Bloody good job!

Blood drive sets new record at 1,851 pints

by Carl Pugliese

More than 500 people donated blood Thursday bringing the grand total to 1,851 pints—the highest goal the Red Cross has ever achieved in a blood drive at Eastern.

Jana Schrag, general chairman for the spring drive, was elated and yet unhappy because the doors were closed at 3 p.m.

"I felt really bad, but we had to do it," Schrag said.

Schrag said donors had to be turned away so the nurses would not be overworked due to the great volume of blood donors received Thursday.

She said that the volume of donors became so great that the doors had to be closed twice for workers to catch up.

Spring blood drive
1,851 pints

Schrag said that the goal of 1,730 pints was reached at 2:30 p.m.

One reason for the final rush at the blood drive Thursday Schrag said, was students "waiting 'till the last minute" to give, causing the backup and then forcing a closing earlier than expected.

She believed that if more people came earlier in the week to donate, the total count would have been even higher.

Diane Warner, sophomore, said that she intends on coming back for the next blood drive. "I figure it's not going to kill me to take an hour out of my day to give blood."

Chris Weber, freshman, was the 1,731st donor who broke the record for the drive. This was his first time and he said he "felt good about it."

Sophomore Corrie Cohen, a first time donor, said the worst part of giving blood was getting her finger pricked for the blood test.

Cohen said that giving is almost a trend and that she thought she would give it a try after feeling guilty for not giving before.

Schrag said of the 536 people who tried to give blood Thursday only 36 were deferred. One hundred were turned away for the four-day drive.

There will be a blood drive in Mattoon March 16, 17, and 18 for all those who missed this one, she said.

The tentative dates for next fall semester's blood drive are Sept. 26-29, Schrag said.

Eastern's cash controls okayed by internal auditor

by Jack Palmer

Eastern was presented with a clean bill of health after the Board of Governors requested that all BOG schools complete a report listing their cash controls.

Internal Auditor David Dean said he found Eastern's internal controls adequate, meaning "the system was clean and in order."

The BOG requested the reports because of the recent controversy surrounding the alleged embezzlement of funds from the University of Illinois.

Former U of I administrator Robert Parker has been accused of 157 counts of felony theft in the disappearance of $608,000 from university funds.

After the jury at Parker's trial was pronounced "hopelessly deadlocked" Feb. 15 by Champaign County Circuit Judge Harold Jensen, a mistrial was declared.

A March 8 retrial has been set for Parker.

BOG financial official Sharon Young said the cash control reports will explain the security systems used to prevent embezzlement of funds at Eastern, Western Illinois University, Chicago State University, Governors State University and the Northeastern Illinois University.

Young said Eastern's report was filed with the BOG Jan. 30.

In the report compiled for Eastern by Vice President for Administration and Finance George Miller, several cash control security measures were listed.

Dean said the report states that any check written from Foundation funds must be manually signed by any two of the following Foundation officials: the treasurer or his assistant, the executive director or the secretary.

Foundation funds are those given to Eastern by private citizens, Dean explained.

He added that check requests must be approved by the Foundation executive director and sometimes by Eastern President Daniel E. Marvin.

The bank account is reconciled by the business office's staff accountant each month, while each fiscal year an external audit is done by the Illinois Auditor General through the assistance of a public accountant.

Every other year a full-compliance audit is done detailing the controls and expenditures of the system. This year a compliance audit was done by McGladrey, Hendrickson and Co. CPA, and they found Eastern to be in order, Miller said in the report.

He added that they looked at revenues and cash receipts, expenditures of cash disbursement, property and equipment, accounting and financial reporting, and investment.

News Round-Up

Automakers report losses

DETROIT—The four major domestic automakers lost $1.34 billion last year, with only General Motors Corp., showing a profit, the industry reported as it announced that last week's daily sales rate was the lowest since 1961.

The 1981 losses for GM, Ford Motor Co., Chrysler Corp. and American Motor Corp. represented a substantial improvement from the $4.3 billion deficit recorded in 1980.

Leaders request crackdown

WARSAW—The country's Communist leaders called Thursday for a crackdown on opposition and said expectations that martial law restrictions would be eased soon were "too optimistic," a party source said.

A high-ranking military official also said anti-state activity was now aimed toward Poland's armed forces, and he demanded a stop to these "perfidious actions."

Walkway not designed properly

WASHINGTON—The Kansas City hotel walkways which collapsed and killed 113 people last summer were designed to support less than a third of the weight capacity required by city codes, federal investigators said Thursday.

"This whole walkway system was inadequately designed," said Dr. Edward O. Pfrang, who headed the federal investigation by the National Bureau of Standards into the accident at the Hyatt Regency Hotel. The bureau released its findings in a 349-page report.

Neither the architects nor the engineering company involved in designing the structure would comment on the federal report.

Israel may order military strike

WASHINGTON—Israel's new ambassador hinted strongly Thursday that his nation may soon order a military strike into Southern Lebanon if there is no abatement of the arms buildup by Palestine Liberation Organization forces.

Moshe Arens told reporters the danger to Israel is "growing day by day" and "you might almost say it's a matter of time" before his government feels compelled to take "some action that would bring about casualties."

Anti-busing bill postponed

WASHINGTON (AP)—Senate liberals on Thursday surrendered in a nine-month battle to block legislation which would virtually eliminate the use of busing to desegregate schools.

Running out of help on the Senate floor, Sen. Lowell Weicker, R-Conn., agreed to call off a filibuster which had kept the Senate in session through Wednesday night and into the early morning hours Thursday.

A final vote on the tough anti-busing legislation is scheduled for next Tuesday, and it is certain to pass.

Weicker gave into a Senate majority which has repeatedly demonstrated its determination to curb the authority of the federal courts to order students transported across town to improve racial balance.

While getting help from a few Democratic liberals, he waged the battle almost single-handedly on the Senate floor.

Weicker still had 70 hours of debate time left when he agreed to quit. But after the Senate remained in session until 1:30 a.m. Thursday, Majority Leader Howard Baker vowed to pull out all the stops to close out the fight so that other issues could get to the floor.

At one point, Baker was overheard angrily telling Weicker, "You have gone too far."

The proposal by Sens. Bennett Johnston, D-La., and Jesse Helms, R-N.C., would strip federal judges of nearly all authority to use busing as a remedy for racially segregated school systems.

The amendment to a Justice Department authorization bill would prohibit courts from ordering busing more than 30 minutes or 10 miles, round trip, and also put into law an existing Reagan administration policy against asking courts for busing orders.

Supporters say it is needed because busing has failed everywhere it has been tried as a means of creating racial balance in public schools.

Weicker and his supporters say the proposal directly contradicts constitutional limits on how far Congress can go in limiting the powers of another branch of government, the federal courts.

The Senate has approved the amendment 58 to 38, and is now debating the authorization bill to which it was attached.

Testimony ends in Williams' trial

ATLANTA (AP)—Testimony ended in Wayne Williams' murder trial Thursday after nine weeks and 197 witnesses, with his mother lamenting that the ordeal has "ruined" her family. The explosive case could go to the jury as early as Friday evening.

"Wayne's character has been drug through the mud," Faye Williams told jurors as she returned to the stand as a rebuttal witness for the defense. "My husband's character has been drug through the mud.... The Williams family has been ruined."

"They continue to lie and lie and lie, but they have not produced the evidence that my son is a killer," she said.

Superior Court Judge Clarence Cooper scheduled closing arguments for Friday after denying defense lawyer Alvin Binder's motion to dismiss the two murder charges against the 23-year-old black free-lance photographer and aspiring talent promoter.

"The most we've got in this murder case is speculation," Binder argued in his motion for a directed verdict of acquittal.

Cooper did not indicate whether he would place a time limit on closing arguments. The judge also did not say whether he would charge the jury immediately after the arguments.

When jurors do begin deliberations, they will be faced with deciding one of the most difficult and closely watched cases in recent U.S. criminal history.

Williams has pleaded innocent to charges that he murdered Nathaniel Cater, 27, and Jimmy Ray Payne, 21. They were two of the 28 young blacks slain in a 22-month string of killings that captured international attention before the slayings stopped last year.

Prosecutors, who concede their case is circumstantial, produced experts who said fibers found on the bodies of the victims matched fibers taken from Williams' home and car. Other witnesses placed Williams with seven of the 12 victims and portrayed him as a homosexual with a violent temper who hated poor young blacks.

Student senators react Compromise viewed as a good decision

by Mike Nolan and Crystal Schrof

The retention of Claudia Christiansen as auditing committee chairman has been cited by student government officials as a good decision.

Student Body President Bob Glover said he believes the retention of Christiansen is "the best solution to the problem."

Glover said Thursday the compromise made between Senate Speaker Karen Kupsche and Christiansen would help to "clear up the matter" with the auditing committee.

At Wednesday's senate meeting Christiansen was reprimanded by Kupsche for violating procedure during an audit of student government.

Kupsche said a co-chairman to the auditing committee would be selected and appointed after she conducts interviews with possible candidates.

Glover said Kupsche will be talking to "qualified senators" and will possibly make a decision next week.

Senator R.W. Monroe said the compromise to let Christiansen remain as chairman and appoint a co-chairman "was the right thing to do."

Senator John Modder, who represents the auditing committee at Apportionment Board meetings, said the plan to select a co-chairman is a "good idea."

Kupsche and Christiansen discussed the current situation and decided that a "compromise" would be made by retaining Christiansen if her committee took greater caution in future audits.

In a letter to Kupsche, Christiansen said her committee would conduct further audits more carefully.

Financial Vice President Mike Nowak said he will "stick to Kupsche's decision" to keep Christiansen in her position, but his feelings toward Christiansen "are pretty much the same."

Nowak issued a letter to senators claiming Christiansen to be in violation of seven bylaw subsections. Nowak had also asked for the removal of Christiansen.

Glover said Christiansen specifically violated three bylaw subsections during the audit.

The first one states "Audits shall be conducted with the assistance of the Internal Auditor of the school."

Glover said Christiansen did not see the internal auditor, David Dean, before the audit.

Christiansen said she is not specifically required to talk with Dean about any findings but Dean serves in an advisory capacity to the auditing committee.

The second subsection states the committee must report to the senate with findings of any audit.

Christiansen claims her audit report was only preliminary and she was not required to give a detailed report until after the audit has been completed.

The third point states that a copy of all reports must be filed with the Financial Vice President.

Christiansen said again since her report was not final she did not violate this subsection.

Fifteen bands to be in 'jam'

by Dru Sefton

Fifteen area bands will take part in an all-day "jam session" Sunday for the benefit of Camp New Hope in Mattoon, a spokesman for the camp said Thursday.

The jam session, which begins at 1 p.m. and continues until 11 p.m., will be at the Mattoon National Guard Armory at the corner of Logan and Broadway in Mattoon, Don McDowell, camp director, said.

McDowell said all types of music will be featured, including such area bands as Strut McPherson, Eastern's jazz band, the Indian Creek Delta Boys and Rare Illusion, an all-girl band.

The event is sponsored in cooperation with the Charleston Jaycees, and all proceeds will go toward construction of a new cabin at Camp New Hope.

Donation is $7 at the door and $5 in advance for the entire day's music.

Tickets may be purchased in advance in Charleston at Tinkley Bell Music, Coles County National Bank, Mattoon Federal Savings and Loan, Caesar's Pizza, Everett & Thomas Sporting Goods, Charleston Eagles, Charleston Moose and True Value Hardware.

BOG okays funds, congratulates 'Seduced' cast

by Madeleine Doubek

Eastern President Daniel E. Marvin got the "okay" to purchase carpeting for the Tarble Arts Center and five walk-in freezers for five campus food services at the conference call Board of Governors meeting Thursday.

Funds for the carpeting and freezers are unappropriated, Marvin said.

The carpeting money will come out of the Tarble Arts Center Gift Fund, and money for the freezers will come out of bond revenue, Marvin added.

Also at the meeting, Marvin announced the invitation extended to Eastern's production of the play "Seduced" to perform at the John F. Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts.

Marvin called the invitation to participate in the American College Theatre Festival, "a kind of Superbowl for college theater."

Board members extended their congratulations upon hearing the news.

The meeting was conducted over the phone because voting members were unable to meet in Chicago as originally planned.

In other business, the BOG approved the Illinois Board of Higher Education's $148.8 million BOG budget recommendation for Fiscal Year 1983, although some board members expressed concern that the approved budget would not pass the Illinois legislature unchanged.

The BOG budget request includes a $32.3 million operating budget request for Eastern.

BOG Executive Director Donald Walters called the outlook for FY83 "very grim indeed."

He estimated that BOG schools might experience "at best a zero percent increase and quite probably a decrease."

The budget request for FY83 will be filed with the Illinois legislature March 4, and Illinois Governor James R. Thompson is expected to preview his outlook on the higher education budget within the next few weeks.

Also at the meeting, board members approved recommendations from an ad hoc committee on the possibility of sharing computer software.

COTE vote postponed on House Bill 150

by Linda Fraembs

The Council on Teacher Education Tuesday postponed voting to accept a report concerning how students could fill the requirements of Illinois House Bill 150.

The report, submitted by the committee on occupational teacher education, lists proposals to allow students in both the occupational education program and the Alternate Secondary Education Program to meet the special education course work requirement of HB 150.

The committee proposed that occupational education students be allowed to fulfill the requirement by taking either Special Education 3700 or Special Education 3500.

Another proposal would allow students enrolled in the ASEP program, to complete work in an actual classroom setting of public schools instead of one of the two courses.

John North, chairman of the committee that submitted the report, said, "It (ASEP) is an alternative program, and we're asking that it be able to meet House Bill 150 in an alternative manner."

Correction

Jeff Milhone, Residence Hall Association policy committee chairman, was incorrectly quoted in Monday's Daily Eastern News that he proposed an amendment to RHA's constitution which would allow the group to endorse two candidates for each student government position. The proposal to the bylaws calls for only one candidate per student government position to be endorsed by the RHA. In addition, Milhone said the group may elect not to endorse any candidate for a position.

Procedures shouldn't hinder aid

Changes in the application forms for financial aid this year have caused some confusion among students but now more than ever, it is essential that students be informed of the changes and apply for aid early.

The confusion over the forms this year has arisen following changes in the applications for Pell Grant (formerly Basic Educational Opportunity Grant) and Illinois State Scholarship awards.

In the past, students seeking aid from Pell or ISSC were required to fill out separate forms, but recently the ISSC introduced a money-saving measure by "piggy-backing" on the Pell application.

Only one application must be filled out now.

The changes may be a bit more confusing, but with federal financial aid being cut in half and the ISSC cutting back on the amount and number of awards, students' need to be aware of the changes to take advantage of whatever financial aid they may.

Here are steps that might ease the process:

- Application forms are available in Financial Aids offices in the west wing of the Student Services Building.

- Financial aids officers will consult with students to find what program the student is interested in or could qualify for, and will issue the application form to best serve those needs. They are more than willing to offer any advice about the forms.

The yellow American College Testing (ACT) form allows students to apply for Eastern-based financial aid AND Pell and ISSC awards. It requires a $6 processing fee.

The white Application for Federal Student Aid (AFSA) form is for students who wish to apply for ONLY Pell or ISSC, and does not cover campus aid. There is no processing fee.

- Application instructions come with the forms, but students should especially remember to mark the appropriate answer on each form to have their applications sent to the proper agencies.

- The yellow ACT form should be returned to the Financial Aids office, while the white AFSA form should be sent to the address listed.

- Deadline for application for a 1982-83 Pell Grant is March 15, 1983. Deadline for a fall semester 1982 ISSC application is June 1 for current students, and Oct. 15 for new students.

Flynn said new students applying for ISSC will be given priority over currently enrolled students. Later applications of currently enrolled students will be considered if any money remains. However, funds could be depleted before the late applications are considered.

Thus, applying early gives a student a better chance of receiving an award.

The changes made in the financial aid applications, along with less money available for students, makes it imperative that students apply now for aid for next year.

Senate should amend new Code of Ethics

The student senate passed a code of ethics at their meeting Wednesday. However, judging from the conduct displayed by the executive officers and senators, it seems as though the code was passed all right—in one ear and out the other.

Assuming the code was adopted for encouraging organization and professionalism, one would hope these principles would be utilized to their fullest potential.

Not Wednesday night.

At the meeting, senator Matt Glover took the floor against a proposal and was greeted with unrelenting cutdowns by fellow senators who did not agree with his point of view.

Not only was the attitude between senators poor, but the attitude some senators and executive officers had toward the audience was worse.

Junior Matt Filosa in the gallery inquired about the controversial New Orleans trip.

Initially, Student Body President Bob Glover tried to explain the situation as calmly and logically as possible.

However, as Filosa became more inquisitive, Glover became more impatient. At one point, he was screaming at the student. The other senators had to tell him to control himself.

Senator Julie Smith was another senator who could not seem to contain her emotions. She was complaining about the flack she got from students about the New Orleans trip. In addition, she said she was tired of students asking questions about the whole matter.

No doubt, it is difficult for students, in this case senators, to accept the criticisms of their peers. However, because they have been elected to a professional-like organization, it is vital they contain their emotional outbursts and detach personal feelings from professional ones.

Being the representatives of the students, both Glover and Smith as well as the rest of the senate should welcome the questions of students. With student apathy plaguing the campus, it is comforting to know that there are students who care enough to express their concerns.

If student inquiries are stifled or welcomed with a poor attitude, they will soon stop and the gap that already exists between the student senate and students will grow to the point that student input will be virtually non-existent.

Part of the job as a student government official should be to take the criticisms and questions of the constituents and the press. This check on government has been a characteristic that has established democracy in the U.S. in a manner unlike that of any other form of government.

Senators and executive officers, as representatives in a democracy, need to uphold the ideals of a democracy. That includes being responsive, patient and concerned about their constituents.

Eastern RHA to host annual conference

by Denise Skowron

Eastern's Residence Hall Association will be welcoming 120 RHA delegates from 15 schools for the annual Residence Hall Association Conference this weekend.

The conference is funded by the guests' admission fees. The RHA estimated a cost of approximately $40 per delegate for food, lodging and entertainment.

Total expenses for the entire conference are "about $5,000," RHA president Mary Tracy said.

The RHA met Thursday to finalize details of the conference and to hear committee reports.

"And we're ready," RHA adviser Mary Smith said.

The conference's theme, "Working Together to Make It Better" reflects its purpose—"to exchange ideas," as Tracy said earlier.

Tracy added RHA delegates from other universities and colleges will attend with the hope they may return to their schools with new programs to administer to their residence halls.

Cheerleading workshops set

by Kim Juveland

Tryouts are scheduled next week for those students interested in becoming a member of Eastern's cheerleading squad for the 1982-83 football and basketball seasons.

Linda Eisenbarth, co-captain of the squad this past season, said workshop clinics are scheduled for 3 p.m. to 4 p.m. Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday in Lantz gymnastic room. Students interested in trying out must attend all workshops.

Tryouts are set for 7 p.m. March 9 in Buzzard Educational Building's south gym, she said.

Dorothe Johnson, Eastern's cheerleading sponsor, will be conducting the workshops with the help of seniors Eisenbarth, Jim Fechner and Angela Harpster.

Eisenbarth said students attending the workshops should wear shorts, sweat pants or similar clothing that they can perform in comfortably.

Women trying out will be expected to perform sideline cheers and the school song as a group. Women will perform individually on double stunts, jumps and gymnastics, she said.

Men trying out for the squad will be expected to perform double stunts and gymnastics.

Eisenbarth said judges for the cheerleading tryouts will include members of the athletic and physical education departments. The judges will choose 10 female and 10 male cheerleaders for the squad.

Official Notices

Official Notices are paid for through the Office of University Relations. Questions concerning notices should be directed to that Office.

ISSC 82-83

The Illinois State Scholarship Commission has announced new rules regarding applications for 1982-83:

1. Full-year applications MUST be received before June 1 from students enrolled during 81-82;

2. Full-year applications must be received before October 1 from students not enrolled during 81-82;

3. Applications for 2nd semester only must be received by March 15, 1983.

Failure to meet these deadlines may prevent applicants from receiving an award. Applications for financial aid are available on the second floor of the Student Services East Wing.

Sue McKenna, Director
Financial Aids

Summer/Fall Pre-Registration

Students assigned to the Academic Assistance Center must make an appointment to pre-register for the Summer and/or Fall terms. The appointment must be made in person. Phone calls for appointment dates will NOT be accepted.

Appointments may be made starting at 8 a.m. on Monday, March 1. Pre-registration will then begin on Monday, March 8. The Center will be open from 8 a.m. until 4:30 p.m. each day.

Advisees of the Assistance Center should NOT pick up their pre-registration materials prior to arrival at the Center.

Calvin B. Campbell
Director, Academic Assistance

Textbook Rental Notes

Textbook sales for the Spring semester began on Feb. 15, 1982, and will end on Friday, April 9, 1982. Students wishing to purchase a text which is checked out to them must bring the book in at the time of the purchase. TRS hours of operation are from 8 a.m. to 12 and 1 p.m. to 4:30 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Richard Sandefer
Director, TRS

Teaching Certificates

All students desiring an Illinois Teaching Certificate (or other certification) who are graduating this semester from one of our approved teacher preparation programs, must apply for that certificate. Students may pick up the necessary forms in rm. 210 of the Buzzard Education Building. To avoid delays please note that applications should be submitted no later than March 5. Individuals completing programs in Administration and Supervision, Guidance and Counseling, School Psychology or Speech Pathology should submit applications through their respective departments. These departments will approve the applications and forward them to my office.

This announcement does not apply to graduate students who applied through "Transcript Evaluation" and have received a "Deficiency Statement" from the State Teacher Certification Board. Such individuals should complete their certification through a Superintendent of an Education Service Region after finishing their required work. Anyone needing further information may contact Dr. Schlinsog in rm. 210 of the Buzzard Education Building.

Application forms have been mailed to student teachers scheduled to graduate this term. These should be returned by March 5. Any student teacher graduating this term who did not receive an application should write or phone Dr. Schlinsog immediately. Phone (217) 581-2517.

Frank Lutz, Dean
School of Education

Illinois Sheriffs' Association Scholarship

Application forms for the Illinois Sheriffs' Association Scholarship program are available on the second floor, East Wing of the Student Services Building. Scholarships will be awarded "to deserving students based on ability, merit, character and sincerity or purpose in reaching his or her goal." Applications must be submitted by March 1 to the Sheriff of the County of the applicant's permanent Illinois residence.

Confident grapplers head into strong regional action

by Dan Brannan

After posting five consecutive dual wins, Eastern's wrestling team will be riding a sea of confidence into Baton Rouge, La. for the NCAA Division I Midwest Regional Tournament Friday and Saturday.

The Panthers registered two of their five straight victories Thursday at Lantz Gym when they romped over SIU-Carbondale 39-9 and the University of Illinois 24-9.

"Everyone is keyed up for the tour-namment," Panther head coach Ron Clinton said. "We can't wait and get in there and see how well we fare against these other teams.

"We are ready to compete," Clinton continued. "Everyone is 100 percent and we are feeling very positive about the tournament. We are very eager to get in there and throw our holds."

The 14 teams entered in the tournament are Eastern, Drake, Illinois State, Indiana State, Kentucky, Louisiana State, Marquette, Notre Dame, Northern Iowa, SIU, Tennessee, Tennessee Tech, Valparaiso and Western.

Although no team scores will be kept, Clinton favored Indiana State, LSU, Northern Iowa and Tennessee to qualify the most individuals for the Division I finals in Ames, Iowa, March 11-13.

However, Eastern should be right up with the leaders in qualifying individuals for the nationals, Clinton said.

"I think we'll surprise a lot of people, especially the teams who haven't seen us wrestle," Clinton said. "We're a Cinderella team, but I feel good about our chances. I hope to qualify as many individuals as possible."

The first, second and third place finishers in each weight class at the regional tournament qualify for the nationals.

And two of Eastern's grapplers that should be among the top three in their weight classes are Mark Gronowski, currently ranked No. 6 in Division I at 167 by the Amateur Wrestling News, and Geno Savegnago, currently ranked

No. 3 at 190 by the Amateur Wrestling News.

"Savegnago and Gronowski are our only clear cut favorites," Clinton said. "They should be seeded either No. 1 or No. 2 in their weight classes. Everyone else will have a tougher time making it through the competition."

Tracksters await weekend meets

by Mike Prizy

Eastern's men's track team will split its services between two separate track meets when the Panthers compete against 14 teams in Lantz Fieldhouse at 7 p.m. Friday and then travel to Champaign on Saturday for the prestigious Illini Classic.

Friday's home meet, the EIU Invitational, will be a non-scoring meet with the participants competing for time and performance, Eastern head coach Neil Moore said.

"We are running the same format that will be run at the NCAA championships by including the two-mile relay and the distance medley relay," Moore said.

The Illini Classic, which starts at 9 a.m. Saturday and continues through the late afternoon, has over 400 participants from 35 teams as far away as Florida and Texas.

Several Eastern trackmen will compete in both of this weekend's meets.

Women track hosts 12 teams

by Fran Brolley

Four "strong" teams are set to compete in the 12-team Lady Panther Invitational Saturday, a meet which will provide Eastern women tracksters a last opportunity to qualify for the AIAW Indoor Championships March 12-13.

Panther head coach John Craft said Western Illinois, Illinois State, Indiana State and Southeast Missouri State "all have strong teams," but no team scores will be kept at the meet slated to begin at 11 a.m. in Lantz Fieldhouse.

Gridders hire assistant, Dickerson switched to offense

by Steve Binder

Former University of Minnesota defensive line coach Cal Jones has been named Eastern gridgers' defensive coordinator for the 1982 season, Panther head coach Darrell Mudra said Thursday.

Jones, who coached for Minnesota from 1977-80 and was the head coach for Lincoln University last season, signed a contract Wednesday and will be mainly in charge of Eastern's defensive line.

Last year's defensive coordinator Rick Schachner has been named defensive secondary coach and assistant head coach Chuck Dickerson will be the Panthers' offensive coordinator, replacing the position vacated when Mike Faulkner was fired in January.

"This may be the best thing to happen to us since our early days here at Eastern," Mudra said. "I have a lot of respect for Jones. He's very talented. By adding an experienced person to the coaching staff and moving someone with Chuck's ability to offense, we have strengthened both sides of the ball."

Jones was a two-time All-American and team captain while at Adams State from 1961-65 when Mudra was head coach. He was also the linebacker coach under Mudra at Florida State and Western Illinois from 1971-75. Jones was unable to be reached for comment Thursday.

Dickerson, who mainly worked with the Panther defense last year as assistant head coach, was moved to the offensive coordinating position mainly because of his aggressive coaching technique, Mudra said.

"I think Chuck can execute the kinds of things I want to do offensively," Mudra said. "His aggressive coaching ability will add a new dimension to our offense."

Dickerson agreed and said, "It's a change of venue that I'm looking forward to. My greatest strength as a coach is the mental discipline I instill in to our players. We're going to run the ball better next year."

"We have devised an offensive ground game that has a lower turnover percentage rate. It is my mission to get our offense at a high rate of efficiency. But that doesn't mean we are going to pass any less," Dickerson said.

Cagers, Jones dump Northern Iowa 74-65...

Ricky Robinson out-reaches Northern Iowa's Herbert King for the rebound during the Panthers' 74-65 victory Thursday night at Lantz Gym. Eastern boosted its Mid-Continent Conference record to 1-2 while Northern Iowa falls to 2-1. (News photo by Beth Lander)

by John Humenik

Kevin Jones came off the bench to score 20 points and Ricky Robinson added 16 to lead Eastern to its first Mid-Continent Conference victory this season in outlasting Northern Iowa 74-65 Thursday in Lantz Gym.

The victory extended the Panthers' winning streak to three games and evened their season mark to 13-13 and 1-2 in conference play. For the Panthers, it was the first time they reached the .500 mark since Dec. 12.

The Panthers clung to leads of as many as 11 points in the second half, but had to rally back after Northern Iowa cut the margin to four points, 63-59, on Brent Carmichael's three-point play with 1:57 remaining.

But Eastern rattled off six straight points in the final 53 seconds to preserve the victory.

"They (Northern Iowa) just didn't convert when we missed some free throws in the second half, which was helpful," Eastern head coach Rick Samuels said. "We got some things done tonight and executed well offensively."

Eastern shot 60 percent to Northern Iowa's 38 percent from the floor, but shot a more impressive 71 percent in the first half to lead 35-32 at the intermission.

However, the Panthers committed 13 of their 19 turnovers in the first half.

"We wanted to push the tempo early in the game, but we didn't get into our offense quick enough because we had so many turnovers plus they (Northern Iowa) stole the ball from us eight times."

But Northern Iowa failed to turn the Panther gifts into two points as Eastern eventually broke ahead behind eight straight points to lead 28-20 with 4:52 remaining in the half.

...set for Leatherneck showdown

by Steve Binder

Western head coach Jack Margenthaler accurately explained Saturday's 7:30 p.m. Eastern-Western basketball showdown at Lantz Gym.

"You can throw away past records when Eastern and Western play because they don't mean a thing. This game will be a thrilling ballgame," Margenthaler said.

However Margenthaler added that the Panthers, coming off a 74-65 victory over Northern Iowa Thursday, will have a higher emotional level Saturday than in past Eastern-Western contests.

"The emotion for Eastern will obviously be higher. They have a lot of things they want to accomplish such as finishing above .500, avenging the first loss to us and owning a piece of the conference title," Margenthaler said.

Indeed, because if the Panthers are victorious Saturday, they will boost their Mid-Continent Conference record to 2-2, while Western will fall to 1-2. Northern Iowa possesses a 2-1 mark, but must travel to Macomb March 4 to face Western in the final league game.

"We lost to Western on the road (65-53 Jan. 23) so we want to square that record. It will be a measure of success for us to finish strong in the league," Panther head coach Rick Samuels said.

Eastern has won six of its last eight ballgames while Western has lost six of its last seven for a 13-12 season record.

"We've been making unbelievable little mistakes which has really cost us," Margenthaler said. "We've been in every game right down to the wire and then we'd commit the costly turnover."

Western is led by outstanding junior forward Joe Dykstra, averaging 21.4 points an outing and senior guard Jamie Lilly, who scored 20 points against the Panthers Jan. 24.

Free throws lift ISU women to 71-64 win

by Susan McCann

Crucial fouls extinguished Eastern's women cagers' hopes for a 20th victory Thursday as the Panthers dropped a 71-64 decision to Indiana State in Lantz Gym.

Although Eastern outscored the Sycamores 60-56 from the field, ISU hit 15 charity tosses including 10 of 15 in the second stanza to record the victory.

Because the Panthers never made a trip to the charity stripe after intermission their 36-33 halftime lead dissolved.

"Seeing as we outscored them (from the field) in the second half, having never gotten to the line had to have been a deciding factor," Panther assistant coach Deanna D'Abbraccio said.

The Panthers trailed much of the first stanza and took their first lead of the contest with 2:28 left in the half when Angie DePesa hit a short jumper from the right side and was fouled.

After she nailed the free throw the Panthers lead 32-31, but Toni Collins picked up her third personal foul with 29 seconds left.

That foul proved to be very costly as Collins, Eastern's leading scorer and rebounder this season, was whistled for her fourth personal just over two minutes into the second half.

Although Collins was forced to sit down, the Panthers led by as many as 10 with 15:00 left.

However, center Dede Edwards drew her fourth personal at the 11:26 mark and also had to sit down with the Panthers leading 50-43.

The Sycamores then began their charge to victory, outscoring Eastern 18-10 to lead 61-60 with three minutes remaining.

As the Eastern offense stalled and the Panthers were forced to foul, ISU hit six of eight free throws en route to the 71-64 final.

This week's highlight: Railsplitter's rivalry fuels season finale

by Dave Claypool

Rivalries rarely need fuel for the fire. Their intensity is enough kindling to keep the emotions of both sides at a feverish pitch.

But on Dec. 10, 1977, the Eastern Alumni Association in cooperation with Western Illinois University's Alumni Association, initiated the ever-present but seldom known of "Old Railsplitter Trophy" to add to the fire.

Saturday's basketball season finale against Western will mark the fifth Railsplitter game and will decide who will carry the trophy for the coming year.

The award, which consists of identical plaques at Eastern and Western and an ax which is passed between the two schools, was proposed by a member of the Alumni Board of Directors, Don Vogel, in July 1977 and was originally planned to be named the Altgeld Trophy.

"But because of the influence Abraham Lincoln had in the area between Eastern and Western, we thought it would be more appropriate to call it the Railsplitter Trophy," Eastern's Director of Alumni Services Charles Titus said.

Thus, each year, during basketball season, Eastern and Western alternate as to who will host the Old Railsplitter game.

The first Railsplitter contest was played Dec. 10, 1977 at Lantz Gym, which the Panthers won 108-74, and since then the home team has won on each occasion and has left a 2-2 split in the series.

Despite a theft of the ax two years ago, a new ax was purchased and the Old Railsplitter Trophy plaque remains in the Alumni Lounge of the University Union.

"The reason the basketball season was picked instead of football was because the two schools were fairly even in it," Eastern Sports Information Director Dave Kidwell said. "And at the time, basketball was the most prominent sport at Eastern."

Perspectives

Black students share campus experiences

by Betsey Guzior

These are ordinary students—they have their opinions, their dreams, their goals. And they want what everyone wants from college—a job, a career and a good life.

These are Eastern's black students, and they have shared a few of their perspectives on the status of Eastern's black community as Black History Month comes to an end.

Samoria Caffie is a journalism and Afro-American studies major from Chicago, a sophomore and 23 years old.

Caffie enjoys her life here, raising her seven-year-old daughter Amy while attending classes. Caffie wants the best life for her daughter, so she is not one to settle for just a job.

"I'm determined to make something out of my life. I want a career, I just don't want a job," Caffie said in her university apartment, while Amy slept beside her, clinging to her single mother.

Other blacks want the best for themselves too, but the culture shock of coming to college may be overwhelming, she said.

"English was the hardest subject to adjust to," Caffie said. She mentioned that in the many high schools she attended in Chicago, she found that the predominately black schools had more outdated books and less teachers, while the "mixed" and all-white schools seemed to have more updated books and more personalized instruction.

Although Caffie tested out of the first English class, she said it was difficult to adjust to a college English class.

She said she also felt out of place walking into a predominately white classroom, but after a semester or two, she also found it unusual to walk in a predominately black class.

"You stick out like a sore thumb sometimes," Caffie said of her adjustment to Eastern. Although the pressures of college are the same for both black and white students, blacks are not used to it.

"Whites are used to this type of an atmosphere, when most blacks aren't," she added.

And that added pressure—linked to a drive to achieve—may lead to flunking out of school, Caffie said.

"Most blacks see that degree as the key. Flunking out means the factory," Caffie said. "Education is life and means you're going to make it out there. It feels like they have to make it—not only because they're black."

Benita Blackmon, a graduate student in guidance and counseling, lives with her husband and two-year-old son on 10th Street, but makes her second home as director of the Afro-American Cultural Center on Seventh Street.

As an undergraduate she was active in many organizations: president of her sorority, the Black Student Union, officer of the National Panhellenic Council and a member of the Affirmative Action and Afro-American Studies committees.

A student here since the fall of 1976, Blackmon has seen the groups of blacks change from a group atmosphere to one that is more individualized.

"Society's becoming more individualized—it used to be where everyone thought of 'mine' and 'us' at the same time. Now it's just 'mine,' she said.

"Student attitudes now are quite different than they were, there's not a sense of unity anymore," she added.

Blackmon said she sees Eastern students keeping more to themselves, rather than being part of a group.

"Some students waited for a cause, now they're just saying 'what are you going to do for me?'" she said.

But groups of black and white students tend to choose their separate modes of social life, she said, such as the "sets" at the University Union or socializing at the bars.

There are people who can move between the groups, she added, but not many can do it.

"A lot of activities don't overlap," she said. "You need an outgoing, active person with an open attitude to do it."

Blackmon said she feels that the solutions to mixing the two worlds may lie upon the "in-between person" to actively work with both black and white organizations to bring them more together.

Steve Jones, a junior in sociology and psychology—and sophomore La-Joyce Hunter, a speech-communications and Spanish major, have actively involved themselves in organizations, both black and white, at Eastern.

Jones is the chairman-elect of the University Board, while Hunter is Human Potential Committee chairman and a new active member of Alpha Sigma Tau, a predominately white sorority recently formed on campus.

Both have been active since they came to Eastern, although Jones said he first felt that "there was nothing to do here."

"I expected to be involved, to have the opportunity waiting," he said. "I wanted it to come to me."

But Jones went out and became involved in the UB through a friend who lived in his residence hall. And he saw no barriers.

"There are no barriers in what you want to do," Jones said. "It seems harder sometimes, and some people think there are barriers, but I see none."

To break barriers, Jones said, is to have a say in what is going on.

"The only way you can start to like Eastern is to get involved," he added.

"It's up to the students. They have to go all out to get involved," Jones concluded.

Hunter has also been active with campus radio station WELH, The Daily Eastern News, Black Student Union and UB. Her biggest step, however, was when she and two other black women joined the second pledge class of Alpha Sigma Tau.

"Some black girls gave me a lot of flack," she said. And some of her friends stopped talking to her.

But her friends now are much like herself, she said, they are out "just to like people. The truth comes out about your friends when you do something different," she said of the experience.

"It's like we don't use color," she added.

Hunter terms her experience at Eastern and in the sorority a "cultural exchange," where the bond of sisterhood is stronger when everyone has ideas to share.

Half leprechaun? Show us Irish and win

Time is running out to enter the Verge's 10 Most Irish People on Eastern's Campus contest.

Anyone on campus who feels he/she has a little bit more claim to an Irish heritage than most should stop by The Daily Eastern News in North Buzzard Gym to enter the contest that will determine the 10 most Irish people on Eastern's campus. The deadline is Wednesday.

The contest has been in progress about two weeks and so far 12 people have ventured in the News office to enter. All of the applicants to date have been students, but the contest is also open to faculty and civil service workers.

Our applicants claim to be anywhere from 110 percent Irish to 50 percent. Actually, the percentage of Irish blood is not as important in determining the winners as their enthusiasm for St. Patrick's Day. Even someone who is not quite sure what percent of their ancestry they can claim as Irish has a chance if he especially enjoys participating in the annual festivities.

The 10 winners will be featured in the March 12 issue of the Verge.

So, if celebrating St. Patrick's Day is what you enjoy best—enter!

Food: Off campus doesn't have to mean malnutrition

by Denise Skowron

AAAAAAAHHHHH...freedom!

No more visitation hours.
No more floor meetings.
No more cafeteria food with which to contend.

As an off-campus student, one has freedom, independence and control of the direction in which their life is headed.

But...who will feed those who venture off campus?

Along with the responsibilities of bills, dishes and taking out the garbage, off-campus students must rely on their instincts to maintain existence. They must cook for themselves—the survival of the fittest.

And it appears they are doing alright.

"I think we eat as well as anyone in Charleston," sophomore Jay Justus boasts. "We have meat, potatoes and vegetables for dinner every night."

Justus' roommate, senior Doug Kirk said a half side of beef was a Christmas present from his boss who owns a farm.

"We keep most of it in a freezer in Martinsville," he said. "I go down at least once a week and bring some back."

Justus added that they do not buy generic products. "We go for the quality stuff," he said. "There IS a difference."

Although the budgets of most off-campus students cannot cater to such a discriminating palate, an efficient system can help make ends "meat."

"Every night, Monday through Thursday, each one of us cooks a meal," junior Dennis Eisele said of himself and his three other roommates. "On Friday, Saturday and Sunday, we're on our own."

One of Eisele's roommates, junior Larry Schmidt, said he and his roommates save money by eating together at a sit-down meal, rather than prepare individual meals.

"We each buy a week's worth of groceries for ourself and then whatever else is needed for the meal we cook each other," he said.

Another student who finds parents a good source for money is senior Kenda Burrows shares a house with two others.

"We have a nice size freezer so we go home we stock up on meat," she said.

Burgers, hotdogs, chicken, and casseroles are among the served at Burrows' house.

generics? "Yes! You can't make it with them," she said.

Generally, Burrows said that she and her roommates enjoy a well-balanced diet.

Splitting everything "right down the middle" seems to be the method that works best for junior Angea T. and her roommate. That goes for cooking and shopping, she said.

So contrary to popular belief, campus students are not dying of malnutrition. In fact they seem to be doing just fine.

Quick recipes that fit the budget, satisfy appetites

by Denise Skowron

Recipes that are quick, economical or just right for one or two people seem to always be in demand, especially for students who opt to try off-campus living instead of the residence halls.

Edith Hedges and Ruth Dow, both of the School of Home Economics, share some of their favorite recipes for students who need to fix a good meal while sticking to a budget.

SOUP COMBINATION:

Two or more canned soup combined into one offer a delicious "new" flavor. Try these:

- Cream of Celery and Vegetable plus 1 cup of grated American cheese
- Cream of Mushroom and Onion
- New England Clam Chowder and Vegetarian Vegetable
- Beef Noodle plus 1 can Mixed Vegetables
- Oyster Stew or Clam Chowder plus Vegetarian Vegetable
- Tomato and Cream of Celery
- Black Beans and Tomato

JIFFY APPLE CRUMBLE: serves 4-5

- 1 20-oz. can apple pie filling
- 1/2 tsp cinnamon
- 1/2 cup flour
- 1/3 cup sugar
- 3 T. butter or margarine

Pour apple filling in shallow 1-quart baking dish and stir in cinnamon. In small bowl, combine flour and sugar; cut in butter or margarine until mixture is in coarse crumbs. Sprinkle over apples. Bake at 425 F., 15 minutes, or until lightly browned. Serve with cream, custard sauce or ice cream.

QUICK RUSSIAN DRESSING: serves 4

1/4 cup chili sauce added to 1 cup mayonnaise or salad dressing. Blend thoroughly.

BOSTON SANDWICHES: serves 8

- 1 cup drained Boston-style baked beans
- 1 T. chili sauce
- 1 tsp. prepared mustard
- 1 T. minced meat

Mash beans; add remaining ingredients. Serve between thin slices Boston Brown Bread.

Variations: Add 1/2 cup grated cheddar cheese and spread between slices of dark rye bread.

The same "beany" cheese mixture spread on crackers makes a tasty appetizer.

A meal that consists mainly of beans is not as bad as it sounds, Dow said, because beans are a good, inexpensive source of protein.

SWEET-SOUR SIX: serves 5-6

- 2 slices bacon
- 1/2 medium onion, finely chopped
- 1/4 cup brown sugar
- 1/4 cup catsup
- 2 T. vinegar
- 1/4 tsp. salt
- 1/4 tsp. dry mustard
- 1/4 tsp. worchestershire sauce

Beans:

- 1/4 of a 16 oz. can of each

- green beans
- wax beans
- butter beans
- kidney beans
- green limas
- 1/4 of a large can of pork and beans

Fry bacon, crumble, drain, leaving just enough fat to saute onion. Add other ingredients except beans. Simmer 5 minutes.

Partially drain beans (can use liquid of most beans in soup, etc.) Combine all ingredients in baking dish, or in microwave 15 minutes. Stir occasionally.

Bake 1 hour at 350 F.

Students with limited cooking utensils will find these economical meals easy to prepare on a hotplate or single burner if necessary.

The meals are designed for only one person. Only one cooking utensil and one hotplate or burner is necessary. There are no leftovers which allows savings in preparation, clean-up time and refrigeration costs.

YAM 'N' HAM

- 2 T. margarine
- 1 yam, peeled, thinly sliced into long strips
- 1 T. mixed vegetable flakes
- 2 thin slices boiled ham, sliced into long strips
- 1/2 can (8 oz.) drained pineapple chunks

1 T. pineapple juice

In small skillet, over low heat, melt margarine. Add yam and cook until it soaks up margarine and is slightly browned. When yam reaches this point, spread it evenly over bottom of skillet.

Sprinkle vegetable flakes over top if you wish. Spread ham strips over that. Make sure they are evenly distributed. Cover; cook on low heat for 15 minutes.

Remove cover; add pineapple chunks and pineapple juice. Cover; cook another 15 minutes, or until everything is just heated through. Do not stir too much as this will break up everything. Serve.

TUNA AND SPINACH NOODLES

- 1 cup (1 oz.) spinach noodles
- 2 T. margarine
- 1 small onion, peeled, minced
- 1 small celery, cleaned, minced
- 1 small apple, pared, cored, cubed
- 1/2 tsp. each dill weed, parsley flakes, salt, and black pepper to season
- 1 can (3 1/4 oz.) tuna drained
- grated Parmesan cheese

In saucepan, boil noodles according to package directions. Drain; stir in 1 T. margarine. Empty into small bowl.

In same saucepan, melt remaining 1 T. margarine. Add onion and celery; cook over low heat stirring occasionally for 5 minutes, or until onion and celery are slightly limp.

Add cubed apple, dill weed and parsley flakes. Cook 2 minutes over low heat stirring.

Add drained tuna cook 2 minutes more stirring to break up tuna. Add cooked noodles. Cook another minute. Sprinkle with grated Parmesan cheese.

Freshman Lorie Sims reads over the ingredients label of an item she is thinking about purchasing at a local grocery store. Sims, like many students who live off-campus, makes weekly trips to the store to stock up on various meal items, laundry aids and of course, snacks. Gayle Strader, a consumer education instructor for the School of Home Economics, suggests students check the papers for specials to help combat rising food costs. She said hidden costs such as the extra ingredients a cake mix needs should also be considered before making a purchase. (Photo by Lawrence McGown)

'Consumerism Helper': healthy food for thought

by Denise Skowron

According to one School of Home Economics faculty member, "No matter how little or much you spend on food, if it's not nutritious, it's not good consumerism."

Gayle Strader, an instructor for Consumer Education 3300, offered this piece of advice as well as other food for thought to off-campus students cooking for themselves.

"Junk foods are a real problem," she said. Because students are often faced with limited time as well as money, they often resort to junk food and convenience foods.

Because junk food is higher in price and lower in food value, Strader said it is just not good consumerism.

Convenience foods such as "Hamburger Helper" are another temptation facing students.

"Be careful of convenience foods," Strader warns. "Sometimes it's less expensive to buy the spices yourself to flavor a dish."

Ruth Dow, a registered dietician from the School of Home Economics, said, "Good nutrition doesn't have to be expensive."

She explained her rule for making the best economical use of protein. Although it defies the laws of basic addition, chemically, it works.

"It's called the 2+2=5 rule," she said.

By eating more than one source of protein at a meal, one can actually obtain more protein than the sum of two sources eaten at separate meals.

A combination example is cornbread and beans. "Though no one would eat that everyday," Dow said it is a good inexpensive alternative to meat.

Dry milk is another inexpensive alternative. Dry milk provides twice the calcium as regular milk, costs less and calorie intake remains the same. Although many prefer not to drink dry milk, it is a good substitute in cooking, Dow said.

Budget is a key word. Just as students budget their finances, they should plan and budget their nutrition, Dow said. Priorities should be set in choosing the best sources of nutrition.

High food prices chewing away at students' wallets

by Denise Skowron

Remember the clips preceding the old "Mary Tyler Moore Show?" Mary is pictured in a supermarket pushing a shopping cart down the aisles.

To the tune of "You're Gonna Make it After All," she chooses her purchases. Looking at the price of one of the items, she rolls her eyes dramatically and tosses the item into her cart, disgusted.

The expression on her face illustrates the sentiment of many students shopping for themselves—disgusted.

Rising costs seem to plague students from all directions in the form of tuition and rent as well as food bills.

In an effort to combat some of inflation's effects, Gayle Strader, a consumer education instructor in the School of Home Economics, offers some suggestions:

"Before you go shopping, it's a good idea to read the paper and find out what's on special," she said. However, it is not economical to travel all over trying to take advantage of every store's bargains.

"Watch out for those hidden costs," Strader said. Items such as a cake mix are not exceedingly expensive, but do require ingredients which sometimes are.

"Look up and down the shelves," she said. Because bargains are often strategically placed above and below eye level, consumers can easily overlook them and purchase the more expensive item placed at eye level.

"Always watch displays that are just around the corner," she warns. "Don't assume that they are a better buy."

Strader encourages use of coupons "but only if you are sure it's for a product you'd buy anyway."

And finally, Strader stresses the importance of students being responsible consumers. If a shopper decides not to purchase an item already in his cart, "don't stuff it back into a shelf somewhere."

Because products spoil if not correctly stored, that cost is absorbed in food prices—food prices that we, the consumers, end up paying in the long run.

Young's latest cut makes the blues reaction

Rock Review

by John Stockman

RE-AC-TOR

Neil Young & Crazy Horse

Neil Young's last album, Hawks & Doves, was an optimistic State of the Union message that said America was basically homogeneous. To oversimplify—though hawks and doves are different species of birds, both are birds. When the chips are down, Americans are Americans, despite differences in attitudes.

Re-ac-tor is just the opposite. This time Young emphasizes differences in America, the have and have-nots. Re-ac-tor's front cover has a nuclear power motif, the back cover a solar design. The title has both nuclear and protest definitions.

With Hawks the appearance of disunity was superficial; with Re-ac-tor unity is deceptive. Hawks had hippie folk music and redneck country & western, yet the songs were about both hawks and doves. The music on Re-ac-tor is all straight-ahead blues rock, but the songs are about differences. The title graphics, each broken down into syllables, also suggest divisiveness.

In "Op-er-a Star" a girlfriend slams the door in our protagonist's face: Then she took off to the opera With some highbrow from the city lights.

You were born to rock, You'll never be an opera star.

Young also notes the have/have-not quality of power. In "South-ern Pa-cific" Mr. (Casey?) Jones can't fight his automatic retirement:

*I rode the highball
I fired the Daylight
When I turned 65
I couldn't see right.
It was "Mr. Jones
We've got to let you go.
It's company policy*

You've got a pension though.

Young's singing and writing is matter-of-fact throughout. He's not advocating change, he's writing with the eye of a journalist and a historian. His line, "Some things never change—They stay the way they are" is similar to the cliché of history classes, "The more things change, the more they stay the same."

Re-ac-tor's strength is its music. Utilizing a no-frills line-up of drums, bass and two guitars, Young and his back-up band Crazy Horse plow through the nine songs in relentless fashion. The melodies are simple but catchy, the singing in the blues tradition, the simple lyrics often repeated.

The best songs are "South-ern Pa-cific" and "T-bone." "T-bone" epitomizes the album. Its nine minutes and 14 seconds of riff-propelled rock have only two lines of lyrics. "Got mashed potatoes/Ain't got no T-bone," is a basic way to sum up the have and have-nots of America.

The Serenity Prayer is written in Latin on the back cover. "God, give me the serenity to accept the things I can't change, courage to change those I can, and the wisdom to know the difference." There's Young's whole attitude in a nutshell. Re-ac-tor isn't a great album, it's just another good Neil Young album. It's our annual postcard from Young telling us where he's at right now.

Spirit of Vaudeville alive and well

by Becky Tinder

Harmonizing about Mom, apple pie, and traditional feelings did not die out with Vaudeville shows, but is still very much alive and well here with The Coles County Chorus.

The Coles County Chorus is a barbershop chorus which was inspired by four Eastern faculty members who had formed a barbershop quartet in 1965 called "The Facultones."

The original quartet joined together when Tom Woodall of the physical education department moved here from South Dakota and suggested to Ron Leathers of the education department that they get a quartet together.

"I helped start a chapter of barbershop singers in South Dakota, and I was still hungry for that kind of fellowship through music," Woodall said, "so when I met Ron, I asked him if he liked to sing practically before I asked him his name."

Along with Woodall and Leathers, two other faculty members; Graduate School Dean Larry Williams and Dean of Student Academic Services Sam Taber, formed "The Facultones."

Woodall said all the men enjoyed the Music

Personalities

quartet and decided, "if it was fun for some of us, then maybe others would be interested too."

By 1970 their membership had grown large enough (35 members) to have their chapter chartered by the Society for the Preservation and Encouragement of Barbershop Quartet Singing in America (SPEBSQSA).

A representative of the SPEBSQSA was sent to observe the group. The representative had to gain assurance that the group was a legitimate singing organization before The Coles County Chorus was admitted as a chartered member.

"The Coles County Chorus is very active in conventions and contests," Leathers said. "We're the smallest chorus in number that is active in competition in the state. We are classified as a 'District Finalist Chorus' because we place every year."

Four organized quartets have branched from the original group—"The Gentry," "The Brooks Brothers," "Dads 'N Lads," and "The Geritones."

The quartets usually perform two or three times a month as well as performing with the original group.

"We are real popular for fall festivals, pork barbeques, assembly programs, and of course, Christmas is our busiest time," Leathers said.

Each year The Coles County Chorus has one big money making event to make their operating budget which covers costs such as costumes, a practice room and transportation. This year their annual spring show will be in conjunction with Celebration '82.

The members of the Cole County Chorus are not professional musicians. Their singing is a hobby, but their enthusiasm, interest and talent keep old-time favorites such as "Let Me Call You Sweetheart" and "Coney Island Baby" known to the younger generation.

'Golden Pond' floats above competition

Quiet movies the caliber of "On Golden Pond" are a rare breed in cinema today. Movie makers have gotten into the habit of trying to make sweeping social statements, or create a spectacle using all of the sex, violence and moronic comedy tricks in the book.

Nothing rises to the top because they have forgotten it is people they are supposed to be talking about (and talking to), not bankbooks or boxoffice totals. "On Golden Pond" is made of much richer stuff and it floats in spite of all of its sentimentality.

What makes this film a gem is its ability to be lighthearted and serious at the same time. It is funny, but not hilarious. It is tactful, but not cautious to the point of hesitation.

Veteran actor Henry Fonda plays Norman Thayer, a retired college professor who is just the kind of grandfather that everyone would like to have—wise and witty.

His wife, Ethel (Katherine Hepburn), remains optimistic in spite of her years with the cynical professor (who she affectionately calls "old poop" whenever the opportunity arises) and looks upon their lives as something to look back at and relish, not criticize.

So, what can possibly happen when you get two vastly different people together and box them up for the summer in a little cottage on a picturesque lake in Pennsylvania? You get a unique character study featuring some of the most original people to appear in a movie in years.

by Scott Fishel

The story is really quite simple. The Thayers come to their retreat on the lake to spend the summer, coming home after a migration to Florida for the winter months. Their stay begins much the way it has in past years, but then changes when their prodigal daughter, Chelsey (Jane Fonda), makes a rare appearance to celebrate her father's 80th birthday.

There is a conflict between father and daughter that is never really made clear, but you can assume that it has something to do with her being a girl, and being unable to do all of the things he wanted her to do as a child.

The best scenes of the film are those involving Norman and the son of his daughter's new boyfriend. The scenes are so poignant and touching that it is hard to choke down the tears.

Norman's outlook on his existence as an 80-year-old man is infinitely brighter, his wife is content that the rift in the family is finally on the way to being repaired, and the young boy who Norman adopts as his own is set on a much straighter path by his stay with the two old people.

This is where the richness of the film comes through—in the people, not the complexity of the plot or the number of gadgets or sex scenes that it contains.

By the end of the movie you feel you know these people and their problems, and you understand how they have reached their conclusions.

Symbol-mongers will be happy to know that "On Golden Pond" is loaded with little tidbits to take out of context and assign irrelevant meanings.

There is the pair of loons (birds) that serenade the summer visitors throughout the movie, and an ill-fated journey into a part of the lake called Purgatory Cove. And then there is Walter, a large, elusive fish who taunts Norman and the boy up until the final scenes.

Just what these subtle hints of greater depth mean are open to individual interpretation. However, such depth does not make the movie something to be seen in cinema classes alone—it can be enjoyed by all.

Well, almost all. Norman Thayer's tendency to swear—not vulgar, just as a matter of conversation—gives the movie a PG rating. But what do movie raters know anyway?

"On Golden Pond" has been nominated for 10 Academy awards, including best actor and actress, best picture and best supporting actress, and it is obvious why. Of all of movies of the last year, this is one of the few that still holds water.
