Student Hometown News Bureau

CHARLESTON, IL--Jon Sall, a 1984 graduate from Elk Grove High School, has been named editor-in-chief for Eastern Illinois University's yearbook, The Warbler.

After just one semester as a staff photographer for the Daily Eastern News, Sall was named assistant photo editor of the Eastern News and then photo editor of the Warbler.

"I was honored when I was named editor. It's a lot of commitment, dedication and hard work, but it's worth it," said

Sall. He said he would like to add more indepth stories to the Warbler and add more creativity for a new look.

"I think Jon is one of the most promising new editors we've had in years. Not only is he an excellent photographer, but he is a graphic design major and knows how to operate the production equipment. He's well rounded and one of the best I've worked with," said Bob McElwee, faculty advisor to the Warbler.

Sall, an Art major with a concentration in graphic design, has received two talented student awards from the art department for his art work.

Although he enjoys working on his art, Sall said his career interests are in photography. Sall is currently working as a freelance photographer for the Associated Press.

"The Warbler is a great project for me to work on, and I'm looking forward to it," said Sall.

Sall is the son of Arlene Sall of Elk Grove Village.
