FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE:

MARLOW RECEIVES AWARD

CHARLESTON -- Nancy Marlow, associate professor of management and marketing, recently received the Ethics and Social Responsibility Instructional Award from Eastern Illinois University's Lumpkin College of Business and Applied Sciences.

Administered by the College's Ethics and Social Responsibility Committee, the award goes to a faculty member who stresses the importance of being socially responsible citizens and business people. The recipient must be committed to informing students about ethical dilemmas they may face in the future, and teaching them to develop ethical decision-making skills.

Marlow, who received her doctorate from Mississippi State University, joined the EIU faculty in 1985. She is the daughter of R. Eugene and Marjorie Danner of Canton. Marlow resides in Charleston with her husband, Edward, and their three children -- Michele, Chris and Bob.
