Course Description.

Myth and Culture is an introduction to comparative mythology. This course will expose you to a range of texts, reflecting diverse ways in which human beings have understood themselves and their relation to the cosmos and to each other. We will approach these texts from a number of perspectives—structuralist, historical, and literary-critical among them—as we attempt to define what makes each distinctive and how each contributes to the underlying unity (if there is one) of the human imagination.
