Spring 1-15-2001

ENG 1092-096: Composition and Literature

Stephen Swords
Eastern Illinois University

Follow this and additional works at: http://thekeep.eiu.edu/english_syllabi_spring2001
Part of the English Language and Literature Commons

Recommended Citation
http://thekeep.eiu.edu/english_syllabi_spring2001/46

This Article is brought to you for free and open access by the 2001 at The Keep. It has been accepted for inclusion in Spring 2001 by an authorized administrator of The Keep. For more information, please contact tabruns@eiu.edu.
English 1092 Composition and Literature

Stephen Swords
Coleman 339I
581-6984 (office) 367-6253 (home)

In this class, you’ll work on developing both your critical writing and reading abilities. These, I’m sure, are already very well developed, and the real issue in this class, for each of you, will be coming up with the things you want to think and write about. Throughout the course of the semester, we’ll read widely through the genres of fiction, poetry, drama, and non-fiction, some things old, some things new, and you’ll write about these things in a variety of modes from short responses to a developed research paper.

Course policies are straightforward. I expect you to come regularly and to participate actively. Your final course grade will be based on the quality of your written work and the quality of your class performance. This is a subjective call on my part, but if you come to class ready to talk about what you’ve read and you take each assignment seriously, you’ll do fine.