FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

CHARLESTON, IL--Summer School 1983 at Eastern Illinois University will again feature theme workshops and prominent visiting educators, Dr. Charles Switzer, director, said.

Switzer said "summer is a special time for the students because of various events and an overall effort by the staff to bring the university community together as it cannot do in the regular year because of the size of the student body."

He said he expects 3,500 students to attend, up from last year's official count of 3,413. This would be normal, said Switzer, citing that Eastern has experienced about a six percent increase in summer enrollment each year since 1978.

Central registration for Intersession will take place on May 16. Intersession classes will begin the same day. Students may preregister for all summer classes until April 8. Five and eight-week sessions will begin meeting June 15, with central registration being held June 13 and 14. Final examinations will be held June 9 for Intersession classes, July 20 for five-week classes and August 8-10 for eight-week classes. Mail in registration for workshops is also available.

Switzer said he expects many persons to enroll for the special theme workshops and the visiting faculty workshops. He said many of these students will be those who cannot take time off from work or do not want to attend school year-round. The workshops are related to the summer theme of "Human Relationships in a Changing Society."

Another special feature will be the summer guest student policy. This new policy allows non-degree students who want to enroll in summer school or a workshop to do so without having official transcripts sent to complete admission.

Switzer said non-degree students who haven't previously attended EIU will be allowed to enroll, but they must first sign a summer guest student application for admission which states that "enrollment in a summer course under this policy does not constitute admission to an undergraduate or graduate degree program at Eastern Illinois University." It also states that any credits earned are not guaranteed to be counted towards a degree if the persons are later admitted to degree programs.
