Course Objectives

English 1002G is an introduction to the primary literary genres – poetry, drama, fiction, and film. After completing this course, you will have a broader understanding and (hopefully) a greater appreciation of these genres, and you will be able to write effective scholarly essays (in MLA form, of course) on these subjects.

Class Policy

You are responsible for all assigned material, and your grade will be determined on two 8-10 page papers (200 points each), midterm and final examinations (200 points each), a class journal (200 points), and any other assignments I may create. Late papers will be downgraded 10% for each day (not class period) the assignment is overdue. Exams can only be made up with a verified excused absence.

Attendance

Attendance is required. Your grade will be lowered one letter after four unexcused absences, and eight or more unexcused absences will result in a grade of NC.

Grading

My grading scale is simple. At the end of the semester, I will divide your total points by the total number of points possible in the course. My grading scale is as follows:

A 90% and above
B 80% - 89.9%
C 70% - 79.9%
NC below 70%

Plagiarism

Don't plagiarize. Offenders will receive a grade of zero on plagiarized assignment and will be referred to the friendly folks at Judicial Affairs.

Special Needs

Students who have special needs and seek accommodations should contact the Director of Disability Services at 581-6583.
