Course Description
This seminar, called Renaissance Forms and Reformation Concerns: Ritual and Resistance in English Literature, will focus on a selection of texts from the English Renaissance through the Interregnum. The historical backdrop to the literature of this period involves the death of England's most renowned queen, the beheading of a king, a government take-over, civil wars, and theaters being closed down, to note just a few examples of the upheaval of the period. Writers during this tumultuous period both cling to ritual of various kinds and resist other pressures with equal vehemence. During the semester, we will explore this pattern of ritual and resistance in poetry, prose, and drama from the period.

We will begin, for example, with Sir Philip Sidney's Arcadia, written ca. 1577-80, and end with Anna Weamys' Continuation of the Arcadia, written during the Interregnum, to discuss the ways in which Renaissance critiques of statecraft give way to royalist resistance to the Puritan forces. We will also think about ritual and resistance in a variety of other contexts, including the work of women writers from the period as we examine their imitation of and resistance to traditional male-authored literary forms. Another area to explore along these lines will be the vicissitudes of fate suffered by dramatists during this period. What are the attitudes toward theaters that led to shutting them down? We will also listen carefully to the voices of the poets from the period which illustrate in poignant compressed expression their engagement with religious issues, revolution, and relationships.

Since this is a graduate seminar, you will be responsible for oral reports and research projects that help us build upon our collective knowledge as we explore the texts this semester. One good strategy for graduate students who are interested in professional development is to target a professional conference at which they might present a paper. With that thought in mind, I hope that you will consider submitting a conference paper version of your main project—or any of the oral reports that strike your fancy—to the Illinois Philological Association Conference to be held at University of Illinois, Springfield, Spring, 2002.

Policies

--The English Department statement on plagiarism stipulates that any teacher who discovers an act of plagiarism--"The appropriation or imitation of the language, ideas, and/or thoughts of another author and representation of them as one's original work" (Random House Dictionary of the English Language)--has the right and the responsibility to impose upon the guilty student an appropriate penalty, up to and including immediate assignment of a grade of F for the assigned essay and a grade of NC for the course, and to report the incident to the Judicial Affairs Office.

--Hand papers in and have reports prepared on time. If you're having problems, let me know. We'll do our best to work the reports into our schedule, but I cannot guarantee that there will be time for them at any time other than that for which they are scheduled. Papers more than a week late without a University-approved excuse will not be accepted at all.

--If you have a documented disability and wish to receive academic accommodations, please contact the Coordinator of the Office of Disability Services (581-6583) as soon as possible.

--Be prepared for class. You'll get a lot more out of class discussions if you are participating in them, and I'll notice if you do not seem prepared to participate.

Requirements and Grades

2 exams: 20% each of final grade 40%
3 presentations with reports: 10% each of final grade 30%
or 2 presentations with reports: 15% each of final grade 30%
1 seminar paper: 30% of final grade 30%

The paper topic will be chosen from subjects that arise in class, regarding the assigned texts. You will use MLA Parenthetical Style with Works Cited. The presentations will be the products of three short research assignments related to contextualizations of the material we are reading. They are also meant to be opportunities to begin exploring topics that may interest you for the seminar paper.

Tentative Schedule

Note: Some readings may be shifted around or dropped during the semester to accommodate the class discussion.

Renaissance Precursors to the Seventeenth Century

Th. Aug. 23—Introduction to the course. Discuss reports. In class, start with Queen Elizabeth: read "To Henry III, king of France," p. 596 and "Speech to the Troops at Tilbury," p. 597 in Norton. Also, in class, read excerpts from and discuss Il Cortegiano

Th. Aug. 30—Report 1—Basic Background on Luther and the Reformation in Europe
