FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE:

AACD OFFERS FREE BROCHURE

CHARLESTON, IL--In response to the growing psychological and emotional stress caused by the Persian Gulf War, the American Association for Counseling and Development (AACD) is offering free informational materials to aid the public in coping with the conflict.

The AACD, based in Alexandria, Virginia, has made available several articles and brochures with information relevant to counseling children and military families. Included are "Counseling the Effects of War on Children" and "Seeking Help for Life's Challenges."

"This is excellent material on an important issue . . . I would recommend it to anyone," said Charles Eberly, Eastern Illinois University associate professor of educational psychology and guidance and past-president of the AACD's Association for Measurement and Evaluation in Counseling and Development.

To receive a copy of the informational materials, write: AACD Public Relations Department, 5999 Stevenson Ave., Alexandria, VA 22304, or call 1-703-823-9800.
