Coroner's inquest finds smoke killed students

by Jim Holland

The deaths of Michael and Robert Hayner and Carla Cowger were due to poisoning by smoke inhalation from an accidental fire, a Coles County jury ruled Thursday night.

The three Eastern students died in an early morning blaze at 1108 Fourth St. Oct. 7 when a fire which started in the kitchen area of the two-story frame house spread to the upstairs bedrooms.

Coroner Richard Lynch told the jury at Thursday's inquest that, according to reports from the state toxicology lab, there was "no doubt" the three students were dead before fire fighters arrived on the scene.

He said the level of carbon monoxide in the students' bodies indicated that they probably died within 10 minutes after first inhaling the smoke.

Lynch estimated that fire fighters arrived at the burning house within 10 minutes after receiving a phone call from a neighbor.

Jeff Baker, a resident of the house, testified that he woke up in his first floor bedroom "coughing and gasping for air." He said the room was filled with smoke but he could see no flames.

Baker said he crawled out of the bedroom and out the front door. "All the sudden it clicked and I realized people were in the house," he said. He then went back into the house and woke up Mike Critchelo who was sleeping in a first-floor bedroom.

He then tried to go upstairs to wake the four people sleeping there, but "the smoke was too much," he said.

Baker said he heard Philip Yordy upstairs coughing and yelling that he could not see.

Baker said he kept yelling until Yordy got out of the house.

Another witness, Mark McSparin, verified the smoke was so thick "I couldn't see my hand in front of my face."

McSparin said he saw the fire from his driveway and told a friend to go call the fire department while he ran to see if there was anyone in the house. He saw flames pouring out of the kitchen window, he said.

McSparin could not enter the house by the back door because of the heat, but said he heard voices which he believed came from upstairs. He then went to the front door and, putting his shirt over his face, tried twice to go upstairs.

McSparin said the heat was intense and that he could not hear or see anyone. He then went outside and fire fighters arrived soon after.

Lynch said in a final word to the jury that allegations concerning unprofessional action by the fire department are unfair and unfounded. The fire fighters are well-trained and well-equipped, and the public who have no training should not second-guess the fire fighters' work.

Options, expenditures get BOG's approval

by Ed Mazzocco

Approval of two new departmental options and university expenditures for Eastern was made by the Board of Governors here Thursday.

BOG Executive Director Donald Walters presented to the board an option in public administration under the bachelor's degree program of the political science department.

Walters also presented certification for school librarianship and media specialists and an option in regular librarianship under the master's degree in instructional media which were also approved by the BOG.

With the board's approval, the options will go to the Illinois Board of Higher Education for final vote, Walters said.

Robert Wiseman, chairman of School Service Personnel at Eastern, said Thursday he was surprised and happy with the option approval.

"I didn't know that it (the option) was going to be on today's agenda, but I am very glad to know the board approved it," Wiseman said.

The new programs will help develop the library science program and better meet the needs of students going into educational institutions and working with media and library skills, he said.

Faculty members from the political science department could not be reached for comment Thursday.

In other business, Eastern President Daniel E. Marvin presented a report to the board entailing purchases which were mainly for university vehicles.

The BOG must approve any purchases that exceed $10,000.

Also on the President's report was the proposed addition of 18 washers and dryers for Carman Hall.

The mechanical costs and engineering fees were estimated at approximately $40,000, Marvin said.

Carter vows punishment if windfall profits tax fails

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter said Thursday he may pursue proposals to punish the oil industry if Congress fails to produce a satisfactory "windfall profits" tax.

Carter's comments were echoed by New Jersey Gov. Brendan Byrne, who was accompanying the president on an afternoon trip to New Jersey for an energy forum and a Democratic Party fund-raiser.

In the president's first public comments on third quarter profits announced by the major oil companies, Carter said the figures "vividly demonstrate the need for a major portion of unearned profits from the oil companies to go into the general service of the American people."

Carter made the remarks at a White House breakfast meeting with the National Citizens' Coalition for the Windfall Profits Tax.

Actually, the tax that Carter proposed last spring would be applied to the oil industry's increased revenue, stemming from his decision to phase out crude oil price controls.

Daniel E. Marvin at BOG meeting

The proposal of installing the washers and dryers was passed. However, the board asked Marvin to contact the engineers and work on getting a lower estimate to be presented at the next BOG meeting.

Walters listed projects for institutions and their costs in order of priority.

Walters said he arranged the projects in the following order: projects already started which need to be completed, projects previously approved by the BOG but not by the BHE, projects needed for health and safety improvements and new projects not yet presented to the board.

On the list for Eastern were the construction of a kiln shed for the art department ($97,100), phase two of Old Main renovations ($98,000), storage room for the physical plant ($207,200), and McAfee gymnasium changes ($102,600).

The projects and costs were approved by the BOG and will now go before the BHE, Walters said.

Carter said that if the Senate fails to pass a bill stronger than the one before the Finance Committee, "We will shift our combat zone" to the House-Senate conference. That panel will work out differences between the Senate bill and a bill the House has approved which is more to Carter's liking.

The tax approved by the Senate committee would produce $142 billion from 1980 to 1990, compared with $292 billion in Carter's original proposal and $273 billion in the House-passed bill.

If the final measure does not meet his approval, Carter said, "We'll move toward additional proposals to the Congress which could be quite punitive to the oil industry."

"I will not hesitate to do that if necessary," the president said. He did not spell out what steps would be taken.

Byrne, the coalition chairman, said later that some of the group's members suggested nationalization of the oil industry or reimposition of price controls "may be appropriate."

Detectives seek slasher's victims

CHICAGO — Investigators sought 11 victims of recent knifing attacks in the city's subway system to view a police line-up Thursday, after a suspect was apprehended in the fatal slashing of a twelfth victim.

All the victims had been slashed in the throat during the dark hours, when many travelers shun the downtown subway tunnels out of fear of violence.

Authorities said they were trying to round up transit system personnel as well as two middle-aged couples believed to have witnessed the killing and possible robbery of 64-year-old Joseph Ardell.

"We are going through all our records to find every witness that I can find and every person who has been robbed and get them to show up," said homicide Lt. Mike Hencke.

Several hours after Ardell was found dying, police apprehended a 24-year-old man who reportedly was bothering another transit passenger. The suspect, police said, was carrying a bloody knife and blood-stained money.

Ardell's throat had been slit while he was waiting on a subway platform at about 11:15 p.m. Wednesday in the latest of a dozen similar attacks in the three weeks.

Fraternity skit offends NAACP

ROCK ISLAND, Ill. — A fraternity skit in which a young man in blackface was led down a street by two fraternity brothers dressed as Ku Klux Klan members was an effort to poke fun at current events, not a racist slur, according to a member of Beta Omega Sigma.

Several groups, including the local chapter of the NAACP, have complained about the skit and asked Augustana College officials to disband the fraternity.

But Ken Cox said Wednesday his fraternity meant no harm. He says it had mailed letters of apology to all 2,000 students at the college.

"The philosophy behind the BOS parade has always been to take current events of worldly significance and of significance to Augustana students and to sort of poke fun at them in a humorous manner," he said.

A committee at the school will consider what disciplinary action, if any, should be recommended. James Ribbeck, vice president for student affairs, said Thursday consideration by the committee likely would take at least two weeks. He added that a decision on what should be done would be made by the college president, Thomas Tredway.

House approves emergency aid

WASHINGTON — The House, moving with unusual speed, voted overwhelmingly Thursday for a $1.35 billion emergency aid measure to help poor people pay their heating bills this winter.

House members approved the plan, 290-105, after first saying they want the proceeds of President Carter's proposed "windfall profits" tax on the oil industry to pay for the costly program.

But an effort to make the entire aid program contingent on passage of the tax was ruled out of order and thus rejected.

House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill, terming emergency fuel aid a "national imperative," placed the bill ahead of other important measures on the House agenda to gain a swift vote.

Despite O'Neill's pleadings, several critics complained that the House was running the risk of wasting large sums of money as it tried to set up the program.

Rep. Robert Giaimo, D-Conn., chairman of the House Budget Committee, complained that the House was approving money for a program that wasn't properly authorized in advance by Congress, as is the normal procedure.

"We're pushing inflation up, we're ruining the working men and women of this country, only because we...find it so easy to deal with a problem by throwing money at it," he said.

Local talent to participate in Met auditions Saturday

by Stacy Wells

The sound of music will be heard throughout Dvorak Concert Hall during the Metropolitan Opera auditions which will be held from 11:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday.

The auditions have been held at Eastern for the past 11 years, June Johnson, director of the auditions said.

Charleston residents Monica McRoberts, a senior vocal major, and Terry Kelly, an Eastern graduate in vocals will be auditioning along with 33 other singers, Johnson said.

Johnson said each opera singer will be required to sing five opera arias representing three different languages, usually Italian, German and French.

Winners will be announced between 4:30 and 5 p.m., and awards will be given at a banquet in the Union addition Grand Ballroom following the auditions, Johnson said.

Johnson said winners of the auditions will then perform in the regional semi-finals in Chicago on Nov. 5.

Winners from those auditions will perform in the finals in New York on Nov. 6, she added.

The overall winner will undergo intensive study with the finest teachers and coaches in the Metropolitan Opera, Johnson said.

The Metropolitan Opera auditions are for the central Illinois area, which includes Eastern, Western and Southern Illinois universities, the University of Illinois and other surrounding colleges, Johnson added.

Study consultants chosen

by Carolyn Waller

Eastern's radio-TV study committee decided Monday what consultants it will hire for developing an FM radio and TV studio at Eastern.

The consultants will be hired at an approximate cost of $3,500. The radio consultant study will cost $1,500 and the TV studio study will cost $2,000.

The consultants were recommended by Willis Waltman, of the audio visual department, who is in charge of the TV studio and Stephen Hofer, of speech communications, who is in charge of the FM radio station.

Robert Milkman of Western Illinois University will be asked to bring Western's television engineer to Eastern to study possible facilities and discuss basic needs for the TV studio.

The approximate costs for Milkman and his engineer will be $75.

Carl Bauman of Fiat-Allis Construction Machinery in Springfield will be consulted to assess facility and equipment needs from an industrial producer's viewpoint at an approximate cost of $250.

Ken Hesler, chairman of the committee said the committee approved Educational FM Associates from Duxburg, Mass. as consultants for the FM radio station.

Hesler said he hopes consultants for the TV studio and FM radio station will be able to come in December or January.

He added that the committee will draft a progress report to President Daniel E. Marvin requesting funds for consultant costs and approval to proceed with Federal Communications Commission application for the FM station.

Grady, Combs fill senate seats

The two vacated senate seats from off-campus districts were filled Thursday at the Student Senate meeting.

The nominations of freshman Dan Grady and sophomore Brad Combs were approved by the senate and the new senators assumed their duties.

The seats were vacated by Senators Robert Singleton and Linda Phillips.

Student Collective Bargaining Representative Jeff Sopko brought to the senate's attention an incident involving a student who received a $35 ticket for walking in a bike lane.

Sopko explained that the student was walking the bike lane on Fourth Street because the sidewalks were covered with mud from a recent thunderstorm.

Oil company earnings soar at expense of consumers

Yes, Virginia you can have an oil shortage, decreased allocations and long gas lines and still have windfall profits.

This week oil industry giants released their third quarter financial portfolios, and the resulting figures will make stockholders happy and consumers angry.

Exxon Corp., the world's largest oil company, said its earnings jumped 118.1 percent over last year's third quarter statement.

Exxon hit a new high between July and September by earning $1.14 billion. Oil company officials stated the increase in earnings was a result of significant growth in foreign operations despite a low profit growth in the U.S.

Other oil companies reported increased earnings as well: Atlantic Richfield up 45.3 percent, Standard Oil (Indiana) rose 49 percent, Mobil Corp. (the second largest U.S. producer) up 130 percent, Sun Oil increased 65.3 percent to $173 million, Cities Service rose 64 percent and Marathon Oil gained 57.8 percent.

Standard Oil of Ohio tripled its earnings from July to September from $125.7 million to $366.2 million. Incidentally, SOHIO is only the nations' 13th largest oil company.

Initial reaction to these statements were ones of shock and anger on the part of consumers and political leaders who found themselves sitting in gas lines this summer watching the pump price of gasoline rise to over a dollar a gallon.

This reaction spurred the House to reverse its 10-day-old decision to phase-out price controls on gasoline. The House voted 225-to-189, in light of the corporate earnings, to keep gasoline price controls.

Congressional leaders said the reversal of their opinion on price controls was made by the politically unpopular profit reports by the oil companies and current predictions of gas shortages next year.

Reaction from the White House also was not surprising. Charles Schultze, chief economic adviser to the president, said Wednesday the sharp increases in oil company profits are a reminder that the "windfall profit" tax should be enacted immediately.

Enactment, which may be slow in coming since the oil industry has one of the strongest lobby groups in Washington, is vital to the future of America.

The windfall profit tax along with the passage of gasoline price controls should be the major steps to check the increasing impropriety between consumers and the dollars they spend on petroleum products.

The oil profit picture tells a tale of the petroleum industry rolling along with booming earnings while the average American can not roll along because he or she can't afford to.

Students surrender rights by submitting to test search

You would think college students would know their rights both as U.S. citizens and students, yet a group of Eastern students Monday exhibited their ignorance by allowing their books and backpacks to be searched by an instructor.

The search occurred in Carl Morgan's accounting 2100 course when he discovered a test was missing and insisted that students prove they were innocent by exhibiting their notebooks and other personal items.

The story gets a little muddled here as some students contend Morgan ordered the class not to leave until he had searched their possessions.

Morgan, on the other hand, claims he merely asked to see students' belongings and that when one student offered her books to be searched, he took it to be a voluntary act on the students' part as the others followed suit.

Morgan claims any student could have left the classroom without being searched. Other students contradict this statement, saying they could not leave until they had been searched.

But why would students allow

Marsha

themselves to be searched, even and especially if they were innocent?

Whether Morgan had the right to search the class is a hazy legal question.

Two local attorneys said they cannot see how Morgan had the right to make a search.

Bill Paris, a Charleston attorney, said "I doubt if he (Morgan) had the right to go through their things."

Coles County State's Attorney Paul Komada said it is unusual for a search to be conducted by a private individual.

Also, the Fourth Amendment of the U.S. Constitution guarantees individuals the right to be free of any unreasonable search and if Morgan's search wasn't unreasonable then I don't know what is.

I just cannot understand how anyone could let an act like this happen without protesting loudly, both to the instructor and to higher authorities.

Even more unforgivable than the teacher are the students who voluntarily displayed their briefcases, books or purses for the search. I'm sure many students were anxious to prove their innocence, but by doing that, they surrendered their rights to the teacher and thereby made his actions seem justifiable.

At least two students were upset about the incident and voiced their opinions by writing a letter to the News and complaining to the dean of the School of Business.

While these students recognized that their rights were being violated through the search, their motives for writing a letter to the News are questionable since they refused to have their names identified with the letter.

Also, they did not want the News to investigate the incident, because they said it had been cleared up with the dean and Morgan was going to apologize in front of the class. However, the incident should not have been ignored with only a letter to the editor to explain the situation.

Another question which enters into the picture is the instructor's method of handing out the test. If he would have taken an accurate count of the number of students in class and then passed out a corresponding number of tests, the problem would never have occurred.

Also, instructors are human too. Whether Morgan passed out the correct number of tests or whether he counted wrong and thought seven tests should have been returned really doesn't matter as much as how the incident was handled.

The whole incident leaves me with a bad feeling. I hope other students will learn from this incident so that in the future, they will know how to react if they are ever faced with a similar situation.

The position of teacher or professor does not give anyone the right to search students, even if a test was believed to be stolen.

library, there were no legal parking spaces within one square mile. If I parked in the only available space - in a tow-away zone - the campus police would have been mad and given me a ticket or towed me away.

Instead, I drove around for 15 minutes, wasting gas, waiting for someone to leave. Then I was mad, especially when I noticed my dwindling fund of gas money.

What's a poor student to do? It looks like I'll have to pay $5 (the price of a parking ticket) to avoid being raped every time I go out. I wonder if that's a legitimate reason for a student loan?

Rape trials

Editor,
This letter is in regard to the recent jury decision of "not guilty" of an alleged rapist in Coles County Court.

In the face of conclusive medical and physical evidence the verdict was still announced "not guilty."

The brave efforts of the victim going through the medical examination, investigation of her home and herself and the trial itself were ignored and disbelieved by this jury. I wonder if it is possible to find a jury in Coles County who would believe a rape victim.

I would like to say that despite the verdict I am glad that someone has the courage to bring this type of suit in Coles County. It seems, however, that a Coles County jury cannot be so brave.

I hope that in the future victims will continue to bring these cases to trial and that they can do so knowing that there is a possibility of conviction.

Mad as hell ...

Editor,
I swear, I just can't win — whatever I do makes someone mad. For instance, one night I had to go to the library to study. If I didn't go, my teacher would have been mad.

Because it was dark outside, I drove my car. If I had walked my mother would have been mad. See, she's heard that girls walking alone at night are open game for muggers and sex fiends and she gets worried. (Mothers are like that and so are roommates.)

So, I drove. When I got to the Foosball: a game for any college student

by Peggy McMeen

This game can be played in every dorm on campus in addition to several bars in Charleston. It has scores of devoted followers, from the spectator to the beginner to members of the organized teams. For 25 cents, up to four people can play a game rapidly growing in popularity and professionalism.

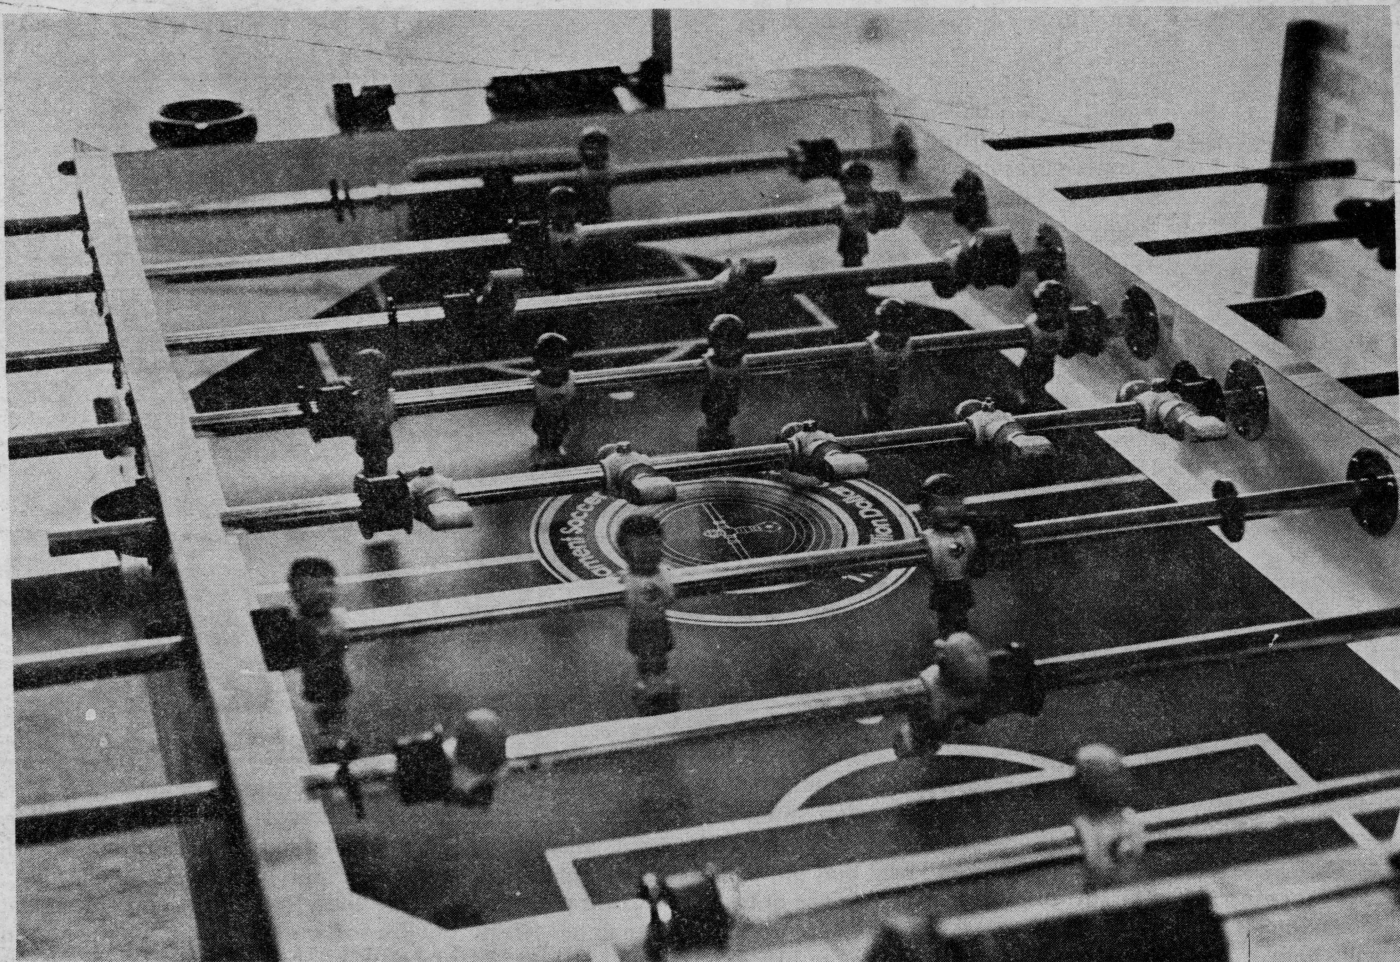

What is the game that merits all this interest? It is table soccer, or foosball, and it has attracted enough attention to support a league at Eastern for the past three years.

Before the foosball league, anyone wanting to test their skills outside the dorms went to Ted's Warehouse to play. Then John Appleton, who graduated two years ago, banded together foosball players into the teams that make up the league.

This year the league is made up of nine teams, each with eight members. Members are drafted into certain teams to prevent the best players from banding together. One of the league's main purposes, said president Keith Hunter, is to encourage new players to get involved.

The object of the game is to make as many goals as possible with a small white ball by striking it with small men suspended on rods stretching across a table. To fully appreciate the challenge of this, one has to experience actually playing a game.

Hunter said that the interest in foosball was mainly centered in the residence halls. The fee to join the league is $16 per team or $2 person. All the money goes toward trophies for the tournaments and a player appreciation party at the end of the semester. The league members are also paid to repair the foosball tables in the residence halls.

Foosball tables are available in all residence halls and most bars in Charleston. The game, also called table soccer, is so popular a foosball league has been flourishing for three years. (News photo by Rich Bauer.)

Kathy Reilly, a sophomore who has been in the league since last spring semester, said she plays a scheduled game one night a week and practices on the weekends. Four people at a time play a game, and the team that wins two out of three games is the victor. Games are played as men's doubles, women's doubles, and mixed doubles, Reilly said.

The biggest promoter of tournaments is a company called Tournament Soccer, and Eastern's league is associated with them, Hunter said. Taylor Hall holds a tournament, Roc's Lounge holds a four-week tournament that is now in progress, and from there six men's teams and four women's teams can go on to a tournament held in Chicago.

Hunter and other league members Dave Soderstrom, Ed Mancini, Dale Helmers and Brian Blaylock estimated they practiced an average of one hour a day. The games follow a set of rules and regulations published by the World Table Soccer Association.

Breakfast

(Editor's note: This is the second in a series of seven articles dealing with nutrition for college students. Lisa Stedelin is a junior majoring in nutrition.)

In the morning, many of us do well to roll out of bed and make it to class on time. To others, just the thought of breakfast makes them queasy. Only 20 percent of the households in the U.S. eat an adequate breakfast, skipping the most important meal of the day. If you stop and think about it, breakfast is in fact breaking the fast that has been going on since the night before.

Breakfast is the most frequently skipped meal of the day. Some reasons for skipping it are lack of appetite in the mid morning when breakfast was skipped.

2. School work was poorer when breakfast was skipped.

3. Content of the breakfast did not matter as long as it was nutritionally adequate.

4. A breakfast that provided one-fourth of the daily calorie and protein needs was better than smaller or larger breakfasts for efficiency in late morning hours.

5. Skipping breakfast was of no value in weight reduction.

If you're bored with the traditional breakfast there are alternatives. No one said a breakfast had to be bacon and eggs, toast, juice and milk to fill the meat, bread, fruit, and milk requirement. Filling the requirement is the aim and the foods eaten for breakfast don't have to be breakfast foods. Leftovers can and should be used in the diet. If you're one with a morning stomach, a light breakfast of juice, toast, cereal and milk may be the best bet, but if not venture out. Many people are quite fond of cold pizza for breakfast. When supplemented it can fulfill the breakfast quota.

Other ideas are cheese omelets, bacon, lettuce and tomato sandwiches, or peanut butter and toast. Scrambled eggs with assorted tidbits cooked in, such as cheese, bacon bits, ham, tomatoes, or mushrooms are nutritious. Mix fruit with cereal. Try a Orange Breakfast Shake from the accompanying recipe. Do as the New Englanders do and have baked beans and codfish for breakfast. Leftover beef stew with biscuits is also a possibility. The ideas are endless. Whatever tastes good to you could

Food For Thought

by Lisa Stedelin

the morning, dislike of breakfast foods, belief that skipping breakfast will help control weight, and not enough time in the morning.

Yet one-half to one-third of the food needed for the day should be supplied at breakfast. A good guide to follow when planning a breakfast is to include a citrus fruit, a bread, a cereal, egg or meat, milk, and a beverage.

Studies have shown that those who eat a good breakfast are more efficient at work or school. If breakfast is skipped, these people slow up around mid-morning. After lunch they do fine for a while, then slow up again. Eating only two meals a day makes it nearly impossible to get all the needed requirements for the day. Also when the person gets hungry, he may snack on candy or such and a weight problem may develop.

Studies by the Department of Physiology and Nutrition at the State University of Iowa showed the effectiveness of breakfast on physical and mental efficiency. These studies concluded that:

Skipping this morning's meal may not be a nutritious decision turn into a breakfast item. Whatever is chosen should be accompanied by foods that fill the meat, milk, bread, and beverage groups.

The idea that cutting out breakfast helps to control weight is wrong. In fact, it might be a factor in weight gain. The person that cuts out breakfast is more likely to nibble out of hunger believing that since they didn't eat breakfast a few bites won't hurt. During the day these bites may add up to more calories than if breakfast would have been eaten. It is much better to eat a good breakfast and learn to balance your meals to avoid excess calories.

If your problem is not enough time in the morning to eat, then a change in habit is needed. An extra fifteen minutes in the morning could make a big difference in the way you feel all day. Partial preparation can be made the night before and the use of instant and precooked items will cut down on time. Juices can be mixed the night before. There is a wide variety of ready-to-eat, instant, and quick-cooking cereals. Precooked or leftover meats can be heated quickly. Laying out utensils the night before saves time too. If all you have to do is walk to the cafeteria, set the alarm to allow fifteen extra minutes. If you're not much of a breakfast person, warm up to the idea slowly with light foods that suit your taste.

Breakfast is important. It provides you with needed energy and nutrients for the day. Many people skip it and blame their fatigue or grouchy mood on late nights or other people.

Break the nine-hour fast that has been going on since the night before by choosing a fruit, bread, meat, egg, or cereal, milk and beverage. Break the breakfast routine by eating foods that aren't usually considered breakfast foods. If you're not much for breakfast, try it. Plan and set aside some time for yourself. This can be the most pleasant meal of the day and make the rest of your day run smoother. Try it and you'll understand why the word breakfast means a little more than bacon, eggs, and toast.

and an endearing way with a tune. The song selections were strong throughout his 90-minute set. Few were the soaring or boring guitar solos that seem to be much the vogue in midwest rock. Drum solos were not important (indeed they rarely are), only the strengths of music: Unified rhythm, melody, time and space.

The rousing bars of "Shake Down Cruise" to the simple drama of "No Secret" to the Rundgren-esque scales of "This is Your Life" proved strength in the face of nostalgia — that of Ferguson's participation in Spirit, the role of counterpart to Randy California and the all but forgotten Jo Jo Gunne. While he did exhibit his present status he did not ignore this history — a nostalgia that remembers well and reveals a worth in itself. Ferguson rejoiced in Randy California's "I Got a Line on You" and captured "Mr. Skin", a self-penned gem.

The night was enhanced by smooth transitions and emotional play, and perpetual tomfoolery. The band member's groping never became vulgar, or obstinate. It was mostly fun in a comedic way as Jay grabbed beneath the keyboard for the keyboardist's vitals and carried his guitarist, infant-like across the stage.

The band itself was as tight as family with all members carrying choruses (a singing band is hard to find). But Ferguson is accustomed to part-singing since those Spirit days and it is a technique which fares well in a style which rocks hard yet covers a spectrum of vocal melody lines supported by true harmony.

Ferguson is also adept at stage manner. He speaks well (no "wow man's" or "Is anybody getting ----- up out there tonight?") and catches on quick. He likes an audience despite their size though scarcely a thousand people were there to see him.

Above all the youth and nostalgia, energy and stageside manner was the music. The music again reveled in melody with synthesizer coloring shaded by the Jerry Lee Lewis piano poundings of Ferguson himself. He had soul, even though his version is Anglicized as is the Stones version. Thus it was logical and fitting that Ferguson encore with a Rolling Stones medly of "Let's Spend the Night Together" and "Have You Seen Your Mother, Baby, Standing in the Shadow?" But it was not the most interesting encore of the night. The one that came early in show with many numbers left to perform provided spirit. "We're not finished yet," said a surprised Jay Ferguson. "We know," seemed the audience response. "We're just getting warm." Well, we all got warm.

After all the apprehension faded and the tension of money loss cleared it was a very strong evening of rock and roll. You should have been there — those who were, know.

all parties concerned (both student input and University Board fretting), but, Friday night cured most musical problems despite the fix promoters and the UB now find themselves in at present. Meanwhile Jay Ferguson never once found himself in a fix of any kind. He became the polished musician and bandleader.

One would have never guessed that Ferguson was over thirty years old. The foot flailing, piano pounding acrobatics was as physically fresh as ever. But, one better, he sounded equally fresh, this time with control.

Bred from good stateside rock and roll stock, Ferguson represents musical strength and composure. An original and hard-working member of the innovative and melodically inclined quintet Spirit, Ferguson maintains the playful American "spirit" found from the Beach Boys to Todd Rundgren. However, rarely does he allow melody history to obscure his own voice and sound. He is not visionary or pretentious, a great poet or yarn spinner. In fact, Jay Ferguson is quite a regular person with plenty of energy

Woman editor breaks Yale tradition

NEW HAVEN, Conn. — a 101-year-old tradition was shattered at Yale University on Monday when Anne Gardner Perkins took over as editor-in-chief of the Yale Daily News, the oldest daily college newspaper in the country.

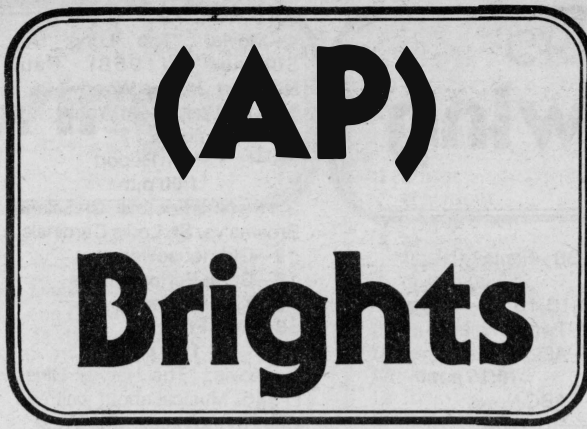

Her appointment came 10 years after Yale first admitted women undergraduates.

"I suppose 10 years is a long time, but I wasn't here for most of those years, so I can't say why a woman wasn't named editor." Perkins, a 20-year-old junior from Baltimore said.

Perkins, a history major, said she will increase coverage of minorities, women and city news, "but there's no need to overthrow the structure of the News."

No sacred definitions in Atheist Dictionary

MOSCOW — "Prayer is nothing but a form of witchcraft," says the new Atheist's Pocket Dictionary on sale in Moscow. Religion, it says, often serves to sanctify "capitalist exploitation."

The 275-page paperback, out this autumn in new edition, is a compendium of material for Soviet atheism campaigners. Prepared with the aid of Moscow University atheism experts, it catalogues world religions — mostly uncharitably — and seeks to debunk religious faith.

At the same time, it has a few good words for the Roman Catholic papacy for having recognized the "realities" of the socialist world in recent years.

Anyone who invests 85 kopeks ($1.32) in a copy learns that the Salvation Army, a Christian philanthropic group, uses charity to "distract the attention of the poorest and most disillusioned people from social and political issues and from struggle against exploitation."

Wicked witch hasn't turned in her broom

TOPEKA, Kan. — The Wicked Witch of the West in the Wizard of Oz may have been liquidated in 1939, but the actress who portrayed her is alive and was in Kansas over the weekend to celebrate the Oz II Children's Art Festival.

Margaret Hamilton, 77, stoops a little when she walks, but she's still active. She continues to perform on stage and has recently completed a made-for-television movie and an episode for the Lou Grant Show.

UB to sponsor bus to ISU game

by Mary Beth Mathews

A chartered bus to the Eastern-Illinois State football game and semester break trips were among the issues discussed at the University Board's meeting Tuesday night.

UB is sponsoring a chartered bus to the Eastern-ISU football game on Nov.

Hitchcock thriller set as Friday UB movie

The University Board movie this week will be the Alfred Hitchcock thriller "Psycho."

Anthony Perkins, Vera Miles, and John Gavin star. "Psycho" will be shown at 6:30 and 9 p.m. Friday in the Buzzard Auditorium. Admission price is $1.

"Psycho" is about bizarre things that happen to a girl while she is staying at an out-of-the-way motel.

10, Anne Logan, special events coordinator said.

The ticket price is $12.50, but UB is paying $1 to promote the trip, making the actual cost of the ticket $11.50, Logan said.

Logan added that the bus will leave Saturday at 10:30 a.m. and will return to Eastern after the game.

Persons interested in riding the bus should sign up in the Student Activities Center on the second floor of the Union by 5 p.m. Nov. 7.

A trip to Nassau during Christmas break is scheduled for Jan. 4 through 11 and will cost $318 per person, Logan said.

A trip to Aspen, Col., is set for Jan. 4 through 13 and the cost will be $219 per person, Logan said.

Logan added that Mar. 28 through Apr. 6 is the date set for the spring trip to Daytona Beach.

The cost of the trip will be $168 per person, she said.

The Special Events Committee is also sponsoring a foosball tournament on Dec. 1, Logan said.

Entrance fee is $5 per person and $100 will be given to the winner, Logan said.

UB also discussed having NBC White House Correspondent, Carol Simpson, lecture in the spring, Karen Bridges, Human Potential coordinator said.

The Video Tape Committee will present speeches of Eastern's candidates for Student Government and will show them the week before the elections in December, Chuck Marley, Video Tape coordinator, said.

Marvin to speak at political science conference

by Scott Hainzinger

Eastern President Daniel E. Marvin and Rep. Larry Stuffle (D-Charleston) will address members of the Illinois political science association during their annual conference Friday and Saturday.

Marvin will present his welcoming remarks at a luncheon for conference members at noon in the Rathskeller and Stuffle will speak on "Values and Education Policy" at 1 p.m.

Laurence Thorsen, of the political science department, is chairman of the conference's Program Committee.

Thorsen said the purpose of the conference is to provide a forum for political scientists to exchange ideas in a formal academic basis.

Thorsen said members of the IPSA include political science teachers from four- and two-year colleges and high schools across the state. The president of the association for this year is Margaret Soderberg, assistant vice-president for Student Affairs and 15-year member of the political science department at Eastern, he said.

The topic of this year's conference is "Values and Public Policy," Thorsen said. This topic will be explored by various members of the association in speeches which will begin at 9 a.m. and continue until 3 p.m. A discussant will then give his reactions to the material, after which the audience will be allowed to ask questions of both the speaker and the discussant.

Thorsen said primarily political science teachers seeking an exposure to professional views attend the conference. He also said, "Students can benefit from listening to the ideas expressed in panels. They will also have the chance to talk to faculty members from other schools."

The panel discussions, which will be in the Union addition Charleston and Mattoon Rooms, will be open to the public free of charge.

Students lend hand on Chore Day

by Kim Barrow

Eastern students will lend a helping hand to senior citizens during Chore Day Saturday.

Workers from the Triad and the Sociology Club will meet at 10 a.m. in the McKinney lobby, then they will be assigned to senior citizens' homes to rake leaves, take out air conditioners, put up storm windows or perform any other needed odd job, organizer Jim Borschel of the Triad said.

Chore Day was organized by Borschel to help handicapped senior citizens, but it will also benefit the university.

Borschel said, "The university students and the townspeople need to interact on good terms instead of against each other. It is a chance to show Charleston residents what a benefit the university can be to the community."

Senior citizens who want odd jobs done around their homes can submit their names to a local organization called Telecare Project, a non-profit organization which helps crippled citizens.

Julia Rea, program director, said, "The main goal of Telecare Project is to allow older individuals to remain in their own homes as long as possible."

Sister organization to Telecare is the Retired Senior Volunteer Program, which works with the senior citizens to keep them active in the community Rea said.

Panthers to take passing game to N. Iowa

by Andy Savoie

The forward pass has become a rather infrequent offensive weapon for Eastern's football team this season.

But it will receive some renewed emphasis when the Panthers face Northern Iowa Saturday at 7:30 p.m. in Cedar Falls, Iowa.

"We hope to pass 35 to 40 times," offensive line coach Joe Taylor said. "We feel that although our running game has carried us, we're not going to beat the Youngstons and Akrons unless we improve our passing game."

The need for such improvement is evidenced by Eastern's aerial statistics, which show the Panthers lagging far behind 1978's record passing pace.

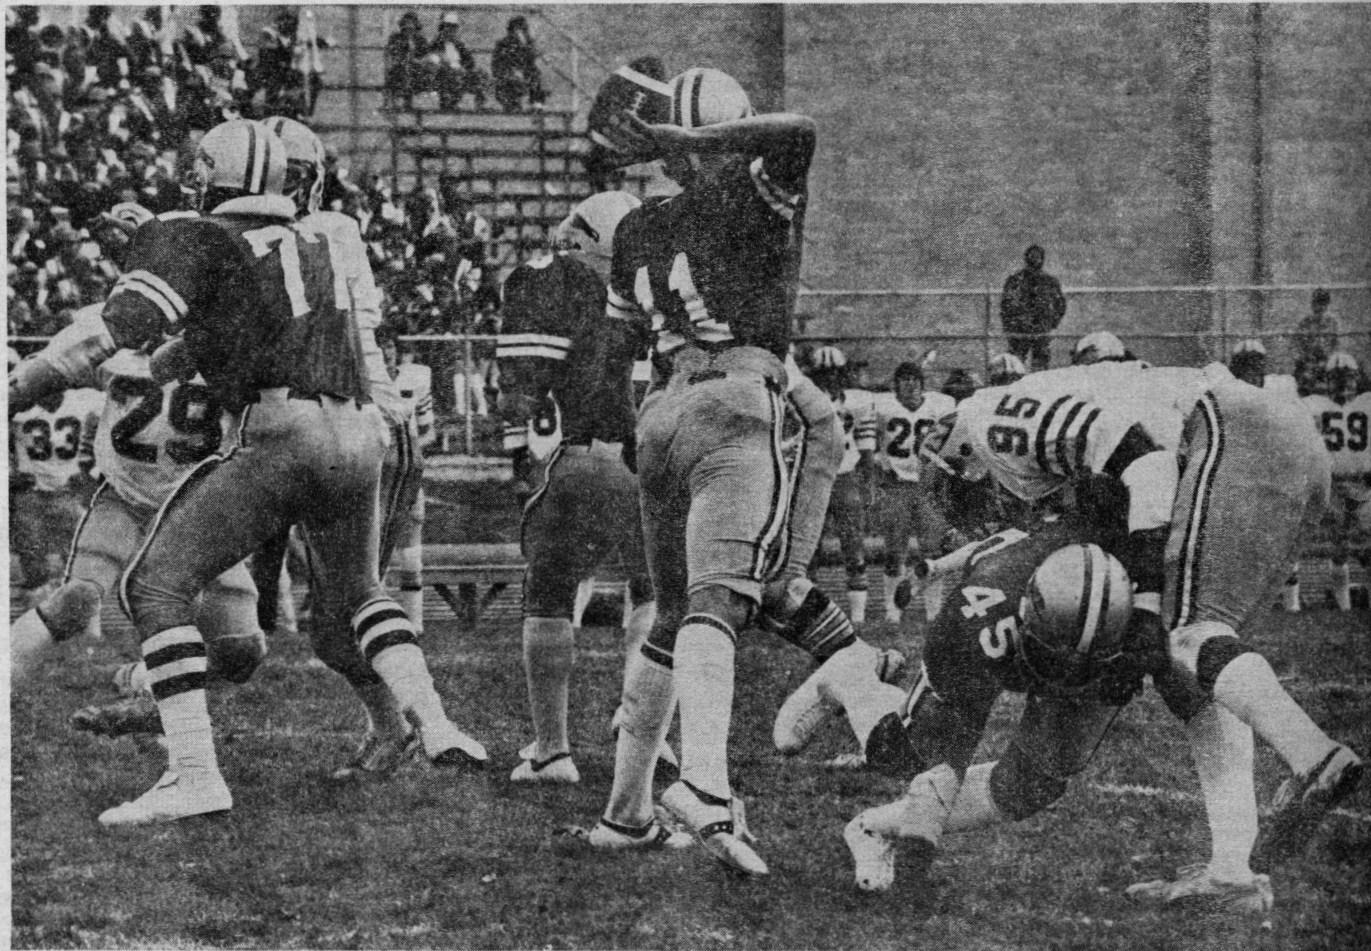

So far this season, Eastern has averaged only 133.3 total passing yards per game on 26.5 aerial attempts. Last season, the Panthers tried an average of 28.7 passes per game and amassed 232.9 yards per contest.

Individually, wide receiver James Warring is tied for fourth in the nation in pass receptions, but has made 25 less catches than his 59 of 1978. He also will have to haul in seven additional touchdown passes in the Panthers four remaining regular season games to equal his 14 TD receptions of last season.

Quarterback Steve Turk has also been experiencing a less productive season, hurling 18 less touchdown passes to date than his school record of 25 in 1978.

Nevertheless, Turk remains confident that the Panthers can recoup their passing proficiency versus Northern Iowa (4-4), which occupies second place in the Mid-Continent Conference with a 3-1 record.

Eastern is third in the conference with a 1-1 ledger, (6-1 overall) and faces undefeated and MCC leading Youngstown State next Saturday at O'Brien Field.

Eastern quarterback Steve Turk sets to pass as tackle Carl Dobrich (77) and fullback Rod Slaughter (45) ward off Northern Michigan's offensive line in last Saturday's game.

"We've got some good talent in the receiving corps," Turk said. "They run good, disciplined routes. I'm sure it (the passing game) will come along."

Taylor concurred with Turk's optimism, saying that Northern Iowa's 5-2 defense—five down linemen, two linebackers—is more conducive to the pass than the run.

"We should be able to throw against it," Taylor said.

But if not, the Panthers will give the ball to running back Poke Cobb. Cobb needs only one more 100-yard game rushing to tie the record for the most career 100-yard contests set by Michigan Tech's Jim Van Wagner in 1973-76.

Taylor said that Northern Iowa will be no soft touch, for several reasons.

"Size wise, they're just as good as Southern Illinois," Taylor said, adding that the astroturf and unfamiliar conditions of Northern Iowa's UNI Dome is always a factor.

One year ago...

One year ago this weekend, Eastern clinched its first winning football season since 1961 by whipping Wayne State 34-14.

Steve Turk passed for three touchdowns and set two more school records to lead the Panthers to the triumph that raised their season record to 6-2.

Harriers' top two men out for regional meet

by Matt Davidson

With its top two runners out with injuries, Eastern's men's cross country team will still attempt to finish in the top four when it hosts Saturday's NCAA Great Lakes Regional in order to qualify for the NCAA Division II National Championships on Nov. 10.

Senior All-American Joe Sheeran and Reo Rorem will be sidelined due to injuries. At the state championship last Saturday Sherran placed second in the field of some 100 runners. "He has a tender tendon in his ankle," Panther coach Tom Woodall said. "It was a little bit sore prior to the state meet. It wasn't responding to treatment this week."

Saturday's meet will mark the third consecutive meet in which Rorem has been out. His last time out, which was at the Notre Dame Invitational, he ran number two man behind Sheeran. "He is just now starting to have workouts of any significance," Woodall said. "We'll not be running him until he's back in shape."

Although Woodall is concerned with the injuries, he is not letting it get him down. "Whenever you take your top two away you always have a question mark, but I have a great deal of faith in the seven we will have at the line. They have a great deal of pride in the team. I'm banking on the fact that these seven we have will get us to California (the site of the NCAA finals)."

Other than Sheeran and Rorem, the Panthers have four others who will be making their final home appearances of their career. Seniors Mike Viano, Paul Wilhite, Mike Moore and Pat Hodge are going to be counted on heavily.

The other three individuals who will compete are juniors Larry Schuldt and Terry Donahue and sophomore Mike Beresford. Both Schuldt and Donahue have turned in good performances in recent weeks. In the Mid-Continent Conference championships, Schuldt and Donahue finished in the top seven thus gaining All-Conference laurels.

This will be Beresford's first performance with the varsity in several weeks. Woodall said he's giving him the opportunity based on his fine performance at the Notre Dame Invitational and in the Parkland junior varsity meet. "Mike ran pretty well at Notre Dame (in the open meet) and he had the flu at the time," he said. "He was also our first finisher in the Parkland jayvee meet. He seems to be running and training strong."

Seventeen teams are entered in the 10,000 meter run. Among the favorites in the meet is the Chicago Circle, Woodall said. "This is based on the fact that they have three All-Americans returning." Chicago Circle finished second in the regional to the Panthers a year ago.

Other teams that Woodall said should be in the thick of things are Akron, Indiana Central, Ferris State and defending champion Eastern.
