Murder victim in 1980 case identified

By CHRIS SUNDHEIM
News editor

A headless and dismembered body found in 1980 in the Embarrass River near Coles County's Airtight Bridge has been identified as that of a Bradley woman, offering new clues but no solution to a grisly 12-year-old murder case.

At a press conference Friday, Coles County Sheriff Jim Kimball announced the body discovered by two fishermen in October 1980 matches the description of Diane Marie Small.

Small was buried as a Jane Doe in Charleston's Mound Cemetery shortly after her nude body was found near the Airtight Bridge about six miles north of Charleston.

Kimball and Bradley Police Detective Steven Coy credited the identification to a missing persons report recently filed by Small's sister, Virginia L. Williams of Raleigh, N.C. Concerned she hadn't spoken to her sister in more than a decade, Williams reported her apparent disappearance to a national crime data bank on January 24, 1992 and worked with Bradley police in re-examining the case.

Commonly referred to as the Airtight Murder, the new evidence has not brought forth a suspect at this time, Kimball told reporters. However, he and Coy plan to meet with state police

Monday to follow any new leads.

Although it remains unclear why Small's body was recovered in Coles County, the case has been delayed 12 years, largely because of its poor condition and because her family chose to file only a limited informational report rather than a standard missing persons report.

Until Williams filed the report earlier this year, the sheriff department's evidence didn't link the recovered body with any cases in the National Crime Information Center's computer bank. About a week after Bradley police entered Small's description into the bank, her profile was matched with one filed by the sheriff's department back in late October 1980.

Williams apparently gave no reason as to why she waited 12 years to file the report, Coy said, although it is thought family members had separated around the nation and lost contact.

"The family had kind of split around the country," Coy said. "Really there was no explanation given, and the sister had grown concerned. They just figured everyone had gone about their own lives."

Coy speculated Small's husband filed only the informational report because "they apparently had some type of marital problems, and the husband said she had left before."

After matching the descriptions, Coles County Detective

Lonny Coopers, the Bradley Police Department and Illinois State Police coordinated the testing of Small's blood and DNA against her parents'. The sheriff's department kept samples of Small's blood, bone tissue and hair and conducted tests at the state crime lab.

Kimball declined to comment on whether Small was first killed and then dismembered, killed by the dismemberment or killed in another location and then brought to the area. He refused to say how long her body had been in the water. When found, the hands, feet and head had been severed from the body.

IBHE discusses minority concerns

By TERESA JOHNSON

The Illinois Board of Higher Education's Priorities, Quality and Productivity initiative is intended to make colleges take a closer look at their missions and not used as an attack on higher education, said the IBHE associate director in a speech Friday.

James Forstall, IBHE associate director, discussed PQP and its impact on minority faculty, students and programs, at a seminar sponsored by the Illinois Committee on Black Concerns in Higher Education Friday.

"What you are going to find out from this seminar is that the Illinois Board Higher of Education is really a coordinating board," Forstall said. "(The IBHE) works for the universities, the governor and the General Assembly all together."

"PQP is not discussed as a budgetary exercise," Forstall said. "The intent of (PQP) is to look at the missions of higher education overall. PQP is used as a better attempt to use the resources. (PQP) was set up as an open process. The budget process has not changed at all because of PQP."

Forstall said changes in programs should happen at the institutional level and not at the BOG level.

Forstall emphasized there are no hidden agendas involving PQP.

"To the best of my knowledge

Belleville investigated for police harassment

BELLEVILLE (AP) — Police Chief Robert Hurst said a special unit of police officers was told to pull over cars carrying black males through a wealthy white neighborhood.

Hurst's comments came in an interview with a television crew from "60 Minutes," which is investigating allegations that this Southern Illinois city's police department formed a special unit to keep blacks out of a neighborhood known as Signal Hill.

"If you saw a car full of black males in the Signal Hill area, your men were directed to pull them over?" asked CBS reporter Steve Croft.

"Yes," Hurst said. "If our officers seen a carload of black males, they would stop and pull them over and ask them what they were doing in that area," Hurst said.

"Even if they weren't doing anything wrong?" Croft asked.

"That's correct," Hurst said. "A good police officer can spot guys that shouldn't be in a neighborhood." The Signal Hill area is where police in the late 1980s allegedly targeted black motorists in an attempt to keep them from coming into the city from East St. Louis.

Hurst also acknowledged records were kept so police would know if a person had been in the west area of town before.

But Hurst denied the special unit of 12 officers was formed for the purposed of harassing blacks.

"There is no way we targeted blacks to keep them out of Belleville. No way. And no officer on this Police Department was ever issued an order like that from me," Hurst said.

In 1984, mass murderer Henry Lucas confessed to Small's murder, but further investigation disproved his claim.

"Mr. Lucas could not give us specific information that would be known only to the murderer," Cooper said.

While perhaps one of the grisliest incidents in Coles County history, residents of Bradley, a town of about 10,800 near Bourbonnais in Kankakee County, appear to have forgotten about Small's murder, Coy added.

there is no hidden agenda involving the structure, and there are no hidden agendas involving PQP," he said.

Forstall said the kickoff document to the PQP process is a letter IBHE chairman Arthur Quern sent to all public and private college and university presidents and chancellors.

The letter said taxpayers and students can no longer continue to accept the escalating cost of higher education that forces universities to make choices to support quality and eliminate less effective programs.

Forstall said faculty, administration, students, alumni and governing board members at each institution must be engaged in refinement of their mission and the reallocation of their resources.

He added the PQP initiative might reach farther than just the schools themselves.

"PQP might have an impact on what happens to the budget this year that we submit to the governor and the general assembly," Forstall said.

In the discussion of the impact

"At the first of the year, when we started working together with Coles County, I ran an article asking for information, and I didn't get any calls," he said.

Small is thought to have been 5 feet, 10 inches tall, 130 to 135 pounds with auburn hair and light skin. Kimball said there was no evidence where the body was recovered that a struggle had taken place.

Small, whose maiden name is Riordan, left behind a daughter who is now 14 years old and lives in Kankakee as a ward of the Department of Children and Family Services.

the PQP initiative had on minorities, audience members said more emphasis is on the number of minority students, but not accountability.

"Programs should be current, connective and reactive to the cultural situation," Forstall said, referring to the fact that most universities are more interested in numbers than quality.

Johnetta Jones, minority affairs director at Eastern, said PQP is the main theme for the seminar because discussions about PQP will continue to dominate college campuses for some time.

Hurst said the unit was created in response to a crime wave in the Signal Hill area. Yet crime statistics showed the highest crime rate during that time occurred in east, not west, Belleville.

A series of articles by the Belleville News-Democrat prompted an investigation by the Illinois Department of Human Rights and the "60 Minutes" segment, which has not yet been scheduled to air.

The newspaper analyzed tickets and found blacks received a disproportionate share of tickets issued in west Belleville.

Last month, the city reached an agreement with the Illinois Department of Human Rights, requiring all Belleville police officers to go through a three-hour sensitivity training course. As part of the agreement, the city admitted no wrongdoing.

Hurst told the "60 Minutes" crew he planned to retire next year, but that his retirement had nothing to do with the controversy. He has been with the department since Feb. 1, 1965. He became police chief Jan. 1, 1985.

LGBA to discuss its agenda

By TERESA JOHNSON
and JOHN FERA
Staff writers

The Lesbian, Gay, Bisexual and Allies Union will discuss whether it will support the boycott of Panther's Lounge among several other items at its weekly meeting Monday.

However, now that Panther's owner Mike Bickers claims to have sold the pictures deemed racially insensitive by some campus minorities, LGBA members may rethink their decision to boycott the bar.

"I have a feeling we might support the boycott," said junior Seth Rodgers, an executive officer in the union, last week before Bickers said the pictures were removed from his establishment.

Also on its agenda for the 6:45 p.m. Monday meeting in Room 228 of Coleman Hall the organization will accept nominations for a new secretary.

"The secretary we have now (Paul Cortese) will not be with us next semester," Rodgers said.

Rodgers added most of the talk at prior meetings has included talk about the speaker's bureau, which is when the union holds its panel discussions.

"By having the speaker's bureau we are hoping to eliminate stereotypes about homosexuals and lesbians. It's basically an education thing."

Paul Putman, adviser of the LGBA, mentioned what's on tap for the future meetings of the group.

"We want to talk about how these panel discussions have worked, what's been good, what hasn't worked," Putman said.

"Our main focus at the panel discussions has been focus on education."

Rodgers said the group will have another speaker's bureau in December in Taylor Hall.

"(The union) has become stronger because the union has been noticed," Rodgers said.

"The group has stuck through the adverse reaction, which has made the group stronger."

Hearing to give time for opinions

By DAVID M. PUTNEY
Administration editor

Supporters and opponents of the Illinois Board of Higher Education's Priorities, Quality and Productivity initiative will get a chance to air their opinions directly to the board Monday, but few changes in the initiative are expected to come from the testimony.

The IBHE scheduled a public meeting from 1:30 to 5 p.m. at the Westin Hotel in Chicago to give those who want to testify about PQP more time than would be available at the regular IBHE meeting, Tuesday.

At that regular meeting, the IBHE will recap the 1991-1992 PQP plan and vote on the 1992-1993 plan.

Ross Hodel, deputy director of the IBHE, said the meeting will allow the IBHE to hear the wide variety of public opinion about the cuts, but conceded the IBHE will probably not change its position on the issue in time for consideration at the Tuesday meeting.

"I'm not going to say they won't (alter the PQP initiative)," Hodel said. "They will hear testimony and answer questions at the hearing. It is possible they will make some changes."

Hodel said the 1992-1993 resolution essentially recommends public universities cut their administration and 190 academic programs, encourages the colleges to implement the program cuts in the PQP report and suggests colleges begin looking at academic calendars, faculty workloads and financial aid as a way of saving money.

Laurent Gosselin, president of Eastern's chapter of the University Professionals of Illinois, will testify and Eastern President David Jorns will attend. About 60 people have signed up to speak, Hodel added.

Gosselin said he plans to approach the issue in a way most people have been ignoring.

"There's a couple of angles that haven't been addressed yet," Gosselin said. "One of them is the cost outside the university. The other is the social issue."

He said cuts in education could weaken society as a whole. Cuts in the Eastern's technology education program might cause a shortage of high school industrial arts teachers, which could leave the 50 percent of high school graduates who don't go on to college with no marketable skills, he said.

The Illinois Manufacturers Association plans to send a representative to the meeting, said Mark Biel, the association's director of governmental affairs.

"We're concerned about the future work force," Biel said. "When the whole idea of looking at higher education came along, we felt it was maybe time for our group to look at higher education. If we don't see some meaningful restructuring of of state government - including education - there will have to be a tax increase which will have to be paid for by businesses."

Beil said the association has not taken a solid position on PQP, but it is in favor of cuts if they improve the quality of education.

Gosselin said professors have been left out of the PQP process, and the hearing is a positive step toward changing that.

"There has been little discussion," he said. "We should do (the PQP process) while bringing to bear all the good minds of the board and the teachers who are down in the trenches."

Hodel said groups such as the Illinois Manufacturer's Association, the American Association of University Professors, the Illinois Chamber of Commerce and the Illinois Farm Bureaus are planning to speak on the entire PQP issue.

Correction

In the Nov. 11 issue of The Daily Eastern News, in the story "Possible Lumpkin accreditation receives mixed faculty reaction," the quote, "We have lots of faculty here who shouldn't be here, and the administrators don't listen to student evaluations (of teachers)," was mistakenly attributed to Lumpkin College of Business Dean Ted Ivarie. The quote should have been attributed to Professor Ephraim Turban. The News regrets the error.

Half the problem solved with new fall ticket system

Fall commencement officials are hoping the issuing of six guest tickets per graduate will make for an equal ticket distribution and put a halt to the overcrowding that has become expected for fall ceremonies in Lantz Gymnasium.

"This new procedure will help us control the crowd (and) provide a safer environment for visitors," said Brenda Cuppy, commencement coordinator.

While the new system does spread the tickets out evenly to each graduate, it does not address the issue of overcrowding. The new tickets made for the upcoming graduation only solve one part of the problem.

Editorial

Estimates by commencement officials say 6,000 people can fit into Lantz Gym. During last year's fall graduation, approximately 7,500 people – including students and faculty – attended.

Lantz has traditionally been an unpopular site for graduation ceremonies. A plan to move 1992's spring graduation into Lantz instead of having it outside in the library quad was opposed by almost all of the semester's graduates, citing the attendance conditions in the gym. After continued complaints, the administration chose to move the graduation outside.

Some of the largest complaints concerning the gym stem from the heat generated by the large number of onlookers and the high-school like surroundings the gym brings to the ceremony.

This year, organizers are predicting a larger than normal graduating class. The problem with the tickets is that the six-ticket allotment was calculated using statistics from past graduations. Even if students were to return any of the allotted six tickets, they would be quickly picked up by other students.

New system or no new system, the overcrowding is once again sure to exist.

A move that could prove to be unpopular with most parents and students – but would be sure to curb the nagging overcrowding problems – would be to cap the number of tickets at the graduation. The new ticket program only solves half of the problem regarding fall graduations.

School envy a useless faculty tactic

Sparks often fly when a faculty issue meets head-to-head with an issue that directly affects students. But as of late, representatives for the faculty have been blowing a little too much smoke.

Eastern's Faculty Senate is again challenging the effectiveness of the Textbook Rental Service. Chair Ed Marlow and the rest of the senate claim teachers are hindered by the system, saying it hinders faculty in selecting the best way individually for them to teach their courses.

Aside from the fact that purchasing textbooks would cause a $59 increase in tuition and would probably more than triple the amount of money students spend on textbooks now, the more disturbing trend is the way the senate tries to sway opinion when dealing with issues that affect the entire campus.

A type of class envy has evolved from the senate as they have continually compared Eastern to other universities, oftentimes putting the school down in the process.

In the case of the textbook rental issues, Marlow said "There is no major university of any quality that has a textbook rental service. Why should we?"

It is unfortunate Marlow believes we must mirror other schools instead of search for our own identity. The reasoning the we should do something because other schools do it is one of the worst reasons to change a school.

But the Faculty Senate has previously tried to use this tactic of university envy to get their point across. In a lengthy letter from the senate in late September, faculty representatives again tried to use the "we're a worse school but..." attitude to build the pride of teachers and students alike.

The attempt at twisted self-gratification came in the comparison of research institutions and graduate institutions, the use of teacher's assistants for undergraduate students and a comparison of the funding they receive.

Research schools like Harvard, Yale and Stanford, the letter stated, use teacher's assistants to teach their classes. But Eastern – obviously in the same league as the aforementioned institutions – focuses intensely on undergraduate education.

It was from this reasoning that the senate reasoned Illinois is shelving the idea of quality higher-education. It was also one of the driving forces in saying state schools like Eastern should get more funding than the research schools.

But not only was the generalization made by the Faculty Senate a distorted one, it was wrong as well. After conferring with a sophomore at Harvard, she informed me almost all of her freshman year courses were taught by the big-name professors that give Harvard its amiable reputation. The trend was continuing now in her sophomore year.

The comparisons between schools is only used when it is advantageous. For instance, many schools have been content to submit themselves to departmental consolidation, while Eastern fights it tooth and nail.

Anybody fighting the good fight will have reasons and points that will outweigh the opposing side. The case is true for textbook rental, the same is true for educational funding.

Hopefully, the Faculty Senate will get in line with this way of thinking.

Campus ignoring underage drinking

There's times in my life when I have to ask exactly when did the forward progression of the human intellect stop? Or to put it quite simply, when did everybody's brains turn to Jell-O?

So I'm reading The Daily Eastern News last week, and yet again I find another great villainous plague that threatens us all. First, there was the White Student Union. Then there was the Gay Student Union. They were followed by Godzilla and Mothra, but they saved the best for last... SAMBO II Electric Boogaloo!

I'm a 20-year-old, third-year student here at Eastern. I've seen a lot go through this campus, but nothing boggles my mind as much as the great "Sambo debate." I think the best comment on the Panther Lounge's choice of decor can be summed up in a single question: so what?!

I never cease to be amazed at how daft people can be. Don't misconstrue my intent, because I am overjoyed that President David Jorns and the black community at Eastern have mobilized against the threat of racist icons.

Unfortunately, this great show of force on the part of Jorns, the Black Student Union, Board of Governors' Chancellor Tom Layzell and our beloved News is a rather vicious-looking paper tiger considering these fearless watchdogs are letting a much larger problem seep through the bureaucratic cracks: underage drinking.

Based on what I've seen, there is no disputing in my mind the Panther Lounge is a dive. I believe it exists primarily to exploit underage drinkers. The students who are 19 don't go to Panther's if they have the choice. It's been that way for the last three years, it was that way long before I arrived in Charleston, and it was that way on Saturday, Nov. 14.

I met three patrons of Panther's that evening and their tales repulsed me. Three 16-year-old juniors from a prominent Catholic school on the south side of Chicago made the trip to Charleston to visit their brothers. After ending up at the Panther Lounge, they experienced the seediest side of Charleston nightlife.

One young man had the privilege of drinking a glass of his own vomit to the cheers of assembled patrons. Another stumbled out of the bar by himself and was retrieved two hours later at an afterbar in town. When all three made their triumphant return, two spent the evening in the men's room and the last passed out. Ah, to be 16 and in Charleston.

Instead of investigating underage drinking, Jorns has found it necessary to write letters about the removal of pictures. It seems to me as though the nobility of his gesture is nullified when he ignores the greater evil.

Panther's is dangerous. It endangers the lives of our freshmen students as well as their friends and there is no excuse. The Charleston police "undercover" operations lost their novelty when they started occurring on an annual basis. Panther's has taken the city's wrist slaps in stride.

The only thing that Jorns and The News have succeeded in doing is providing Bickers' hole with massive amounts of free advertising. Congratulations.

It seems to me if these pictures are so damn evil, the best way to get rid of them is to bring in a wrecking ball and take the place off its foundation.

I recall the words of Thomas Jefferson, who believed the role of a leader is to do "the most good for the most people, most of the time." If this is the case, it seems to me that our "leaders" are doing the least good for the most people, all of the time.

Center addresses concerns

Editor's note: This is the first in a series of two articles profiling Eastern's Health Service.

ELLIOTT PEPPERS
Staff writer

With the winter's cold weather soon approaching, Eastern's Health Service is seeing an influx of sickly students.

As more students become ill, Health Service comes under scrutiny for its often overcrowded conditions and the limits on health care it may provide.

"What we do here is primary management of health needs," said Richard Larson, director of health services. "We treat what we feel we are set up for adequately. If any major problems arise, we refer students to a specialist in the community or back at student's home."

Larson said some of the reasons for students' negative attitudes toward Health Service stem from overcrowded conditions and limits on medical care.

"If we had more room and health facilities to deal with students, we could do a better job managing the negatives," Larson said. "We do routine medical problems so we can keep them in school. I think the problem is because we don't do the more complicated things, the students think it's because we can't do these more complicated things."

The Health Service staff includes three full-time doctors, two part-time doctors, five full-time nurses, three part-time nurses, a full-time pharmacist and pharmacist's assistant, two part-time pharmacists, one lab technician, one X-ray technician, an assistant administrator and three receptionists.

In treating more than 10,000 students, Larson said space outweighs the need for more manpower.

"Our problem is not as much the personnel, but the space here," he said. "If we had a better designed area, we could see a lot more students more efficiently."

Larson said the Health Service was not designed for extensive medical treatment. It occupies only the ground floor of its building on Seventh Street. Hearing and therapy classes are held on the second level of the Health Service building.

"How to see (students) and keep patient-doctor confidentiality is a problem," he said. "Nurses do the initial screening of students, but all students really need to say is 'I want to see the doctor to keep confidentiality.'"

Larson noted in the Campus Master Plan, plans for a new Health Service building were drawn, but Vice President for Business Affairs Charles Colbert said the plans were strictly "preliminary."

Group donates money to Eastern

BRIAN HUCHEL
Staff writer

Farmers Insurance Group Inc., one of the latest American companies to donate money for the cause of improving the quality of education at Eastern.

The company began the Farmers Insurance Group of Companies Aid to Education donation program several years ago, according to Leo Denlea, Jr., chief executive officer of Farmers Group, Inc. in Los Angeles, Calif.

"We have long recognized the outstanding job American colleges and universities have done in preparing their students for responsible citizenship and for rewarding professional business careers," Denlea said, in a press release.

"Continuing our practice of many years, we are pleased to make a cash contribution to those institutions whose graduates serve our company and our policy holders so well."

In the Farmers Group's program, annual monetary donations are made to colleges and universities within the companies' operating territory. The total number of alumni employed for four years or more by a Farmers Group member company depicts the amount of money donated.

With this donation, Eastern will establish a Farmers Group of Companies Scholarships. These scholarships will be available to students majoring in mathematics, business administration, personnel or other fields related to the insurance industry.

Eastern President David Jorns was also happy to be a recipient of the scholarship.

Edgar talks about lame ducks

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (AP) — Most of the Legislature's lame ducks began quacking months ago, Gov. Jim Edgar only recently has begun complaining about the departing legislators.

Edgar has been wary lame duck lawmakers would deal with casino developers to push through a $2 billion proposed project in Chicago.

The retiring and defeated lawmakers in the Democratic-controlled Legislature became an even more inviting target for the Republican governor Nov. 3 when voters elected a GOP Senate for the first time in 20 years.

Edgar, who has said repeatedly he opposes a land-based casino in Chicago, said the proposal should be left to the incoming lawmakers, not to those who no longer have to worry about voters' approval.

Some of the lame ducks were not voted out; they knew as long ago as December they would not file for re-election.

"I think that we had in the spring session probably as many issues up that were as important as casino gambling," said Rep. Manny Hoffman, R-Homewood, who was defeated in the March primary.

"I think what's happening is we're getting calls and letters from our constituents and I think until the time we're out of office I think we still owe our constituents a vote." In the 59-member Senate, only three of 22 lame ducks were defeated for re-election Nov. 3. Three had lost in the March primary, before the spring session.

In the 118-member House, 12 of 47 lame ducks will go to the Senate in January. Only nine of the other 35 representatives lost in November; 13 fell in the primary.

Susie Green led the Lady Panthers in the loss with 12 kills and 19 digs, while Beth Foster added 11 kills, Kaaryn Sadler eight and Kim Traub seven. Green and Traub were named to the all-tournament team.

"We got the opportunity to run a couple of the new offensive sets we had been working on and we got everyone a chance to play," said Ralston. "Most importantly, we got the record, which is a great thing for these kids."
