2009

Wrapped in Pride: Ghanaian Kente and African-American Identity

Booth Library

Follow this and additional works at: http://thekeep.eiu.edu/booth_library_programs

Recommended Citation
http://thekeep.eiu.edu/booth_library_programs/9

This Book is brought to you for free and open access by the Conferences, Events and Exhibits at The Keep. It has been accepted for inclusion in Booth Library Programs by an authorized administrator of The Keep. For more information, please contact tabruns@eiu.edu.
Wrapped in Pride: Ghanaian Kente and African American Identity

An Exhibition Hosted by Booth Library
Eastern Illinois University
February 1 - March 10, 2009
Table of Contents

Welcome by the Dean 3
Opening Reception 4
Guide to the Exhibit 6
Program Series of Events 9
Concurrent Activities 13
Related Exhibits at Booth Library 14
Library Partners 16
Popular Ewe and Akan Proverbs 16
Background for Enrichment and Exploration 17
Selected List of Local Resources 21
Curator Biographies 31
Credits 32
Dear Friends,

It is with pleasure that we welcome you to Booth Library’s newest major exhibit, Wrapped in Pride: Ghanaian Kente and African American Identity. How exciting it is to have such an impressive collection of artifacts and artisan works in Charleston as Eastern celebrates African American Heritage Month 2009.

There is much to learn from this exhibit. Few persons from our region will have previously seen so much African weaving close enough to touch. Many of us should review the rich cultural heritage of Ghana and the political developments of Western Africa over the past century. We can become more attuned to the art of weaving and use of raw materials to make cloth, skills highly prized in our local culture just a couple or three generations ago.

Notice the rich listing of local resources available to you, to your friends and students, found in this brochure. Booth Library resources come from many decades of collecting in areas relevant to this exhibit’s theme. Materials from the array of topics are included, demonstrating the history and highlighting the changes which have taken place in America with respect to the understanding and maturity of race and culture.

Help us involve citizens of the region in this opportunity for enhanced understanding of African influences on Illinois culture. You, too, can make a difference by practicing the true oral tradition of spreading the word, incorporating new information into your vocabulary, and becoming fluent with kente, the history of Ghana, and additional African American writers and poets.

Our gratitude is extended to the National Endowment of the Humanities and their work with the Mid-America Arts Alliance and the UCLA Fowler Museum of Cultural History. Their efforts to make available this traveling exhibit have been enormous; our community has been enriched through our participation.

Best wishes,

Allen Lanham, PhD
Dean of Library Services
Wrapped in Pride: Ghanaian Kente and African American Identity

Thursday, February 5, 2009
Opening Reception
7:00 p.m.
Booth Library Marvin Foyer

Opening Program
7:30 p.m.
Booth Library West Reading Room

A Traveling Exhibition to America’s Libraries
Welcome
Allen Lanham, Dean of Library Services

Greetings
Blair Lord, Provost and Vice President for Academic Affairs

Recognition of Faculty Presenters and Curators
Karla Kennedy-Hagan, Chair, Library Advisory Board

Closing
Allen Lanham, Dean of Library Services

Refreshment Table
Bakeshop Delights
Snacks of Kente Color
Natural Juices

Opening Program
7:30 p.m. Booth Library West Reading Room

Kente in Context
Robert S. Petersen, Presenter, Associate Professor, Art
The exhibition Wrapped in Pride: Ghanaian Kente and African American Identity is divided into two broad sections: first, it traces the roots of kente in Asante and Ewe cultures, in what is now central and eastern Ghana and parts of Togo, and its widespread use in Africa as garment and ceremonial cloth; then it explores kente as a meaningful document of dress, art, and identity in American cultures, specifically within African American communities in the United States.

Marvin Foyer and North Lobby

Introduction

The exhibition begins with the oral tradition that credits Ananse, the wise spider character from Akan oral literature with the introduction of weaving to the Asante heartland; a second oral tradition about kente origins attributes its introduction to a man name Ota Kraben who brought the technology from the north. Images of a chief and queen mother in kente complement the men’s and women’s cloths on display.

The Market

To give a sense of the rich variety of kente cloth and its by-products, a small kente “store” is recreated to provide visitors a sense of the various cloths found in these markets for sale.

The Colors of African Unity

Kwame Nkrumah, Ghana’s first political leader is remembered today for his central role in achieving Ghana’s political emancipation from British colonial rule, and he remains an important figure in the history of African independence movements. Nkrumah was responsible for making kente visible on the world stage. This section highlights the independence of Nkrumah and Ghanaian

A Calendar of Cloth

This section traces the contextual use of kente in African American communities for celebrated calendar-based events, as well as other occasions not specifically tied to the calendar such as weddings, church events, and Afrocentric marketplaces. This section foregrounds materials collected and documented by high school classes in Los Angeles, Newark, and other cities.

Ballenger Teachers Center

Kente and Childhood

Kente themed toys and books help children connect to an African identity. Several dolls, including “Ghanaian Barbie” are on exhibit in the Ballenger Teachers Center, along with a selection of children’s books on African themes.
A Beautiful Cloth Does Not Wear Itself

This section focuses on the appropriate modes of wearing kente in Ghana and the variety of contexts in which kente defines the occasion as much as any other item of expressive culture. Photographic displays present chiefs’ installations, the wearing of kente by gods in shrines and by the deceased at funerals, and colorful festival processions.

The Fine Art of Asante Kente

Included in this section are selected masterworks of Asante weaving that demonstrate the accomplishment of the art; the importance of each cloth name, which is rooted in the rich oral literature of the Asante, is also explained. Most cloths are identified by their warp (lengthwise) stripe patterning, though rarely is there a relationship between the pattern and its name.

The Fine Art of Ewe Kente

Neighbors of the Asante to the east, the Ewe (pronounced ay-vay) have their own version of kente, with an equally long history. Ewe cloth is distinguished from that of Asante by the incorporation of representational weft-faced (crosswise) motifs such as stools, daggers, an assortment of proverbial messages suggested by animal imagery, and by the occasional use of words woven into the strips.

What’s in a Name? Warp Designs

Among the Asante peoples of Ghana, kente cloths are purchased as much for their names as for their beauty. As the cloths exhibited here demonstrate, cloth (warp stripe) names are derived from a variety of sources, including famous people, especially chiefs and queen mothers; natural phenomena; historical events; and proverbs. Complex designs are also woven into the crosswise, or weft, threads. These tend to have names taken from the environment and culture of the Asante. There are more than one thousand warp and weft names, and new patterns are being invented all the time.

What’s in a Name? Weft Designs

Unlike the patterning of the lengthwise warp threads, most weft designs (woven across the warp threads) are named after objects—knives, bellows, combs, hats, etc. Also unlike most warp patterns, weft-faced designs tend to resemble their names. Some Asante kente cloths feature a single weft motif (adwen) repeated throughout, but more commonly a cloth will incorporate a number of designs. When weft designs are inserted into every available warp segment, the cloth is identified as Adweneasa, translated as “my skill is exhausted” or “my ideas are finished.”
Kente at Graduation
The wearing of kente to mark the achievement of graduation dates back to at least the late 1950s in Ghana. In the United States, kente stoles have become more and more commonplace at university graduations. While initially worn only by African American graduates, over the last ten years they have been included in more diverse commencement ceremonies, as well as in other contexts.

Kente and the State of Grace
African-style vestments and dress have been adopted by many faiths over the past forty years. While kente’s role in the church is most pronounced during African American History Month, it appears throughout the year as drapes for pulpit and altar, as Bible covers, on the vestments of choirboys and church ushers, and on choir and ministerial robes.

In a Funeral Mode
The death, funeral, and burial rites of important chiefs, queen mothers, and venerated elders, and the subsequent installation and enstoolment ceremonies for the successor are also occasions for the selective use of kente. In addition to the deceased occasionally being dressed in kente, his or her funeral bed may be covered with the cloth and in some areas the funeral room is draped in kente.

Library Atrium

The Weaving of Kente
Asante kente weaving is defined and described through video documentation of the weaving process, two Ghanaian narrow-strip looms, weaving technology photo panels, and hands-on raw materials, including completed kente strips.

Portraits of Kente
The exhibition concludes with images of prominent African American leaders who have been photographed wearing and using kente. Visitors are encouraged to consider issues of fad and fashion and reflect on the meanings and forms of kente in African American life.

Crossing the Atlantic
Photographs of former Tanzanian president Julius Nyerere and African American historian W.E.B. Du Bois introduce a section that examines the spread of kente beyond Ghana and its association with African unity and “Back to Africa” movements of the 1950s and 1960s.

Touch These Kente!
You are welcome to touch these cloths. Experience cloths made by a distinctly different technologies. Can you tell the differences in the feel of cotton and rayon? Are the weaves equally fine in all these examples?
February 5
7:30 p.m. Booth Library West Reading Room

Kente in Context
Robert S. Petersen, presenter, associate professor, Art

Kente cloth has an important symbolic meaning in Ghana especially with regard to royal ranks and public honors. It has in recent times also become powerfully evocative as a broader symbol of African Culture abroad. This talk will examine the development of kente traditions and some of its traditional uses within Ghana as well as some of the more recent works that kente cloth has inspired.

Robert S. Petersen is an Associate Professor of Art at Eastern where he teaches courses covering Africa, India, Southeast Asia, China and Japan. Dr. Petersen graduated with a BA from University of Santa Cruz in Art, an MA in Performance Studies from Brown University, and a PhD from the University of Hawaii at Manoa in Asian Theatre. In 1988, Dr. Petersen received a Fulbright scholarship to study the traditional arts of Indonesia and has since published numerous articles and essays on popular and traditional culture in India, Southeast Asia, and Japan.

February 17
4:00 p.m. Library Conference Room 4440

A Self-Efficacious People: Yearning to Learn
Mildred Pearson, presenter, assistant professor, Early Childhood, Elementary, and Middle Level Education

As a recent invited guest at the African Methodist Episcopal University in Liberia, Dr. Pearson will share her experiences with the African people. In particular, she will share how African people have been self-efficacious in their pursuit for freedom, dignity, and honor, particularly in education. In her sojourn, she served as acting president with 71 full-time instructional personnel, and approximately 4,000 students.

Dr. Mildred M. Pearson serves as Director of Faculty Development at Eastern and teaches in the College of Education and Professional Studies. Her research interests include self-efficacy, self-regulation, resilience and gender differences. She earned her BA in English education from Langston University, MEd from University of Central Oklahoma, and EdD in Curriculum and Educational Leadership from Oklahoma State University. She is the author of A Time for Deeper Dialogue: Mentoring, Modeling and Growing Your Own.
February 19
7:00 p.m. Library Conference Room 4440

Kente Iconicity and “Black Atlantic” Cultural Politics
Klevor Abo, presenter, instructor, African American Studies

This presentation situates the rise of the brightly colored kente as an internationally recognizable icon of Black pride in three interwoven strands of history: the European colonization of West Africa, the movements for African political independence and civil rights in the United States, and the emergence of “Black Atlantic” elites in Africa, the Americas, the Caribbeans and Europe. An examination of these histories is critical for an understanding of the deployment of the kente and other cultural artifacts and practices in the making of global African identities.

Klevor Abo is a member of the core teaching faculty in the African American Studies program at Eastern. He holds a PhD in American Culture Studies from Bowling Green State University, Ohio. He began his academic career in his native Ghana, at the University of Ghana, his undergraduate alma mater. Dr. Abo’s teaching and research interests revolve around the nature and character of the political and cultural relationship between the African continent and its diasporas.

February 24
7:00 p.m. Library Conference Room 4440

Film – Daughters of the Dust
Ann Boswell, moderator, professor, English

An award-winning and wonderful, beautiful film directed by an African American, Julie Dash, about the Gullah culture of South Carolina, and how Gullah people cherish the ways of their West African ancestors (1991).

Parley Ann Boswell is a professor of English at Eastern, where she teaches courses in American Literature and Film Studies. She received her MA in colonial American history from the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign, and a PhD in English from Loyola University. Dr. Boswell is the author of several essays on film and American literature, and has also published Reel Rituals: From Baptisms to Funerals in Hollywood Film, 1945-1995 (Popular Press, 1999), and Edith Wharton on Film (Southern Illinois University Press, 2007).
Arguably Ghana’s premiere postcolonial poet, Awoonor’s work spans several genres and five decades. Interweaving poetry and prose, myth and history, Awoonor moves from exile and satirical critique of modern Ghana in This Earth, My Brother (1971) toward return and reconciliation Comes the Voyager... (1992). This lecture introduces Awoonor’s work through selected readings from and commentary on his poetry with an emphasis on his mythic rendering of returning to Africa as an Ewe man soon to serve as representative to the United Nations of the nation that had once detained him on subversion charges for nearly a year. Awoonor’s career exemplifies the compassion of black humanism that fashioned his politics of poetry and the poetics of politics.

Michael Loudon is a professor of English and has taught at Eastern for the past 25 years. He completed his AB at Wabash College in Indiana and his MA and PhD at the State University of New York at Buffalo. He served as Acting Coordinator of the African American Studies Program, 2006-2008. He has taught courses on the British Romantic poets, 19th and 20th Century American literature, African American literature, Native American literature, Anglophone postcolonial literatures, cultural studies and criticism, and, with colleagues in the Department of Philosophy interdisciplinary courses in Cultural Foundations. He studied Ghandian nonviolent resistance in India as an undergraduate, was Fulbright Professor of African American Literature in 1990-91 at the University of the West Indies—St. Augustine in Trinidad, taught at the University of Guam in 2002, and participated in Study Abroad—Cape Town, South Africa in 2007.
March 3
4:00 p.m. Library Conference Room 4440

The Ceremonial Aspects of Ghanaian Kente
Johnson Kofi Kuma, presenter, professor, Library Services

Johnson Kofi Kuma, a native of Ghana, will present a workshop on the ceremonial aspects of Ghanaian Kente. His presentation will include a slide presentation and discussion.

Johnson Kofi Kuma is a Reference Librarian at Booth Library, Eastern. He received his BS in Biology from Southern Connecticut State University in New Haven, MLS in Library and Information Science from St John’s University in New York, and MA in Political Science from Eastern. Johnson is a subject bibliographer for African American Studies, Biological Sciences, and Technology. He loves to explore the western landscape of the United States of America.
Concurrent Activities

Celebrating African American Heritage Month at Eastern Illinois University

Yes We Can! Celebrating the Past, Forging a New Future

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Date</th>
<th>Event</th>
<th>Time</th>
<th>Location</th>
<th>Details</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>February 2</td>
<td>7-9:00 p.m. 7th Street Underground</td>
<td>Yes We Can: A Celebration of History in the Making</td>
<td>7th Street Underground</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>February 3</td>
<td>11:30-1:30 p.m. Oakland Rm, MLK Union</td>
<td>Eating for a Healthy Life and Soul</td>
<td>Oakland Room, MLK Union</td>
<td>Presenters: James Painter and Karen Armour</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>5:00 p.m. Coleman Hall Room 1255</td>
<td>Hope and History: The Obama Presidency and the Fate of Racism</td>
<td>Coleman Hall Room 1255</td>
<td>Presenter: Dave Roediger</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>February 4</td>
<td>12-1:30 p.m. Charleston/Mattoon, MLK</td>
<td>Diversity in America and its Impact on Education</td>
<td>7th Street Underground</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>7:00 p.m. Coleman Hall Room 1255</td>
<td>China in Africa</td>
<td>Coleman Hall Room 1255</td>
<td>Panelists: Michael Loudon, James Ochwa-Echel, Roger Beck, Teshome Abebe</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>February 5</td>
<td>6:00 p.m. Lumpkin Hall Room 2030</td>
<td>The Mis-education of a Black Greek</td>
<td>Lumpkin Hall Room 2030</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>February 6</td>
<td>5:00 p.m. Grand Ballroom, MLK Union</td>
<td>Heritage Month Banquet with A Killing in Choctaw: Carl Ray's one-man play</td>
<td>Grand Ballroom, MLK Union</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>February 7</td>
<td>12-4:00 p.m. Effingham Room, MLK Union</td>
<td>S.U.C.C.E.S.S Women’s Workshop</td>
<td>Effingham Room, MLK Union</td>
<td>Presenter: Rhonda Bowdry</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>6:00 p.m. Grand Ballroom, MLK Union</td>
<td>Gospel Explosion</td>
<td>Grand Ballroom, MLK Union</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>7:00 p.m. Buzzard Auditorium</td>
<td>Miracle at St. Anna: Film</td>
<td>Buzzard Auditorium</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>February 9</td>
<td>7:30 p.m. Doudna Lecture Hall</td>
<td>Conversations in Color</td>
<td>Doudna Lecture Hall</td>
<td>African American Heritage Film Series</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>7:00 p.m. Effingham Room, MLK Union</td>
<td>President Barack Obama: A Black Man in the White House</td>
<td>Effingham Room, MLK Union</td>
<td>Panelists: Loudon, Boykin, Anderson, Horton, Hardeman, Brown</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>February 10</td>
<td>7:00 p.m. Doudna Lecture Hall</td>
<td>Conversations in Color</td>
<td>Doudna Lecture Hall</td>
<td>African American Heritage Film Series</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>7:00 p.m. Effingham Room, MLK Union</td>
<td>President Barack Obama: A Black Man in the White House</td>
<td>Effingham Room, MLK Union</td>
<td>Panelists: Loudon, Boykin, Anderson, Horton, Hardeman, Brown</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>February 12</td>
<td>7:20-9:00 p.m. Lumpkin Hall Room 2030</td>
<td>Know Your Heritage</td>
<td>Lumpkin Hall Room 2030</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>February 16</td>
<td>9-4:00 p.m. Martinsville Room, MLK</td>
<td>BASUAH HIV Testing</td>
<td>Martinsville Room, MLK</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>7:00 p.m. 7th St Underground</td>
<td>Getting Off and Getting Intimate: Black and White Fraternity Men’s Approaches to Women</td>
<td>7th Street Underground</td>
<td>Presenter: Rashawn Ray</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>February 17</td>
<td>7:00 p.m. Effingham Room, MLK Union</td>
<td>EIU’s Tuskegee Airman and Other Coles County Ties to Black Aviation History</td>
<td>Effingham Room, MLK Union</td>
<td>Presenter: Doug Lawhead</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>February 18</td>
<td>6:00 p.m. Greenup Room, MLK Union</td>
<td>Faith panel/lecture</td>
<td>Greenup Room, MLK Union</td>
<td>Presenter: Norman Greer</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>February 19</td>
<td>5:30 p.m. Doudna 1090 Black Box</td>
<td>Janice Harrington, poet &amp; author</td>
<td>Doudna Lecture Hall</td>
<td>Host: Tim Engles</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>February 20</td>
<td>6:00 p.m. Grand Ballroom, MLK Union</td>
<td>Conversations in Color: Presentation of Students Video Contest</td>
<td>Grand Ballroom, MLK Union</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>February 20-21</td>
<td>6:00 p.m. Grand Ballroom, MLK Union</td>
<td>EIUUnity Conference</td>
<td>Grand Ballroom, MLK Union</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>February 22</td>
<td>11:30 a.m. University Ballroom, MLK Union</td>
<td>Bringing the Church to Campus</td>
<td>University Ballroom, MLK Union</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>7:00 p.m. Doudna Recital Hall</td>
<td>Africanist Chamber Music</td>
<td>Doudna Recital Hall</td>
<td>Host: Klevor Abo</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>February 23</td>
<td>7:00 p.m. 7th St. Underground</td>
<td>Cater to You - Pamper Party</td>
<td>7th Street Underground</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>February 24</td>
<td>7:00 p.m. 7th St. Underground</td>
<td>Miss Independent: Panel Discussion</td>
<td>7th Street Underground</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>February 25</td>
<td>7:00 p.m. University Ballroom, MLK Union</td>
<td>Let the Women Take the Stage</td>
<td>University Ballroom, MLK Union</td>
<td>Open Microphone</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>7:00 p.m. Grand Ballroom, MLK Union</td>
<td>New Illusions: Hair Show</td>
<td>Grand Ballroom, MLK Union</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>February 26</td>
<td>7:00 p.m. Grand Ballroom, MLK Union</td>
<td>Miss Black EIU Pageant</td>
<td>Grand Ballroom, MLK Union</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>February 28</td>
<td>7:00 p.m. University Ballroom, MLK Union</td>
<td>Miss Black EIU Union Party</td>
<td>University Ballroom, MLK Union</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Sponsored by
African Student Association, Black Student Union, Delta Sigma Theta, EIUUnity, Faculty Development, History Department, Housing Services, Minority Affairs, National Association of Black Journalists, Phi Beta Sigma, Student Life, TRiO, University Board, Zeta Phi Beta
Beyond Africa: Hand Woven and Embroidered Textiles from Central and Southeast Asia

Not only in Africa, but also throughout the world, native peoples developed textiles distinctively their own. Central and Southeast Asia were no exceptions. Featured in this exhibit are such items as Indonesian Ikats from East Sumba, Hmong tribal costumes from the hills of Thailand, a betel bag from East Timor, Cambodian kalagas and decorative embroideries from Uzbekistan. Also on display are the implements of weaving, including a partial loom frame, shuttles, and decorative loom pulleys.

Robert Hillman, professor, Booth Library, curator

The Adinkra Cloth

Adinkra cloth is a hand-printed fabric traditional to the Asante people of Ghana, West Africa. Adinkra literally means goodbye which is reflective in artistic symbols linked with consoling proverbs. Adinkra cloth is known to be worn by leaders in mourning and during remembrance ceremonies. Not only are the symbols artistic, they also communicate philosophical and moral values of the Asante. Most Adinkra symbols can be found woven into Kente cloth strips, which are often used as borders for the Adinkra cloth.

Jeanne Goble and Johna Shackles, Library Specialists, Booth Library, curators

Beyond Africa: Hand Woven and Embroidered Textiles from Central and Southeast Asia

Not only in Africa, but also throughout the world, native peoples developed textiles distinctively their own. Central and Southeast Asia were no exceptions. Featured in this exhibit are such items as Indonesian Ikats from East Sumba, Hmong tribal costumes from the hills of Thailand, a betel bag from East Timor, Cambodian kalagas and decorative embroideries from Uzbekistan. Also on display are the implements of weaving, including a partial loom frame, shuttles, and decorative loom pulleys.

Robert Hillman, professor, Booth Library, curator

Fashionably Dead?

The Ga people of Ghana construct fantasy coffins that honor the memory of their loved ones. Many of these coffins reflect the interests or professions of the deceased while they were living such as a hammer for a carpenter, a chicken for a farmer, or a fish for a fisherman. Imagine your loved one being transported in the after life in a beautifully crafted representational Mercedes, Cadillac, Coca-Cola bottle, or a stylish shoe.

Jeanne Goble, Stacey Knight-Davis, Johna Shackles, and Jacqueline Worden, curators

Special thanks to Joseph and Dorcas Appianing for sharing their Ghanaian clothing for the exhibition, and their consulting expertise on creating adinkra cloths, fantasy coffins, and how to properly display kente cloths.
Ghanaian Craftsmanship

The items in this exhibit highlight various art forms from Ghana collected during a visit in 2003. Wood and fabric arts are included.

Natasha Gibbens-Amartey, curator

Ghanaian Kente and African American Identity: The Socio Cultural Aspects

The exhibit depicts the role played by Ghanaian Kente on the social and cultural life of diasporic Africans.

Johnson Kuma, curator

Ghanaian Kente from a Chicago Collection

Lender: Mr. Bennett Agyman of the Asanteman Association of Chicago and Midwest—a subdivision of Ghana National Council of Metropolitan Chicago. Materials provided by Willie Morris, Vice President of EIU African Students Association

Local Spinners and Weavers

The Countryside Spinners and Weavers Guild was formed in 1972 by a group of individuals interested in the fiber arts. Members have come from Charleston, Mattoon, Paris, Chrisman, Vandalia, and other surrounding towns. Spinning produces yarn or thread. It was first done on a drop spindle. Available now are a variety of spinning wheels. This group uses processed fiber from sheep, alpaca, dogs, rabbits, cotton, flax, and the new synthetic fibers of soy silk, tencel and bamboo to produce yarn. Weaving on a loom produces cloth. Beyond spinning and weaving, individuals of this guild also do knitting, crocheting, dyeing, silk fusion, basketry, bobbin lace, and other fiber related activities. The exhibit brings together pieces woven by local artisans.

Margaret Speer, curator
Popular Ewe and Akan Proverbs

A beautiful cloth does not wear itself.

A proverb is the wisdom of all and the wit of one.

One Head does not go into Council.

The linguist makes the chief’s words sweet.

It is through small things that a village is established.

When a chief dies, it is said, “A great tree has fallen.”

No one goes to the house of the spider to teach it wisdom.

No one knows the story of tomorrow’s dawn.

One who follows the track of the elephant never gets wet from the dew on the bushes. (One is safe behind a powerful chief.)

If a bird has a long bill it uses it to eat on its own side of the stream and not for stretching across the river. (This could be a warning not to interfere with someone’s land, as streams were often property boundaries.)

If a horse does not go to war, its tail does. (This refers to the part of the war paraphernalia of chiefs or captains, and it means it is one’s responsibility to contribute to a function even if one cannot personally attend.)

The river fish’s game is no safe game. (No good can come from playing with a dangerous man.)

When you are safe on the bank, then you can tell the crocodile that is has a lump on its snout. (Don’t make remarks about someone dangerous unless you are quite sure you are out of his reach.)

The thread follows the needle. (A teacher or elder can provide wise guidance to the pupil.)

The crocodile does not drown in a river. (I am invincible!)
Background for Enrichment and Exploration

Freely adapted with permission from Wrapped in Pride: Ghanaian Kente and African American Identity: A Curriculum Resource Unit by Lyn Avins and Betsy D. Quick. Los Angeles: UCLA Fowler Museum of Cultural History

Ghana is located on the southern coast of the great bulge of West Africa and is bounded by Togo, the Ivory Coast, and Burkina Faso on the east, west, and north. The country measures 420 miles from south to north and averages 270 miles in width, roughly the size of Great Britain. Ghana can be divided into three environmental zones: a flat coastal plain runs inland for as much as fifty miles and is covered with grass and scrub; a forest zone covers much of southwest Ghana; and the northern savannah covers two-thirds of the country north of the forest. The climate is relatively warm, with an annual mean temperature of 70-83 degrees and relative humidity on the coast of more than 90%.

The great mix of languages and ethnic groups in Ghana point to a complex history. It is generally understood that stone-age humans probably first inhabited Ghana roughly half a million years ago. About 2000-1500 B.C.E., knowledge of agriculture and pottery appears in the archaeological record; iron tools were developed between 500 and 1000 C.E., with technologies such as brass casting and weaving appearing later.

Beginning about 1500, numerous states rose in power, establishing powerful kingdoms, each with centralized authority. The rise of these states was, of course, related to the growth of trade in the southwest, especially in connection with the exploitation of gold resources in the area. European influences began in 1471 with the landing of the Portuguese on the coast. Various European powers exchanged trinkets and luxury goods for gold and slaves.

By the end of the 17th century, a number of smaller states, each with its own chief, joined together to create the powerful Asante Kingdom in the Gold Coast. Through military conquests, the kingdom expanded, until by the end of the 18th century, the Asante controlled many of their Akan neighbors. Their economy was based largely on agriculture (the cultivation of yams, plantains, and maize) and on gold exports to both northern Islamic peoples and Europeans on the coast, in exchange for metalware, cloth, and European weapons.

Early 19th century missions by British envoys Thomas Bowdich and Joseph Dupuis sought to create trade relations with the Asante who exercised control over the interior of the Gold Coast. In 1821 the British government took control of trading forts on the Gold Coast, and in 1844 chiefs in the area signed an agreement with the British that opened the door to colonial rule in the coastal area.

In 1874, the British proclaimed the Gold Coast a colony, and in 1896 many senior officials were exiled by the British, bringing the Asante confederacy to an end. With the partitioning of colonial territories following World War II, Ghana’s borders were redefined as they exist today. On March 6, 1957, Ghana regained her independence, the first African nation to do so in the 20th century.
The Making and Design of Kente Cloth

The strip-woven cloth called kente, made by the Asante peoples of Ghana and the Ewe peoples of Ghana and Togo, is the best known of all African textiles. Its renown has spread internationally so that it is now one of the most admired of all fabrics. What began in the former Gold Coast as festive dress for special occasions—worn by men as a kind of toga and by women as upper and lower wrappers—has, over the past 40 years, been transformed into hats, bags, shoes, and many other types of apparel, including jewelry.

Although the term kente is popularly used throughout much of the world, its origins are heavily contested. In written records it dates back to at least 1847 when a man’s cloth of twenty-seven strips was accessioned into a Danish collection as a “cotton blanket (kintee) from Popo,” an Ewe town in present-day Togo. Significantly, kente is not the indigenous word for the cloth in either of the two cultures that produce it.

Venice Lamb suggests that the word kente is derived from the Fante word for basket, kenten. Since the coastal Fante were not weavers, it is plausible that they would use a word named for a familiar genre (woven baskets) that seemed technologically similar to an unfamiliar one (woven cloth).

Both the Asante and Ewe weave on the horizontal narrow-band treadle (pedal) loom. This is the basic loom type throughout most of West Africa, an area framed on the west and south by the Atlantic Ocean, on the north by the edges of the Sahara Desert, and on the east by the area around the present eastern border of Cameroon—a region of almost two million square miles. Men remain the primary weavers of kente, although a few women are known for their weaving skills. Children as young as five assist in the weaving process, particularly in the unwinding of skeins of thread and winding of bobbins.

The weaving process involves four distinct series of tasks: the threads must be wound off skeins and laid out in whatever color pattern is desired for the strip, the loom is threaded with the prepared warp threads, a sufficient length of kente is woven for the desired finished cloth, and the narrow strips are sewn together lengthwise to complete the process. It is a painstaking process—a 24-strip double weave man’s cloth may require four days to ‘warp the loom’ and four months to weave the strips.

Most strips are identified by their warp-stripe pattern. The majority of cloths consist of identical strips generally woven on a single long warp; thus, the cloth takes its name from the warp stripe of its strips. Less common, but not unusual, are cloths made up of two or more different warp patterns. These are typically called Mmaban, defined by Lamb as “mixed” or “there are many.”

The names given to Asante kente are richly varied. Because they are primarily tied to striped patterns, however, it is rare to find any correlation between name and pattern. Many cloths are named after important chiefs or queen mothers, and some of these are connected with important historical events. Others take their names from the plant or animal kingdom or from other natural phenomena. The enormous corpus of proverbs that are used to explain the meaning of most Akan art forms also figure prominently in the naming of cloths.
Unlike warp patterns, most weft designs are named after objects, for example, Sekan (knife), Afa (bellows), and Afe (comb). Weft designs are rarely named after individuals or proverbs, although, if pressed, most weavers could quote an appropriate proverb for a given object or design.

Some Asante kente cloths feature a single weft motif (adwen) repeated throughout, but more commonly a cloth will incorporate a number of designs. The most extensive use of adwen occurs in a cloth identified as Adweneasa, and these cloths are characterized by weft designs inserted into every available block of plain weave. Adweneasa is typically translated as “my skill is exhausted” or “my ideas are finished.”

In kente...

- the cloth is composed of several narrow strips sewn together lengthwise;
- the individual strips often show a vertically-striped pattern of colors, and these striped patterns vary from cloth to cloth;
- the striped pattern sections often alternate with motif sections so densely woven that they sometimes completely conceal the vertical stripe pattern;
- the geometric motifs within those sections may be repeated and/or varied to create a vast array of chevrons, checkerboards and other shapes;
- as the weaver sews the strips together lengthwise, s/he carefully aligns the designs to create an overall diagonal, checkerboard or perhaps random effect.

The Pan-African Movement and Kente in the United States

Over the course of the 20th century, kente has moved far beyond the borders of Ghana. The brightly patterned cloth has come to convey a powerful message of African unity and its influence has spread across the Atlantic. In the last several decades, it has become one of the most popular symbols of African American identity. On both sides of the ocean, then, kente is recognized as a proclamation of a proud association with the rich heritage of the African continent.

The global spread of kente and its transformation into a potent symbol were preceded by the emergence of the Pan African Movement in the early 20th century. Its aim was to unify Africans and African Americans in their struggles for enhanced social and political power. Throughout Africa, people began to rise up against their colonizers in a quest for political independence and freedom. At the same time in the United States, African Americans sought expanded rights and organized to make their voices heard. The Pan African Movement gave both Africans and African Americans an ideological basis for their respective struggles.
A series of Pan African Congresses held between 1901 and 1945 brought together important Black leaders, such as the African American intellectual W.E.B. Du Bois (1868-1963), and Kwame Nkrumah (1909-1972), an African of Akan origins who would later become the first president of the newly independent nation of Ghana. In the United States, the movement was further fueled by the development of a number of important organizations, the most famous of these being the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People (NAACP), established in 1909, and still an active force in the Civil Rights movement. Jamaican activist Marcus Garvey also inspired many African Americans with the establishment of the Universal Negro Improvement Association (UNIA) in 1920. This organization promoted Garvey’s philosophy of “Africa for the Africans” and supported his “Back to Africa” movement.

Within the context of the Pan African Movement, African and African American leaders established suitable symbols to represent their beliefs. Marcus Garvey articulated a visual language for those who identified with Africa by announcing that red, black, and green—symbolizing blood, skin color, and new life, respectively—officially represented “the colors of the Negro Race.” Kwame Nkrumah, following in the footsteps of W.E.B. Du Bois and Marcus Garvey, among others, led Ghana to independence on March 6, 1957. From Ethiopia, who largely avoided colonial domination, Ghana borrowed and inverted the green, yellow, and red colors of the Ethiopian flag for its own national flag and added a black star, the “lodestar” of African freedom.

Garvey’s ideas on color symbolism affected the thoughts and actions of Ghanaian President Kwame Nkrumah, who contributed, perhaps most profoundly, to the global visibility of kente as a symbol of African identity. During his historic visits with President Eisenhower in Washington, D.C., in 1958 and 1960, Nkrumah and his entourage wore kente often; in fact, Ebony covered the visit in the article “The Return of Saturday’s Child,” illustrated with 31 photographs, 13 of them showing Nkrumah in kente. In 1963, African American W.E.B. Du Bois traveled to Africa at Nkrumah’s invitation and wore kente when he was awarded an honorary degree by the University of Ghana. By choosing kente for important and highly visible occasions, these and other leaders have helped to establish it as a potent symbolic image for Africans and African Americans alike.

Originally reserved for royalty and the elite in Ghana, kente is now available to almost everyone who has the desire to incorporate it into his or her lifestyle. It is now used in a variety of circumstances that differ dramatically from its original context. While the cloth worn by a chief is carefully woven in separate strips and sewn together to be elegantly draped by its royal wearer, contemporary kente-inspired clothing is often printed, not handwoven, and sewn into fitted garments to be worn by the general public. Both woven kente and printed versions are used for display purposes today, as articles for the home, decorative backdrops, or to add a special African flair to a setting. The cloth and references to it are incorporated into a wide array of African American celebrations, including Kwanzaa, Martin Luther King Day, Black History Month, Juneteenth, and others, as a fundamental symbol of a proud African American identity. Kente’s popular symbolism is just as varied as its users and its usage, but it continues to communicate a complex and dynamic African identity.
In this selected resource list you will find materials from Booth Library collections touching on themes presented in the kente exhibition. From children’s books to journal articles, from musical compositions and videos to Ghanaian histories and geographies, from weaving manuals to African American poetry and art: all find their way here in hopes of enriching your enjoyment of the exhibit. If you set upon a journey through literature that explores the routes of trade and migration or the influences of kente within the culture of the United States today, then our work will have been worthwhile.

You will notice that the list is divided into sections based on location of materials in the library. For those of you exploring the writings of particular authors or subjects, please consult our online catalog to find additional materials. If items are already in use by another patron, then feel free to request other copies from our sister libraries around the State using I-Share and other online catalogs. Library staff will help you do this or you may also use our interlibrary loan services. You will be notified when those materials are ready for delivery or pick-up.

If you are new to some of the topics of our exhibit, you may want to begin consulting some of the reference materials listed or with several books from the Ballenger Teachers Center collection. The themes are presented in a more concise manner and will whet your curiosity for more in-depth items to be found in the bookstacks.
Ballenger Teachers Center

Ardema, Verna

Ahiagble, Gilbert “Bobbo” and Louise Meyer

Akyea, E. Ofori

Ewe. New York: Rosen, 1998. 64p. BTC 966.8 Ak93ew

Angelou, Maya

Barnett, Jeanie M.

Bartok, Mira and Christine Ronan

Bleeker, Sonia

Boateng, Faustine Ama

Asante. New York: Rosen, 1996. 64p. BTC 966.7 B63as

Brace, Steve

Economically Developing Countries: Ghana. New York: Thomson Learning, 1995. 48p. BTC 966.7 B722g

Brown, Vandella

What Is a Zawadi to We?: A Poetic Story Celebrating Kwanzaa and Gift Giving. Park Forest, IL: Lumen-us, 2007. 31p. BTC 394.2 B8155k

Bryan, Ashley

Chocolate, Deborah M. Newton

Courlander, Harold and George Herzog

Cousins, Linda

Croze, Harvey

Cummings, Pat

Davis, Lucile

Diagram Group

Everett, Gwen

Finnen, Wanda Cobb

Ford, Juwanda G.

Garner, Lynne

Gerke, Pamela

Giles, Bridget

Habeeb, William Mark

Haley, Gail E.
BTC 398.2 H137S

Halliburton, Warren J.
BTC 916 H1557a

Howland, June M., ed.
BTC E184.7 V65 1994x vol.1.

Kente Cloth: Patterns to Color.
BTC 746.14 K4191

Kimmel, Eric A.
Anansi and the Magic Stick.
BTC 398.24 K5713an

Anansi and the Moss-Covered Rock.
BTC 398.2 K5713an

Lambie, Nat
BTC 398.9 L177

Leach, Maria
Three Ashanti How and Why Stories from How the People Sang the Mountains Up.
BTC 398.2 L467h

Levy, Patricia
Cultures of the World: Ghana.
BTC 966.7 L5798g

Littlefield, Holly
Colors of Ghana.
BTC 966.7 L73co

Lobsenz, Norman M.
The First Book of Ghana.
BTC 916.67 L786

Mayo, Margaret
“The Girl Who Did Some Baking: Why Children Come in All Sorts of Different Colors.” from When the World was Young: Creation and Pourquoi Tales.
Stacks 398.2 M454wh

McDermott, Gerald
Anansi the Spider: A Tale from the Ashanti.
BTC 398.209 M143ana

BTC 398.2 M143z

McKissack, Patricia and Frederick
The Royal Kingdoms of Ghana, Mali, and Songhay: Life in Medieval Africa.
BTC 966.2 M217r

Medearis, Angela Shelf
Seven Spools of Thread: a Kwanzaa Story.
BTC 800 M467sev

Medlicott, Mary, ed.
The River That Went to the Sky: Twelve Tales by African Storytellers.
BTC 398.2 R524

Milway, Katie Smith
One Hen: How One Small Loan Made a Big Difference.
BTC 800 M648o

Minks, Louise
Traditional Africa.
BTC 960 M665t

Mitchell, Rhonda
The Talking Cloth.
BTC 800 M6953ta

Montgomery, Bertha Vining and Constance Nabwire
Cooking the West African Way.
BTC 641.596 M766cow

Musgrove, Margaret
Ashanti to Zulu: African Traditions.
BTC 960 M9727

McKissack, Patricia
The Spider Weaver: A Legend of Kente Cloth.
BTC 398.2 M9727sp

O’Halloran, Kate
Hands-On Culture of West Africa.
BTC TT119 .W48 053x 1997

Okeke, Chika
BTC 966.7 Ok2fa

Oppong, Joseph R. and Esther D.
BTC 966.7 Op5gha
Valdez, Barbara
Ashanti to Zulu: African Traditions (Margaret Musgrove): Teacher Guide.
BTC LB1527 .V466 1987x

Electronic

Booth Library has an extensive collection of electronic resources. Assistance with electronic resources is available through Reference Services. Here are examples of what you will find. Try using keywords mentioned in any other item from our research list.

Hale, Sjarief

Ross, Doran H.

Media

Africa Dances.
Media M1830 .A372x .CD

New York: Lyrichord 7328, 198-. CD.
Media ML350 .A37x .CD

Bischoff, Peter
Media ML350 .L57 2001x .VID

Crane, Kevin
Media PN6120 .H65 K83 1998x .VID

Ghana: Music of the Northern Tribes.
New York: Lyrichord Discs, 7321, 19--.CD.
Media M1838 .G5 M8 .CD

Music and Dance of the Ewe, Dagbamba, Fante and Ga People. Barre, VT: Multicultural Media 3018, 2000. CD.
Media M1838 .G5 G43 2000x .CD

Koetting, James T.
Media ML3545 .W67 1996 .CD

Massiah, Louis
Media E185.97.D73 W23 1995x .VID

Orr, Kindra
Media NK8889.6 .G5 W73 1999x .DVD

Media M1838 .G5 G5x .CD

Sounds of West Africa: The Kora & the Xylophone. New York: Lyrichord 7308, 198-. CD.
Media M1830 .S68x .CD

Steve, N’Gouan Ano
Media DT507 .A82x .VID
Bing, Geoffrey
Stacks DT511 .B5

Birmingham, David
Stacks DT512.3 .N57 B53 1998

Bittle, William Elmer and Gilbert Geis
Stacks E448 .B615

Boateng, E.A.
A Geography of Ghana.
Stacks DT510 .B6

Bouttiaux, Anne-Marie, Frieda Sorber and Anne van Cutsem
African Costumes and Textiles: from the Berbers to the Zulus, The Zaira and Marcel Mis Collection.
Stacks NK4787 .A375 2008x

Bowser, Benjamin P., Terry Jones and Gale Auletta Young, eds.
Toward the Multicultural University.
Stacks LC1099.3 .T68 1995

Busia, Abenap P.A.
Testimonies of Exile.
Stacks PR9379.9 .B87 T47 1990

Butcher, Margaret Just
The Negro in American Culture.
Stacks NX512.3 .N5 B8

Butler, Robert J., ed.
The Critical Response to Ralph Ellison.
Stacks PS3555 .L625 Z635 2000

Byerman, Keith Eldon
Stacks E185.97 .D73 B94 1994

Cardinall, Allan Wolsey
The Natives of the Northern Territories of the Gold Coast: Their Customs, Religion, and Folklore.
Stacks DT510.42 .C3 1969

Clarke, John Henrik
Marcus Garvey and the Vision of Africa.
Stacks E185.97.G3 C55 1974

Cottrell, Anna
Once Upon a Time in Ghana: Traditional Ewe Stories Retold in English.
Stacks GR351.62 .E83 C68 2007

Cullen, Countee
Color.
Stacks PS3505 .U287 C6 1925

Cullen, Countee, ed.
Caroling Dusk: An Anthology of Verse by Negro Poets.
Stacks PS591 .N4 C8

Dagan, Esther A.
Tabourets: Asante Stools.
Stacks NK2687.6 .G5 D33 1988x

Dance, Daryl Cumber, ed.
From My People: 400 Years of African American Folklore.
Stacks GR111 .A47 F76 2002

Davis, Arthur Paul
From the Dark Tower: Afro-American Writers 1900 to 1960.
Stacks PS153 .N5 D33 1981x

DeCorse, Christopher R.
An Archaeology of Elmina: Africans and Europeans on the Gold Coast, 1400-1900.
Stacks DT512.9 .E46 D43 2001

Detroit Institute of Arts
African Masterworks in the Detroit Institute of Arts.
Stacks NB1091.65 .D48 1995

Dickson, Kwamina B.
A Historical Geography of Ghana.
Stacks HC517 .G6 D5

Du Bois, Shirley Graham
Stacks E185.97 .D73 G7

Du Bois, W.E.B.
Stacks E185.97.D73 A3

The Souls of Black Folk.
Stacks E185.5 .D817 1973
Edgerton, Robert B.
The Fall of the Asante Empire: The Hundred-Year War for Africa's Gold Coast.
Stacks DT507 .E34 1995

Ellis, Alfred Burdon
A History of the Gold Coast of West Africa.
Stacks DT510.42 .E38 1969

Ellison, Ralph
Flying Home and Other Stories.
Stacks PS3555 .L625 F58 1996

Feinberg, Harvey M.
Africans and Europeans in West Africa: Elminans and Dutchmen on the Gold Coast During the Eighteenth Century.
Stacks DT512.9 .E46 F45 1989

Ferguson, Blanche E.
Countee Cullen and the Negro Renaissance.
Stacks PS3505 .U287 Z6

Floyd, Samuel A., Jr.
Stacks ML3556.8 .N5 B6 1990

Fynn, John Kofi
Asante and Its Neighbours, 1700-1807.
Stacks DT510.43 .A37 G35 2006

Garvey, Amy Kelly
American Africans in Ghana: Black Expatriates and the Civil Rights Era.
Stacks DT510.43 .A37 G35 2006

Garvey, Marcus
Philosophy and Opinions of Marcus Garvey, 2 vols.
Stacks HT1581 .G3 1969x

Garvey, Marcus
Philosophy and Opinions of Marcus Garvey, 2 vols.
Stacks HT1581 .G3 1969x

Gates, Henry Louis, Jr., and Nellie McKay, eds.
The Norton Anthology of African American Literature.
Stacks PS508 .N3 N67 1997

Gocking, Roger
The History of Ghana.
Stacks DT510.5 .G63 2005

Hafner, Dorinda
I Was Never Here and This Never Happened: Tasty Bits & Spicy Tales from My Life.
Stacks GR351.6 .H34 1996

Horne, Naana Banyiwa
Sunkwa: Clingings onto Life.
Stacks PR9379.9 .H67 S86 2000

House-Midamba, Bessie and Felix K. Ekechi, eds.
Stacks HQ1240.5 .A35 A397 1995

Johnson, Dolores
Stacks 394.2 J631c

Kaplan, Irving, et al
Stacks DT510 .K37 1971

Karenga, Maulana
Introduction to Black Studies. 2nd ed.
Stacks E185 .K27 1993

Kimble, David

Koetting, James T.

Kriger, Colleen E.

Kwakye, Benjamin

Kwami, Robert Mawuena

Kyei, Thomas E.

Landeck, Beatrice

Locke, Alain LeRoy

Locke, Alain LeRoy, ed.

Lystad, Robert A.

Marc, Stephen

Martinez, Maria and Ed Roscetti

Mazama, Ama, ed.

McAdoe, Harriette Pipes, ed.

McCaskie, T.C.

Moxon, James

Mwakikagile, Godfrey

Nketia, J.H. Kwabena

from Ghana Calls
by W.E.B. Du Bois

I lifted up mine eyes to Ghana
And swept the hills with high Hosanna;
Above the sun my sight took flight
Till from the pinnacle of light
I saw dropped down this earth of crimson, green and gold
Roaring with color, drums and song.

Happy with dreams and deeds worth more than doing
Around me velvet faces loomed
Burnt by the kiss of everlasting suns
Under great stars of midnight glory
Trees dances, and foliage sang;

Yet Ghana shows its might and power
Not in its color nor its flower
But in its wondrous breadth of soul
Its Joy of Life
Its selfless role
Of giving.
Natasha Afua Gibbens-Amartey’s interest in Ghanaian culture began in 1999 while on a National Student Exchange and became stronger while living and working in Ghana in 2003. Much of her undergraduate and graduate studies at the University of New Mexico and Eastern have focused on Ghana. Natasha is married to Ekow Franklin.

Jeanne Goble is a library specialist in the Ballenger Teachers Center of Booth Library. She holds English, education, and library science degrees from Eastern. Jeanne has interests in the arts, children’s literature, and international folklore and customs.

Robert Hillman is a professor at Booth Library, and serves as university archivist and as a reference librarian. He holds a BA in English and religion from Principia College, an MA in cultural research from the University of Illinois at Springfield, and an MLIS from Brigham Young University. As exhibit curator for “Beyond Africa: Hand Woven and Embroidered Textiles from Central and Southeast Asia,” Mr. Hillman has selected items from his own collection of Asian textiles.

Stacey Knight-Davis is an assistant professor and reference librarian at Booth Library. She serves as subject librarian for health studies, physics, nursing, and geology/geography. Stacey holds a MS in library and information science from the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign, and a MS in Technology from Eastern. Stacey serves as Booth Library’s exhibits coordinator, and her participation has been critical to several exhibitions hosted by the Library.

Johna Shackles is a library specialist in the University Archives and Reference Services at Booth Library. She holds a BA from Eastern. Johna is also currently working on her MS in technology and in educational leadership. Johna enjoys the challenges that exhibits provide and the opportunity to immerse herself into a culture that is not her own.

Jocelyn Tipton is an associate professor and serves as Booth Library’s government documents librarian and subject bibliographer for political science and psychology. She holds an MLS from the University of Maryland and an MA in political science from Eastern. Ms. Tipton is a frequent contributor to Booth Library exhibits and her leadership and collaboration with others on the installation of this exhibit is appreciated.

Jacqueline Worden is a senior library specialist in Reference Services at Booth Library. Jackie has a BS from University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign where she combined her interests in natural sciences, art, writing and teaching. She has an MSEd from Eastern in Information Services and Technology. She has taken many art studio courses at Eastern, including weaving. She traveled to South Africa for a photo safari last summer and loves learning about other cultures!
Wrapped in Pride: Ghanaian Kente and African American Identity

Booth Library Project Team
Stacey Knight-Davis, webmaster, exhibits specialist
Jocelyn Tipton, exhibits specialist
Allen Lanham, Dean of Library Services, co-editor
Beverly Cruse, Media Services, graphic designer, photographer
Peggy Manley, Library Administration, co-editor
Karen Beason, Library Administration
Arlene Brown, Library Administration
Christine Derrickson, Library Administration
Exhibit volunteers: David Bell, Lois Dickenson, Jeanne Goble,
Johnson Kuma, Rick Seitz, Johna Shackles, Marlene Slough,
Nackil Sung, Bradley Toppelpanen and Jackie Worden

Special Recognition
Ron Mathenia and the moving crew, Facilities Planning and Mgt.
John Bailey and the carpenters, Facilities Planning and Mgt.
African American Heritage Month Planning Committee

A Traveling Exhibition to America’s Libraries