Freshmen enrollment halted because of budget cutbacks

CHRIS SEPER
Campus editor

Because of appropriation cuts from the state and concern of student overcrowding at Eastern, enrollment applications not received by Eastern's Admissions Office by 4:30 p.m. Tuesday were not accepted. The university announced Tuesday it had cut off freshman admissions for the fall 1992 semester.

"Clearly the ability to handle students (is affected) when we don't have enough (class) sections," said Glenn Williams, president of student affairs. "We can't bring in students that cannot get seats in classes."

About 4,600 freshman applications were sent to the office of admissions, which is a little later for this time in the semester, Williams said.

"We know that (out of the students accepted), somewhere around 30 percent will actually show up," Williams added.

President Stan Rives is unavailable for comment Tuesday.

"All of this is tied together previously," Williams said, referring to the lack of space and the budget. "If you have an expanded budget, all you do is simply add a section and add people. We don't have the ability to do that."

Williams said one of the main reasons for the application cutoff is the 3 percent deduction from Eastern's base budget. The base budget is made up of money allocated by the state in the annual budget from the past fiscal year, with the 3 percent cut meaning Eastern must return that amount of money to the state.

"It isn't that it would save money (by cutting applications), there's not money there to save," Williams said. "The money is not there in the first place to let us and our budget meet the needs of the students."

The decision was made by the president and the enrollment management committee, which consists of Rives, Williams and Acting Vice President of Academic Affairs Barbara Hill.

"Because of the anticipated level of state appropriations, we have no alternative but to restrict the number of students we serve to maintain the quality of our educational program," Rives stated in a university release.

Former students applying for readmission, graduate and minority applications, as well as scholarship winners will not be affected by the cutoff. Applications for admission will still be accepted from perspective transfer students, Williams said.

There has been no problem with overcrowding in classes or residence halls this year, Williams said, insuring that the application cutoff is more of a preventative measure for the next fall semester.

Eastern had notified high school guidance counselors throughout the state of the cutoff, which took effect at 4:30 p.m. Tuesday.

Williams said an application cutoff date for following semesters will be determined by the enrollment management committee then.

"We look at it each year at the financial resources available and the flow of the applications," Williams said. "The decision to cut off (applications) is on a one year basis."

The same situation occurred nearly four years ago, when Eastern stopped accepting applications on Oct. 29, 1988 for the fall 1989 semester.

BOG slated to review budget cutback plan

STUART TART
Editor in chief

The Board of Governors will meet at an appropriations proposal Thursday that slashes its requested budget increase from 22.7 percent to 4.3 percent and likely will result in at least a 4 percent tuition increase for Eastern next year.

Also, Arthur Quern, chair of the Illinois Board of Higher Education, will address the BOG, at the board's request, concerning his call for public universities to do a better job of setting spending priorities.

"In these times of tight finances, this is exactly what higher education should be doing," BOG spokeswoman Michelle Brazzell said Tuesday. "We're interested to hear Mr. Quern's views on that."

The Board of Governors will meet at 8:30 a.m. Thursday at Governors State University in University Park near Chicago. This may be the board's last meeting before May, when the board is expected to make budgetary decisions on the need for tuition and fee increases at Eastern and the system's other four universities.

BOG Chancellor Thomas Layzell has proposed that the board cancel its scheduled April 2 meeting in an effort to make up for the 3 percent budget callback, which was mandated by the state earlier this year. The board will vote on the measure Thursday, Brazzell said.

March is one of three months that the board traditionally does not meet.

"(The April meeting is) before the governor gives his budget message April 7," Brazzell explained. "In the past, (the governor's budget message) has been March 1."

"April board meetings are usually the time we deal with possible increases in tuition and fees," she added. "We believe it's inappropriate to move forward on these issues before we know what the governor proposes."

The board's look at the appropriations bill for fiscal year 1993, which represents the IBHE's official recommendation to the General Assembly for funding of the BOG and its universities, is a "routine" action that allows the board to review the recommendation.

The appropriations bill must be

Buchanan, Tsongas claim victories

New Hampshire primaries taken by dark horses

By J.A. WINDERS
Staff editor

From the firing of the starting gun, the former national party dark horses have taken early and powerful strides toward the November race end.

Presidential hopefuls Democrat Paul Tsongas, former Governor of Massachusetts, and Republican Patrick Buchanan, political columnist and TV commentator, both scored key hits Tuesday night in their respective party New Hampshire primary races.

Although the exit poll victory went to incumbent Republican President George Bush, what was considered by many GOP officials to be the most important story exiting New Hampshire was the performance of Buchanan.

Buchanan related his comments on his strong showing via a recorded message of his speech to his campaign support-

Weathered voters send strong message to Bush

MANCHESTER, N.H.(AP)—New Hampshire's restless, recession-wracked voters marked their ballots for change Tuesday in the first primary of the campaign season, and that means George Bush's re-election drive may be an exciting and perilous one.

From the moment 11 post-midnight votes were cast for a Libertarian candidate in tiny Dixville Notch until returns gave Paul Tsongas a victory among the Democrats and Pat Buchanan a strong showing against Bush, New Hampshire ers over the phone from his New Hampshire campaign headquarters.

"Didn't I tell you we would make history?" Buchanan said to open his statements.

He continued by stating he was there "to report the retreat into Massachusetts by King George," in addition to citing made clear its disgust with the status quo.

In the simplest terms, the election gave an enormous boost to Buchanan's insurgent campaign and anointed Tsongas the Democratic front-runner with a pro-business economic program that his party elders despise.

Through the cries of "God loves America, God loves Pat" from his rallied supporters, Buchanan said his campaign will "make more history" with plans to "take our party back" approved by the General Assembly, where it can be further reduced, and by Gov. Jim Edgar before it becomes official.

"If it goes much lower (than a 4.3 percent increase), we'll be in trouble, and a proposed 4 percent tuition increase could go a lot higher," Brazell said. "We're saying (4.3 percent) may not be enough, and if it is cut further, it will not be enough."

Although the BOG's original budget request for a 22.7 percent increase would have allowed the board to avoid a tuition increase, Brazell said, a 4 percent tuition increase appears to be the least Eastern and the system's other four universities will face.

After the state's Board of Higher Education chair sent a letter to system chancellors and university presidents last October calling for a new direction in higher education budgeting, the BOG invited him to address the group. The letter emphasized setting priorities and reallocating funds from other parts of budgets to meet the budgeting needs.

IBHE Deputy Director Russ Hodel said Quern will discuss "his vision for higher education in general" and the "priorities and quality initiatives he has set out for higher education."

"I'm certain he will be following up on the initiatives in that letter," Hodel said. "He and the board (IBHE) have since identified a number of areas for examination to improve productivity, quality and priorities in higher education."

Hodel said Quern has identified five general areas he would like to see examined in accomplishing his goals including instruction and instructional units, research and public service, academic productivity, administrative functions and the productivity of higher education from a statewide perspective.

Brazell said the BOG supports Quern's ideas.

"One of our major priorities has been accountability to taxpayers," she said. "In these times, taxpayers are questioning the wisdom of our (higher education) spending."

"What we need to do is to look hard at what we are doing and maybe make some difficult choices, ... and above all, we must let taxpayers know what we are doing and how we are spending money," she added.

In other business, President Stan Rives will ask the board to approve an initial $26,720 to allow the university to lease a more advanced "Residence Hall Meal Plan Identification System." According to his proposal to the board, the enhancement would allow residence hall food services to access information on individual students more quickly by allowing them access to the university's main frame computer.

The lease would cost the university $7,952 a year after the initial investment, the proposal said.

and "take our country back" at the expense of "the full measure of the Republican establishment" in Washington, D.C.

Earlier Tuesday, George Grey, Buchanan's campaign manager for Illinois, said the "Illinois primary in March will be very important to Buchanan."

The Bush New Hampshire campaign headquarters could not be reached for comment Tuesday night.

On the Democratic side of the political coin, Tsongas managed a slim but important victory over former Democratic front-runner Bill Clinton, current Governor of Arkansas, according to exit polls conducted throughout the voting day.

As the early evening results were being tabulated for an exact margin of error, the Tsongas camp was openly optimistic in its statement made from their New Hampshire headquarters.

"I think that Paul Tsongas is now going to prove that he is more than a regional candidate," said an unidentified Tsongas spokesman over the phone.

"I think if you look back to other voting patterns in terms of the (Ted) Kennedy-(Jimmy) Carter race (in 1976) and previous races and also the fact that Massachusetts and New Hampshire haven't exactly seen eye to eye on everything," it lends credibility to Tsongas' victory, he added.

"When people will examine the exit polls they'll see that the reason that people voted for Paul Tsongas was not because he came from Massachusetts but because he had integrity and courage," the spokesman said. "I think that a lot of people are going to get to see this person and make that same judgement for themselves."

As to the what that means for the Tsongas attack in the Illinois primary on March 17, the spokesman said the Tsongas campaign crew "feel that the Midwest is fertile ground for Paul Tsongas' message."

"He has been talking about the economic battle plan for the country and reviving the manufacturing base, and certainly that is something that will have some resonance in the Midwest and in Illinois," the spokesman said.

Woodyard to draft BOG-dissolving bill

By STUART TART
Editor in chief

State Sen. Harry "Babe" Woodyard, R-Chrisman, told the Faculty Senate Tuesday he will introduce a bill in the state Senate this spring to dissolve the Board of Governors.

Woodyard also discussed the state's budget situation, which he said he doesn't think will get much better any time soon.

"We have probably the worst budget situation that I've ever seen," he said. "At this point in time, I don't see this getting much better."

Woodyard was invited to address the senate at its regular Tuesday meeting on the state of higher education funding in Illinois. At a meeting attended by senate members and no more than half a dozen others, Woodyard gave a brief address in which he discussed the state's poor financial condition and legislation he is working on.

He then answered questions from senate members on such topics as the impact the dissolution of the BOG would have on Eastern's ability to win state funding, the possibility of getting faculty representation on the BOG, on downsizing in non-education areas of the state budget and on state funding of private schools.

The bill Woodyard has proposed would be similar to one introduced in the state house last spring by state Rep. Mike Weaver, R-Ashmore, Woodyard said. Weaver's bill calls for the dissolution of the BOG and the Board of Regents in favor of a council of university presidents who would report to the Illinois Board of Higher Education.

"I will introduce a BOG bill," he told the group, adding the examination of the board is in line with a trend developing in the General Assembly towards simplifying "bureaucratic layers."

"I think we're going to see the possibility of elimination or cutbacks in some legislative efforts," he added.

Woodyard disagreed with a statement made by state Rep. Jim Keane, D-Chicago, last week that Eastern would lose a broad base of support statewide if the BOG is dissolved.

Sen. Harry "Babe" Woodyard, R-Chrisman, speaks to the Faculty Senate at its meeting Tuesday afternoon in the BOG room of Booth Library.

"I don't know how you can be worse ... I'm just telling you we have had to claw, fight and scratch for every cent we get," he said. "Yet, I see community colleges that get extreme consideration."

"I'm willing to give something else a try," Woodyard added.

Asked how he would have Eastern and other universities governed if the BOG is abolished, Woodyard said he would prefer affected universities be placed under the jurisdiction of the Illinois Board of Higher Education.

Woodyard took up several themes in his statements that have been raised in the recent legislative hearings on Weaver's bills and in recent Faculty Senate and Council on Academic Affairs meetings, including increasing governing board control over universities, the inability of the BOG to lobby as effectively for funds as the University of Illinois and Community College Board systems, and the personnel growth in the BOG office.

Woodyard criticized what he termed the BOG's attempt to "micro-manage" its universities.

"I want your administration and faculty managing your school," he said. "If you eliminate some of the programs you're considering losing, you'll lose students." Woodyard was referring to the Board of Governors' annual program review and related fears that budget cutbacks would force the elimination of low-enrollment academic programs.

Woodyard added he was disturbed by the growth of the BOG's administration.

"(It) concerns me that the BOG has had 37.9 percent growth in its central office since 1988," he said, estimating the offices of the other governing systems have grown approximately 13-15 percent during the same period.

Thirty individuals work in the BOG office, including a chancellor, four vice chancellors, three associate vice chancellors and 10 assistant vice chancellors.

Vietnam veteran Cole set to brief Charleston

By EAN ESKRA
Staff writer

A military briefing on the issue of Vietnam prisoners of war and Americans missing in action will be given by Lt. Col. James Cole at 7 p.m. Thursday at the Charleston Motor Inn.

The briefing is intended to heighten student awareness of the P.O.W./M.I.A. issue, said Dan Eilerman, a member of Kappa Delta Rho, which is sponsoring the presentation.

Cole, who is head of the P.O.W./M.I.A. agency for the Pentagon and a Vietnam veteran, is expected to tell how the agency attempts to find and recover American soldiers unaccounted for after the Vietnam War.

Cole will discuss the questioning of Vietnam refugees entering the U.S., investigations of reported crash sites, excavations of crash sites and confirmation of the soldiers' identification.

Former Eastern students Dean St. Pierre, who is lost in Vietnam, and Patrick Curran, who is lost in Laos, are presently listed as M.I.A.s, sponsors of the event said.

One Eastern student, who has a M.I.A. scholarship because his father is lost in Vietnam and listed as missing in action, will also be present at the briefing.

Cole will award the student with his father's military file, containing the government's most recent findings in the specific case.

The event sponsors include Kappa Delta Rho, Student Government and the National League of Families.

"The more we know about this subject and the more we show concern, the more the government will realize that something has to be done," Eilerman said.

Each student who donates money to the M.I.A./P.O.W. cause Thursday evening will receive an M.I.A. bracelet with a missing soldier's name on it.

There will also be a $1 donation upon entering the presentation to help cover the cost of the room.

Board approves additional fund requests

By SHERRY SIDWELL
Staff writer

The Apportionment Board voted on all additional allocation requests Tuesday night, including one that will bring bungee jumping to Eastern's campus.

The board approved a $6,000 allocation request from University Board Special Events to pay the Outrageous Adventures of Bungee Jumping company to provide Eastern students with the opportunity to try bungee jumping Celebration Weekend, April 24-26.

The jumps will take place on the Tundra next to the Tarble Arts Center. Students can jump from a crane-held platform 150 feet off the ground for $15.

"It will be very safe," said Cecilia Brinker, student activities adviser. "This company has done more than 600 jumps and of those, there haven't been any injuries. Safety is a major priority."

The $6,000 for the bungee jumping was part of the $9,470 allocated to University Board Special Events. The rest of the money will pay for the Blizzard of Bucks game show, in which contestants may win up to $250, and "We Can Make You Laugh," a two-hour comedy game show which will award $25 prizes.

Additional allocations consist of expenses not included in original organizational budgets.

The added allocations come from Apportionment Board reserve monies. The AB receives its funds from a $20.65 per student fee each semester.

While the AB approved most of the additional allocations requested, it failed to approve a $6,500 request from the Sports and Recreation department for three lifeguard chairs. Most board members said the chairs should have been included in the Sports and Recreation budget and did not belong in allocations.

"Isn't additional allocations where you ask for things you didn't foresee when making the budget? I just don't think this is the place to be asking for these chairs," said AB Vice-Chair Ron Carmona.

AB member Tracy Tracy said she doesn't see a great need for the lifeguard chairs.

"One of my friends is a lifeguard and she says they really don't use the chairs they have now all that much. If they don't use the ones they have, they probably won't use new chairs either," Tracy said.

City council delays action on island tract

By CHRIS SUNDHEIM
City editor

The Charleston City Council delayed action Tuesday on appointing an appraiser to examine city-owned lots on the Lake Charleston island tract.

Council members decided to place an official discussion item on the tract issue at their next meeting pending further investigation by City Attorney Brian Bower and other city officials.

Bower and the officials are to determine which of a number of appraisers is qualified to inspect the lots.

The city-owned lake island property is a subdivision of more than 30 houses built on Lake Charleston in the 1950s. The council is now debating how to solve sewage leak problems suspected to be coming from septic systems in the subdivision.

Commissioners are considering selling some lots on the tract and need accurate appraisals of their value before any further action can be decided.

Bower recommended that the council consider appointing an appraiser that has been certified as a Member of Appraisal Institute. The MAI rating represents a specified level of appraisal schooling. However, to obtain an MAI-certified appraiser, the city must put itself on a waiting list.

Council members were presented Tuesday with two bids submitted by certified appraisers with fees ranging from $17,000 to $18,000. Bower added that the decision on which certified appraiser, if any, to hire is one that should rest with the council.

In other business, the Charleston City Council placed on file for public inspection an amending ordinance that makes minor changes in Charleston's liquor code. The ordinance changes the official city definition of alcoholic liquor to include only those beverages with 0.5 percent alcohol or more.

Previous city law designated any beverage with any amount of alcohol as "alcoholic." The ordinance also standardizes the fine at $200 for those under 21 charged with possession of alcohol and makes a language change regarding minors on liquor-licensed property.

Senate to back probe into BOG

By SUSAN KIEL
Staff writer

The student senate at its 7 p.m. meeting Wednesday will present a resolution to support the investigation being conducted by state Rep. Mike Weaver, R-Ashmore, into the need for and efficiency of the Board of Governors.

In addition, senate speaker Tony Wielt said there will be one more resignation of a senate member Wednesday night, but he would not comment on who the senate member is or the reasons behind the resignation. This will be the third student senate member to resign in the past month.

Wielt said the senate's resolution about the investigation into the BOG, Eastern's governing body, will not advocate the abolishment of the board.

"(With this resolution) we are not saying that we are in support of eliminating the BOG or keeping it," said Wielt. "We are just supporting the investigation."

At student senate's last meeting, group members decided not to take an official stand on house bill 1727. Weaver's proposal to eliminate the BOG. Wielt said the senate is basically in agreement with Weaver and would like to see the BOG eliminated.

Ryan should check into union negotiations

We're glad the Charleston driver's license facility will remain open, but the allegations made by a union of state employees against Secretary of State George Ryan's office and by union members against the union leadership need investigation.

The ratification vote by the General Services Employees Union that averted 51 driver center closings and 500 layoffs came late Friday, only a day before the budget-cutting measures were slated to go into effect.

Charleston's office and six other area facilities were among those on the closing list.

The union was in negotiations with Ryan's office since last month on a new contract for the 2,750 state employees it represents in a variety of positions statewide. An arbitrator ruled that Ryan must grant the union members pay raises, forcing him to plan the cuts in favor of union wages. But Ryan and union president Harry Kurshenbaum reached a new settlement with concessions that do not require the state to close any offices or plan any layoffs.

Up to 70 percent of the planned layoffs were to be union members.

Only days before the union was to announce its vote, 150 union members filed complaints with the Illinois State Labor Relations Board against the union leadership, claiming they bargained in bad faith and conducted an unfair poll.

Non-union members covered by the contract could not cast a vote on the new contract unless they returned a card to the union indicating their intent to join, the complaints charge.

The union leadership a day later filed a complaint with the board, charging Ryan's office with threatening and intimidating workers by announcing the layoffs and meddling in union affairs. The complaint contends that Ryan forced workers to demand the union reopen the contract talks and accuses him of singling out union members for layoffs in retaliation for losing the arbitrator's ruling.

These accusations are very serious and Ryan's office should make a statement soon. The union should also acknowledge its members' charges and explain why 164 of the contract votes were voided.

State budget decisions cannot be approached efficiently with these kinds of allegations circulating. It's up to the Ryan and the union to smooth them out.

Rise you mighty people and accomplish what you will for you are the cream of the earth.

More to candidates than sexual performance

It's the Gary Hart experience all over again.

Only this time there is no "Monkey Business" just "Flowers' Power." Four short years ago Sen. Gary Hart found himself with his pants down, literally, when the Florida press uncovered that he was having an affair with a little known, little talented, very blonde, very busty actress named Donna Rice.

Poor Gary, he really wanted to be president, and in '88 it looked like he would be the Democratic Party's nomination. Back in 1984 Gary made a strong showing toward the end of his race for president, causing many of his contemporaries in politics to believe he would capture the Democratic ticket. Some members in the press thought so as well.

However, what Gary captured in the following years had nothing to do with his political career. The next thing we see is Donna Rice making commercials for "No Excuses" jeans and Gary trying to come up with as many excuses as possible. Unfortunately for Gary, no one bought them.

Now this time it's Bill Clinton's turn in the sexual spotlight. According to Gennifer Flowers (note it is Gennifer with a G, perhaps to be taken more seriously), Bill also found himself with his pants down. Flowers, a little-known, little talented, very blonde, former beauty queen, claims she and Clinton had an affair a few years back, and now she is making sure everyone knows about it.

It seems that a Democratic presidential race cannot occur unless there is at least one sex scandal in the bunch of presidential hopefuls. In 1988 it was Gary Hart, in 1992 it is Bill Clinton. One can only guess who will be next up to face the sexual spotlight in 1996.

The sad thing about both these scandals is that they take up too much of the media's time, both respected and tabloid, and draw the public's interest away from what really counts — the issues. Something tells me that the people actively following this story do not even know what stands Bill Clinton takes on some very important and controversial issues. I wonder if a majority of the American public knows that Clinton believes in emphasizing domestic policy, that he is progressive on pro-choice and civil rights issues, and has increased funding for Head Start programs during his time as governor of Arkansas?

Does anyone even know he is governor of Arkansas? I wonder if people are looking closely at his military record on how his views on defense policies today reflect his views 20 years ago when he strongly opposed fighting in Vietnam? This is what we need to take a close look at, not just his alleged extra-marital affairs.

Clinton was the front runner in the democratic race for president, but now he has slipped to second and Tsongas has taken the lead in the polls. It doesn't matter if you agree or disagree with Clinton's views, but his views should be known to make a sound judgement. Morality judgements should not be the sole deciding factor.

John F. Kennedy would have been crucified if he had decided to run for a political office today. His adulterous affairs have become legendary over time and created a dark spot on his martyred image. Even though Kennedy was not the best president the United States ever had many of the programs he initiated, such as the Peace Corps, and his work in civil rights, left an important mark in history. If Kennedy had been judged solely on his sexual trysts, these events would have never happened. We cannot judge political candidates only on their sexual appetites. We need to focus ourselves to learn what they stand for, not if they can last 15 minutes in the sack.

By focusing on Bill Clinton's alleged sexual prowess, we, as voters, are doing ourselves an injustice. We need to vote with our eyes open to the issues that will affect the United States. By only focusing our views on Bill Clinton's alleged affair with Gennifer Flowers, we are cutting him, and ourselves, short.

Can't wait for '96.

Edward's letter causes response from professor

Dear editor:

In his Feb. 18 letter to the editor, Matthew Edwards contends that I have "employed typical methods of enforcing 'political correctness'" and used tactics similar to the "red baiters" of the 1950s. These charges were made based on my comments in a Jan. 31 article that documented the appearance of "No PC" stickers on posters and flyers publicizing events and programs associated with women, Hispanics, and African Americans (later I learned that gays were also targeted). Mr. Edwards, however, has distorted my comments.

I criticized acts designed to suppress speech on campus—specifically, the speech of women and radical minorities.

Criticizing politically-motivated vandalism is not the same as attempting to impose a "politically correct" (whatever that means) position on affirmative action and cultural diversity. Freedom of speech means that we should tolerate a diversity of views, including Mr. Edwards' questioning of affirmative action and cultural diversity programs. These views, however, should be presented in legitimate forums, such as panel discussions, letters to the editor, rallies, or even demonstrations.

In short, I did not "red bait" individuals who question affirmative action and cultural diversity. Rather, I criticized the use of vandalism as a technique for presenting a political perspective. If this criticism makes me a "demagogue," as Mr. Edwards suggests, then I will be one with pride.

BSU discusses ideas for improvement

TIM DAILEY
Staff writer

The Black Student Union discussed last week's member/executive board ice breaker at its meeting Tuesday night in the Charleston-Mattoon Room of the Martin Luther King Jr. University Union.

BSU President Kevin Evans thanked those who attended the social ice breaker and said the group discussed suggestions made by BSU members to the executive board.

Evans said many good suggestions were made, including having an attendance policy for meetings, having more executive board participation in BSU events and holding more social events like ice breakers.

"We definitely want to have more ice breakers in the future to help us know each other and relate to each other better," Evans noted.

Another suggestion Evans mentioned was the proposal of a Black Student Union meeting attendance policy scholarship, which would help increase participation.

"We will try to use these suggestions in a way to make us a better organization," Evans said.

He also reminded BSU members about the Parents' Appreciation Dinner and Miss Black EIU Pageant, which will take place Saturday.

The dinner will begin at 4 p.m. in the Union's Rathskellar and be followed by the pageant at 7 p.m. in the Grand Ballroom.

Finally, Shannon Ford, head of the BSU fundraising committee, reported that the sale of Crush cans for Valentine's Day was a success. More than 100 cans were sold and all the cans were delivered on time, she said.

"We will try to make it (the Crush sale) an annual event, because it went really well," Ford added.

Program aims to assist Greeks

CASSIE SIMPSON

Response to the new campus Greek Peer Assistance program has been greater than anticipated, with the number of interest groups growing from five to 11 in one week, according to Brad Dwyer, coordinator of the program.

"Peer Assistance is working really well," Dwyer said. "Many people are excited about it."

The Greek Peer Assistance program is a program "designed to enhance fraternal brotherhood while providing assistance to those members who may be suffering from some common social problem," according to a brochure about the program.

Often a college student will turn to a friend for help and advice rather than seeking counseling with a professional, therefore a program such as this makes it easier for friends to help friends, the manual for the program states.

Greek Peer Assistants or GPAs will be able to spot potential behavioral problems — such as stress, depression, time management and sexual assault — in the initial stages and help the victim before the problems escalate.

"The purpose of the program is to recognize and identify behavioral problems common to college campuses and be able to confront the issue in the initial stages before something dramatic happens," Dwyer said.

Right now there are more than 20 people from about 11 fraternities and sororities interested in the program, and Dwyer said he will soon receive a list from a person on the Panhellenic Council who has 15 or more people interested in the program.

"It'll push the number (of people in the program) up into the 30s," Dwyer said.

The program will be a part of Critical Issues Week, which will be held the week of March 9. Critical Issues Week will deal with issues such as alcohol awareness, hazing, AIDS awareness, sensitivity, diversity and several other issues, said Eileen Sullivan, Student Activities/Greek Affairs adviser.

"Critical Issues Week was started in 1989 by the Panhellenic Council and Inter-Fraternal Council to address a lot of the issues facing Greeks," she said.

Sullivan said a majority of the issues addressed during the week will focus on the Greek system, but several also concern all students.

"We're going to be working with Brad Kirk with Critical Issues Week that is sponsored by GAMMA (Greeks Advocating Mature Management of Alcohol) and in part by BACCHUS (Boosting Alcohol Consciousness Concerning the Health of University Students)," Dwyer said.

All the newly elected executive members of the Greek chapters will hold a meeting on Wednesday during Critical Issues Week where Dwyer has been invited to speak and inform them of the GPA program and how it works.

"We'll have them find individuals from their houses who would be interested in becoming a peer assistant," Dwyer said. "(The individuals chosen) don't have to be an executive member of the chapter — just a caring sensitive person who is concerned about others."

Also in March, there will be an informational meeting to bring all the peer assistants together, he added.

"(The meeting is) to give them an orientation about what the program is about and what their role is as a peer assistant on many of the critical issues in fraternities and sororities," Dwyer said. "They will also be introduced to Pat Babich-Smith, who will conduct the formal training."

Babich-Smith is the adviser of the program and works in the Counseling Center.

"We're in the process right now of sending out letters to the individuals who expressed interest in the program to tell them about the meeting," Dwyer said.

He said he believes the program has the potential to expand to 50 members.

"Their (peer assistants') role will be significant to their chapter and the entire Greek system," he said.

Peer Assistants will have monthly socials to attend which will allow them to interact with GPAs from other chapters.

The socials will give them a chance to educate and share ideas with each other, Dwyer said.

Babich-Smith will oversee and direct each social, he added.

Each Greek Peer Assistant will be provided with updated materials and statistics and will attend one-on-one meetings with Babich-Smith, Dwyer said.

He noted that members from the following fraternities and sororities have shown an interest in the program: Sigma Phi Epsilon, Kappa Delta Rho, Pi Kappa Alpha, Lambda Chi Alpha, Sigma Nu, Delta Sigma Phi, Phi Sigma Sigma, Delta Zeta, Sigma Sigma Sigma and Sigma Kappa.

set goals in life," he said.

Wallace said the meeting will begin with an "ice breaker and a testimony service," where people will have the opportunity to discuss their own personal accomplishments, organizations they are currently involved in and how they are benefiting from those organizations.

People will also have the opportunity to tell the other members what they expect to get out of the new group, Wallace said.

He added he looks forward to the turnout of the first meeting and has high expectations for the new organization.

"I want to get people as hyped-up about life as I am," Wallace said.

"This club takes motivation, perseverance and dedication," he added. "We're like a giant pep-rally, only as an individual member, you just keep rooting for yourself."

"This organization will be run more or less like a fraternity or a sorority should be run," Wallace said. "It's a business that's taking care of business."

Wallace said the group plans to be social, but socializing won't be a top priority.

"Social functions are accepted," he said. "You have to know how to interact with people to be successful."

Wallace added he hopes the organization will help members later when they enter the job market. He said he wants members to learn to be assertive and persistent.

In the future, Wallace expects to invite guest speakers to the group's meetings including millionaires to tell their success stories to the group members.

"I think people should try to learn from other people's mistakes," Wallace said.

He added he wants the group to establish every week a different "quote of the week."

Group members will be required to pay dues, but Wallace said the amount of the dues has not yet been determined.

Booth program begins

By TERESA JOHNSON
Staff writer

Applications for the Booth Library Fellows Program are now being accepted for the 1992-93 academic year, said Garret DeRuiter, coordinator in Faculty Development.

"The fellows program is designed to enhance a faculty member's research, provides them with the space to put books without having to re-shelve them, and a nice quiet area to work," DeRuiter said.

He added all permanent full-time and part-time faculty are eligible to apply for the eight awarded positions.

Applicants must submit a visa and a statement which outlines how the direct association with Booth Library personnel and resources will help them in their work, DeRuiter said.

The selection committee for the fellows program consists of one representative each from the Faculty Senate, the Council of Faculty Research, the Faculty of Booth Library, the Faculty Development Advisory Committee, and the Library Advisory Board, he noted.

A book budget allotment, use of the faculty study carrel, a copying budget allotment and the library staff's special assistance are the privileges that are associated with being Booth Library Fellow.

"There are no limits whether more than one faculty member applies from the same discipline," he added. "It's a wonderful opportunity and it (being a fellow) allows the faculty member to do their research without disturbance."

In other library information, library tours will be given through the month of February, said Booth librarian Karen Whistler. Tours are scheduled for Monday at 6 p.m., Tuesday at 2 p.m. and Wednesday at 11 a.m., and instructors can call for tours by calling the reference desk, she added.

Desire for success is focus of new organization

"Killing time is also killing success," you find success where you want it to be" and "One should count each day as a separate life" are all examples of mottos of the Young People Interested in Success, a new organization on campus, said Marc Wallace, president and founder of the organization.

The group's first meeting will be at 8:30 p.m. Wednesday in Coleman Hall, room 221, Wallace said.

"The purpose of the organization is for young people to establish self-awareness, enabling themselves to accomplish their

BOXING/WORKOUT EQUIPMENT!!

The Division of Recreational Sports has installed Heavy Bag and Speed Bag equipment in the upstairs multi-purpose area. PLEASE LIMIT USAGE TO 20 MINUTES!

Heavy Bag Training Tips - Heavy Bag conditioning is designed to increase endurance, develop proper striking technique, strengthen the abdomen, obliques, and upper body, develop better concentration, and reduce stress. Your stance should be comfortable with legs slightly wider than the shoulder width on the balls of your feet with knees slightly bent. Then face the bag at a 45 degree angle with your hands next to your chin and elbows by the side of your body. For better striking technique, there are 2 types of jabs. Jab #1 consists of straightening your lead arm so it contacts the bag at almost full extension, keeping it shoulder level. Your wrist should hit square and flat with your palm facing the floor while you step in slightly with your lead foot as you extend to hit the bag. Jab #2 consists of pivoting on the balls of your feet and turning hips slightly as you make contact with the dominant hand square and flat.

Speed Bag Training Tips - Speed bag training is designed to increase muscular endurance, help concentration, tone upper body, develop hand/eye coordination, and hand speed, and enhance sports performance. To begin, make sure you have proper bag height, fists should be between chin and eye level. There are 2 striking techniques which can be used, forward strike (using front face of fists and knuckles) and side strike (using outside of face of fist).

Always keep hands at chin level - Speed bags are designed to rebound quickly off of the board. So try to keep a basic rhythm, strike the bag let it hit Front-Back-Front before striking again.

Duration - Start slowly with 2-4 minute rounds and master the technique of striking the bag and moving side to side. Extend the total time of your workout by increasing the number of 2-4 minute rounds. An effective exercise routine will last a total of at least 15-20 minutes.

*Always seek proper instruction and warm-up before using!

at 126 pounds. Anderson lost his first match at St. Louis, which put him out of the tournament, after trying to recover from mononucleosis. In the Ohio Open, Anderson recovered on the mat with a 3-2 record. He lost to the man he is filling in for, Marlow, in the final match.

"We need young guys to step in like that," said McCausland. "It gives them a great opportunity and experience. I think they've done a pretty good job considering they're only freshmen.

"The key for them is just working to make an impact as a team member.

There is room for improvement, but that will come through their work in the weight room, not only through strength-building but also mental toughness."

Perry, who finished fourth at the Illinois state wrestling meet a year ago, and Anderson don't really feel that they have filled Marlow and Serbick shoes because that would be awfully tough to do.

Rockets' Chaney is fired as coach

HOUSTON (AP) - Don Chaney, NBA coach of the year in 1991 but whose team was struggling this season, was fired by the Houston Rockets on Tuesday.

Assistant Rudy Tomjanovich, who played 11 seasons for the Rockets and is one of two Houston players to have his number retired, was named interim head coach.

"You can't fire the team and something had to be done," owner Charlie Thomas said. "Once you see that things are deteriorating, you have to do something. I'm not blaming Don Chaney. Everyone is accountable and that includes me." Chaney, 45, became the Rockets' eighth coach in the franchise's 24-year history June 13, 1988. He compiled a 164-134 record.

In Chaney's first three seasons as coach, the Rockets went 45-37, 41-41 and 52-30 and were eliminated in the first round of the playoffs each season.

tournament, but at that time the NCAA didn't give the league an automatic bid to the NCAA Tournament.

The team has shown some flashes of brilliance, but more than not in spurts of five minutes, only to make a 180-degree turn for the next 10. The players seem to have the ability to dominate, but don't seem to have the desire or courage to do so.

The question is, who is to blame - Samuels and the coaches or the players? The answer: More often than not, the players.

The coaches tasks are to develop a defensive and offensive game plan - including individual matchups - for the upcoming opponent, and to make the players realize what they have to do to win the game.

The players, in return, have to execute the game plan as best as possible, and the top players - in this case the four senior starters - have to step up in big games and in close games to lead the team. That hasn't happened very often this year.

Take, for instance, the Panthers home contest against the Mid-Con's best, Wisconsin-Green Bay. Rowe and Martin both scored 13 points, holding up their end of the bargain. But Johnson and Olson combined to score just 16 and were almost nonexistent.

Each of the seniors has had his share of good games, showing that flash of maturity from the promise they showed as sophomores. But each has also disappeared when the time was right for him to take that extra step into the leadership role.

As a result, the team stands in fifth place among a league of mediocre teams - minus the Pheonix - and plays that way, too.

A win against Cleveland State Monday would have put the team into good position for a chance at second place. Instead, the Panthers looked awful - at home - against one of the league's worst.

"When you have a group of seniors and they're not willing to put it all on the line, we are going to be a mediocre team," Samuels said after Monday's loss.

Mediocre at best.

Team USA advances Govan with win over France

VERIBEL, France (AP) - Aggressive play marred the U.S. Olympic hockey team but didn't prevent America from beating France 4-1 Tuesday morning within one victory of the gold medal.

were assessed. Sticks and fists were swung as the benches cleared after the final horn, but order was restored after a few minutes and the teams participated in the traditional postgame handshake.

The United States (5-0-1) advanced to Friday's semifinal against the winner of Wednesday's Finland-Unified Team game.

The Americans, assured of no worse than fourth place, are in the Olympic medal round for the first time since winning the 1980 gold medal.

went 7-feet while at DuPage.

"He's my super jumper," Moore said. "I was very lucky to recruit him. He is an invaluable part of our team. Since the long jump will be his first event on Friday, he might surprise us.

"He has jumped over 26-feet before, but scratched. He's an intense competitor and has earned a lot of respect throughout the conference."

The Mid-Continent championships will begin at noon Friday in Lantz Fieldhouse.

Rodriguez had much the same thing as Jordan, adding, "It's more physical in college and more tiring."

Samuels said the two players are probably the key to the future of the Panthers.

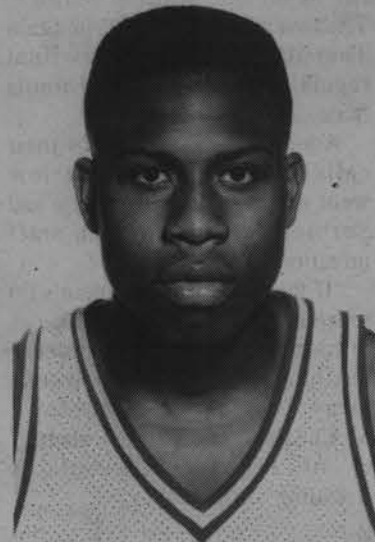

When we recruited them both, I thought they were (going to be important players in the future), and I will do," Samuels said. "They are good as athletes as we have here and we're excited about them playing here.

Both Rodriguez and Jordan say they are anxious for the day when they will be joining the starting line-up together.

That's putting a lot of pressure on (being the key to the future)," Samuels said. "But I'm excited about the challenge and am looking forward to meeting it."

"We're winners," Rodriguez said. "I will do whatever it takes to win."

Jordan, who has yet to choose a major, has appeared in 15 games for the Panthers and had his best performance of the season against Cleveland State (eight points and four rebounds).

Louis Jordan

the Panthers and had his best performance of the season against Cleveland State (eight points and four rebounds).

Rodriguez, who plans on majoring in business, has played in 20 of the 22 Eastern games and is averaging 3.3 points per game and 2.2

rebounds per game, while averaging just over 10 minutes a game. He has also started nine games, since the injury to Rod McKinnis.

He is shooting 54 percent from the field, connecting on 27 of 50 shots. Rodriguez's best performance of the season came against Illinois-Chicago when he scored 14 points and pulled down six rebounds.

The two freshmen have been friends for a long time and are currently roommates. This friendship has led to a rivalry, according to the two Panthers.

Rodriguez said he is a better slam dunker than Jordan, but Jordan disagrees. "I'm the better dunker, we'll find that out by the end of the year."

This rivalry goes back to the days when they played together in high school.

"It was pretty much an unspoken rivalry," Jordan said. "We really didn't talk about it, but if I outscored and outrebounded Andre in one game, you can bet that he would try to out do me the next game."

Oak Park rookies show promise

By KEN RYAN
Associate sports editor

The future looks good for the Eastern basketball team, with freshmen Louis Jordan and Andre Rodriguez already playing an important role on the Panther squad. But for the time being, the two forwards are concentrating on the present.

With the starters struggling recently, head coach Rick Samuels inserted the two freshmen into an important Mid-Continent Conference contest with Cleveland State Monday and both responded to the challenge by putting up some impressive numbers.

Jordan played 10 minutes and contributed eight points on 2-3 shooting from the field and 4-4 from the line and he also pulled down four rebounds.

Rodriguez added five points in 10 minutes before picking up his fourth foul.

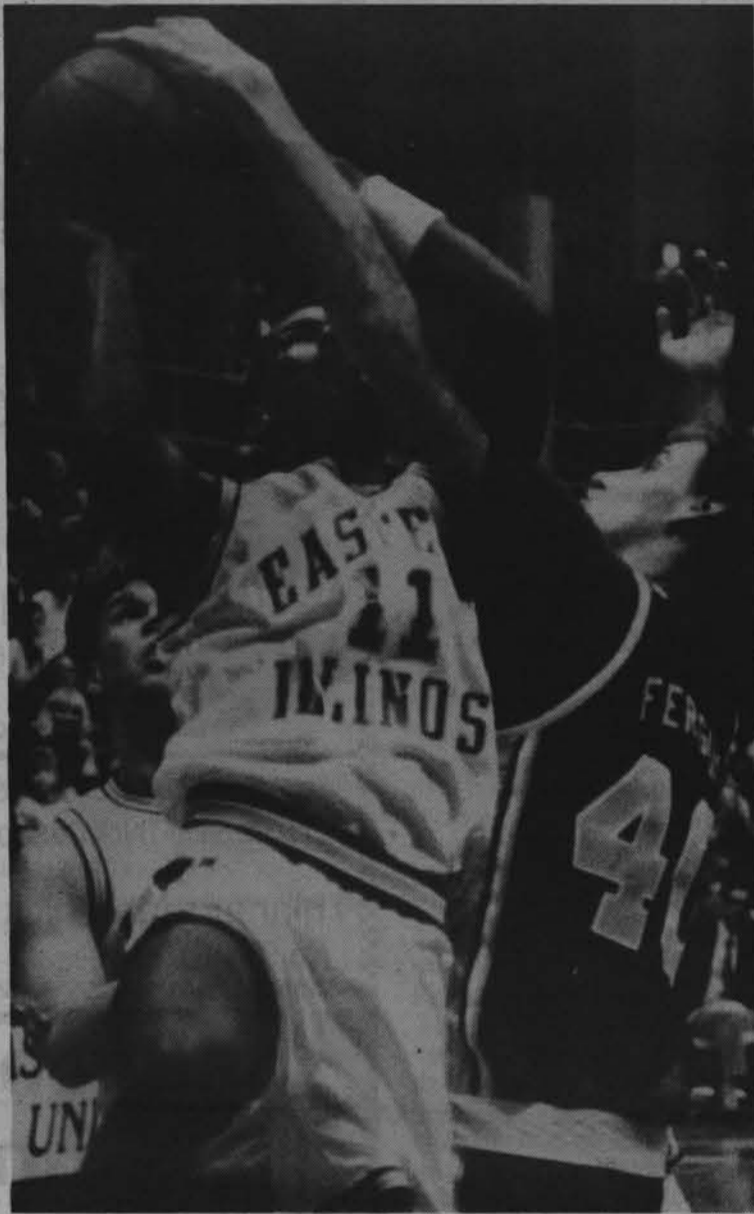

"I thought the freshmen did a good job," Samuels said. "I think they are having a typical freshman season in that it's a tough adjustment to make to the Division I level. They come in excited and ready to play, but then they realize it's a long season and a tough grind.

"I think they are tired both mentally and physically, but they are both competitive guys and they still want to step up and do a good job."

The freshman tandem both hail from Oak Park and attended Oak Park-River Forest High School, where they led the team to back-to-back 21-5 records and a regional championship in 1991.

Jordan averaged 17 points per game and was the No. 2 vote-getter in the West Suburban Silver all-conference balloting and was a second team Pioneer Press all-area member.

Rodriguez was the Most Valuable Player in the West Suburban Silver Conference and was First Team All-Area, Champaign News-Gazette honorable mention All-State and was also nominated to the McDonald's All-American Team.

With these impressive honors, one might think the two would have an easy time making the jump to the college level, but don't tell that to them.

"Everyone's much, much stronger than I am," Jordan said. "I've been getting pushed around a lot, but that is something I'm working on."

Freshmen fill void for injured wrestlers

By DAN KARNES
Staff writer

With senior wrestling co-captains Dave Marlow and Ray Serbick out with injuries a tandem of freshmen wrestlers have been filling in for the two Panther stars.

Freshmen Trent Anderson and Chris Perry are the two wrestlers that Panther head coach Ralph McCausland has given the call to fill in for Marlow and Serbick. The two may have to fill in again Thursday in the Panthers final regular season match at Illinois State.

Anderson and Perry got their calls to the mat after Marlow went down with a rib injury and Serbick fell victim to a staff infection.

"If they're not ready there's no sense in them taking any chances of re-injuring themselves because regionals are only two weeks away from Saturday," McCausland said of the probability of his two co-captains wrestling on Thursday.

Trent Anderson

Since Anderson, a native of Bloomington, Ind., and Perry, a product of Naperville, have been in the spotlight they have more than held their own. Perry, who is filling in for Serbick, has wrestled his way to a 6-6 overall mark in 134 pounds and turned in a 5-0 record during the St. Louis Open.

Leaping Govan looks to sweep conference

By BRIAN HARRIS
Staff writer

Going into Friday's Mid-Continent Conference track meet Eastern is almost guaranteed wins in three events, and those wins may all be delivered by one person.

Senior Nevin Govan currently leads the conference lists in both the long and triple jumps. If he was injury-free, he might have also been leading the Mid-Con high jump list as well.

For most of the season Govan has been hampered by a foot injury that has limited him primarily to the long jump, his specialty event, and occasionally the triple. He has only competed in the high jump once.

Despite his injury, when he did compete he dominated. He has only lost one long jump competition all season, and recently qualified provisionally for the national meet with a leap of 25-feet 3/4-inches, which won him the Saluki Invitational at Southern Illinois.

Govan qualified last year with his winning effort at Southern Illinois, which at 25-feet 4 1/2-inches was a new indoor school record. Unfortunately, he was unable to compete at nationals because of an injury.

Even though he has qualified provisionally, Govan isn't sure if his latest jump will get him in.

"I wasn't really satisfied with that jump," said Govan. "Last year a 25-2 made it but I don't know about a 25-3/4, we'll just have to see."

Head coach Neil Moore agrees. "I think he'll have to jump a little bit farther," said Moore. "I think he is capable of jumping a lot farther than that, but he knows what he has to do."

The automatic standard is set at 25-feet 7-inches. Even though he has never jumped that far indoors he has equaled or exceeded that distance several times outdoors.

Govan transferred to Eastern two years ago from the college of DuPage as a junior college national champion in the long jump, with a then best outdoor mark of 25-feet 10 1/4-inches. He has since increased that distance to 25-feet 11 3/4-inches, which he achieved that mark this past summer in winning the Prairie State Games, an event which he has won the last six years.

In his first season at Eastern Govan won the conference long jump indoors, the long jump outdoors and out and was also runner up in the indoor and outdoor triple jump.

Going into the indoor conference meet this weekend, Govan is seeded as a huge favorite in the long and triple. He leads the long jump list by a foot and a half in the triple by even more.

Govan also has speed. Because of that he will also be entering the 55-meter dash as well.

"I'm not concentrating so much on the dash," said Govan. "I'm going to do my best but Western Illinois has a lot of good sprinters. My main concern will be the jumps. I'll try to get a new mark in the long jump. But I don't know if I'm still not sure if I'll be in a last chance meet of the conference. There won't be a lot of competition in the long and triple at the conference, but the high jump will have a guy who's gone 6-8."

Govan won last year's long jump at 6-feet 9 3/4-inches.

Eastern hoops: Mediocrity at its best

For three years now, I've heard nothing but the word potential for Eastern's basketball team.

The 1989-90 Panther team featured a group of promising sophomores and a junior guard who struggled to a sixth-place finish in the Mid-Continent Conference (3-9) and a 10-18 mark overall in what was termed a rebuilding year after the loss of all-time scoring leader Jay Taylor.

Last year, the senior guard - Gerald Jones - and those promising underclassmen from the year before who matured into juniors were supposed to contend for a conference championship.

Early on, it looked like the team would contend, but Northern Illinois and Wisconsin-Green-Bay dominated the league, with the Huskies earning the regular season crown and the Phoenix the post-season tournament on their home floor.

Both teams earned NCAA tournament bids, while the Panthers, who bowed to the Phoenix in the semi-finals of the conference tourney, were considered, but left out of a National Invitational Tournament slot after posting a 17-12 overall record.

Jones would be the only valuable player lost to graduation, and the 1991-92 Panther squad looked like a shoe-in - had the potential - to battle Green Bay for the top spot in the league.

And after 12 conference games and 22 total, the Panthers find themselves where they have been for most of head coach Rick Samuels' coaching career - at mediocrity.

Why? It's simple on the surface - inconsistency. Eastern's last two games mirror its entire season. On Saturday night, the Panthers - tied late in the game to Akron - put on a late charge and beat the Zips by seven points.
