Course Description, Design, and Goals:

That mirror
Which makes of men a transparency,
Who holds that mirror
And bids us such a breast-bare spectacle see
Of you and me?

Poetry is such a mirror, and in this course we will find out what several contemporary American poets want us to see about the self and the world.

Since English 2009G is a writing intensive course, we will write daily in response to the poems assigned, as well as discuss them in class. Both practices should help us improve our analytical skills – another important goal of this course.

Texts: Ramazani, The Norton Anthology of Modern and Contemporary Poetry

Requirements and Grading:

1) completion of two essays (minimum 750 words each) – 30%
2) daily in-class written responses to assigned readings – 30%
3) mid-term and final exam – 30%
4) participation in class discussions of the assigned readings – 10%

(You must complete successfully all the work listed above to pass the course.)

Course Policies: I do not accept late papers without a valid excuse. If you have a problem completing an assignment, speak to me before it is due. Sometimes even a brief conversation can clear up difficulties.

You cannot make up missed in-class writing assignments.

Attendance at all class meetings is expected, but not required. In-class writing assignments are not announced, and cannot be made up.

Let’s agree to keep our cell phones off while we are in class together and to not use our laptops during class discussions.
This is a writing-intensive course. You may submit an essay from this class for your EWP. For more information, visit the assessment website: http://www.eiu.edu/~assess.
