responsible?

I am not against drinking, but I do not see why people our age feel they must drink to have fun. We are here to study, to prepare for the rest of our lives. So let's do it without doing our studying in the bars.

Sanders has become a tradition at Eastern

Editor's note: This is the first in a five part series focusing on the counselors at Eastern's Counseling Center.)
By BRUCE BOCK
Staff writer

Eastern's Counseling Center director claims he is older than some of the buildings currently on campus.
Bud Sanders, 54, originally from Mattoon, moved to Charleston in 1946 when he was in seventh grade.

"I remember having Charles Coleman and Leo Dvorak for class. That was before they had buildings named after them."
After attending high school in Charleston, Sanders went on to receive his bachelor's degree in social science at Eastern with a minor in physical education.

However, just having an undergraduate degree from Eastern was not enough. In 1966, he decided to complete his graduate coursework in guidance and counseling at Eastern and earned his master's degree.

In addition to his studies, Sanders was a member of the gymnastic team, where he met his wife Joann. She was also a member of the team and graduated from Eastern with a degree in guidance and counseling.

Eastern degrees seem to run in the Sanders family. Their five children are all Eastern graduates, he said.
"Eastern really is a tradition in our family," Sanders said.

Bud Sanders

Before becoming a member of the Counseling Center staff, Sanders was a member of the advisory staff starting in 1966. It was not until 1972 that he moved to the Counseling Center, 1711 Seventh Street, where he is currently the administrator.

"I became a counselor because I had the desire to help others," Sanders said. "My father was mentally ill, so I am sure that in some way this had an effect on my career choice."

"I would say the highlight of my career was when the Counseling Center, under my direction, was accredited by the International Association of Counseling Centers," Sanders said.

Another highlight as the Counseling Center director, was in 1987 when "The Daily Eastern News chose me as person of the year. This was very special to me."

When he is not helping students with their problems Sanders enjoys sports and claims to be somewhat of a frustrated jock.

"I love to run and ride my bicycle, although once when I was running I was bitten by a dog," Sanders said laughing as he remembered the incident.

Even though his athletic contributions are mainly for himself Sanders still keeps close to the sports scene by being a timekeeper at university football games and running the scoreboard at basketball games.

Sanders does not restrict his counseling abilities to the United States. Sanders attended a cross-culture counseling program in his recent trip to the Soviet Union in 1985.

"The Soviet Union is an intriguing country and it was a really unique learning opportunity," he said, adding he wanted to experience a different culture so it would be easier to counsel international students.

Not only is Sanders involved in university functions, but he also engages in various community activities. He served a four-year term on the Coles County Board and was a past chair of the United Way, in addition to serving on several university boards.

However, one of the most important factors in Sanders' family life and professional career is his faith, he said, adding "I am a member of the First Baptist Church here in Charleston. I have done everything from teaching Sunday school to singing in the church choir."

RHA members consider recent movie releases

BY LISA ALLEN
Staff writer

The residence halls may play movies like "Cocktail," if a large majority of the halls express interest to the Residence Hall Association at Thursday's meeting.

RHA delegates, who met Sunday night, decided to show movies that would appeal to a wide range of people. The delegates from several halls agreed they might attract a bigger audience if they showed two or three recent movies rather than several older films.

RHA member Shannon Colliflower said possible prospects include "The Great Outdoors," "Adventures in Babysitting," "Dragnet," "Cocktail," "Big," and "9 1/2 Weeks." A final decision will be made at the next RHA meeting.

National Residence Hall Honorary President Grahame

Wilkin resigned from National Residence Hall Honorary (NRHH) Thursday. Wilkin said he is resigning due to personal reasons.

"It'll be a good chance for someone else to get experience in the position," Wilkin said.

NRHH is an organization of the most active hall residents, hall council members and RHA members, Wilkin said.

Residence Hall Association Advisor Patrick Bradley said applications for resident assistants will be available Wednesday. Anyone interested in becoming a Resident Assistant should contact the housing office or the front desk of any residence hall, Bradley said.

In addition, Bradley updated the RHA members on changes made over Christmas break in the halls such as landscaping around the halls and new plumbing in Pemberton Hall.

North begins Iran-Contra hearing

WASHINGTON (AP)—Oliver North's Iran-Contra trial will begin Tuesday with President Bush free of a subpoena seeking his testimony but with former President Reagan still "subject to call," the judge in the case said Monday.

Portions of the Reagan's diary also might be required as evidence, U.S. District Judge Gerhard Gesell ruled. However, he rejected North's subpoena seeking Bush's testimony in the trial in which North faces 12 criminal charges.

When North, who was indicted last March, walks into the U.S. courthouse near the foot of Capitol Hill, he will become the first figure in the Iran-Contra affair to stand trial.

Many of the same witnesses who testified in the nationally televised congressional hearings two years ago are expected to be called by the prosecutors, including former Attorney General

Edwin Meese III and North's secretary, Fawn Hall.

At North's side will be Brendan Sullivan, an aggressive Washington lawyer who also represented North before the congressional panels investigating the Iran-Contra affair.

At a hearing Friday, the government had sought to squash North's subpoenas seeking testimony from both Reagan and Bush as well as records from Reagan.

National health care proposed

WASHINGTON (AP) — A commission including three former presidents on Monday proposed a national health care system that would ensure access to basic medical services for all Americans with financing by all but the poorest.

The system is designed to extend health care to the estimated 37 million Americans who are uninsured, to curtail soaring health costs and to improve the quality of medical care nationwide, said the National Leadership Commission on Health Care.

The proposed "strategy of providing access by asking every American to take responsibility for his or her own care and to assume a very small share of the cost of those who cannot assume that responsibility is eminently fair," the commission said in its report.

Without change in the nation's health care system, costs are expected to grow from the current $550 billion a year to $1.5 trillion by the year 2000, said Paul G. Rogers, a former Democratic congressman from Florida who co-chaired the commission with former Iowa Gov. Robert D. Ray, a Republican.

New No. 1 crowned

NORMAN, Okla. - Oklahoma coach Billy Tubbs, an admirer of the great explorers such as Christopher Columbus and Magellan, has reached uncharted territory with his Sooners.

They're ranked No. 1 in the Associated Press college basketball poll for the first time in the school's history.

"It's something I've always wanted to do," Tubbs said Monday. "I guess you could say it's a dream come true."

SIU names coach

CARBONDALE - Bob Smith, a former assistant football coach at the University of Illinois, was named Monday as the new head football coach at Southern Illinois University.

Smith, 48, succeeds Rick Rhoades, who resigned last week to accept an assistant's position at Alabama, Athletic Director Jim Hart said.

Before joining U of I last year, Smith was head football coach at South East Missouri State University in neighboring Cape Girardeau, Mo., where his overall record was 17-26-1.

Savard injured

CHICAGO - Center Denis Savard, who injured his right ankle earlier this month, said Monday he may not be able to resume play for the Chicago Blackhawks for as long as 10 days.

"I can walk fine, but it hurts to skate," said Savard. "It hurts the Achilles area. When I try to take a stride, it's too painful to skate on."

Drake aiming for Gateway playoff berth

By PHIL CHAPARRO
Staff writer

After a 15-13 overall record and a fourth-place finish in the Gateway Conference last season, everyone in the league but Drake head coach Susan Yow figured the Bulldogs would make a run at the conference title in 1988-89.

Picked to finish third in the Gateway preseason poll, and with four starters returning from last year, one would think that Yow would be excited about the 1988-89 season.

However, with a 10-7 overall record, Yow's fears of road games

Gateway Basketball

are beginning to come true with the Bulldogs dropping key league contests at Southern Illinois and Eastern earlier this season.

"Based on what we did last year, we can make a run at Illinois State, Indiana State and Eastern," Yow said. "However, we're going to have to win on the road, and we didn't do that last season."

Yow, in her third season with Drake, was an assistant coach for the United State's gold-medal winning women's basketball team last summer under her sister, Kay Yow.

If the Bulldogs can rebound and start winning games outside of Des Moines, Iowa, this winter, they will continue to vie for one of the Gateway's four postseason playoff spots.

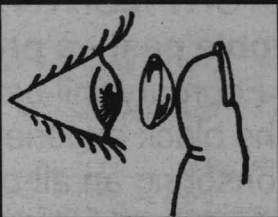

Drake will host Eastern Thursday night at Des Moines, Iowa, in a contest that will break a third-place tie between the 6-3 squads.

Forward Julie Fitzpatrick, a preseason unanimous All-Gateway selection, returns for her final season and is averaging 17.8 points per game with 5.3 rebounds.

Sophomore Jan Jensen joins Fitzpatrick at forward, and is the Bulldogs' leading rebounder at 6.9 boards a game.

Jensen has recovered from a nagging back injury and was recently named the Gateway Player of the Week to go along with her 15.5 ppg scoring average.

'Courageous' Panthers beat CSU

Eastern wins minus West, Fowler

By JAMES BETZOLD
Sports editor

Mike West, out for almost a month with a knee injury, didn't make the trip to Cleveland State. Mark Fowler, out after twisting his ankle against Valparaiso Saturday night, didn't go either. But that wasn't the story.

Led by Jay Taylor's 31 points and a career-high 18 from freshman Barry Johnson, the Panthers beat Cleveland State 88-81 Monday at Public Hall in Cleveland.

"It's a great win for us when we have to leave Mike West and Mark Fowler at home," Eastern coach Rick Samuels said in a postgame radio interview. "We miss those guys tremendously, and we need them back in the lineup. (It's) a courageous effort by our guys. We were awfully small at times in this ballgame, but we just kept battling."

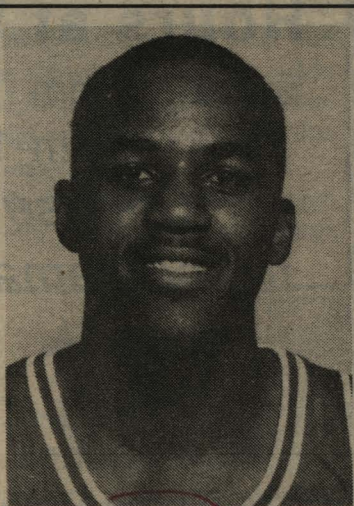

Without West and Fowler, the Vikings big players had plenty of room to operate inside. CSU was led by 6-8, 270-pound Brian Parker, who had 24 points.

Therefore, the Panthers had to stop Ken "Mouse" McFadden. And they did it, limiting him to 13 points on 4-17 from the field.

"We stayed in the zone all night," Samuels said. "A lot of his offense is predicated on a one-on-one move. Against the zone, we never came out on him. We never gave him the chance to get close where he's effective."

Another key came in the Panthers' ability to break the CSU press.

"I thought we did a nice job of handling their pressure defense," Samuels said. "They really turned it up at the start of the second half. It bothered us for a while. But we were able to clear it out and get the ball up the floor."

Jay Taylor

Taylor wins AMCU award

Eastern guard Jay Taylor, now third on the all-time Eastern scoring list, was named the Association of Mid-Continent Universities player of the week, Monday.

Taylor, who set a new Lantz Gym scoring record with 47 points Jan. 23 against Chicago State, was also AMCU player of the week for the first week in November.

Taylor passed former-Eastern center and current Portland Trailblazer center Kevin Duckworth when he had 29 at Valparaiso Saturday.

With 31 points against Cleveland State Monday, Taylor now has 1,617 career points behind Jon Collins's 1,702 and John Miholland's 1,655.

The Panthers led 48-42 at the half, and scored the first two baskets of the second half to lead by 10. But the Vikings stormed back with nine straight points, most coming off their full-court pressure.

The Panthers didn't let CSU take the lead, though, and eventually reclaimed a 67-62 lead. But Taylor sat down with his fourth foul at 10:46, and the Vikings scored 10 straight to lead 72-67.

But Taylor came back to spark a seven-point Eastern run, and dominated play in the final minutes to seal the win.

"Jay took control of the game in the last four or five minutes," Samuels said. "He penetrated into the circle and scored, and kept Cleveland State at bay."

The win moves Eastern to 9-10. The Panthers now have a three-game winning streak and have also won three straight on the road.

"I think our kids are playing with a little bit better rhythm," Samuels said. "We feel comfortable about ourselves right now. I think the key is we didn't wilt. If you can win on the road in tough situations like this, it's got to boost your confidence."

The victory won't count in the AMCU standings, though, since CSU is ineligible for the conference championship.

EIU Hockey Club drops 2 at Pekin

By JOHN MAU
Staff writer

The Eastern hockey club lost 12-3 and 13-3 on Saturday and Sunday to the Pekin Stars in Pekin, but team members weren't dissuaded by the losses to the semi-pro team.

"It was positively a learning experience," said Chris Stanton, E.I.U. Hockey Club president.

Saturday's first Eastern goal was scored unassisted by left wing Ted Brown Stanton, a center, followed with a goal assisted by Mike Nelson. Todd Hasty scored the third goal unassisted.

Stanton scored the first two goals on Sunday. Todd Hasty scored the final Eastern goal, with the assist to Mike Lanham.

"Our team played tough and improved greatly from last semester," Eastern coach Matt Moore said.

"I still encourage new players to come out for the team," Stanton said. The membership fee is $60.00 per player.

Eastern returns to action Wednesday in what Stanton said should be a more evenly matched contest with the Illinois State University Hockey Club. The two teams will meet at 10 p.m. in Decatur.

Gateway tournament on the horizon

By DAVID LINDQUIST
Associate sports editor

At the midpoint of the Gateway Conference women's basketball season, four familiar teams have the inside track in the race for spots in the postseason playoff that determines which school will represent the league in the NCAA tournament.

Illinois State, which has participated in the national tourney twice in the '80s, continued to roll over Gateway Conference competition with a 79-70 win at 1-8 Wichita State, while three other visiting squads won Gateway Conference games last Saturday.

The Redbirds upped their league record to 9-0, and hold a two-game lead over second-place Southern (Gateway representative in 1986 and 1987) after the Saluki Women dropped a 70-57 contest to Eastern in Carbondale.

Drake (6-3) topped host Bradley 77-73 Saturday to stay even with Eastern in third place. The Lady Panthers, who earned a spot in last year's NCAA tourney, travel to Des Moines, Iowa, for a Thursday showdown with three-time league champion Drake.

The Gateway's second division features Indiana State and Bradley in a fifth-place tie at 5-4. Indiana State slipped by seventh-place Southwest Missouri State (3-6) Saturday in a 107-101 four-overtime marathon at Springfield, Mo.

Western Illinois was the only Gateway home team to win Saturday, claiming a 101-83 win over Northern Iowa. The win moves the 2-7 Westwinds into sole possession of eighth place, while UNI falls into a ninth-place tie with Wichita State.

The best defense

In its 70-57 win at Southern last Saturday, Eastern scored 17.4 more points than Gateway schools had averaged against the Saluki Women's league-leading defense.

Southern had given up an average of 52.6 points per game in eight previous league contests and was ranked ninth in the nation (all games) in scoring defense (57.1 ppg).

"To score 70 points against Southern's defense is quite an accomplishment," Eastern coach Barbara Hilke said.

Eastern turned in its own standout defensive effort Saturday, with Southern's 57 points falling 15.1 below the Lady Panthers' Gateway defensive average of 72.1 ppg.

In addition, Southern turned the ball over 18 times, and the defensive platoon of freshman Tracy Roller and sophomore Bev Williams held Saluki Dana Fitzpatrick to four of 15 shooting from the field and eight points.

"Fitzpatrick is to Southern what (Lisa) Tyler is to us," Hilke said.

Perkes prognosis

Eastern guard Barb Perkes is walking virtually pain-free and may be back in the Lady Panthers' lineup sooner than expected after tendinitis in her lower leg had been diagnosed as stress fractures, according to Hilke.

"She's a little ahead of schedule," Hilke said following Perkes' visit to Sarah Bush Lincoln Health Center last Thursday. "It's going to be definitely two weeks she's out, and then it's a tolerance factor. If she has any pain at that point it's another wait-and-see."
