Course Description, Goals, and Policies: The subject is English Literature, 1780-1830. Assigned readings will come from the poetry, fiction, drama, and non-fictional prose of the period.

Our goal is to read and discuss each work carefully, for its own sake; but since these works were produced during a particularly turbulent period of English history, we will spend some time examining their relation to major social and historical concerns. Most of our class time will be devoted to discussion of primary material and group work based on close reading.

This is a writing-intensive course. You may submit a paper from this class as part of your EWP. Visit the assessment website: www.eiu.edu/~assess.
