Course Description and Objectives
In this course, we will examine the (often ambivalent) construction of gender, sexuality, and race in narratives of love, hate, and obsession. We will look at poems, novels, short stories, films, and television shows, particularly those concerned either with love and romance, or with hatred and monstrosity. What is considered “romantic” changes over time, as does what is considered “monstrous,” and we will think critically about these changes in love and hate, and how past cultural and historical contexts relate to our own.

The objectives of the course are:
• to help you develop strategies for reading, writing, and thinking about high and low art forms, and their relation to human values
• to sharpen your discussion skills
• to give you the opportunity to explore significant problems and issues through critical thinking, writing, and argumentation

Writing Intensive Course
You may want to submit your best paper from this class to the Electronic Writing Portfolio. Visit this web address for more information:

Assignments
Analysis: critical response to several medieval lyrics; through close reading, you will attempt to define “courtly love” as a form and practice
Presentation: group analysis of a popular song or short poem; creative, entertaining presentation of findings
In-Class Essay: open-book examination; you will write an in-class essay on one of several provided topics related to the course readings
Take-Home Essay: take-home examination; you will write an essay on one of several provided topics related to the course readings
Illustration: you will bring in an illustration of one of the monsters / monstrous beings discussed in section IV of the course and write a brief critical response to the image
Argument Proposal / Annotated Bibliography: document in which you will propose an argument for the final project and annotate three sources
Argument: 5-6 page essay in which you will use primary and secondary sources, and analyze themes related to the course. Only one object of study (or primary source) is required, but you may use two, should you find it necessary. Appropriate objects of study include films, certain television shows (“Buffy, the Vampire Slayer,” “The O.C.,” “Sex and the City”); others subject to approval), songs, visual works of art (paintings, sculptures, etc.), or literary works. You may choose an object of study from the course readings, but you are not required to do so.

Participation: regular contributions to class discussion; discussion questions (a minimum of five times this semester, you will e-mail me 1-2 discussion questions by 10 pm the night before class); peer review (if you miss the peer review, you may lose 2% of your participation grade); quizzes; journal writing (if necessary)

Policies

Attendance: If you are absent from class, ask a classmate what happened and ask me for any missed handouts. If you accumulate six unexcused absences, you will forfeit your participation grade for the semester. Absences will be excused only in the case of a documented illness or emergency, or of documented participation in an official University activity. You must provide me with a photocopy of your documentation. Please do not come to class late. Three instances of tardiness may count as an absence.

Quizzes and Journal Writing: Quizzes will be given periodically during the semester, chiefly to see if you are reading. Should the class prove unprepared for discussions, quizzes will be given daily, and regular journal writing may be assigned. Quizzes will usually be worth five points. Your total on the quizzes will figure holistically into your participation grade. A low quiz average is likely to lower your participation grade. Journal entries, if necessary, will also figure into the participation grade.

Late work: Only in the case of properly documented absences will late work be accepted without penalty. Otherwise, late work will be marked down a letter grade for every day it is late.

Grading Scale: 100 to 90 = A, 89 to 80 = B, 79 to 70 = C, 69 to 60 = D, 59 and below F

Assessment: For each of the assignments listed immediately above (excluding Participation), you will receive an assignment sheet. Your grade for a given assignment will be determined by how well your work fulfills the criteria stated in the assignment sheet.

Academic Dishonesty: Academic dishonesty—whether cheating on an examination or plagiarizing a paper—is a serious offense. Do not present another person’s words, ideas, or reasoning as your own. Instances of academic dishonesty will meet with a failing grade on the assignment and a report to Judicial Affairs, and possibly a failing grade in the course.

The Office of Disability Services: If you have a documented disability and wish to receive academic accommodations, please contact the Office of Disability Services (581-6583) as soon as possible.
