OBJECTIVES
By the end of the course, you should have a richer appreciation of two major 20th century American writers: Langston Hughes (1902–1967) and Ernest Hemingway (1899-1961). Our readings will encompass poetry, short fiction, novels, memoir, essays, journalism, and other works produced by these well-known but seldom paired contemporaries. Writing assignments will give you an opportunity to investigate specific works in more detail. As a class—through discussion, lecture, and presentations—we will try to understand the choices made by these individual writers in the context of the complex literary, social, and historical situations in which they operated.

THINGS YOU NEED TO KNOW

- This is a “writing intensive” course. You will write—and have an opportunity to revise—at least one piece of writing that you could put in your Electronic Writing Portfolio. For information and submission forms, go to www.eiu.edu/~assess/
- Attendance counts. If you have more than three (3) un-excused absences, you will not receive any participation points.
- To pass this course, you must complete all major assignments.
- Late work will be penalized unless we come to an understanding before the due date. Keep in touch!
- Out-of-class writing assignments should be typed, double-spaced, and proofread. Formal papers should use MLA-style format and documentation.
- The Writing Center in Coleman Hall 3110 (581-5929) will be glad to work with you at any stage of the writing process, from generating ideas to documentation.
- Plagiarism--taking someone else's words or ideas and using them in your own writing without giving appropriate credit to the author--is a serious academic offense and may result in a failing grade for this course and other university penalties. Questions? Talk to me or visit the Writing Center (581-5929).
- If you have a documented disability, please contact the Office of Disability Services (6583) so we can begin to work out appropriate accommodations.
