Course Description, Design, and Goals: English 1092G is a writing centered course designed to improve your skills in critical thinking and analytical expression. Since this is a composition and literature course, you will be required to produce a variety of written responses to assigned readings in fiction and poetry. Since this is an honors section of the course, you will read challenging works at an accelerated pace and write two longer, rather than several shorter, research papers. (I will distribute an instruction sheet for each research paper. See due dates on Tentative Syllabus below.)

Besides out of class reading and writing, you will be required to participate in a variety of activities during class meetings: in discussing the assigned readings; in discussing issues related to the current writing project; in writing activities of various forms, including daily writing in a journal and essay exams; in reading and responding constructively to the work of your peers.

The goal throughout the semester is for you to produce writing that develops purposefully and economically. Consistent effort in revision – and in helping your peers to revise – is the best guarantee of success. I will provide constructive criticism of your work, which will include direction for revision, on a regular basis.

Requirements and Grading:
- completion of two essays (minimum 1250 words each), both of which will require use of secondary sources – 50%
- two exams – 20%
- completion of several journal responses to assigned readings – 20%
- participation in class discussions of the assigned readings – 10%
- attendance at all scheduled conferences

(You must complete successfully all the work listed above to pass the course.)

Course Policies: I do not accept late papers without a valid excuse. If you have a problem completing an assignment, speak to me before it is due. Sometimes even a brief conversation can clear up difficulties.

Conferences are required. I will mark down the current essay assignment one full letter grade if you miss a scheduled conference with me. Class will not meet on days assigned for conferences.

I do not have an attendance policy, but you cannot earn the 10% for class participation if you do not attend class on a regular basis.

I will read essays in hard copy only. Always double space and leave one-inch margins on all sides. Do not use a font larger than 12 for hard copy submissions.

Always bring your journal to class. Journals will be collected several times during the semester for grading. You may miss three (3) in-class journal assignments during the semester and still receive full credit (20%). Each additional missed assignment will result in a 20% reduction in your journal grade.

Always bring your book to class (i.e. the one from which the reading assignment for the day comes.)
