

Spring 1-15-2018

ENG 3705-001: American Multicultural Literatures

Tim Engles
Eastern Illinois University

Follow this and additional works at: http://thekeep.eiu.edu/english_syllabi_spring2018

Part of the English Language and Literature Commons

Recommended Citation

Engles, Tim, "ENG 3705-001: American Multicultural Literatures" (2018). Spring 2018. 42.
http://thekeep.eiu.edu/english_syllabi_spring2018/42

This Article is brought to you for free and open access by the 2018 at The Keep. It has been accepted for inclusion in Spring 2018 by an authorized administrator of The Keep. For more information, please contact tabruns@eiu.edu.

Multicultural Literature's Greatest Hits (and Misses)
English 3705 – Spring, 2018
2:00-3:15, Tues/Thurs – Coleman 3170

Instructor: Tim Engles
Office: Coleman 3831
Office hours: 3:15 – 4:30 p.m. TR, and by appointment

Required texts:

Richard Wright, Savage Holiday (1954)
Maxine Hong Kingston, The Woman Warrior (1976)
August Wilson, Fences (1983)
Sandra Cisneros, The House on Mango Street (1984)
Art Spiegelman, Maus, Volumes 1 & 2 (1986, 1991)
David Henry Hwang, M. Butterfly (1988)
Amy Tan, The Joy Luck Club (1989)
Helena María Viramontes, Under the Feet of Jesus (1995)
Adrian Tomine, Shortcomings (2007)
Mohsin Hamid, How to Get Filthy Rich in Rising Asia (2013)

COURSE POLICIES AND PROCEDURES
(read the following carefully; these words constitute our contract, and I will request your written agreement to them)

Since the beginnings of institutionalized “multicultural literature” in the 1990s, many minority-authored texts have attained canonical status among scholars and educators. We will juxtapose several such works with other worthwhile, but less familiar ones. Guiding questions will include: Who are the gate-keeping readers in our culture? What have they been seeking in terms of “multicultural literature,” and what have they missed? Why have some literary works attained canonical multicultural status, while others that also deserve recognition have been largely overlooked? How can scholars of multicultural literature, canon formation, and related social issues help us sort through these matters?

We will conduct our course as an inquiring conversation on these matters, with your active participation central to our work. Because we are a relatively small group, the success of our conversations will depend heavily on everyone’s participation. It is therefore crucial that you keep up with the reading, and that you do so with careful attention.

A note about reading: Since one skill you will be developing in this class is the art of textual analysis, you must give the readings more than a quick skimming over. Instead of wolfing them down right before class, set aside enough time to read carefully. Take notes as you read, then decide for yourself, before coming to class, what each author is trying to describe and bring to light. Also, to ensure that your final grade reflects your reading effort, I will occasionally give “pop” quizzes at the beginning of class on required readings (see next page for more on quizzes).

Grades: Each assignment will be graded on a 100-point scale (90-100 = A, etc.), and your final course grade will be determined in the following way:

Paired presentation	10%
Event response and analysis	15%
Mid-term exam	15%
Final exam	20%
Major project	20%
Participation/forum responses/ quizzes/attendance	20%

Missed quizzes, missed exams, and late essays: Reading quizzes will be unannounced and they cannot be made up. These quizzes are one way to reward those who attend class regularly and on time. I recognize that some students must be absent at times; accordingly, when I compile your quiz grades at the end of the semester into an average score, I will drop the lowest one—if you miss a quiz, that will be your one dropped quiz. If you don't miss any quizzes, I will still drop your lowest score from your quiz average. Again, because the answers to unannounced quizzes come up in class after quizzes are taken, they cannot be made up (even if you come to class late).

There will be no make-up exams—students who miss the first exam will substitute a 6-8 page major essay in response to questions written by Dr. Engles. Students who miss the final exam will receive an automatic “Zero” on it, unless arrangements are made ahead of time regarding an essay substitution.

Essays are due at the beginning of class on the due date whether you are in class or not. Late papers will be penalized fifteen points each day they are late. You may turn in an essay before its due date if you know you must miss class that day.

D2L Activity: Enrollment in this class requires use of D2L, and you must check it frequently, preferably every day, for information pertaining to the course. Updates about the course will periodically appear there, as will copies of assignment guidelines and certain handouts. Also, D2L email is the quickest, easiest way to reach me if I am not in my office; I welcome any and all questions and comments. If I must miss a class session, I will notify students as soon as I can with a cancellation notice.

Regular use of D2L is crucial for this course—if you do not send me a D2L email message by Friday, January 12 at 3:00 p.m., I will assume that you have chosen against fully participating in the course, and your class participation grade will drop precipitously. See F JAN 12 below on the Daily Schedule for what to include in this message. I am of course in our course's D2L address book, at tdengles@online.eiu.edu (this address will NOT work with regular email).

Classroom environment: In class, I expect all of you to participate in discussions (class participation will be figured into your final grade). The best way to demonstrate that you are an active, engaged reader is by contributing regularly to class discussions, and by paying close, respectful attention to what everyone else has to say. I do not plan to merely lecture in this class; I want us to contribute together to a positive, challenging, interesting learning environment.

Also, be aware that sensitive issues sometimes arise within a course on multicultural material, so we must respect the opinions of others—remember to respond to ideas, rather than to the person stating them. In my opinion, it's okay for discussions to occasionally become “heated,” and “off the topic” of literature, as long as we respect each other as people. If you have questions, no matter how simple or complicated, go ahead and ask me, either in class or via e-mail—chances are that other students have the same question.

Some pet-peeves of mine, and some requirements that you've probably heard before: in the interests of keeping everyone in class undistracted and focused, please do not read outside materials, chew gum, or eat food in class (drinking beverages is okay), and do not use a computer in class. Be sure to silence your phone ahead of time, and do not check or write text messages during class.

If you happen to be expecting an emergency call or text, it's okay to keep your phone on, but be sure to let me know before class begins.

Finally, please refrain from “packing up” during the last few minutes of class; I will signal when the discussion is finished, and I promise to end each class by the time the period is over (you're welcome to call me on it if I don't).

Attendance policy: The rule regarding attendance is: be here. I notice and record absences. I expect you to attend class every day, on time, and prepared to discuss the material listed for that day on the “Daily Schedule.” Missing class frequently will lower your final grade as well as your grades on the reading quizzes. More than three undocumented absences will lower your class participation grade to “Zero.” In addition, note that coming to class “prepared” means coming to class with that day's assigned reading—anyone who does not have the day's assigned reading with them may be considered absent.

Regarding tardiness: This is a small class, so late arrivals are disruptive—if for some bizarre reason you wish to get on my bad side, you can easily do so by developing the habit of arriving late for class. If you will not be able to arrive for this class on time because of other commitments, drop it and take another course. Also, you are responsible for all assignments, whether you attend class or not. Get the phone number or email of one or two other students in class, so you can find out about any missed assignments before you come to class.

Academic honesty: Keep in mind, of course, the English Department's policy on plagiarism: “Any teacher who discovers an act of plagiarism—‘The appropriation or imitation of the language, ideas, and/or thoughts of another author, and representation of them as one's original work’ (Random House Dictionary of the English Language)—has the right and the responsibility to impose upon the guilty student an appropriate penalty, up to and including immediate assignment of a grade of F for the course, and to report the incident to the Judicial Affairs Office.”