

Research and Case Studies

This section includes quantitative and qualitative original research, anecdotal case studies, and literature reviews. Submitted research case studies should follow the guidelines of qualitative research that seeks to investigate particular cases, places, or theories and will include a literature review. Practitioner case studies may be anecdotal in nature, with the practitioner writing up selected client cases of interest. Papers that connect transformative touch and other research areas such as Polyvagal Theory, neurobiology research, trauma work, etc. are welcome in this section.
