I. Course Description, Objectives, & Guidelines/Requirements.

A. Description. Composition and Language is a course in the reading and writing of expressive expository, and persuasive essays. Attention is given to effective expression, clear structure, adequate development, and documentation of sources. Prerequisite: English 1000 or proficiency in basic skills as determined by the English Department. Students who have an ACT score in English of 14 or below, or who have no test scores on file with the University, must pass English 1000 before enrolling in English 1001G.

B. Objectives.

Upon completing English 1001G, students should be able to:

- Write informative and persuasive papers clearly and concisely in standard written English;
- Build a cohesive argument and identify arguments in texts;
- Utilize the various forms of argument and avoid logical fallacies;
- Revise papers for clarity, cohesion and style;
- Assist fellow students in their writing and revision;
- Think critically about information;
- Select and narrow a topic, write about it using outside sources, and document those sources accurately in MLA or another appropriate format.

C. Guidelines and Requirements.

Attendance: Because analytical and critical discussion of both reading and writing is a major art of 1001G, failure to attend class will affect your grade. Any student missing more than six class meetings without obtaining either my approval beforehand or a formal excuse will fail the course.

Legitimate reasons (illness, official university activity, recognized emergency) established through the University Health Service or the Office of Student Personnel Services.

Writing: Seven papers of various lengths ranging from 3 to 8 pages. The subjects of these papers will be discussed as they are assigned. Papers must be typed, double spaced in 12 point Times New Roman type. Papers will involve drafts, and all drafts will be collected with the paper. Keep all drafts of your papers. All drafts must be typed. Papers for which no drafts have been submitted will receive a failing grade.

Other Writing:

Class Minutes. For every class meeting involving class discussion, two students will take minutes and meet the next day to produce one set of minutes and distribute them to me and the rest of the class via an e-mail alias.

Discussion Questions. For each reading assignment, students will write discussion questions to be turned in at the start of Thursday classes that are devoted to discussion of the reading material.

Other Requirements and policies

DEN Watch. Each Tuesday two students will present findings of grammatical and stylistic errors in the previous Friday or Monday edition of The Daily Eastern News. All students must bring copies of these papers to class and the students assigned to report on errors must turn in a marked copy of the relevant newspaper in order to receive a grade.

Plagiarism: English Department Statement on Plagiarism.

Any teacher who discovers an act of plagiarism—“The appropriation or imitation of the language, ideas, and/or thoughts of another author, and representation of them as one’s original work” (Random House Dictionary of the English Language)—has the right and the responsibility to impose upon the guilty student an appropriate essay and a grade of F for the course, and to report the incident to the Judicial Affairs Office. (Also see document attached to this syllabus)

Grades: Eight grades averaged and adjusted up or down on the basis of attendance and participation.

Final Grade=average of the seven major paper grades, and the averaged grades from minutes, discussion questions, and DENwatch reports. As part of the University’s Core Curriculum, English 1001G generates final grades of A, B, C, or NC (no credit). Students must be writing at a C level in order to pass the course. While a grade of NC is not figured into a student’s GPA, a student who receives a grade of NC must re-take the course.

Understanding Plagiarism: What Students Need to Know

What is plagiarism?

The EIU Student Conduct Code defines “plagiarism” as “the use, without adequate attribution, of another person’s words or thoughts as if they were one’s own.” According to the Merriam-Websters Collegiate Dictionary, to plagiarize is “steal and pass off (the ideas or words of another) as one’s own; to use (another’s production) without crediting the source.” Buying a paper from a research “service” on the net is plagiarism. So is copying a sentence from “How Bees Make Honey” and passing it off as your own. So is taking a sentence from “How Bees Make Honey” and changing “bees” to “fuzzy little insects.” Paraphrasing a person’s ideas without acknowledgement constitutes plagiarism.

It might help to think of plagiarism as an issue of intellectual property. Although all new ideas are the result of collaboration, when you plagiarize you’re taking something that belongs to somebody else without acknowledgement. Think of how you’d feel if the tables were reversed. Imagine, for example, that you’ve written this great song. You share the song with the lead guitarist of your band. A year later you hear the now former lead guitarist perform your masterpiece at the local Hot New Bands Festival.

Some students argue that it’s difficult to keep track of ideas and quotations. This is where good note-taking skills come in. Learning to take good notes will help you to organize your sources. Making use of documentation sheets is also helpful, as is paying special attention when your instructor talks about integrating quotations into your paper.

- Did you know that the word “plagiarism” comes from the Latin “plagiarius,” meaning kidnapper?

What are some of the consequences of plagiarism? (Or some important points to keep in mind when you’re tempted.)

Your writing instructors, despite appearances to the contrary, are a fairly “with-it” kind of bunch. They surf the net; they know how to download MP3 files with ease; they know that when students plagiarize these days, it’s most likely to be from the World Wide Web. Inserting a phrase or sentence into a search engine such as Google has helped more than one instructor catch a kidnapper. (And, no, we don’t mean a sentence like, “In today’s society, guns is a big problem.” We’re talking about something that contrasts sharply in tone from your other writing. If you’ve been a “guns is a big problem” kind of writer and all of a sudden your teacher receives a paper that begins with “The current proliferation of arms has generated increasing concern among politicians, educators, and the general populace” AND you haven’t handed in a previous draft, a red flag might be raised.)

Plagiarism is like any other illegal or unethical practice. The more you do it (a sentence here, a phrase there), the more likely you are to do it again, the more likely you are to get caught. It’s like steroid use among Olympic athletes. The drug inspectors may not come around today, but who’s to say they won’t show up on the day of the big race. Think of how you’ll feel when you’re stripped of that gold medal.
To Submit to the Electronic Writing Portfolio

Information for Students:

Choose a document to submit from a writing intensive or writing centered course (see www.eiu.edu/~assess for a list of courses). Save the document in rich text format (rtf) labeled lastname.rtf (e.g., smith.rtf) to a disk. Make sure you remove your name and other identifying information from the document you intend to submit.

You will find the EWP submission form at www.eiu.edu/~assess. Click on the form to open it. Read the directions marked “student.” You should complete the “Student Information,” “Course Information,” and “Student’s Integrity Statement” sections of the form. Once you have completed these sections, print out the form.

The form requires you to include your eiu.edu email account. If you have not picked up the id and password for this account, go to ITS in Room 1053 in the basement of the Student Services Building and take your Panther Card.

You will need to take your document and the form to your instructor for his/her signature and approval.

After your professor has approved your submission, you will need to bring the disk and the submission form to Ninth Street Hall, Room 3001. You will receive a ticket that shows you have brought your disk to submit; however, your submission is not considered final until you receive an email to your eiu.edu email account. KEEP THIS EMAIL NOTICE TO SERVE AS YOUR RECEIPT. No submission will be considered complete until this e-mail notice is sent from CASA to the student, so make sure you check your e-mail regularly until you receive your receipt.

Information for Instructors:

Students will bring their disk and completed submission form to you for approval. You may determine that they should submit to you during class or during your office hours.

If you agree that the document is at least minimally competent (based on the rubric on the back of this sheet and available at www.eiu.edu/~assess), you certify that the document is fine to submit by completing the “Instructor’s Assessment” section on the submission form and by signing on the signature line. Return the form and the disk to the student for submission to CASA.

If you do not agree that this document is ready for submission, discuss revision options with the student.
Grades on written work range from A to F. The categories listed below are based on rhetorical principles and assume intellectual responsibility and honesty. Strengths and weaknesses in each area will influence the grade, though individual teachers may emphasize some categories over others and all categories are deeply interrelated.
